BRITAIN TO MAKE CHINA PAY FOR KILLING WHITES

To Act Even if U. S., Japan Hold Back.

BULLETIN.

SHANGHAI, April 3.—(AP)—The American naval armada in Chinese waters was reinforced with the arrival here this (Sunday) morning of the United States cruisers Richmond and Marblehead.

LONDON, April 2.—The British have now made up their minds to insist on an apology and indemnity from the Chinese for the outrages at Nanking whether America and Japan cooperate or not.

It is still hoped that the latter countries will make it a common cause for a joint set of demands, which is still said to be under consideration by Washington and Tokio. But whatever they do the British cabinet is now determined to have a measure of satisfaction for the killing of foreigners—American, British, and Japanese—which will impress the oriental nations.

This decision has been arrived at after long and careful consideration, for it is realized here that the situation is the most grave for Great Britain since the world war. It is believed the trouble with China will lead to a break with Russia.

Britain Sends More Troops.

In defiance of the government's intention to act singly, if it is not supported by Japan and the United States, the war office announced the dispatch of a whole brigade of infantry with artillery units as reinforcements for the Shanghai defense force this afternoon.

The new infantry battalions selected are one guards battalion, the first battalion of the Northamptonshire regiment, the first battalion of the Queen's Royal regiment and second battalion of the Welsh regiment. The Chin will be brought up to their war strength by the addition of reserves.

Got New Defense Fund.

In order to meet the cost of the defense force, a supplementary budget estimate of £850,000 [about $4,750,000] already has been made, of which £330,000 [about $2,650,000] went for transport service.

It is understood that additional units are likely to be moved immediately to China from India. Dispatches in London tonight indicate that the troops temporarily stationed at Hongkong are being rushed to Canton and Shanghai. The admiralty said tonight that its dispatches indicated increasing violence toward the foreigners throughout China.

Charge French Egg Chinese On.

Much dissatisfaction is felt here about the French attitude, which it is believed has gone farther than refusal to cooperate. It is said in some quarters that the French have been encouraging the Chinese nationalist movement and have been profiting largely by the unpopularity in China of the English and American traders.

The French press today is reported to be almost unanimous in opposing any identification of the French government with the Anglo-American-Japanese policy in China. In many quarters this is pointed to as only another evidence of the growing basic hostility between Great Britain and France.

HITS FOREIGN TRADE

SHANGHAI, China, April 2.—How to settle the Shanghai situation already has become a pressing problem, though the city has been occupied by foreign forces less than a month. Business is paralyzed and the foreign firms are going broke owing to the almost complete cessation of business intercourse with the Chinese. Rents have increased and hotel rates are soaring.

Owing to the barricades about the city, which shut the foreigners in as well as keep the Chinese out, conditions are becoming unbearable.

The foreign military force at Shanghai now exceeds 30,000, and as additional units are on the way it probably will reach 50,000 within two months. This is virtually double the foreign population of the city which the forces were to protect.

G. O. P. SHIES AT COALITION TO RESEAT JUDGES

Two Conventions to Be Held Friday.

BY PARKE BROWN.

Most Republican leaders shied yesterday at direct inquiries concerning their willingness to support the Chicago Bar association's plan for a coalition for the reelection of the sitting judges of the Circuit court.

State's Attorney Crowe and Homer K. Galpin issued a statement saying they favor the principle and believe that judges who have made good records should be retained. William Hale Thompson said he would not consider the matter until after the mayoral election.

Edward J. Brundage said he would support coalition if all candidates on the ticket were acceptable to the bar association. United States Senator Deneen asked to be excused from making a statement because he was extremely busy on other matters.

Merriam Raises Issue.

The subject was presented to these leaders because of charges made by Charles E. Merriam and others at a Democratic meeting on Friday that if Thompson wins on Tuesday there will be an effort made by the Crowe-Thompson organization to capture the Circuit bench which carries with it control of the South park system.

For several weeks the Chicago Bar association's committee on candidates, consisting of the ex-presidents of the organization, has been giving attention to the judicial election on June 6. The judges whose terms expire at that time, with the exception of two who were elected later to fill vacancies, are those who were elected in the coalition battle of 1921 when Thompson sought to elect a hand picked ticket.

The lawyers' committee obtained what was considered satisfactory assurances of coöperation from George E. Brennan, the Democratic chief, and State's Attorney Crowe also appeared before the committee for the Republican organization.

Crowe Refers to Statement.

Mr. Crowe now refers to that meeting in a statement issued in the name of County Chairman Galpin but later signed by the prosecutor also. It follows:

"Some weeks back Robert E. Crowe and myself visited George E. Brennan as the representative of the Democratic party and stated to him that we were in favor of the principle of coalition in judicial elections and that we believed the judges, irrespective of party affiliations, who had made good records should be retained on the bench. Brennan said he agreed with the principle also.

"Robert E. Crowe later stated to the board of managers of the Chicago Bar association our position in this matter, to which they agreed.

"As a result of a conference between Brennan, Crowe, and myself, both the Democratic and Republican party have called their judicial convehtion in the same hotel [Hotel Sherman] on the same day [next Friday].

"Neither of us have changed our opinion in reference to this matter."

Thompson Too Busy Now.

This statement was taken to Former Mayor Thompson, who was asked whether he would indorse it. He declined.

"I'm too busy to think about the judicial election," he said. "Time enough when I'm through with this campaign."

On the subject of a coalition ticket Mr. Brundage spoke as follows:

"I shall gladly support such an action, provided that there are no candidates placed on the ticket who would not have a chance to be elected in the ordinary form of contest. In other words, I am opposed to taking advantage of a coalition movement to place unfit candidates on the bench. If coalition is effected, the nominees should include only such new aspirants for the bench as are approved by the Chicago Bar association."

It was believed he was alluding to reports that the Crowe-Thompson organization has promised places on the ticket to two or more men. Among those mentioned in this connection are Municipal Judge Joseph W. Schulman, First Assistant State's Attorney George E. Gorman, Former Circuit Judge Charles A. Williams, and Master-in-Chancery Michael Feinberg.

Brennan Reiterates Support.

Mr. Brennan also bucked the coalition move. In reply to the query yesterday he said:

"I have told the Bar association that the Democratic organization will coöperate with them in every way to

Bunions, Love, Exams Make Students Pray

Seventy-five per cent of American college students believe in the efficacy of prayer. But only 50 per cent of them are confident that their prayers are going to be answered.

These figures are based on the replies which 2,800 students, men and women, Roman Catholic and Protestant, in more than 50 American colleges, made to the questionnaire which Robert L. Williams, graduate student at Northwestern university, sent to 5,000 Protestant men and women and to 600 Catholics.

Nearly All of Them Pray.

Mr. Williams is now tabulating his data for his doctor of philosophy thesis on "The College Student and Prayer." Some of the results of his survey follow:

Nearly all of the 600 Catholics responded and only about half of the Protestants. Nearly all of the 2,800 pray in some way or other.

The Catholic students had the most regular routine. They said that most of their prayers were memorized. The Protestants ran to the spontaneous prayer, with no fixed time.

For what do students pray? Freshmen recollected that before matriculating they prayed intensely that they might go to a university. Seniors told of praying for jobs.

In between there was a variety of subjects: Winning a football game; making a good sorority; getting a bid to the junior prom; earning sufficient money to be able to stay in school. At examination time many men and women recalled ardent prayers that they would not flunk.

Women Pray for Love.

The women, in far greater numbers than the men, recorded prayers for happy love affairs. Sixty per cent of the Catholic men prayed for "a holy marriage and a happy death."

More than 20 per cent did not believe that their prayers were answered. Some of this class merely said that prayers never did them any good. Others regarded prayer as a form of hypnosis or auto-suggestion with subjective benefits.

Mr. Williams asked the students to list the illnesses, if any, from which they believed they had been cured by prayer. Among the ailments listed were diphtheria, Bright's disease, homesickness, illness resulting from an operation, and many other maladies.

One woman wrote that she had "prayed bunions off her feet."

John Coolidge Guest at Gov. Trumbull's Home

Hartford, Conn., April 2.—(AP)—John Coolidge, son of the President, is the week-end guest of Gov. John H. Trumbull and his family at Plainville. The President's son arrived from Washington late tonight and was met at the union station by Miss Florence Trumbull, daughter of the governor.

ROBBER SLAIN BY HOLDUP VICTIM; CAFE ROW FATAL

Two men were shot and killed last night in Chicago. One, an alleged robber, was fatally wounded in an alley in the rear of 7522 South Green street. The other was shot down in a restaurant at 2855 West Harrison street after he and four others had fought with feet and fists in the eating place.

Edward J. Laniski, 22, of 3141 South Racine avenue, and another man attempted to hold up Edwin Peoples, 711 West 76th street, as he was putting his car in a garage near his home. Peoples drew a revolver and fired at the pair. Laniski fell. He was taken to the Auburn Park hospital, where he died. The other men fled. Half an hour later Edward Marshall, 18, of 3302 Wall street, was taken to the county hospital suffering from two bullet wounds. He was identified by Peoples as the second robber. His sister, Helen Marshall, and Leo Rennhak, 4801 South Racine avenue, who went to the hospital with him, were held.

The man killed in the restaurant was George Jack, 24 years old. He was in the café with Eleanor and Hazel Langworthy, who live above the café. At an adjoining table sat Earl Moon, 2907 West Adams street, with Mrs. Lillian Quinn, 3051 Fillmore street. According to the women, Jack made an insulting remark to Mrs. Quinn and Moon resented it. A fight started and several of Jack's friends went to his assistance. The proprietor, Tony Marzullo, tried to restore order and was attacked. He fired one shot, the bullet penetrating Jack's heart. Jack lived at 1056 North Mansfield avenue. He was a brother of G. B. Jack, of G. B. Jack & Co., real estate, 2308 West Van Buren, and an employé in that office.

DEFIES BANDITS' SHOTS AND PUTS THEM TO FLIGHT

Abraham Cooper of 3426 Douglas boulevard and his wife were riding peacefully along in their automobile last evening when a car in which two armed youths were seated crowded them to the curb at Douglas boulevard and Fillmore street.

"Stick 'em up," said the bandits.

"I won't do it," said Cooper.

The robbers fired three times. All the bullets struck the body of the car, but the Coopers were unhurt. The bandits started to drive away. The undaunted Mr. Cooper followed. Trying to make a turn at the Baltimore & Ohio tracks at Fillmore street, the robbers crashed into an abutment and wrecked their car. Then they fled.

Crowd Watches Show as Firemen Battle Flames

Several hundred patrons of the Empire theater, 670 West Madison street, sat undisturbed through a performance last night while firemen were extinguishing a small blaze on the fourth floor of the same building. On the sixth floor a dance was being held in the Empire ballroom. The dancers became alarmed when smoke poured in, but the firemen quieted them.

CITY'S MADDEST BALLOT FIGHT RAGES TO THE END

Small to Call State Troops If Police Fail

Charges and counter charges that there would be violence at the mayoral election on Tuesday were reëchoed yesterday in the ordering of Adj. Gen. Carlos Black to Chicago, and th police testing of machine guns on the lake front.

After those events, both sides declared that the balloting on Tuesday would be quiet and orderly. Chief Collins instructed his captains, and will have extra motorized squads, armed with machine guns patrolling the streets, with police reserves ready for instant call. Adj. Gen. Black will be in constant touch with Sheriff Charles E. Graydon, empowered to call out troops, if the sheriff wants them.

Gov. Small and Gen. Black conferred at the governor's home in Kankakee yesterday. The governor then ordered Adj. Gen. Black to Chicago to represent him. That official will arrive today or tomorrow. Gov. Small said after the conference he hoped and believed the troops would not be needed, but that if they were a sufficient number was available in and around Chicago, and Adj. Gen. Black would call them out.

Oscar E. Carlstrom, attorney general, also will be in this city during the election. He has been backing William Hale Thompson for mayor.

Collins Relies on Police.

"I am certain the police are prepared to keep the situation in hand," said Chief Collins.

By way of preparation, Deputy Chief of Detectives Stege took five of his best squads to Grant Park yesterday and put their new machine guns to a test, firing half a dozen drums of bullets into the lake. Thirty-five of the rapid fire weapons will be distributed among the 105 squads of five men each who will patrol the city to keep streets and polling places clear of gunmen and hoodlums.

Ten squads will go on duty at 5 p. m. Monday and work until 5 a. m. Tuesday, an hour before the polls open, when the main force comes to go on duty. A special effort will be made to arrest suspects before 6 a. m. Tuesday to prevent their activities during that day. Special squads will patrol the black belt.

Day in Court Monday.

The political spotlight will swing tomorrow to the court of Judge William J. Lindsay, who will hear the petition of the Democratic county central committee that special officers be appointed to replace Sheriff Graydon and Coroner Oscar Wolff in carrying out functions in connection with the special grand jury appointed by Judge Lindsay to investigate alleged vote theft plots charged to State's Attorney Crowe.

Both officials filed formal answers yesterday, denying that they possess any disqualifying prejudices. The affidavits added that the committee is not a corporation, has no legal status, and no right to make such a court application.

Predicts Peaceful Election.

Martin J. O'Brien, chairman of the Democratic county central committee, issued a statement last night declaring that as a result of the grand jury action the election will be peaceful.

"It has scared off the gunmen and other crooks who were beginning to flock to Chicago to work for Thompson on election day," the O'Brien statement said. "Those who hadn't started won't now. Those who had got here have taken the alarm and skipped out again."

Thompson Men See 150,000 Lead as Record Vote of 900,000 Looms.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

Chicago's wildest mayoralty fight in its history took on new ferocity yesterday and the Sunday before election, instead of the usual lull, finds the battle raging with increasing intensity right up to Tuesday's polls.

All camps last night predicted a victory. Both the Dever and Thompson camps seemed to drip with confidence. Mayor Dever's managers said he would win by 158,000 plurality and carry every ward but the south side Negro wards. William Hale Thompson's managers said he would get through with more than 150,000 plurality. Dr. John Dill Robertson, independent candidate, insisted he would be victor, but he vouchsafed no estimates.

See Record Breaking Vote.

All sides look for a record breaking vote. A tremendous interest, as exhibited by packed halls that have greeted the leading candidates throughout Chicago and by the armies of volunteer workers that have been recruited, is expected to roll up a vote of 900,000 or more. The registry books contain 1,145,403 names, the greatest registration in the city's history.

The Sunday swing is expected to write Tuesday's story.

In trouble spots the polls may take on the complexion of a military camp. With the avowed purpose of making the election safe and free from terrorism and strong arm methods, both sides have taken unusual steps.

Never before have battling camps taken such large scale precautions to keep each other from stealing the election in the regions noted for ballot frauds and ballot box banditry.

Open Up Whispering Issues.

Racial and religious issues came more and more into the open. Starting as "whispering campaigns," they became an open parade yesterday, and instead of whispers the rival camps used the amplifiers.

Placards, cartoons, and lampoons, mostly anonymous, flooded the town. Some of them were printed by the million. They dealt chiefly with the question of the colored vote. Each side accuses the other of trying to rouse racial and religious prejudice on questions that should not enter politics. Usually these are given subterranean treatment when they appear in a campaign, but this time they have been exploited as never before.

The general belief around both headquarters yesterday was that the race question is the predominant one in the campaign in its closing days. Calliopes on trucks moved through the loop yesterday playing "Bye Bye, Blackbird" four hours at a stretch.

The King Still in Picture.

The king of England keeps in the picture to the last, and Big Bill still shook King George by the whiskers, while the Deverites repeated what they said at the outset—"Mayor Dever will not compete in any contest of clowning and buffoonery."

The loop howled over a bit of Paul Revere comedy from the Democrats. A Negro in cocked hat and regimentals, on a spavined horse, plugged along the streets, carrying a sign, "The British Are Coming. Tell Bill."

The beer question was stirred up more vigorously than ever. Mr. Thompson, who calls himself wetter than the Atlantic, redoubled his attacks on the police for "fanning mattresses for pints" and frisking pantries for home brew and hip flasks. His audiences generally have applauded this vigorously, and it has been one of his surefire hits on the platform.

Says Bill Slips on Wet Plank.

Democratic leaders, however, declared yesterday that in regions where this line was going strongest a few weeks ago, it is now proving stale beer for Bill. Wide circulation has been given to the pledge Thompson signed for the United Societies in 1915 pledging himself as "opposed to a closed Sunday," while later he enforced the Sunday closing law, which had been a dead letter for a generation and more.

Dever leaders say Thompson finds his wet plank slippery likewise because, although an avowed wet, he was an active supporter last November of Frank L. Smith for senator, one of the dryest of dries, and of Richard Yates and Henry Rathbone for congressmen at large, two pets of the Anti-Saloon league. The Deverites say the voters in the foreign wards, especially, have now got the idea that though Thompson parades as a foe of the Volstead act, he worked to send friends of the Volstead act to congress.

the only place where the Volstead act can be amended and modified.

Late last night the Democratic managing committee gave out an estimate by wards.

"Mayor William E. Dever will be reelected by 158,000 plurality," it read. "This is not guesswork, but a certainty. We have figures which show that we will carry every ward in the city except the three in which the colored population preponderates."

The following table shows the pluralities claimed for and against Dever by wards:

Dever's net plurality, 158,000.

Especial pains were taken yesterday by the managers of the rival candidates in the preparation of their Sunday before election statements. The leaders reviewed the issues and the situation and their utterances furnish an epitome of the campaign as viewed from the Dever and Thompson headquarters.

Claims Victory for Mayor.

Martin J. O'Brien, as spokesman for the Democrats, said:

"The last week of the campaign has seen such a tremendous popular uprising in behalf of Mayor Dever that even trained political experts are at sea when it comes to estimating his majority. Today it is certain that it will exceed that of four years ago, when he carried the city by 105,000. The sentiment is so strong, however, that a prediction made today is worthless tomorrow and by Tuesday it is probable that the 105,000 figure will seem small.

"Nothing like the growth of sentiment for Dever has been seen in recent years. Of course, it had a solid foundation in the record made by the mayor—his work in building public schools, making public improvements, and conducting the business of the city on an economical basis without a hint of scandal being attached to his administration. These were things, however, which appealed to sober-minded, industrious people who are not in the habit of yelling their personal opinions from house tops or street corners.

Desperate Efforts Cited.

"The desperate nature of the campaign that has been waged against the mayor in the last week is the best proof that our foes know that he is assured of reelection. They are stopping at nothing to prevent such a result and are still talking loud, but down in their hearts they know they are beaten.

"Mayor Dever will carry every side of the city. On the south side the Republican voters in the Hyde Park and Englewood wards will more than offset the plurality that will be given the mayor's opponent by the colored people, on whose votes he has depended for victory and to whom he has made the most absurd promises. The Democrats on the south side will give their usual support to the ticket and aid the Republicans in carrying this section of the city for the mayor.

Sees West Side Undecided.

"The voters on the west side were partially deceived at one time during the campaign, but in the last two weeks they have been aroused to the facts concerning the campaign and the west side wards will give their usual pluralities.

"The north side is generally regarded as Republican, but it is a certainty that it will be carried by Mayor Dever by a big plurality. In fact, there is not a ward on the north side which seems unfriendly to the mayor.

"Ordinarily, I would consider that there was danger in the last few days of the campaign from roorbacks and canards. This year our opponents has resorted to methods that have entirely destroyed the confidence of their own followers."

Bill's Camp Sees 150,000 Lead.

Homer K. Galpin, chairman of the Thompson campaign, epitomized the situation as the Thompson managing committee views it in the following:

"During my thirty-five years' experience in the politics of this city, I have never witnessed such vicious, detestable methods as have been used in this campaign by the opposition.

"The adherents of George Brennan, Mike Igoe and Marty O'Brien have conducted a campaign of wild desperation for Dever—actions and arguments aimed at incurring of racial and religious hatred have been frequent—falsehoods and misstatements as to accomplishments of the present administration have been uncovered and disproven.

Charges Schools Dangerous.

"The construction of certain schools has been shown up as dangerous to the school children—the changing of school books to lead our children away from love of our illustrious forbears has been exposed—the overwhelming reign of crime during the last four years under Dever's police administration has shocked the people—the extortion planned by the water meter trust, aided and abetted by the Dever administration, has turned the people forever against a political machine that could lend its protection to such a wholesale mulcting of the water using public.

"The last few days' straw ballots show the people have not been fooled; that the vast majority of voters are awake to the desperate and vile religious and racial attacks of the Brennan-Igoe-O'Brien-Dever machine and that the voters will elect a man of action to succeed a do-nothing mayor.

"I predict the election of William Hale Thompson by a majority exceeding 150,000."

Dr. Robertson, the independent candidate, made his forecast brief:

"My campaign has been a success," he said, "and my election is assured."

Mayor Dever himself in a statement says he never had any doubt that he would win. The mayor's statement read:

"This fight for civic righteousness has been won. I will be reelected mayor of Chicago on Tuesday.

"Personally, I never had any doubt about the outcome of the election because I know that once the voters of Chicago were aroused to a sense of their duty to themselves and their city they would settle it and settle it right.

"They are now fully aroused. The women of Chicago have played a big part in organizing public sentiment. They have fought courageously and tirelessly from the day this campaign opened for the civic ideals which actuate them. I am deeply grateful for the support they have given me."

Deverites Hold Their Fire.

The campaign has been a curious one in many respects. The Dever managers, purposely, held back their activities after the primaries, in order that the Dever movement might not reach its crest too early before election day. Their set intention was to give it the works during the final ten days and have its climax come at the election instead of before, in order that there might be no subsidence.

Thompson had such a walk away over E. R. Litsinger in the Republican primaries that he was accounted far out in front as the campaign started. Dever found a disadvantage in the fact that he had no opposition worth note in the Democratic primaries to bring out a vote and warm things up at the outset. The lack of a contest had led thousands of Democrats to cross over into the G. O. P. primaries to help nominate Thompson, whom the Dever leaders regarded as an easier candidate for the mayor to bowl over than Litsinger.

Mayor Aided by Republicans.

The Deverites, aided by large and influential groups of Republicans and nonpartisans, have been stressing the great physical upbuilding of Chicago in the last four years, the vast program of public improvements under way or contemplated, and the unique fact that in the last four years there has been no whisper of scandal in Chicago's city hall.

The appearance of the color question, which the Deverites declare started with Thompson's attacks on "cossack" police methods in the Negro wards and with the opening of the Thompson campaign with a rally of colored voters at the Eighth Regiment armory, marked a point at which the Thompson campaign started to slip.

Thomponites say the other side injected the color question and that it came too early to be of danger and that its effect has largely worn off.

Lundin's Campaign a Feature.

One feature of the campaign has been Fred Lundin, former bosom friend of Thompson, but now his bitter enemy, who is backing Dr. Robertson, who was Bill's health commissioner and school board president. Lundin's motivation in the fight has been to defeat Thompson, and in the Robertson independent campaign he has been spilling considerable inside history of the Thompson régime.

Two other city offices are to be filled—city treasurer and clerk. Mayor Dever's running mates are M. S. Szymczak, a professor of applied psychology and philosophy, candidate for treasurer and Al F. Gorman, up for reelection as city clerk.

Mr. Thompson's running mates are Charles S. Peterson for treasurer and Patrick Sheridan Smith for city clerk.

Dr. Robertson has on his ticket Charles J. McGowan for city clerk and Coroner Oscar Wolff for treasurer. The coroner a week ago made one of his famous kangaroo leaps and landed in the Thompson camp again, but his name is still on the ballot, and the Robertson camp has indorsed Mr. Czymczak.

HUNT MISSING SCHOOL BOY.

Police were asked yesterday to search for Allen Digweed, 15, of 3119 Broadway. The youth, a student at the Lake View High school, is believed to have started west with the intention of becoming a cowboy.

STRAW BALLOT RACE IS HOTTER; BILL STILL LEADS

Over Million on the Poll Books—Vote?

PRE-ELECTION POLL.
Candidate—	Prev. reports.	Today's results.	Totals to date.	Per cent.
Dever	46,880	6,114	52,994	44.01
Thompson .	55,083	6,951	62,014	51.51
Robertson ..	4,659	724	5,383	4.47
Totals	106,606	13,789	120,391	99.99

William Hale Thompson, Republican candidate for mayor, still holds the lead in the straw vote.

On the face of the above tabulation, without the necessary adjustments, the former mayor's advantage is less than 90,000, measured in probable votes next Tuesday. The last few days show Dever gaining. The percentage column shows that conclusively.

In the poll totals last Sunday the present mayor had 41.61 per cent. Monday he walked up to 42.66 per cent. Thursday he had hopped up to 43.72 and this morning he is up to 44.01. If the total vote cast is 1,000,000, as some enthusiasts predict, the mayor's 2.40 per cent gain in the last week is the equivalent of 24,000 votes.

Time Seems Perilously Short.

If the total is only 900,000, then the Dever gain would only be 21,600 votes. If the election were two weeks away instead of two days, with that rate of gain there would be an entirely different view of the big event election day. Just how much can be done today and tomorrow for Dever remains to be seen.

If the straws are an indication of public sentiment, then "Big Bill" was stronger at the beginning of his campaign than he is at the finish. He apparently reached the peak of his popularity two weeks ago and has been slipping a little downward since. The polls indicate that the Democrats have made the better campaign so far as effectiveness is concerned.

Both Thompson followers and Dever adherents apparently are still working hard. Vote takers yesterday encountered more workers than on any day since the poll started.

Over 100,000 Straw Votes.

So THE TRIBUNE straw vote has been continued beyond the usual quitting day, although a total of 120,391 straws already have been gathered in, counted, and tabulated. It might seem that if a straw vote is of any value that number would be sufficient to indicate which way and how strong the wind is blowing. Of this 120,391 total, 13,789 straws are accounted for in this edition.

But this contest has some features which have not been encountered before in a Chicago political campaign by the oldest reporters of THE TRIBUNE. More straws are being collected and they will be published tomorrow morning.

Robertson Seems Becalmed.

Despite the fluctuation in the Dever and Thompson percentages, that of Dr. John Dill Robertson, the independent candidate, has showed no material changes during the more than two weeks of straw voting.

A final word on that part of the straw vote can as well be said today as tomorrow. There is nothing in THE TRIBUNE polls to indicate that Dr. Robertson will get more than 60,000 ballots next Tuesday.

His vote, as well as that of other candidates, depends on the total cast Tuesday. On the registry lists yesterday morning there were 1,143,408 persons entitled to vote for mayor, but the election commission was still erasing names.

The number cast will be between 80 and 90 per cent. In the last mayoralty election, April 3, 1923, there were 905,383 registered. Of these 723,267 voted, or 79.88 per cent. In the 1919 mayoralty election, 795,977 were registered and 698,920 voted, or 87.80 per cent. In the 1915 mayoralty election, the registration was 769,106, and the vote was 694,681, or 89.02 per cent.

How Vote May Stand.

Assume that the registration after complete revision will be 1,143,408, than if 80 per cent go to the polls Tuesday the aggregate vote will be 913,926, or if 85 per cent then the total will be 971,046, or if 90 per cent then the total will be 1,028,167. Roughly estimating Dr. Robertson's percentage of the total at 4½ per cent, his total vote Tuesday—if 90 per cent of the registration goes to the polls—will be 56,267.

There will still be left 971,900 votes to be divided between Thompson and Dever. The straw vote indicates that Thompson will have a substantial advantage in the division—but probably less than 90,000.

Tests All Over City.

The straws for today—13,789—were collected Friday night and yesterday, and are from all sections of the city, although not in the proportion to the voting strength of each. The totals for the day are summarized as follows:

Candidate—	Straws.	Per cent.
Dever [Dem.]	6,114	44.33
Thompson [Rep.]	6,951	50.40
Robertson [Ind.]	724	5.25
Totals	13,789	99.98

These were collected from north side theaters and north side stations of the elevated, from south side street corners, and then two canvasses of the west side, one of street corners alone, and another of street intersections and elevated stations. Mayor Dever took the lead in the north side "L" stations and in one of the polls of the west side, and the race was reasonably close on the south side.

Result of South Side Poll.

The south side poll gave forth these summarizing figures:

Candidate—	Straws.	Per cent.
Dever [Dem.]	1,681	47.47
Thompson [Rep.]	1,744	49.25
Robertson [Ind.]	116	3.27
Totals	3,541	99.99

The detail upon which that table is based follows:

Ward.	Location.	Dever.	Thompson.	Robertson.
2	31st and State.....	27	262	3
3	39th-Cottage Grove..	132	89	5

Poll on North Side.

This canvass undoubtedly will be encouraging to the Deverites, and especially in view of another recent south side poll which gave Dever an indicated lead outside of the colored section. On top of that poll are the results from four north side "L" stations. The detail, totals and percentages on those four stations are as follows:

Location.	Dever.	Thompson.	Robertson.
Bryn Mawr station on Northwestern "L".....	118	60	0
Loyola station, N.W. "L"	133	74	3
Howard-st. station, N. W. "L"	65	83	2
Uptown station, N.W. "L"	79	90	7
Total	395	307	12
Per cent	55.32	42.80	1.68

The Dever success in the above poll is not indicative of a change in sentiment in the section in which the canvass was made. That trend has been indicated in previous polls.

The two west side polls are in conflict. One was taken yesterday, and the other Friday. One favors Dever and the other Thompson. This is the first west side poll taken in this campaign which has indicated a preference for the present mayor. It follows:

WEST SIDE LOCATIONS.

Then There Is This Poll.

The other west side poll shows a larger percentage for Thompson than does the one above show for Dever. The second west side poll supplies these interesting figures:

FAMOUS SKIPPER'S SCHOONER GOES DOWN; RAMMED ON OCEAN

Gloucester, Mass., April 2.—(AP)—The Gloucester fishing schooner Thelma, which was rammed and sunk today off Old Point Comfort, was commanded by Marty Welch of this port, the skipper who sailed the Esperanto to victory over the Canadian schooner Delawanna in the first international fishermen's race off Halifax in 1920.

Marty tried his luck again the next year with the Elsie, but was defeated by Angus Walters' Lunenburg schooner, Bluenose. Since that time Welch has devoted his time to fishing. He has sailed the Thelma for the last 12 years and is her principal owner. The Thelma sailed from this port a week ago on her annual spring cruise at mackerel.

DOCTOR KEEPS ESKIMO CHIEF ALIVE BY RADIO; SURGEON TO FLY TO AID

Seattle, Wash., April 2.—[United Press.]—Sepillu, wealthy Eskimo chief, living southeast of Nome, Alaska, is being kept alive tonight by medical advices radioed over 125 miles of the frozen northland between Nome and St. Lawrence island, it was learned here.

Thomas Scupholm, radio operator on the island, hourly broadcasts a description of Sepillu's condition and in turn receives advices from Dr. Dale Welch, physician at Nome, telling what curative methods should be followed. Scupholm and his wife administer the radioed first aid.

Meanwhile airplanes are being prepared to make the treacherous 125 mile flight over frozen Bering sea with doctors and nurses to operate on the Eskimo leader.

ROBERTSON CRIES YELLOW TO BILL, HIS FORMER PAL

Dr. John Dill Robertson, the "smash crime rings" independent candidate for mayor, at his meeting last night excoriated William Hale Thompson, his former bosom friend.

"Thompson is a great fighter with his mouth," said the doctor. "Thompson refuses to say whom he will appoint chief of police if elected. He is either yellow or he is trying to deceive the voters.

"I have pledged myself to appoint Edwin A. Olson chief of police. The voters know with Olson as chief the crooks will be driven from Chicago.

"Thompson is in hot water. If he gives the name of an honest man, the crooks will not vote for him Tuesday. If he names Fitzmorris, Hughes or some other of their type, the decent people will refuse to support him.

"By his silence Thompson is giving the people a right to think he is yellow. By his silence Thompson gives ample proof he will not disappoint his underworld supporters.

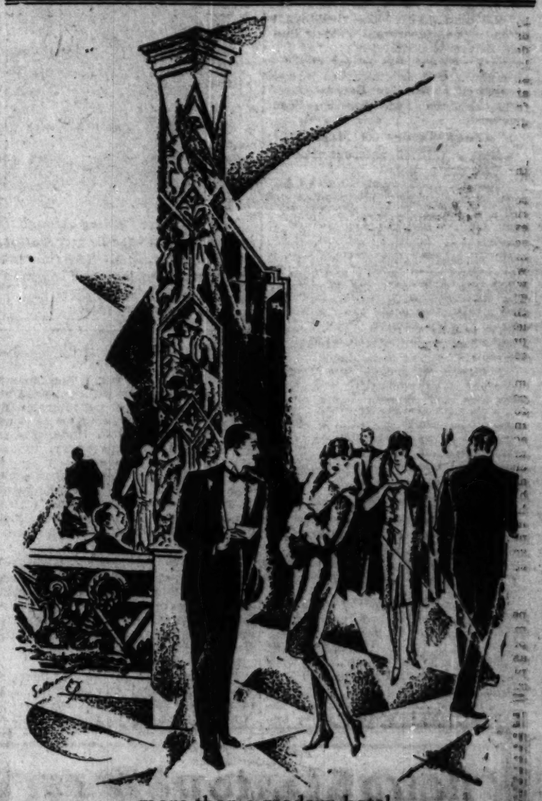
"Every voter next Tuesday will either line up with Thompson, Crowe, Fitzmorris, Druggan and Lake; with Dever, Brennan, Collins, Scarface Al Capone, and the 300 grafting policemen, or they will line up with John Dill Robertson. As you vote so must you pay."

DRY AGENT BEATS FOUR GUNMEN TO DRAW IN RAID

A lone prohibition agent beat four gunmen to the draw yesterday when they entered a barn on the farm of Fred Hauser, on the outskirts of Melrose Park, where government agents had previously confiscated a 750 gallon still.

Early in the afternoon Prohibition Agents White and Williams raided the farm and arrested John Frank, 712 South Morgan street. Later four men in an automobile arrived at the farm and crept into the barn. The agent who had been left to watch the still and 450 gallons of finished alcohol, and whose name government officials refuse to divulge, saw them enter and drew his revolver. They commanded him to surrender. As they reached for their weapons he covered them, lined them against the wall and took their guns.

The agent then compelled them to enter their automobile and drive him to the Melrose Park police headquarters. At the South Clark street police station, where they were later taken, they gave their names as Johnny Nuzzo, 949 West Polk street; Frank Kline, 1847 West Taylor street; Nicholas Carn, 3718 Lexington street, and Sammie Gray, 2843 North Western avenue. All will be arraigned before Commissioner Bietler tomorrow.



DUDES, DUDINES ENJOY FEAST AS ON BIG RANCH

Erik Dahlberg, maitre d'hôtel at the Drake, and the man who was in charge of the elaborate banquet for Queen Marie several months ago, just rolled a big chuck wagon into the ballroom last night, ordered in a dozen huge cans of milk, another dozen of coffee, hail the silver stacked on pine boards, put the victuals where everybody could reach them, and rang the dinner bell.

Several hundred Chicagoans answered it. They were all former dudes and dudines at James Gratiot's "Diamond G" ranch, near Dubois, Wyo., who gathered last night for a reunion with Mr. and Mrs. Gratiot. There was an elk steak dinner, with French fried onions and baked potatoes.

Among those who attended the reunion were the Alden B. Swifts, the Irwin Rews, Mr. and Mrs. Hempstead Washburne, Attorney and Mrs. Burt A. Crowe, the Ricker Van Meters, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Gardner, the Nelson L. Barnes, Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Hovey, and Dr. Carl Davis.

G. O. P. FOES BURY HATCHETS AT BIG THOMPSON RALLY

Deneen Makes Speech for Harmony in Party.

Sweet harmony was sung by four big bosses of the Republican party in Illinois last night when William Hale Thompson, Attorney General Carlstrom, Edward Brundage and Senator Charles S. Deneen spoke from the same platform for a common purpose —Thompson's candidacy for mayor.

Thompson was, of course, the main attraction. Carlstrom was given a big ovation, but an event of the meeting, which was held at the Medinah temple, was the appearance of Senator Deneen. Former Attorney General Brundage had joined his forces to the Thompson band wagon several weeks ago, and while the Deneenites had pledged fealty to Big Bill, it was not until last night that the senator in person had stepped on the public platform and said in effect:

"Vote for William Hale Thompson because he is a Republican."

Deneen Pleads for Regularity.

The senator's presence was considered of more importance to the Thompson cause than what the senator said. Deneen's presence in flesh and blood was what Thompson and his followers wanted.

The senator's speech itself was a carefully prepared oath of allegiance to the Republican party, the announcement that Senator Deneen had not favored the nomination of William Hale Thompson, that in the past the Thompson-Crowe faction had been in bi-partisan deal with the Democrats, but that, in effect, the people had spoken and Deneen had only one course to follow. He had one consolation, which was that the bi-partisan agreement seemed to be ended.

Thompson, Brundage and Deneen were not all present at the same time. Brundage and Deneen came, spoke their pieces and departed. Thompson came later—after Carlstrom had been ilonized not only by the crowd but in a tribute by Mrs. Anna L. Smith, formerly Democratic national committeewoman, and by others.

Celebrities on the Stage.

The stage was filled with celebrities, Lieut. Gov. Fred E. Sterling, Secretary of State Louis L. Emmerson, and Attorney General Carlstrom representing the down state wings of the republican party.

Aside from the absence of State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe, most of the other Republican leaders were present (excepting of course the Lundin and Small men who have gone out of their party column with Dr. John Dill Robertson.)

Postmaster Arthur Lueder, the Republican nominee of four years ago was there, all smiles and being patted upon the back.

Edward R. Litsinger, whom Thompson defeated in the primary, was absent, but, it was said, not intentionally so. His political running mate, County Recorded Joseph F. Haas, was regarded as Litsinger's proxy, though not called upon to speak.

The fact that Senator Deneen spoke was considered as all that was necessary from the Deneen wing of the party, the others having signified their intention of "being regular" some time ago.

Brundage "Abides by Rules."

Brundage's speech was short and sweet. It is high time the Republicans get together and quit fighting, he told the audience, and he is in politics and he abides by the rules which call for majority rule.

Senator Deneen said:

"We are here in the last meeting of the municipal campaign to take counsel together regarding our votes on Tuesday next. There is need for careful consideration of the situation lest we be led to do things in the heat of passion which our cooler judgment would not approve.

"This campaign has been unusual in the exchange of personalities among the candidates and their advocates. In the din of the shouting, some of the fundamental facts have been obscured and overlooked.

"Last night at the Sherman house, Mayor Dever and his associates appealed to six thousand Democratic precinct captains to stand together to hold their offices and their patronage. Mayor Dever stated: 'The Democrats are united and the Republicans are going to help tremendously.'

"It goes without saying that Mayor Dever has regarded his office as a political one and that he is the head of his party in the city."

Kept Republicans at War.

Then the senator told of Dever's having been of the Harrison-Dunne-O'Connell faction four years ago until chosen by Brennan to be the candidate for mayor. That caused him to make Brennan his counsellor and guide, Senator Deneen said.

"Mr. Brennan negotiated the bipartisan agreement which has kept the Republican party in a turmoil during the last four years," he then said. "He has kept its elements at war."

The bipartisan rift has caused defeat for Republicans in many local contests.

Should Dever be reelected, Senator Deneen declared, he and Brennan would then be in a tremendously powerful position to bring about the nomination of their friend, Gov. Al Smith of New York, for the presidency.

Demands a New Law.

After discussing briefly the past alliance which he stated existed between the "successful faction" of the Republican party and the Democrats, through which certain members of each party had been elected, he said:

"It is of the highest importance that the present legislature should enact an amendment to the primary law which will enable our political parties to function in controlling their own organization and management. It is of equal importance that the law be amended so that members of a political party may control its primaries and select its candidates without interference from members of other political parties."

RECORDS TALK LOUDEST, DEVER'S TAUNT TO RIVAL

Says Nation Wonders How Bill Can Hope.

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.

Mayor Dever finished the last week of his campaign yesterday with eleven speeches downtown and on the south and west sides.

"I am prepared to leave the issues in your hands," he told the people everywhere. "The fight for civic righteousness is drawing to a close. I have profound faith in the patriotism and intelligence of the people. I have observed that in every crisis with which the people of Chicago have found themselves confronted they have acted wisely, judiciously and patriotically. They know that the decision they will register Tuesday will have momentous consequences to the city, their homes and families."

Bases Plea on Work.

The mayor continued to the last to discuss the actual problems that confront the city, showing the years of constructive effort and achievement that he has given to the city, talking of schools, playgrounds, great public improvements, honesty in office, and dismissing his chief rival, Thompson, with this:

"The people ought to know that great newspapers in nearly all of our cities, the press everywhere, is expressing wonder and surprise at what appears to the outside world to be incredible, that one of the candidates for mayor, in view of the ineffaceable record he left when he quit the city hall four years ago, is receiving any sort of attention at the hands of the voters of Chicago."

Michael L. Igoe, south park commissioner and Democratic leader in the assembly, issued a reply yesterday to the charge emanating from Thompson headquarters that he was endeavoring to incite race riots.

"There is one man, and just one man, who has tried to create race prejudice in this campaign," he said. "That is the same man who was responsible for the race riots of 1919, which he didn't have the nerve to suppress and which he fled from when they occurred. That man is William Hale Thompson. The only possible danger of race riots would come with the election of Thompson."

The Service Men's League of Illinois asked Thompson a series of questions yesterday, in a resolution signed by A. A. Pantelis, president, and Charles E. Falkenberg, secretary. Here are a few of the questions:

"Is it not a fact that, without exception, every distinguished combat service man in Chicago is supporting Mayor Dever for reelection? Hasn't America's first clown, William Hale Thompson, paid a high price for a handful of self-seeking and self-styled heroes?

"The Service Men's League of Illinois resents the action of W. E. (Daddy) Schick, who has been signally honored by the service men of Chicago by election to the commandership of the state American Legion. He states that 'any reflection on William Hale Thompson's patriotism is absolutely false.' The conclusion of every honest service man in Chicago is that even if Daddy Schick thinks Thompson was not false to this country during the war, Daddy Schick has played false to the service men of Chicago by indorsing Thompson.

Say Times Have Changed.

"What prompted Daddy Schick to purify the war record of William Hale Thompson now, when he, Schick, was a high officer of the American Legion convention which exposed Thompson as a traitor just seven short years ago?

"Because of Thompson's rotten war record and worse administration every self-respecting service man, irrespective of party affiliations, will do another great service to his city and his country by voting for the reelection of William E. Dever."

Girl Dies of Burns Suffered at Stove

Mamie Scentie, 15, died at St. Joseph's hospital last night of burns suffered earlier in the day. As told by the girl's mother, Mrs. Sylvia Scentie, 2129 Seminary avenue, Mamie reached for a pot of boiling water on top of a wood stove in the home. Flames from the open door of the stove ignited the girl's dress and before Mrs. Scentie could put out the fire, her daughter was hopelessly burned.

HIDDEN GUN SEEN SLEUTH'S DEFENSE PUTS HIM IN JAIL

Philip Maleski of 721 Taylor st., recently graduated as a detective college. It cost him $35 for the course. Last night, with his diploma in his pocket, his star over his heart and a pistol in his right hip pocket, he started out to do a little detecting in the Harding theater at Halsted street and Milwaukee avenue.

As he entered, Manager Frank Gordon saw the pistol. He asked the detective to park it while he took in the picture. Maleski gave him a check or two, flashed the star and walked in. Manager Gordon called the police, who marched him to the West Chicago avenue station, where they booked him on a charge of carrying concealed deadly weapon.

"You can't do it," said Maleski. "That ain't a concealed weapon. Why, it was the manager couldn't have seen it, could he?"

The judge will have to decide the problem.

CROWDS MILL IN FRENZY ON LOOP BALLOT GROUND

Campaign Hubbub Swirls Round the Sherman.

BY KATHLEEN M'LAUGHLIN.

A torrid, frenzied scene was staged yesterday at Clark and Randolph streets and in the Hotel Sherman, headquarters alike for the Deverites and the Thompson forces. Old timers declared they never had seen anything of the sort in a mayoralty campaign in Chicago.

Raucous shouts, milling crowds, taunts, and retorts discourteous, campaign banners and ballyhooers, Dever sirens and Thompson pennants, cheers and catcalls, American flags and foreign-American societies, bellitting jests, and bushels, barrels, tons of campaign literature fluttering down from the windows and roofs of adjoining buildings—all made up the maelstrom.

Cheer Leaders Cheer-Weary.

There was a circus calliope, a float from a Mardi Gras parade, cheer leaders as exhausted as though this had been the fourth quarter of a big football game, more novelty purveyors than a country town carnival could support, and campaign chatter everywhere.

Every few minutes a fresh edition of pro or con propaganda for one or the other of the favorites was circulated with gusto among the hundreds that crowded and jammed and pushed their way from one hoarse voiced electioneer mounted atop a trash box to another not more than twenty feet away.

Monkeying with the race question on Tuesday will be about as healthy as playing one ol' cat with a bottle of TNT for a baseball, if the episode at the Sherman is a fair example of the example of the mental status of the citizenry—which is hardly likely. For the crowd yesterday represented not the casual voter, but the professional or semi-professional politician.

"Big Bill's Express" from Dixie headlined one cartoon directed against the portly candidate. "Doubleface Dever," megaphoned the Thompson workers, waving a newspaper picture of Mayor Dever taken four years ago at a colored gathering.

A 200 pound woman in a heavy crimson sweater and grey knickers, as hoarse as her opponent on the opposite trash box, waves her megaphone back and forth, advising her listeners that "you'll do your duty if you vote for William Hale Thompson. He doesn't stand for America first, he stands for Chicago first." She is greeted with jeers, but carries on.

A tall, sandy haired youth who takes delight in tormenting the vision in knickers attracts the wrath of another of the feminine contingent, a middle aged woman who assures him venomously, shaking her index finger under his nose: "If Mr. Thompson is elected, there'll be a warrant out for you the very next day." At which he chuckles anew.

And over and over again, the calliope pierces the air in the only tune it seems to have in its répertoire, "Bye, Bye, Blackbird."

POLICE READY TO CURB ELECTION VIOLENCE

ELEVEN COUNCIL BATTLES END IN WILD EXCITEMENT

Seven to Be Nip and Tuck; Haffa-Albert Feature.

With the voters' verdict only two days away, twenty-two candidates for seats in the city council wound up their campaigns last night in a whirlwind of excitement scarcely less intense than that of the big fight for the mayor's chair.

The aldermanic battles are scattered over the city. Three, in the 7th, 10th, and 12th wards, are on the south side; four, the 22d, 26th, 33d, and 37th, on the west side, and four, the 40th, 43d, 45th, and 50th, on the north side.

A belief that two others might be added at the last minute seemed to be knocked out yesterday by a writ of supersedeas from the Appellate court staying a Superior court writ of mandamus putting Ald. Charles S. Eaton [5th] and Ald. Robert Barbee [17th], who lost to Leonard J. Grossman and James G. Coyle Feb. 22, on runoff ballots. These fights will likely go to the council with possible special elections in June.

Seven Races Are Close.

In at least seven of the eleven other disrupted wards, a zero hour survey indicates the races are nip and tuck—anybody's battle until the last ballot is counted. These are the 10th, 12th, 26th, 33d, 40th, 43d, and 50th. Incumbents should win in the 7th, 22d, 35th, and 46th wards.

The unknown factor in all of the fights, and the one likely to settle the contests, is the mayoralty vote. Despite the theoretical nonpartisanship of council politics, a big wave for either Dever or Thompson would probably sweep their aldermanic supporters in on its crest.

Lineups for Battle.

The lineups, politically, are as follows:

Ward.	Candidates.
7.	*Ross A. Woodhull, Dever D. Z. F. Jakubowski, Ind. D.
10.	*Ernest M. Cross, Thomp. R. William A. Bowan, Dever D.
12.	*Ernest J. Kunstmann, Thomp. R. Bryan Hartnett, Dever D.
22.	*Joseph Cepak, Dever D. A. L. Galuzinski, Thomp. R.
26.	*Joseph A. Mendel, Dever D. Frank A. Sloan, Thomp. R.
33.	*Joseph Petlak, Dever D. G. M. Rozczynialski, Ind. R.
37.	*Wiley W. Mills, Dever D. Bert Fairchild, Ind. R.
40.	*Christ A. Jensen, Dever D. John W. Chapman, Thomp. R.
43.	*Arthur F. Albert, Robertson R. Titus A. Haffa, Thomp. R.
45.	*Leo M. Brieske, Dever D. Wm. Feigenbutz, Thomp. R.
50.	Carl H. Lundquist, Dever D. Aaron K. Mose, Ind. R.

*Sitting aldermen.

Mayor Dever, if reelected with a fair share of the eleven new aldermen, should have a firm control of the council, as all of his leaders except Ald. Woodhull were reelected Feb. 22. A majority would also swing behind Thompson, it is believed, but a smaller one. The Thompson camp therefore is keeping an eagle eye on the runoff elections.

There is little question among the dopesters that Ald. Woodhull will topple Z. F. Jakubowski, who ran a weak third in the primary, going on the ballot through the withdrawal of C. F. Mayer. Woodhull polled 10,532 votes and Jakubowski only 2,705.

Others Slated to Win.

Ald. Cepak [22], Mills [37], and Brieske [45] are the other aldermen, all Deverites, slated to win.

By far the hottest battle of the election is the Albert-Haffa duel for supremacy in the 43d. Once friends, but now archenemies, politically and personally, these two combatants have thrown as much dirt as all other candidates combined, using almost every invective in the dictionary, including "liar," "traitor," and "thief."

Much mud has also flown in the Fiftieth between Lundquist and Mose, who are struggling for Ald. W. H. Pontow's seat, especially over the charge that Mose dodged the draft. A barrel of campaign funds is said to have been sunk in this fight. The outcome is uncertain.

The Jensen-Chapman fight in the Fortieth is also a neck and neck affair, with Jensen a shade the favorite. Chapman, however, is putting up a brilliant battle.

Ald. Petlak's fight for another term from the Thirty-third is chiefly a combat between his Democratic machine and that of Congressman Stanley H. Kunz. His opponent, Rozczynialski, is backed by Kunz and State Representative William Lipka, who are bent on throwing Petlak out.

M. V. L. RECOMMENDATION

Aldermanic candidates recommended by the Municipal Voters' league for Tuesday are as follows:

7th ward—Ald. Ross A. Woodhull.
10th ward—William A. Bowan.
12th ward—Bryan Hartnett.
22d ward—No preference.
26th ward—Frank A. Sloan.
33d ward—No preference.
37th ward—Ald. Wiley W. Mills.
40th ward—John W. Chapman.
43d ward—Ald. Arthur F. Albert.
45th ward—No preference.
50th ward—Carl H. Lundquist.

POLICE CALLED TO QUELL CLASH DURING PARADE

Calls for the police were sent in last night when followers of William H. Feigenbuts, Thompson candidate for alderman in the 45th ward, were attacked by men who are alleged to have been connected with the organization of Ald. Leo M. Brieske. The Feigenbuts adherents were holding a parade at the time. Before the police arrived the disturbance had quieted down.

Two men were arrested last night, charged with attacking William Kerr, 3619 Wilton avenue, a cashier for the Lincoln park board. They are: Charles Collace, 1506 North La Salle street, and Clarence Delaware, 1719 Patterson avenue. According to Kerr, they set upon him when they learned their names were no longer on the Lincoln park pay roll. Collace and Delaware are said to be Thompson supporters.

Windows containing pictures of Mayor Dever at 2363 North Clark street were shattered by stone throwers. The police believe small boys were responsible.

BOND ISSUES OF $21,075,000 ON BALLOT TUESDAY

River Straightening and Home Rule Asked.

Voters will be asked next Tuesday to approve or veto bond issues aggregating $21,075,000 approved by the city council. Five of the proposals including four bridges and the river straightening project, are considered of outstanding consequence.

Besides the bond issues, the voters will have their first opportunity to deny or grant city officials a greater measure of control over public utilities serving Chicago's population. The home rule ballot, if approved, would give officials elected by Chicagoans control over rates and rules of the street car, bus, electricity, telephone, and gas companies in the city. This is one of the chief planks in Mayor Dever's program, based on his often expressed desire to liberate Illinois municipalities from absentee control in Springfield.

$2,500,000 for River Project.

Of the bond issues, that of $2,500,000 to finance the city's share of the cost of straightening the south branch of the Chicago river from Polk to Eighteenth street has been the object of the most intense educational campaign by its sponsors. By making way for the opening of loop streets to the south and enabling the construction of a new south side railroad terminal, with consequent electrification, the straightening of the river is held the solution to the south side traffic problem and one of the most impressive improvements in the city's history.

With the river straightening is involved the necessity of stretching two new bridges, one at Roosevelt road and the other at Taylor street, over the proposed new channel. Each of these bridges is estimated to cost $1,700,000. For their construction bond issues must be approved.

Authorization of bonds for new bridges at Clark street and Wabash avenue will be asked. Because the government has held the Clark street bridge, with its center pier, to be an obstruction to navigation the city must replace it with a bascule structure. The cost is figured at $1,700,000.

Wabash Plan Is Criticized.

The Wabash avenue bridge project, although approved by the Chicago Plan commission, has been criticized by several organizations. Proponents of the bridge contend that it will give needed traffic relief on Michigan and Wabash avenues. Those who oppose the plan say there is no adequate north outlet to handle increased traffic and that a right of way over the Northwestern railroad tracks might be difficult to secure.

Except for the widening of Kimball avenue and 103d street, the street widening projects are all under way. The total amount of these issues is $6,765,000. They include continuation of the widening of 22d street, according to the plans made by the late John J. Sloan ($1,600,000), widening of Ashland avenue ($2,500,000), Kimball avenue widening ($250,000), Western avenue widening ($2,000,000), 103d street ($100,000), and East 71st street ($315,000).

Four other bond issues will be submitted. For installation of street lights largely in the outlying districts and along main traveled streets $1,700,000 is asked. The system of stop and go lights would be extended if the $200,000 for that purpose is approved. There is a bond issue of $1,000,000 for creation of parks and beaches. Approval of a $500,000 issue would insure construction of a nurses' home at the Municipal contagious diseases hospital.

The Chicago Plan commission and Charles H. Wacker, former president of that body, indorse all the proposals and urge their approval. The plan commission issued a last minute statement yesterday.

"Every one of the bond issues should receive a large majority vote," says the statement. "Even that for Wabash avenue, against which some criticism has been directed on the thought that it was premature to vote the bonds before the plans for a street along the north bank of the river have been completed."

G. O. P. CHIEFS SHY AT COALITION TO RESEAT JUDGES

Both Parties to Hold Conventions Friday.

bring about coalition for the reelection of sitting judges and we are willing to have the association pass on all our candidates.

"The Democratic party stands now where it stood in 1921. It again puts good citizenship above partisanship and prefers to have justice administered by lawyers, not by precinct committeemen. If the Republican leaders take a different position we shall be glad to offer our party column for a coalition ticket for we are confident that many thousands of Republicans and independents who supported coalition six years ago will do so again this year regardless of those leaders."

Two Judges May Be Opposed.

It is a matter of common knowledge that two of the sitting Republican judges may not be included in the Crowe-Thompson slate. They are Judge George Fred Rush, who was censured by the Bar association for his conduct of bankruptcy cases three years ago, and Judge Oscar M. Torrison, whom lawyers have criticized for unusual delays of cases.

But there has been no intimation that there is any intention to drop more than these two. On the Democratic side the list probably will omit the name of Judge George Kersten, who is an invalid.

The other judges up for renomination are the following:

DEMOCRATIC.	REPUBLICAN.
John R. Caverly	David F. Matchett
Thomas J. Lynch	Kickham Scanlan
Ira Ryner	Hugo M. Friend
Harry M. Fisher	Charles M. Thomson
Philip L. Sullivan	David M. Brothers
Frank Johnston Jr.	William V. Brothers
Francis S. Wilson	Thomas Taylor Jr.
	Victor P. Arnold
	Mary Bartelme
	John A. Swanson

The court now includes twelve Republicans and eight Democrats. In addition there is Judge Timothy D. Hurley's Democratic vacancy in the Superior court. Therefore, starting point for coalition negotiations was on the theory that the Republicans would hold the twelve places they now have in the Circuit court and the Democrats would hold their eight places on the Circuit bench and the Hurley vacancy.

But so far as has been discovered there has been no binding agreement reached on this main point. It is said to be one of those put off for discussion until after the mayoral election.

Bar Hopes for Agreement.

The bar association is said to have agreed to this postponement, and for that reason there has been no decision as to the part its committee on candidates will play in determining the makeup of a coalition ticket if one is decided on.

It is said that this committee desires that the negotiations be carried on as they were in 1921—between representatives of the two parties, and the association, with an understanding that no man will go on the ticket unless he is acceptable to all three elements.

Regardless of the question whether Thompson wins, State's Attorney Crowe will control the Republican convention. If Thompson wins the mayoralty he probably will have a big influence on the program.

It is expected that on Friday both conventions will be recessed to allow for the usual post-campaign trips of leaders to West Baden and other recuperating spots, and final negotiations may not be opened until after their return from this hegira.

NEW WAR AWAITS LEGION IN PARIS; ON HARD COLLARS

PARIS, April 2.—(AP)—When the Yanks come back in September for the American Legion convention here they are expected to get into another fight. This time it is the crusade against the collar button. The anti-hard collarites have sent an official letter to the Legion authorities asking them to consider seriously low-neck shirt models which various American shirtmakers have been asked to send to them for approval. The French foes of collars believe that if the men of America can be won over to their cause their battle is over.

FRANCO-BRITISH CLASH TIES UP DISARM PARLEY

GENEVA, April 2.—[U. P.]—Franco-British differences today interrupted all progress toward the limitation of the world's aerial armaments.

M. Paul Boncour, representing France, presented what amounted to an ultimatum to the league of nations preparatory disarmament commission, explaining France would accept aerial limitation on one condition—that limitation apply equally to all air forces serving with land, sea or aerial units of defense or offense. Otherwise, M. Paul Boncour said, France would not accept any sort of limitation.

England, the United States and Japan wished to include naval aviation as an integral part of the naval limitations discussion.

3 YOUTHS GET MURDER TERMS.

Baker, near Mount Vernon, the night of Jan. 24. The jury gave Isaacs 18 years, Jolly 16 years, and Parrish 15 years. The young men range in age from 19 to 21 years.

GRAFT CHARGES ADD ZEST TO SUBURBAN RACES

Evanston and Oak Park Contests Bitter.

Spirited elections in several suburbs are scheduled for next Tuesday. Usually tame affairs, the contests this year have attracted much interest because of the heated charges made by rival candidates.

In Evanston, the mayoralty contest has attracted three candidates who have hurled dirt at each other in approved big-city style. There are candidates for alderman in each of the seven wards and the regular biennial dispute over Sunday movies. In Oak Park, the two candidates for president of the village board have stirred up the villagers by their charges against each otther.

In Glencoe, there is a close race between the Citizens' party, headed by Merle B. Waltz, and the People's party, headed by Cleo Campbell, for village offices. Waltz and Campbell are the candidates for board president. In Winnetka, Henry F. Tenney is unopposed for board president. Cicero will vote for village and library trustees. Most of the other suburbs have elections on April 19.

Three Candidates in Evanston.

Mayor Charles H. Bartlett, former Mayor Harry P. Pearsons and James Huxtable, who has been a candidate mny times, are the three seeking the office of mayor of Evanston. The race is between Bartlett and Pearsons and is very close, according to observers. Both are said to have had campaign funds of $15,000 or more and both made charges of graft against each other.

The First, Second, Third, and Seventh wards in Evanston are those in which the well-to-do and wealthy reside. In three of these wards, the aldermanic candidates are unopposed, but there is a hot contest in the Third ward between the present alderman, E. W. K. Bailey, and his opponent, R. S. Gay.

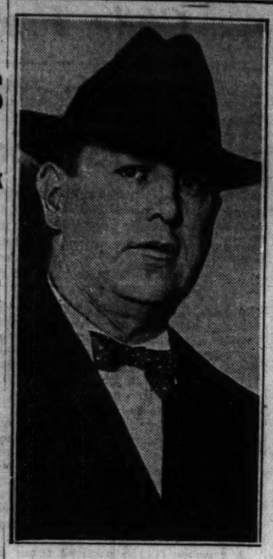
Sunday Movies Is Issue.

In addition, Evanstonians will vote on the Sunday movie question. The anti-movie voters won two years ago by a majority which was smaller than ever before and the movie fans hope for success this time.

Willis McFeely, president of the Oak Park village board, is engaged in a close battle with George J. Kuhn, who is the candidate of the Civic Betterment party. McFeely's supporters have accused Kuhn of having bootlegger support, which caused the latter to file a $100,000 libel suit. Charges have been made against McFeely that he and his chief of police, Leon K. McGrath, have been lax in the enforcement of law in the village.

Twenty-five Oak Park ministers and President McFeely, who were invited to attend a meeting called by the citizenship committee of the community to air charges of misconduct against McFeely, failed to appear last night. McFeely has denied the charges, attributing them to political enmities, and the ministers have issued a statement asserting their faith in him.

WESBEY GIVES UP



WILLIAM H. WESBEY.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

IMMEDIATE TRIAL WESBEY REFUSED; PLOT IS CHARGED

After surrendering and furnishing cash bail of $1,500, William H. Wesbey, Republican ward leader, yesterday demanded an immediate hearing on federal charges based on his mailing copies of Philip Yarrow's pamphlet, "William Hale Thompson and a Certain Stag Party."

His request for a hearing tomorrow was denied, and the case was set for April 12, whereupon Wesley issued a statement insisting that the voters are entitled to an airing of the story of the stag party before they go to he polls.

"My personal investigation," read the statement, "convinced me that the charges in the booklet are true and that William Hale Thompson, because of his connection with and participation in that obscene stag party is morally unfit to hold any public office."

He also charged that his arrest was politically inspired, saying that Assistant District Attorney E. H. Hess is a henchman of B. W. Snow and that United States Commissioner Henry C. Beitler was formerly the "Crowe-Barrett committeeman of the Forty-eighth ward."

HIGHER COURT ORDERS WRIGLEY TO PAY MILLION

Upholds Larson Charges of Infringement.

General approval of the decision of Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson in awarding the L. P. Larson Jr. company $1,384,649.12 against the William Wrigley Jr. company for trade mark infringements was contained in an opinion rendered yesterday by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals.

Items of profit sharing coupons, federal income and excess profit tax, and the rate of interest on the award were ordered remanded to the District court. This action is expected to reduce the award to approximately $1,000,000.

Both Sides Appealed.

Both parties appealed the award of Judge Wilkerson, the Larson company claiming it was entitled to a larger award, while the Wrigley company disputed the entire decision.

"The forestalling and oppressive tactics employed by Wrigley for the purpose of eliminating Larson as an actual or potential competitor," the opinion, written by Judge Samuel Alschuler, reads, "cries out against Wrigley's urging, in defense, the success of these very tactics. Wrigley may not thus lawlessly clip Larson's wings, and escape liability for the profits of its appropriation of Larson's package dress on the plea that Larson could not fly."

In Court Many Years.

The case has been in litigation for several years and thousands of pages of evidence were heard. The award of Judge Wilkerson, and approved by the Court of Appeals, decreed that the Wrigley company must pay to the Larson company profits from all sales in which the gum wrapper claimed by the Larson company as a trade mark was used.

COUNTESS GIVES FIRST STORY OF SHOOTING LOVER

'I Wanted to Wound Him,' Ex-Chicagoan Says.

PARIS, April 2.—[U. P.]—Police today obtained from the Countess De Janze, formerly Alice Silverthorne of Chicago, a signed statement in which she admitted shooting herself and Raymond De Trafford, a wealthy Englishman, one week ago today in a railway carriage at the Dare Du Nord. It was the first formal statement the countess, who is related to the J. Ogden Armours, had made.

"I don't know why I did it," said the statement signed by the countess

"Wanted to Wound Him."

"I must have been crazy. He was leaving me but was to rejoin me later. I only wanted to wound him and I really don't know why. I wanted to kill myself, for I have always had ideas of suicide. From time to time and without reason I have wanted to die."

The statement added that the countess had purchased the revolver while with De Trafford at the arms store at which they had always bought their hunting weapons. Both were big game enthusiasts.

May Be Transferred to Prison.

The countess believed that she would not be held for the shooting and planned when she should recover to go to the Riviera to rest. But Judge Bacquard, the examining magistrate, said he intended to question her Monday and to make a charge of voluntary homicide. The countess, Judge Bacquard intimated, would be transferred from the hospital to St. Lazare prison.

SPEAKEASIES FOR DANCING CHEAT ITALY'S JAZZ BAN

ROME, April 2.—(AP)—Speakeasies for dancing have sprung up in Italy since the issuance of the government's edicts regulating dancing in public and virtually declaring war on night clubs.

The under cover jazz dancing resorts are housed in exclusive halls and sometimes in the palatial homes of the aristocracy. In order to stay unquestionably within the law, they operate as unostentiously as possible and on a strictly non-commercial basis. Mere money does not suffice for entrance, cards of admission being distributed only to persons whose birth and social standing make them acceptable.

Meanwhile, the anti-jazz decrees have taken full effect among the less wealthy classes, with dancing banned. The cabarets and dance halls are not operating. It also is understood that the law will soon be extended to the fashionable hotels, where a two hour dance period hitherto has been allowed as a concession to the tourist trade.

Locks Up Chief Justice of Chile, President's Brothe

SANTIAGO, Chile, April 2.—(AP)—Javier Figueroa, president of the Chilean Supreme court and brother of the president of the republic, is a prisoner in the drastic campaign of the government of Premier Ibanez to stamp out opposition.

[Premier Ibanez, who recently seized control of the Chilean government "to prevent communist control," has already sent a large number of prominent politicians into exile. A number of communists have been deported to an island in the Pacific.]

A sensation has been caused by the arrest, which took place last night and became known today. Judge Figueroa is being detained in his own home. Court Minister Horacio Hevia has disappeared following upon the issuance of an order for his arrest.

Follows Friction With Cabinet.

The arrest of Judge Figueroa follows upon a period of friction between the cabinet and the Supreme court. The government recently ordered the ousting of five court ministers and thirteen judges for alleged misconduct. The Supreme court resisted the decree, but finally yielded in view of the government's insistence.

A number of the accused functionaries were found guilty, but yesterday Judge Figueroa notified the government that the court considered the charges against the remainder of them to be unjustified. His arrest followed immediately.

URBAN LEAGUE TO HELP NEGROES TO JOBS THIS WEEK

The Chicago Urban league announced yesterday that this week has been designated "Negro in Industry Week," and that intensive efforts will be made during the next eight days to obtain better working and living conditions for Chicago's 200,000 colored people.

Beginning this afternoon with a rally at the Olivet Baptist church, 3101 South Park way, where Eugene Kinckle Jones, executive secretary of the league, will tell the results of the campaign to obtain jobs for Negroes on the south side. The week will wind up with a mass meeting at the Metropolitan community church next Sunday.

Other meetings will be held throughout the week in the Hotel La Salle, City, club, Union League club, Great Lakes lodge, and the Woman's City club, to discuss the fitness of Negroes for skilled positions. Pamphlets and educational material have been prepared to be broadcast among Negroes urging them to strive to qualify for responsible jobs along the lines suggested by the league.

COURT FORBIDS 2D WIFE TO MOVE BODY OF HUSBAND

Cedar Rapids, Ia., April 2.—[Special.]—Judge F. L. Anderson, in district court today, issued a perpetual injunction against Mrs. Mary Klimesh, restraining her from moving to another cemetery the body of her husband, Frank Klimesh, from the cemetery where it is buried beside that of his first wife.

She is also restrained from placing a headstone at the grave. She had bought the stone and had it engraved.

Family differences between the second Mrs. Klimesh and Mrs. Mary Buresh, daughter of Mr. Klimesh by his first marriage, caused the daughter to obtain the injunction. No similar injunction has ever been issued here.

NASH

Leads the World in Motor Car Value

How many main bearings in your motor car? Nash recommends 7

Because for the finest and smoothest performance results, you need 7, rather than 3 or 4.

Obviously, 3 or 4 supports for a crankshaft cannot give it the rigidity and smoothness of 7. That is why Nash—with customary engineering progressiveness—has developed the 7-bearing motor for all Nash models.

And smoothness is not the only advantage of this Nash engineering achievement.

A crankshaft that "whips" because of inadequate bearing support must eventually loosen its bearings and require expensive shopwork. The 7 bearings of Nash prevent this.

The 7 bearings of Nash also achieve power-smoothness and quietness with no sacrifice of acceleration. In fact, the proper support of the crankshaft decidedly improves the energy and aggressiveness of the car.

Nash changed to 7 bearings even though large expenditures were required for new precision equipment, because 7 bearings give Nash owners a better, smoother, more powerful motor car. One that is keen on the throttle, with a fluid quickness of acceleration not found in older motor types.

Here is another fact to remember about the 7 bearings of Nash:

They have more bearing surface, by actual measurement, than any 6-cylinder engine of similar size and price, no matter how many bearings it has. (Actually 20 square inches more than cars with fewer bearings.)

More than 140,000 Nash owners are now driving the 7-bearing motor. Their experience has been so outspokenly satisfactory that it seems certain all 6-cylinder engines must eventually turn to 7 bearings to compete with Nash in performance—and in resale or trade-in value.

When you buy your 1927 motor car be sure to ask: "How many main bearings?" And for better results choose the car that has 7.

Nash offers you this performance-advantage in every single model, whether you pay $2090 for it or only $865.

The recommendation will be forwarded to the council of the league, which would have charge of the convocation of the conference. Washington, D. C., April 2.—[Special.]—President Coolidge received two invitations today, one asking him to spend the summer in Wyoming and the other urging him to establish the summer White House in California.

Dennison, owner of the Dennison ranch, a 22,000 acre estate on Bear creek, a tributary of the Big Wind river, Tremount county, Wyoming, asked the president to spend his vacation on the Dennison ranch. The other invitation came from Fred D. McPherson, a newspaper publisher of Santa Cruz, Cal.

Mr. McPherson told President Coolidge that business throughout the country is in an unusually healthy condition.

DEVER OR THOMPSON.

The people of Chicago on Tuesday will either re-elect Mayor Dever for a second term or will elect William Hale Thompson for a third term after his four years out of the city hall. Votes for Dr. John Dill Robertson may affect the decision, but can hardly be expected to give it in his favor. It will be Dever or Thompson, from all present indications.

It is a transparent issue. The candidates themselves are transparent. Comment can add little to general information regarding them. It would be difficult for people to be misled concerning them. Each has demonstrated himself in office and in politics.

In most respects the mayor and the former mayor are complete opposites, in personality, character, mentality, record, and intent. That is so apparent as to be not arguable. The voters will pick the type of man and mayor they want and can be confident of the consequences of their choice.

They cannot be mistaken in their man. In each case he has been before them for years, has had every opportunity for self-revelation, every opportunity to show what he would do in the office he again seeks, and in the public life of the city. The thoughts, works, and manners of each are known wherever there is any ability or willingness to judge of character and record.

THE TRIBUNE has the feeling that probably the most futile thing in politics would be to try to add to this knowledge. If eight years of Thompson and four years of Dever have not been persuasive and convincing as to the city's interests, there isn't much chance for argument now. The people of Chicago want what they want and they will get it, whether it is four more years of Dever or four more years of Thompson.

In the campaign Thompson has not astonished any of his opponents or disappointed any of his friends. Some of his follies may be a little riper and gaudier and some of his ideas a little wilder, but he is the same man who quit four years ago rather than chance a defeat. He anticipates now, and says so, the division of spoils in the city hall. The recollection of what this was is itemized still for people who paid any attention to city administration in his eight years. Just as the primary campaign got under way two of his real estate experts made restitution within their power to the city and the others are now in court.

His administration was one of split salaries, split fees, Riverview picnics, extortion of percentages from employés, expert levies against public improvements, indicted police, breakdown of public education, jailed school trustees, script instead of cash for city pay rolls, strikes of city employés, judgments for unpaid bills, indicted city officials, a race riot, waste, theft, disorder, noise, hypocrisy, and vice.

What he offered as public policies were grotesque vaporings and irrelevancies. No entangling alliances, no singing of "God Save the King," a two cent fare if the people voted for it, grab a horn, down with Wall street. What the city got were public utilities virtually controlled by Samuel Insull, rates as Insull wanted them, surface car fares fixed by the federal courts, wages reduced for street employés, a city unable to pay its bills. It is hardly necessary to revert to his superchief of police, the Rev. Mr. Williamson; to the expert fees of $4,892,000 against a $26,600,000 streets' improvement, to the waste of $250,000 out of the traction fund for white and Negro lawyers, the $180,000 paid for a traction report which any alderman could have dictated in a half hour, to the attempt to pack the Circuit court with Thompson henchmen, to the obstruction of war measures which made the mayor of Chicago notorious the country over.

They were eight years of incredible administration of city affairs and would require a book. The city is given the opportunity to return to them and with Thompson it will. Self-respecting citizens had eight years of apologizing every time they went anywhere else and of being ashamed when they were home.

Thompson is a whirlwind campaigner. His physical expansiveness and vigor give him an unquestioned popularity. He can animate stuffed shirts and pull rabbits out of his ears. Many people who would accept him as a riot in a musical comedy take him as a Roosevelt on the platform. Without this gift he would be harmless.

Mayor Dever is a man of dignity, intelligence, and personal and political honor. These qualities are apparent in his conduct and his utterances. They have been apparent in his public life as alderman, judge, and mayor. Possibly they have cost him some political support in his own party. Sprague, his appointee as commissioner of public works, has administered this great department with a sense of trusteeship to the people, and that is not so popular always with percentage-seeking politics.

A mayor who tries to conduct the city's affairs with as much regard for the city's interests as he would his own business in his own interests frequently carries a political load and frequently does not get any help from the very people he helps, with whom he deals squarely. Not infrequently the voters make honesty in city administration a discouraging thing.

The biggest thing Dever tried to give the city consructively was a traction settlement. He failed in that. The voters rejected his plan. It was an enormous undertaking. We suspect that it was too big. Chicago has had so little political achievement in traction that it probably doubts the practicality of any. The work Mr. Dever and his supporters in the council put in the plan which failed was long and painstaking. The disappointment must have been great and discouraging, but the effort was made. THE TRIBUNE tried to persuade the mayor to undertake subway building without going in for a comprehensive settlement of every difficulty. His judgment was different. But Thompson in eight years produced nothing but waste, confusion, and disruption of service. Dever, if reelected, will try again along different lines. The legislature under Small is waiting to see what the people here do in this election before getting down to traction legislation. What it will be if Thompson is elected might cause sensible citizens considerable apprehension.

Under Dever the city has recovered its financial stability. It has proceeded with neglected public works. It has built schoolhouses and has made place for the children who had been crowded out. It has pushed ahead street construction under good management. It has opened the way for river straightening. It has been without scandal. There are everywhere evidences of scrupulous conduct as under Thompson there were everywhere evidences of unscrupulous and disgraceful gang work.

Under Dever the city administration has been consistent with the character of the man. It has been respectable. It has endeavored to have intelligent policies honestly executed. It has restored the belief that Chicago is a community of self-respecting people of general intelligence, capable of organizing municipal government in the democratic system.

The momentum of private energy in the city now is great. It is a creative period the evidences of which are multiplying and becoming more impressive. It may be the city's misfortune to go back into the political dark ages. The return of Thompson can be regarded as nothing but just that.

INDIANA IN THE DARK AGE.

Judge Clarence W. Dearth of Muncie has been found not guilty on the articles of impeachment by the Indiana senate. Conviction required a two-thirds vote. On all but two of the articles a majority of the senators voted guilty. It is conceded that the Indiana Klan was one of the factors which saved the judge. The Republican organization in the state was another.

Judge Dearth had to answer, among other charges, for a method of picking jurors in his court which packed them with drys. He got the jurors he wanted by appointing as jury commissioner a man who was in his Methodist Sunday school class, but who was admittedly not qualified legally for the office. There was also in the proceedings the record of Dearth's fight with a newspaper in which the judge went to extremes of coercion.

Indiana has been one of the American states distinguishing itself by organized terrorism of opinion and conduct under the inspiration of masked gangsters under cover and fanatic drys in the open. The Klan had a criminal, Stephenson, for a leader, and he is now in the penitentiary. The drys had a leader, Shumaker, who tried to intimidate the Supreme court and he is now trying to keep himself from punishment for contempt.

Although disclosures have revealed facts it has been difficult and for the most part impossible to punish for the outrages against American principles. In recent years there has been a transition in Indiana from a neighborly, sane, tolerant society to a condition of narrow minded and savage bigotry which seems at times almost to have distorted the character of the people.

Indiana people had been regarded as the true type of the American democracy until this strange malady was inflicted on them. Prohibition is a doctrine which unbalances the mind. It is an enthusiasm which frequently produces a derangement, a monomania in which no sense of values can be maintained. The Klan is a creation of primitives with elements of voodooism, attractive to corrupt leadership and to the constituents of primitive life, superstition, masked violence, secretive imbecilities, and terrorism in the name of high principles.

Both the drys and the Klan and the two as they were fused together made their way into power through the inherent good intent of the Indiana people. They may not have seen that these enthusiasms, dangerous juvenalities, and transgressions of law and order were bound to produce outrageous attacks upon the true authority of the state and the rights of the individual under it.

It came about that American citizens in Indiana were judged by their religion, condemned because of their race, illegally punished because of their opinions, hounded because of their personal conduct, and a state of terror was substituted for a state of law. Intolerance took the place of Indiana amiability and good nature. Suspicion, timidity, and violence came into neighborhoods which had been getting along without distrust or mean exhibitions of character. In some localities a person had to consider that if he avowed his religion it might ruin him.

There are evidences that the Klan has been at least shaken but there is no evidence that political administration has sufficient courage to oppose it. The Marion county grand jury in Indianapolis backed away from an investigation. The legislature did not have the daring to go through with it. Stephenson was put in the penitentiary but at this writing Shumaker of the Anti-Saloon league has not been punished for his attack on the Supreme court. The Klan is still a terror and the extra-legal government of Indiana whether it denies medicinal whisky to the sick or threatens a nonconformist with the lash is still beyond the reach of the constitutional government. Outside of government there has been established a control animated by the spirit which produced the dragonnades in France and the inquisition in Holland.

If this is permitted to continue the consequence will be not only that no family of intelligence will consider making a home in Indiana but the best people of the state will remove to the neighboring states, enriching them and leave Indiana to its primitives, fanatics, and ruffians.

RATHER TRY HISPANO SUIZA.

She was trying to be nice to the little girl, whose mother was a great friend of hers.

"I hope you are getting on well at school," she said. "Now, I wonder, can you spell 'horse'?"

"I could if I wanted to," replied the little girl. "But don't you think it's really rather old-fashioned?"—Pittsburgh Chronicle Telegraph.

LITERATURE FOR A NEW AGE SUPPLEMENTING THE BIBLE

BY THE REV. FRED MERRIFIELD.

[Assistant professor New Testament history and interpretation in the divinity school, University of Chicago; pastor All Souls Liberal church, Chicago; and author of "Modern Religious Verse and Prose."]

Is this really a new age? Of course we like to flatter ourselves that we have something new and unique to contribute to history and that no previous generation has ever quite equaled us in its grasp of reality or its sense of the vital oneness of the parts with the whole of life. If it takes something more than bobbed hair, short skirts, the hiking habit and the unblushing reassurance of youth to convince the skeptical that this is really a new age we offer other evidence. There is undoubtedly an increasing hunger for scientific knowledge and a willingness to take the trouble of absolutely remodeling our world of thought, socially, religiously, economically and philosophically.

In addition, as if by magic, there are springing up in all parts of the educated world organizations, leaders and literatures which seem destined to render the newer modes of thought and life more permanent, effective and inspirational. Here, almost as dramatically as in the movies, one may read his own higher thoughts, see his ambitions fulfilled in the faces of noble characters, and find tempting opportunity to give expression to the desires for service which well up in him. Right here in a day which so many imagine they despise because it moves so rapidly and so lightly are the foundations of a much finer future than any we have yet experienced. We are surfeited, it is true, with no end of books designed for washed-out lives, for the sex-pervert, for the rebel against forms of every type; but we also have within our immediate reach a wonderful golden literature which will keep us alert to the needs and dangers of our times.

Modern literature lays bare the human heart. It reveals the vital defects of the average man and woman. It also points the way for us to realize the innate qualities of divinity with far greater warmth and color than of any previous literature of any age whatsoever.

Is one oppressed with the seeming futility of all life and yet anxious to strike that mysterious note of confidence which yields the ring of truthfulness and certainty? Let him read the masterful calmness of Lanier's "The Marshes of Glynn," Markham's "Love Vigil" and "World Purpose," or Thompson's "Hound of Heaven," the modern way of expressing the beautiful thought of Psalm 139, which begins: "O Lord, thou hast searched me and known me." Likewise he will find how these poems will supplement Psalms 46, 90, and 91.

Does the heavy intellectual struggle of our scientific and economic era keep coming back to one in the monotonous but majestic periods of Ecclesiastes, of Job, or the "Rubaiyat"? Perhaps he will find a more complete outlet to his emotions through the more lambent phrases of Tennyson's "In Memoriam" and "Vastness," or Browning's "Pauline" and "Abt Vogler."

If one finds his will sluggish and the desire to take high ground lacking he will seem to hear the call of an Isaiah or an Amos in the now appealing, now rebuking words of Amelia Josephine Burr's "The Voice of the Unborn," or in Louis Untermeyer's "Summons" and in his "Challenge."

There is a thrilling sense of courage, of fearlessness, about these more recent writings which appeal to the youthful and experimental nature in all of us. It seems to come from the consciousness of having faced the world about us and having conquered the powers of life which once held us in servile fear. It is the magnificent boldness of the Book of Job enhanced by further certainty as to "the way he taketh"; but, instead of the oppressive awe of the older order, it takes for granted that, come dark days or bright, God is always and unfailingly on the side of the honest will. Even death has no terrors for one who sees life whole in the modern way. Browning's "Prospice" and "Reverie," as well as Grace Hazard Conkling's "After Sunset," sound this note of cheerful confidence.

Bounding joyousness is another notable quality of the recent literature. It arises apparently from the new out of door spirit and the abounding energy which come with days of greater leisure and enjoyment of a many sided life. Henry Meade Bland's "A Song of Joy" and Richard Le Gallienne's "Gaudeamus" are typical of this mood. Such appreciation of everyday life and its natural thrills might well serve as an antidote for the perplexed youth who think they are called upon to carry the excessive burdens of the whole world at too tender an age.

What fine and wholesome humanness rings from the pages of material like Mrs. Robinson's "Stretch Out Your Hand" and John Drinkwater's "The Fires of God." Then comes the inevitable next step where the universal quality of life and religion find expression. Walt Whitman's "Grand Is the Scene," H. G. Wells' "Outline of History," and Edward Carpenter's "Toward Democracy" all tend to give one new faith in the commonplace events of life and particularly in the sense of the wholeness of being.

The spirit of intelligent optimism, the kind that does not deceive itself regarding the evils of the time, nor take too lightly the almost insuperable obstacles to human progress, is with us today.

Again it turns to scientific fact for consolation, or builds a philosophy out of the quarried fragments of racial and personal experience, convinced by an evergrowing sense of reality that it is surely moving in the ways of destiny. Thus we get comfort out of "Songs Out of Sorrow," by Sarah Teasdale; "Adonais," by Shelley; "Epilogue," by Browning; "Octavus," by Edward Arlington Robinson; "The System of Animate Nature," by Thompson, and "Present Philosophical Tendencies," by Ralph Barton Perry.

Some persons do not understand the adventurous, rebellious, highly ambitious nature of much that is being written nowadays. But who that catches the full sweep of the evolutionary thought, who that finds the urgent and all conquering forces of an eternal order in his veins, can but prophesy? For a real thrill read with dramatic earnestness, Markham's "The Climb of Life," Moody's "Road Hymn for the Start," Brereton's "Life," Marquis' "Unrest," Hocking's "The Meaning of God in Human Experience," or H. G. Wells' "The Undying Fire."

Have you lost faith in the best dreams of the race? Are you dubious of the outcome of the human struggle? Do your eyes become so dim with unavailable yet irrepressible tears that you cannot see that the powers of humanity are just beginning to bud, and that the full flower will be all the more beautiful because it does not spring up in the night? There is hope for you in other people's faith. Just live awhile in the invigorating atmosphere of Charles Russell Wakeley's "World Voices," Thomas Curtis Clark's "God's Dreams," Pulsifer's "Harvest Time," Douglas Malloch's "'Tis but the Night," Tagore's "Sadhana," Stanton Coit's "The Spirit of Man," and Alfred Noyes' "The Loom of Years," "The Paradox," and "The Trumpeter of the Law." For he who reads will think, he who thinks must live; and no man can live largely without opening the floodgates of love and service. Herein lies one of the great secrets of happiness.

How to Keep Well. By Dr. W. A. Evans.

Questions pertinent to hygiene, sanitation, and prevention of disease, if matters of general interest, will be answered in this column. PANAMA HEALTH WORK SETS EXAMPLE.

AGAIN I have had the privilege of seeing health work in Panama City under the guidance of Dr. Goldthwaite.

One interesting feature of my visit of four years ago was missing. That was the court at 11 each morning. Four years ago there were about forty cases heard in this court on a brisk morning, each consuming a little more than a minute. The defendants caught red-handed were brought into court within a few minutes or a few hours after their trespasses, the evidence was brought along smoking warm, and the punishment made to fit the crime was assessed and paid on the heels of the transgression.

On this 1927 morning there was but one case. A merchant selling melons in the market was found with a cut melon exposed. At 10:30 he was caught. At 11 he was in court. At 11:10 he had been fined one dollar, had received his slip, and was on his way back to his market stall.

This court has been almost abantioned because the people no longer break health laws.

The garbage is used to fill in mosquito breeding swamps. When dumped it is sprayed well with crude oil, covered with paper, burlap, oilcloth, and other material saved for the purpose, and then overlaid with dirt. There are no flies on this dump, and no rats. The dump is in no sense a nuisance. The method saves money, and it is wholly satisfactory. The costly incinerator has stood idle for several years. The dump method also has been adopted at Colon, and the incinerator at that city is also idle.

The markets are unscreened. Fish and meat are exposed on the counter, and no flies were seen on them. Above the counters there were flywires—old wire springs coated with a mixture of rosin and molasses. On the tables we saw an occasional wire spring covered with this "goo." The few flies in evidence were found sticking to this wire. They preferred the taste of molasses "goo" to that of fish. Once they lighted on the "goo" they stayed.

The stockyards and slaughter house were free from flies. The hog pens and cattle pens had cement floors and cement walls. They were washed down daily. I found them as clean as an eating house floor. There were screens, but screens are not of much service around a packing plant and a hog pen. It was cleanliness that made them free from flies. It was concrete constructions and cleanliness that made them free from rats.

All of this is in the city of Panama and, therefore, not within the Canal Zone. The people involved are Panamanians, Chinese, West Indians, and other people who are not supposed to have fly, rat, and cleanliness standards that equal ours.

The baby death rate of Panama City was as high as 260 as late as 1915. It ranges now just about 100, and it has reached as low as about 75. There are many American cities with a baby death rate higher than 75. No city in the states with a large Negro population hopes to reach a baby death rate as low as 75 this year.

The good health work being done by the Zone authorities for people in the Zone is being adopted by the Panamanians in their nearby cities—Panama and Colon.

PORK DOES NOT CAUSE CANCER.

G. K. B. writes: 1. I have heard that Jews seldom have cancers due to their not eating pork. Is there any truth in this?

2. Is there any knowledge as to what is the cause of cancer?

REPLY:

1. No.

2. Some, but not as much as we need. Eating pork is not a cause.

ASPARAGUS NOT HARMFUL.

Mrs. T. H. G. writes: Recently I heard two graduate nurses in well known hospitals say that asparagus was the worst thing for the kidneys a person could possibly eat.

1. Are they correct?

2. What is the food value of asparagus?

REPLY:

1. No.

2. It has very low food value, 7 calories to the ounce. It is valuable for its minerals and vitamines. Served with a butter sauce, asparagus is rich in calories, but that is because of the butter.

MUST KEEP UP TAXES.

Chicago, March 22.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Is one required to pay taxes on a lot he has less than half paid for, and for which he does not hold the deed? T. A. R.

The taxes must be paid in order to keep the title unclouded. The contract ordinarily contains express provisions as to which party is to pay them or provisions from which this conclusion can be drawn.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

PHYSICAL PRESENCE REQUIRED.

Chicago, March 20.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—I have been living in my present precinct for not quite a year and have registered and voted here. I have a lease until May 1 on this apartment, but have rented another apartment in a different precinct of the same ward and should like to move to it before election day if I can do so without losing my vote.

I have been informed that because I will have to pay April rent on the apartment in which I am living at the present time, and will not pay it on the new apartment, I am entitled to vote from this address, but am anxious to have the proper authority to do so in the event that I should be challenged when I go to the polls April 5.

Would the payment of that month's rent on this apartment entitle me to vote, or would it be necessary for us to be actually living in the precinct? T. A. F.

The mere fact that you pay rent from the new address would not make it your residence so that you could vote from that precinct. Residence is in part a matter of physical presence.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

STREET NEEDS CLEANING.

Chicago, March 23.—[Friend of the People.]—Yates avenue, between 71st and 72d streets, has not been cleaned for at least the last ten months, while nearby streets have been cleaned one or more times within that time. The street is in a terrible condition, mud six inches deep lining the curb. E. C. T.

Streets are cleaned as per schedule and as often as our funds will permit and no discrimination is made other than that traction and business streets are given first attention.

THOMAS H. BYRNE,
Superintendent of Streets.

FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

65 YEARS AGO TODAY

APRIL 3, 1862.

CAIRO.—Barracks and houses were leveled to the ground, shipping in the port was badly damaged, and it is feared there has been some loss of life by a tornado that passed over Cairo at 3 o'clock this morning (April 2). Barracks at Bird's Point and Fort Holt also were damaged. For a time fears were entertained for the safety of the gunboats and mortar boats engaged in the siege of Island No. 10, but the Pike arrived from the island and reported that only two vessels were damaged to any serious extent. The bombardment of the island continues.

CAIRO.—Brig. Gen. John A. Logan has so far recovered from his wound received at Fort Donelson as to rejoin his brigade and has started for the seat of war on the Tennessee.

EDITORIAL.—The violent gale and storm of yesterday reduces us well nigh to the condition of the craft before the era of the telegraph, and at the present time this meagerness of news is to be regretted. The interim will prove a source of fruitful rumors, and our readers may likely enough hear before night that the Monitor is taken; that rebel gunboats have shelled out the boarders of the St. Charles at Cairo; that Island No. 10 has taken Commodore Foote. We simply advise them to wait for news, as we are constrained to do.

MILWAUKEE.—At the municipal election yesterday Horace Case, Democrat, was elected mayor and nearly all of the Democratic ticket was elected.

CHICAGO.—Fires during March showed a great decrease, both in numbers and the amount of property destroyed. The number of fires was nine, as against fifteen in February, and the loss was $4,825, against $8,950 the preceding month.

CHICAGO.—Four more rebel prisoners died at Camp Douglas, making a total of 147 deaths since the prison was established.

25 YEARS AGO TODAY

APRIL 3, 1902.

ST. PAUL.—Lost for four days and five nights in a huge snowbank on the Great Northern railway, with the passengers rioting for food or sobbing from their sufferings with the arctic cold, and with the worst blizzard the northwest has known in years howling, a through train was found on a siding in a waste of Dakota prairie. Two of the passengers became insane from their sufferings and one, Prof. F. W. Colgrove of the University of Washington, tried to end his life by cutting his throat. The train carried 250 passengers.

LONDON.—The London Leader prints a story that Lieut. Hancock, one of the Australian officers recently executed for murder in South Africa, was guilty of the wanton murder of a number of natives, besides ten Boers, who had surrendered, and a German missionary. The natives were shot for sport.

CHICAGO.—The city council passed the Burlington railroad ordinance, which involves six railroads and provides for elevation of eighty-eight miles of track.

NEW HAVEN, Conn.—Prof. Harry Gideon Wells of the University of Chicago and Miss Bertha Robbins, a society leader of Newington, were married at the Robbins' historic colonial mansion.

BOSTON.—Edward Everett Hale will be 80 years old today and the event will be signalized by a great gathering this evening in Symphony hall. It is to be a popular outpouring of the people. Dr. Hale has been a great preacher, educator, traveler and writer and cities of the country that have not heard him from the pulpit are few. His "Man Without a Country" has run into successive editions until more than half a million copies have been sold.

10 YEARS AGO TODAY

APRIL 3, 1917.

WASHINGTON.—In President Wilson's epochal address to congress, calling for action against Germany, he declared "we must fight for justice and rights." Amid demonstrations of tumultuous enthusiasm such as have seldom been seen at the national capitol, the President asked congress to declare the existence of a state of war with Germany, brought about by the acts of the Berlin government. He told congress what the war program will be. On this he said: "It will involve the most practical cooperation in counsel and action with the governments now at war with Germany and, as incident to that, the extension to those governments of the most liberal credit. It will involve the immediate full equipment of the navy in all respects. It will involve the immediate addition to the armed forces of the United States already provided for in case of war of at least 500,000 men who should in my opinion be chosen upon the principle of universal liability to service."

NEW YORK.—The American steamship Aztec, owned by the Oriental Navigation company, the first American armed ship to sail from an American port, was sunk by a German submarine, according to advices from the United States consul at Brest, France. A dispatch from Paris says that twenty-eight of the crew are missing. Of the forty-seven men aboard sixteen were native born Americans.

FIGHTING THE CORN BORER.

Chicago, March 25.—Mr. Gilbert Faber of Mendota, Ill., in this morning's "Voice of the People" comments with intelligence on the most important problem now confronting the people of this state and of the corn belt. Unfortunately, the folks are not conscious of the economic menace which threatens them, whether they grow corn or eat it, whether they work in a starch factory or pack pork sausage.

To apply methods of chinch bug control to combatting the corn borer would be a futile error. The corn borer can exist if growers stopped planting corn entirely this spring. Fire will stop the corn borer. By the bonfire method, he can be chased back eastward and northward from Kankakee and Paris, Ill., faster than he came hither. All the authorities agree on this. Burning all cornstalks, refuse and waste eradicates the larvae of the corn borer. The scientists doubt their ability, or any one's ability to persuade farmers to clean up their fields, get the refuse into piles, and apply the cornshuck torch. But this can be done. The only trouble is, no one has taken up the job in an organized way.

I have been studying the corn borer since the first infestation was reported in Massachusetts. I have read most of the literature. I have been in the infested fields in Ontario and Michigan. I cannot agree with some of the Ohio and Illinois authorities that we must prepare "to live with the corn borer." Fire will destroy the corn borer. The problem is to get the corn growers of the marginal areas to rake all cornstalks, weeds, and refuse into piles, and burn them. It is solely a question of focusing public opinion on a simple problem.

I propose the organization of a National Corn Growers' Vigilance association. I nominate Mr. Frank I. Mann of Gilman, Ill., called the "first farmer in Illinois," to head the association. Among the chairmen of the state committees who have already consented to serve are Ira Marshall, Dola, O., the champion corn grower, in bushels, of America last year; Peter Lux, Shelbyville, Ind., the champion corn grower, in type of seed ears, of America last year, and Jacob Paluska of Waverly, Ill., who grew the champion ear of corn among 27,000 in the National Seed Corn show. Leading corn growers in Iowa, Missouri, Wisconsin, Kentucky, West Virginia, Michigan, New York, and Pennsylvania will gladly head up their respective state committees. The secretary of agriculture and the governors in the various states would gladly coöperate in an organized effort to focus public opinion on the efficacy of the bonfire in eradicating the corn borer.

Through the press of the nation, over the radio, on the platform, and by visual demonstrations in country banks, the association could mobilize a public opinion on this problem which would illumine the whole middle west with cleanup bonfires on the first day of May, and that would force the corn borer eastward and northward, even into the Atlantic ocean. The United States department of agriculture has $10,000,000 to fight the corn borer. The Illinois general assembly is appropriating funds to fight him. We do not have to live with the corn borer. We can burn him up. SAMUEL R. GUARD,
President the Agricultural Club of Chicago.

BORN IN THE VILLAGE OF CHICAGO.

Sycamore, Ill., March 24.—It will be surprising to the people of Chicago to know that there is living today in San Diego, Cal., a man of small stature, white beard, rosy cheeks, and a smile that never comes off, Henry A. Ward, who is the only living person born in the village of Chicago. He was born March 28, 1835. Chicago then had a population of 3,279. He was born in Fort Dearborn. His father, Bernard Ward, came from Boston, Mass., to Fort Dearborn in 1832, serving as an officer in the United States service at the garrison and also as alderman on the first village board.

When eight years of age H. A. Ward went to work in a brick yard at $1 per month. He spent three years driving a team on the Illinois and Michigan canal and in 1852 made a trip across the plains in an ox team to the Pacific coast. He returned to Chicago in 1858 by way of Panama.

Mr. Ward enlisted in 1862 in Company A, 72d Illinois volunteers, and was discharged in 1865. He drove an ox team for his brother-in-law hauling brick for the original Sherman house. Mr. Ward came to Sycamore in 1883, built Ward's Opera house, and also conducted Ward's hotel, as many traveling men will recall with pleasure.

WILLIAM H. BUSH.

EVANSTON'S SAVING IN WATER.

Evanston, Ill., March 24.—A few days ago I saw an article in THE TRIBUNE stating that Evanston saved one billion gallons of water last year, and every one wanted to know whether we didn't live out here. I am a citizen and tax payer of Evanston and I can tell you the reason. Evanston had several fires last year and it was always necessary to call the Chicago fire department to put them out. The Chicago department showed the Evanston department how to put a fire out without having to throw on thousands and thousands of gallons of water. Since Chicago taught them this lesson, the council has voted them an unnecessary $5 a month rate, perhaps for saving the water.

ARTHUR LAHR.

A STATE UNIVERSITY FOR CHICAGO.

Chicago, March 24.—In today's TRIBUNE you insist that the plan of the school board to establish a city college ought to be squelched on the ground that the state is taking care of higher education. I agree with you, but with this qualification: The state should not arrange for and establish an institution of higher education, similar to the proposed city college, in Chicago where students of limited means while living at home can get an education and supplement family funds with odd time employment.

Would that you were equally concerned when the city spends funds much needed elsewhere and issues bonds to buy parks and playgrounds in territory already covered by boards of park commissioners established by the state.

A ROBIN FED BY A SPARROW.

Des Plaines, Ill., March 24.—A few years ago as I was hoeing in the garden one evening up in Minnesota, I noticed a sparrow and a young robin following him all over the garden, calling for something to eat. The sparrow picked up the worms as fast as I dug them out and dropped them into the robin's open mouth. The same thing happened several times throughout the summer. The robin was twice as big as the sparrow and the way that sparrow stuffed him was an interesting sight. MRS. G. H. OSMER.

BUS SERVICE ON THE WEST SIDE.

Chicago, March 23.—About three years ago when the Chicago Motor Coach company began to operate on the west side those of us who live here were very satisfied, because it is an exceedingly pleasant way to travel to and from the loop. Routes 26 and 36 seemed to do very well. Route 27, which really caters only to people living between Douglas and Jackson boulevards, on Independence boulevard and several blocks east and west, evidently did not prosper, as they took off through service during the day for the winter months, but rather than give us the kind of service that we have been getting the last few weeks why do they not take it off entirely?

Monday morning I waited on the corner of Independence and Grenshaw street—waited in the pouring rain—and when the bus came it was so crowded, even on the platform, that several men were draped over the back end, others were standing on the spiral staircase leading to an uncovered top. I, for one, could not get on and finally had to resort to the street car, which got me to my destination ten minutes late.

Either give us good busses that can accommodate more passengers on a rainy day as well as on a sunny day or else have several little busses run back and forth on Independence boulevard only in the morning and evening as well as during the day, to connect with Route 26 in the park. J. G. K.

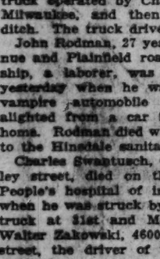
BABY BORN AFTER CAR HITS GIRL ON WAY TO HOSPITAL

Six Deaths Raise Toll in County to 202.



CHARLES SWANTUSCH.

Sixteen year old Mrs. Lena Papason of 211 West 63th street, an expectant mother, boarded a street car yesterday afternoon to go to the Lying-In hospital where she was to give birth to a child. Her husband was at work, and she did not heed his previous warning to call him when she made the trip. Alighting from the street car at 51st street and South Parkway she was struck by an automobile driven by Frank Martin of 727 East 53th street.

Martin picked up the unconscious woman and rushed her to the hospital. Mrs. Papason, whose skull had been fractured, recovered consciousness a short time later but lapsed into a coma immediately. Attaches called Dr. L. E. Davis of Northwestern university for consultation, and he ordered an operation performed. A seven and a half pound baby boy was born, apparently perfectly normal. Doctors hold little hope for the woman's recovery.

Martin was booked on a charge of reckless driving.

Toll Reaches 202.

Six deaths due to automobile accidents were recorded yesterday, raising the county motor toll to 202. A 9 year old boy, Raymond Biskupski of 4630 South Richmond street, was fatally hurt while playing under a track elevation at 49th street and Kedzie avenue when he was struck by a truck driven by Charles B. Windlow, 847 North Taylor avenue, Oak Park. Police held Windlow.

Two men were killed and two injured in a collision of a motor truck and a passenger car on the Waukegan road near Highland Park. The dead are Patrick O'Neil, 27 years old, a laborer, of Highwood, Ill., and Leo Henehan, 36, a farmer, of Everett, Ill. The injured are Joseph Dawson, 37, and Joseph Steneniski, 40, both of Everett.

Sideswiped Truck.

The four were in an automobile driven by O'Neil when it sideswiped a truck operated by Charles Casper of Milwaukee, and then rolled into a ditch. The truck driver was not hurt.

John Rodman, 27 years old, 5th avenue and Plainfield road, Lyons township, a laborer, was fatally injured yesterday when he was struck by a vampire automobile after he had alighted from a car in front of his home. Rodman died while being taken to the Hinsdale sanitarium.

Charles Swantusch, 62, of 2937 Keeley street, died on the way to the People's hospital of injuries received when he was struck by an automobile truck at 51st and Mospratt streets. Walter Zakowski, 4600 South Paulina street, the driver of the truck, was arrested.

An unidentified man about 55 years old was killed last night at Blue Island avenue and South Robey street when he was hit by an auto driven by Frank Petrik, 22, of 2546 South St. Louis avenue. The body was taken to the county morgue.

One man was killed and another possibly fatally injured last night when the automobile in which they were riding was struck by a South Shore train at Ivy street in East Chicago, Ind. Thomas Mowery, 67, a resident at the General American bunkhouse, East Chicago, was killed and Arthur Strauck, 27, of 1402 Chicago avenue, East Chicago, was injured.

Lincoln Park police were investigating an accident at Michigan avenue and Pearson street in which the automobile of Arthur J. Diener, 1254 Elmdale avenue, secretary and treasurer of the T. C. Diener company, cut stone contractors, 1157 West 21st street, was overturned. Witnesses said they saw two men and two women run away from the car after it capsized. Diener's wife said he had been absent all night and that she had received a telephone call notifying her that he had been slightly injured and would be home later.

Child Toll Grows.

The mayor's safety commission yesterday made public its annual report, announcing that the body will concentrate this year on reducing the ever increasing rate that children are being killed by automobiles. The report points to a growing list of motor fatalities under the age of 16 years. Five hundred forty-two adults and 186 children were killed last year. Of 730 deaths in the city limits 527 were pedestrians and 203 occupants of cars at the time of the fatal accidents.

WILLETT WINS STAY OF JUDGMENT TO NULLIFY $10,000,000 VICTORY

Boston, Mass., April 2.—(AP)—Attorneys for George F. Willett have obtained a stay of judgement on the voiding of the $10,000,000 verdict he obtained against several Boston bankers and brokers in order that they may seek a rehearing and reargument of the case before the Supreme court.

The verdict was returned in 1924 after 13 months trial. Mr. Willett asked for $15,000,000 on the ground that Robert F. Herrick, Robert Winsor, S. H. Fessenden, F. S. Moseley and company, and Kidder Peabody and company has conspired to take away from him the American Felt company and the Daniel Green Felt Shoe company.

The defendants appealed, and a month ago the Supreme court voided the verdict with the finding that there had been no conspiracy and that Willett had advisedly signed away all rights in the properties.

St. Louis, Mo., April 2.—[U.P.]—Unceasing rain of the last two days has brought the Mississippi river to within a foot of the 30 foot flood stage here today, and the water is still rising.

A bandit who had neglected his target practice recently went last night into the grocery of John Martin, at 510 Winona stret. Thrusting a pistol at the proprietor, he ordered him to raise his hands. The pistol wavered so much in the robber's hand that Martin decided he could take a chance. He dashed to the rear counter, where he had a shotgun. The bandit fired once. His bullet struck the ceiling. Then he turned and fled.

PHYSICIAN HINTS CANE ATTACK ON MRS. CARRINGTON

New Evidence Against Colonel Obtained.

New evidence in the famous Col. Edward C. Carrington divorce case, which will go to trial Wednesday before Circuit Judge George Fred Rush, was made public yesterday by George Schein of the firm of Schein & Goldsmith, representing Mrs. Anna Lincoln Carrington, New York society woman.

Deposition of Dr. Clarence J. D'Alessandro, New York physician, it is alleged, declares that Col. Carrington, millionaire lawyer, had had previous experience in wielding a cane when he recently attacked his equally prominent brother, Campbell Carrington, whom he names co-respondent in the suit.

Dressed Her Wounds.

The doctor testified he attended Mrs. Carrington about midnight March 16, dressing wounds on her ear and left shoulder which he believed from their nature and from her statements were caused by the colonel, her husband, whipping her with his walking stick. In her cross bill for divorce, Mrs. Carrington charges cruelty and also says her husband had a love nest on the north side.

Depositions, all taken in the east, include a 400 word telegram sent to Mrs. Carrington by her husband on March 24, which Attorney Schein said he was going to introduce at the trial. It reads, in part:

"I see by the public press that you have, like Peaches Browning, suddenly developed the power of literary expression. You say you picked the young Carrington, meaning myself. Now as a matter of fact did you not pick one and marry him and then at the same time pick and gold dig the other . . . ?"

Accuses Her of Trip.

In a "did you or did you not" rhetorical style, the telegram proceeds to accuse her of frequenting Campbell's apartment while her husband was away on business. The message closes:

". . . I think you still love me and are true to me. . . . I am terribly hungry for you and it seems like you have been away from me for years. . . . All my love and a million kisses."

Tells of Visit.

Other evidence in the depositions includes testimony of employés of the Saranac Inn, a summer lodge at Saranac, N. Y., to the effect that Campbell visited Mrs. Carrington there while the colonel was away.

The documents also makes reference to the "thousand kisses" letter that Campbell is alleged to have written to his brother's wife. This letter is part of the basis for the colonel's $1,000,000 alienation of affections suit against his brother.

Student Kicked by Horse in Military Drill; May Die

Urbana, Ill., April 2.—[Special.]—George Mathes of Streator, Ill., a private in the military department at the University of Illinois, is in a critical condition, suffering from a severe skull fracture received when he was kicked by a horse today. Very little hope is held for his recovery.

BEGIN FUND TO MARK NOW OBSCURE GRAVE OF JAMES CALHOUN

Baltimore, Md., April 2.—(AP)—In an obscure place in an ancient burying ground now almost lost in the hoof and clangor of modern traffic, is the grave of James Calhoun, revolutionary patriot and first mayor of Baltimore. A simple stone, inscribed "No. 24—Calhoun," is all that marks the spot.

Few who visit the old Western burying ground beside Westminster Presbyterian church know it's there. The old cemetery, once in a suburb, is now surrounded by teeming streets that skirt the business section. Edgar Allan Poe's tomb stands at the modest entrance.

A fund has been started to more fittingly mark the resting place of the man whose name bristles through early national history. He was one of a committee of "freeholders and other inhabitants entitled to vote," who on Nov. 12, 1774, committed Baltimore to coöperate with Boston in the matter of tea parties to King George III. Later he was a member of congressional committees authorized by congress "to sign bills of credit or money" and to devise plans to circulate the new "Red money."

ALL ROUMANIA PRAYS AS KING GROWS BETTER

Prince Carol Maps Coup for Throne, Report.

BUCHAREST, Roumania, April 2.—(AP)—News that King Ferdinand's condition had improved tonight was received with enthusiasm throughout Roumania, where the entire population has centered its interest on the royal palace at Cotrocent, where the king is staying. The members of the royal family were optimistic that he would pull through and this optimism was shared by his physicians, for in their latest bulletin they said:

"The amelioration established in the sovereign's condition yesterday has been maintained. His respiration is 26, pulse 90, and temperature 36.4 centigrade [about 97 fahrenheit]."

Public opinion, strong in the knowledge of the ruler's qualities, feels that his indomitable courage will conquer. The suddenness with which the slight cold turned to grippe aroused the sympathy of all Roumanians and prayers were being offered today for his recovery. Tomorrow there will be prayers for the king in every city and hamlet throughout the land.

TALK OF CAROL COUP

BY HENRY WALES.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
[Copyright: 1927: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, April 2.—The blinds are drawn and there is not a sign of life at the ville at Neuilly, where Prince Carol of Roumania and his sweetheart, Madge Lupescu, are living.

Repeated ringing of the doorbell summoned an aged servitor, who declared Prince Carol was receiving no one. He declined to state if the former crown prince was still there. The neighbors, however, said the prince and his red headed companion left in a big motor car this morning for a week-end in the country.

Prince Carol's intimates declare he is ready to return to Roumania if his father dies, to claim the throne on the grounds that the renunciation of his royal rights was forced on him by politicians and his family and the people wish him to return and wear the crown.

Claims Support of Army.

Secret emissaries from Bucharest assured Prince Carol that the army solidly supports him and no troops would obey former Premier Jon Bratiano's edict to bar him from the country.

THE TRIBUNE correspondent is informed that Prince Carol had engaged an airplane and a well known pilot to fly direct to Bucharest, where he will march to the palace at the head of a column of military supporters when the time is ripe.

FATHER OF FOUR AND WOMAN HELD TO GRAND JURY

Walter Bockelman and Miss Mae Carlson, both of 1437 Barry avenue, were held to the grand jury in $25,000 and $20,000 bonds by Judge Edgar A. Jonas, yesterday, in the Town Hall court on charges of robbery.

Judge Jonas also issued a warrant charging nonsupport against Bockelman after Mrs. Frieda Bockelman appeared before him with her four children and testified that he had neglected her and their children.

Bockelman and Miss Carlson were arrested on complaint of Louis Yocky, 2752 Hampden court, who testified that on Thursday night, on the girl's invitation, he accompanied her to a room in the Diversey Parkway hotel, 609 Diversey parkway, where he was slugged and robbed of $175 by Bockelman and two companions. Police are looking for the other two men.

MORE THAN 800 SEEK PRIZES IN GARDEN CONTEST

Additional Judges Asked as Entrants Increase.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

Surpassing all preliminary estimates of flowerdom's enthusiasts, THE TRIBUNE'S garden competition list now contains the names of more than eight hundred persons. The contest editor's final count of the entry coupons received during the first thirteen days shows that a total of 805 gardeners have entered competition for the $5,020 offered by this newspaper for the best home flower gardens in Chicago and its suburbs.

Practically every section of Chicago and each of the suburban towns within the contest area have representatives competing for the cash awards. Gardens along the lake shore from Gary, Ind. to Waukegan, Ill., more than 80 miles, and from the lake shore west to the semicircular rim of the zone which takes in Crystal Lake, Elgin, Aurora and Joliet, are entered.

Entries by Districts.

Following are the figures on the gardeners entered in the six districts of the contest territory:

	Entrants.
District 1	115
District 2	341
District 3	212
District 4	42
District 5	64
District 6	31
Total	805

Every garden entered in the contest will be judged. Originality will be emphasized by the judges in their awards. This will give each contestant a fair chance to win even in competition with the gardener who has thousands of dollars for plants or has had years of experience.

Asks Additional Judges.

The entry list already has grown to such proportions that the chairmen of the district judging committees are planning to ask each one of the twenty-nine garden clubs in the Chicago territory to appoint additional judging committees to aid in making the awards. In order to have a uniform system of judging the district committees expect to use a score card.

RULES

1. The Tribune will pay $5,000 in cash for the best flower gardens in Chicago area. A grand prize of $1,000 is offered. Separate cash prizes will be awarded on both late and early gardens.

2. The contest will be limited to gardens located on land on which the contesting gardener lives and in the territory within a radius of approximately 40 miles from the Tribune Tower. The garden may be any size, shape, style, or type, if it covers at least 200 square feet or the equivalent of a plot 20 by 10 feet.

3. The Tribune flower garden contest area is divided into six districts. Each contestant must indicate on the coupon the district in which he lives. Copies of the contest district map will be sent free if request is accompanied by stamped, addressed envelope. In the inner Chicago zone districts 1 and 2 are divided by the north branch of the Chicago river, while Nos. 2 and 3 are divided by south branch of the river.

4. You need not be an experienced gardener to compete.

5. Estate gardens, commercial gardens, and all other forms of gardening professionally conducted or maintained by paid professional gardeners or landscape architects are barred; the contest is open only to home gardens.

6. Every gardener in the prescribed area who complies with the above requirements may compete for the cash prizes, excepting employes of The Tribune and their families. Vegetable gardens or combination flower and vegetable gardens are not eligible to compete in this contest.

7. All entries must be in The Tribune office not later than May 10.

8. The exact judging dates, which will be announced later in The Tribune, will depend upon the season. The early gardens probably will be judged in June and the late ones in September.

9. Each garden will be judged upon its merits as a whole—not upon any particular plant or flower or other outstanding feature. Design, color harmony, balance, appropriateness of plants, and neatness are all points to be taken into consideration by the judges.

10. District judging committees will visit each garden and make the district awards on both the early and late gardens. Winners of the first prize in each district will compete for the grand prize, which will be awarded by three expert judges. The three final judges will visit in person the six first prize early gardens and the six first prize late gardens.

11. To compete for the grand prize of $1,000 the contestant must have both early and late gardens. The contestant is eligible to compete for the grand prize if he is a winner of a first district award in either the early or the late garden. A contestant may win prizes on both the early and late gardens and then compete for the grand prize.

12. The only requirement in entering the contest is to properly fill out the coupon, mail it direct to the Garden Contest Editor, Chicago Tribune, Chicago, Ill., and your garden will be visited at the proper time by the judges. The coupon must show the contestant's name in full, address, and the number of the district. The publishers of The Tribune will not be responsible for loss, delay, or nondelivery of coupons.

13. Watch The Tribune from day to day for further details and contest news. Helpful suggestions on flower gardening will be published in the paper from time to time.

MINISTER DENIES EXPLOITATION OF CHILD EVANGEL

Turns Attack of Magazine on Preaching.

Rallying to the defense of the pulpit activities of Uldine Utley, the child evangelist whose campaign in his church was decried by the Christian Century in an editorial as the exploitation of childhood for mercenary purposes, the Rev. Robert Van Meigs, pastor of the Immanuel Baptist church, retaliated last night.

"I think that Miss Uldine has preached since she has been in Chicago to more people than the Christian Century does in a year," he said.

"As to her being exploited, we established her in a suite at the South Shore View hotel. She has her teacher and secretary with her. She arrives at the church at 7:30, and is always out by 9:30. The time she spends in the pulpit is not longer than many school children spend in training for amateur theatricals.

"In reference to money matters, no agreement was made except that the current collections would be used to defray expenses, and that Uldine would be given only a love offering to be taken up at the last meeting."

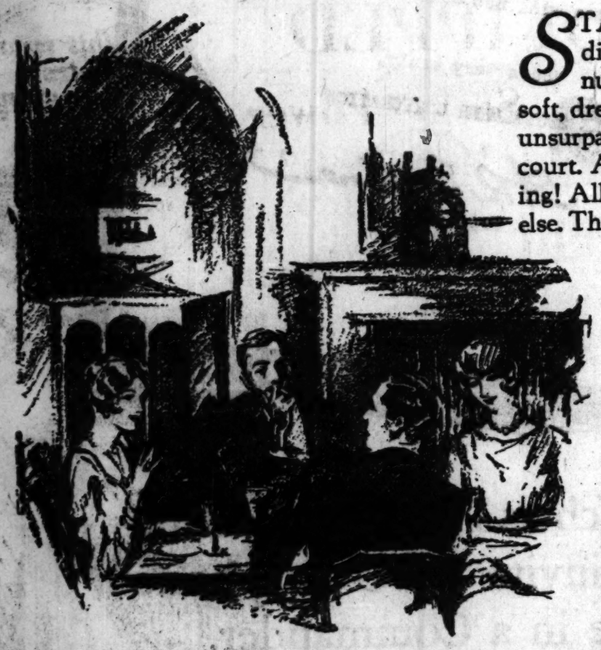
You Have Wished It, Many, Many Times:

A Victrola that Changes its own records



START the music as you pass into dinner. Let a dozen or so favorite numbers supply a background of soft, dreamy melody. Dinner music!—unsurpassed even by that of a royal court. All without any record changing! All without winding or anything else. That is the latest Victor innovation. The greatest new thing in phonographs since the introduction of the Orthophonic itself, you'll agree.

A Special Demonstration

One of these wonderful new self record-changing Orthophonic Victrolas will be displayed in a Lyon & Healy window. Others can be watched and heard in the Lyon & Healy Phonograph Section [second floor]. You will be astonished at the smoothness and certainty with which the played record is removed from the turn table and deposited out of sight to give place to the next selection. Come watch it! Come listen!

Hour-Long Easy Chair Musicales

Without Your Once Having to Get Up!

Think of the easy-chair concerts you might have. Nothing to do but listen—and only to just whatever you feel in the mood to hear.

Dance! While the Music Plays and Plays

Think of being able to arrange a program of up to as many as twelve of your favorite fox trots, waltzes, or whatever you like; placing them in this new self record-changing Victrola in any order you wish; then simply letting 'er go! Half-minute or full minute intermissions, as you happen to adjust the control. No record changing or winding to interrupt.

Of course, the Orthophonic Victrola is a marvelous instrument even without this wonderful new self record-changing feature. Its charm is not even to be guessed at by those who have not yet heard it. But it is doubled by this joyous improvement!

GOLD DIGGING WIVES AROUSE JUDGES' WRATH

Urge Two Year Limit to Separate Maintenance.

Modification of the separate maintenance laws as a means of uplifting public morals and of relieving persecuted husbands is favored by a committee of Superior and Circuit court judges organized to study the divorce problem, Chief Justice Joseph Sabath, chairman, said yesterday.

Judge Harry A. Lewis pointed out that separate maintenance "tends to debauch the morals of society for a husband thusly separated from his legal wife, is deprived by law from following his natural urges for a home with a new mate." About 50 per cent of such husband in the opinion of Judge Lewis, follow their instincts rather than the law.

Sees Suits as Clubs.

Judge Sabath said that nine out of ten separate maintenance suits are filed by wives to use as a club in forcing a financial settlement. The suits are also used, he added, by vindictive women who refuse to accept a divorce so their husbands can never enjoy the happiness of a second legal marriage.

The legislative modification proposed is to make separate maintenance a temporary rather than a permanent decree. At the end of two years, according to the proposal, the separate maintenance would expire and the wife or the husband would be granted a divorce.

Agree on Need of Change.

Judge Sabath said the judges agree that a change in the law is needed but do not agree as to whether it would be constitutional. The committee has postponed work on this amendment until after its proposal to modify the marriage laws, calling for a five day notice in obtaining a license, is taken before the legislature.

DIES IN GAS FILLED ROOM.

COAL STRIKE TO BE DRAWN OUT, OWNERS PREDICT

Can't Pay Wage Demand, Rice Miller Declares.

Expressing a willingness to talk over the strike situation with union officials at any time, Rice Miller, president of the Illinois Coal Operators' association, announced last night that the mine owners of the state are, nevertheless, pessimistic concerning an early resumption of work in the bituminous fields.

"We cannot afford to pay the Jacksonville agreement wage scale and survive in competition with the nonunion fields," asserted Mr. Miller, adding that coal mining in Illinois is virtually at a standstill.

Conference Next Friday.

The Illinois mine owners will meet in conference at St. Louis next Friday to discuss the general strike situation as it affects the central competitive field, an area which embodies the bituminous regions of western Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois. Reports from the entire central competitive field and from other bituminous coal centers last night indicated that the suspension has been general. The exceptions are small mines which are operating at the present wage scale of $7.50 a day, pending agreement of a new wage scale.

Another effort to bring mine unions, officials, and coal operators together will be made this week by Gov. John Hammill of Iowa, who is planning a meeting of these interests with the Iowa industrial and agricultural commission within the next six days.

Illinois operators say that no attempt will be made to operate the mines in this state with nonunion labor. It was said that no mine in Illinois can operate without approval of the state board, which, because of the disorders that have arisen in the past, would be expected to frown on any open shop operation.

More small mines in Ohio announced their intention to continue operations under separate agreements with the union. Both operators and union agreed that approximately 150,000 miners engaged in bituminous coal mining have joined the walkout, which became effective April 1.

Try to Unionize Others.

At Pittsburgh conflicting claims confused the situation in the controversy between the Pittsburgh Coal company and the United Mine Workers for supremacy of the mine labor policy in that district.

With approximately 40,000 union miners in the Pittsburgh district on strike through failure of the union to negotiate a new wage agreement, the officers of the miners' union are concentrating their forces against the nonunion mines of the Pittsburgh Coal company. The latter is said to be the largest producer of bituminous coal in the United States. Intent upon bringing out the nonunion miners, the union posted pickets at the mines and meetings were held to urge the open shop men to join the union.

John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, announced the miners are on record not to accede to any pay reduction.

BEAUTY SCHOOL STUDENTS ASK LICENSE PROBE

Twelve young girls trooped into the state's attorney's office yesterday to make complaints against the Ideal Beauty school, 162 North State street. According to the girls' stories the school has neglected to engage licensed instructors for its students.

Tuition fees ranging from $5 to $35 were paid by the students, the girls said, but in return they received no expert instruction. They said they were set at shingling hair without a state license and of performing other work without previous instruction. Assistant State's Attorney Nicolai promised to investigate, asking that the girls return tomorrow.

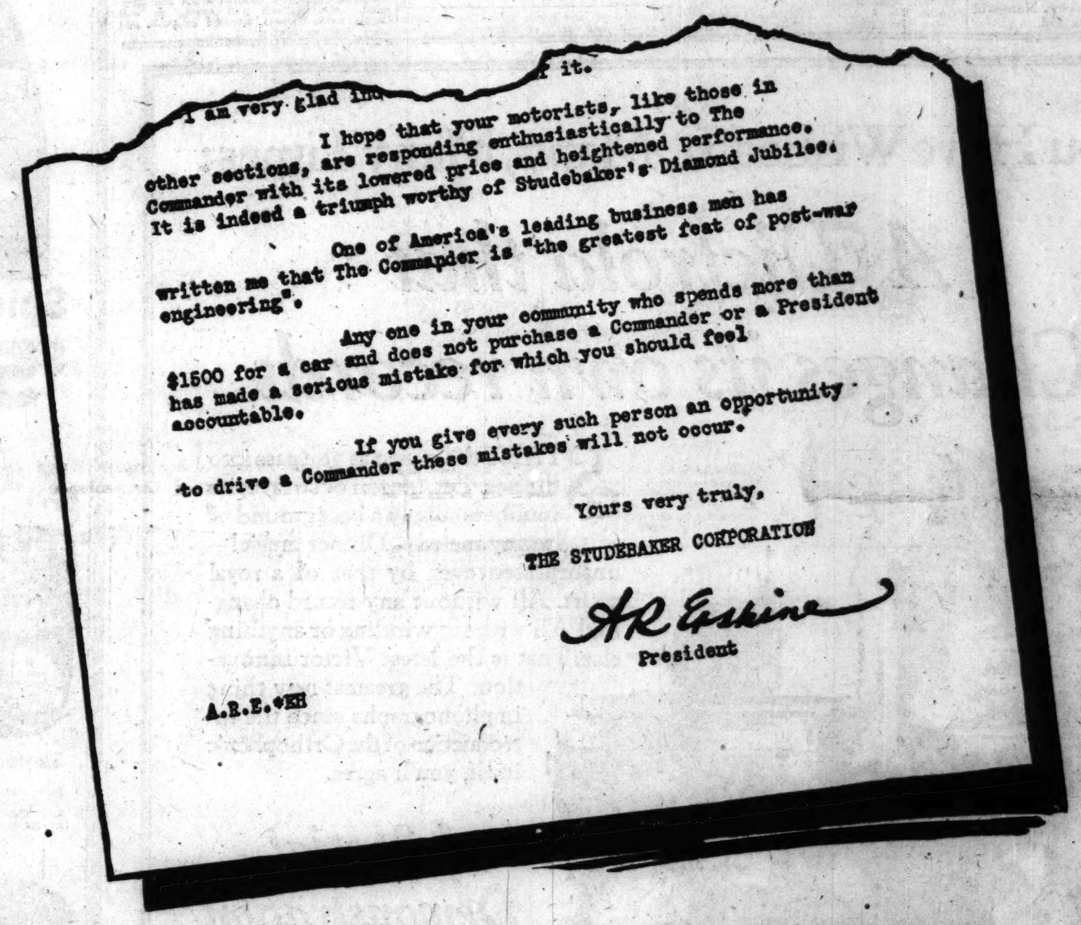
A letter from

President Erskine



I am very glad [illegible] it.

I hope that your motorists, like those in other sections, are responding enthusiastically to The Commander with its lowered price and heightened performance. It is indeed a triumph worthy of Studebaker's Diamond Jubilee.

One of America's leading business men has written me that The Commander is "the greatest feat of post-war engineering".

Any one in your community who spends more than $1500 for a car and does not purchase a Commander or a President has made a serious mistake for which you should feel accountable.

If you give every such person an opportunity to drive a Commander these mistakes will not occur.

Yours very truly,

THE STUDEBAKER CORPORATION

MOSCOW STRIVES TO KEEP ITS RED SPECS ON CHINA

Fights Moderate Move of Canton Army Chief.

BY CHARLES DAILEY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
[Copyright: 1927: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PEKING, China, April 2.—The challenge to the communists delivered by Chiang Kai-Shek, generalissimo of the armies of the Kuomintang, the party that is cementing its control over all the provinces of the Yangtze valley and casting eyes toward Peking, is not to go unmet. In fact, the third international at Moscow somewhat anticipated the stand of the moderates in the Kuomintang, which is dominated by the Cantonese and even at the risk, if not in the hope, of embroiling China with the foreign powers, has determined to carry the war right into the ranks of the nationalist party and its government.

After their session in Canton, forty Chinese communists who had been trained in the Moscow political school started overland for the Yangtze valley, accompanied by Tom Mann, the English communist; Browder, the American radical, the French communist, Deputy Doriot, and the Indian radical, Roy, who had been active at the sessions of the third international in connection with the plans for a world revolution.

The four have arrived at Hankow, where they were given an enthusiastic reception. A big "anti-imperialist" demonstration is to be held at Hankow on Monday.

Lay Down Plan for China.

These delegates are bringing with them the statement of policy toward China as outlined in the Spootnik Communista, the official organ of the Moscom communists.

The statement of policy says:

"The battle in which the Chinese revolutionary forces are engaged should be supported from all angles by the proletariat of Russia and the whole world. It is marching against capitalism, and it behooves Russia to make it a success. We must enable China to establish a despotic administration of laborers, peasants, and the small bourgeois who should form the ruling group of the great proletariat. The nationalist revolutionary government must carry out the nationalization of lands, railways and concessions, so that the national revolution can be molded into a social revolution.

"The industrial workers are still friends of the revolution, but there might come periods when they would become impatient with the movement. The proletariat must be careful not to quarrel with the elements that make up the complete whole, or do anything that would throw their solid fighting front into disorder before the proper time arrives to reap the harvest of long preparation. Care must be taken also to keep in close touch with the farming classes, which should be led and consolidated."

To Act Against Red Deputy.

PARIS, April 2.—(AP)—The French government has decided to take action against Jacques Doriot, communist member of the chamber of deputies, who is reported to be active among the Chinese at Hankow. Foreign Minister Briand today gave the ministerial council the latest news of Doriot's speeches and alleged attempts to foment revolt. Minister of Justice Barthou was instructed to draft charges on the basis of which removal of Doriot's parliamentary immunity will be asked.

"Some maintain," the statement concludes "that the Chinese communists should break away from the nationalist party, but the moment they separate themselves in that manner their influence on the national revolution will disappear and they will be placed in a most disadvantageous position."

BRITAIN TO MAKE CHINESE PAY FOR NANKING KILLINGS

Ready to Act Without U. S. and Japan.

val commander, today handed the press a statement from Eugene Chen, nationalist foreign minister, explaining that owing to the breakdown of the Chinese telegraphs Chen had requested the American naval wireless to transmit it. It has reference to the Nanking incidents, which Chen is investigating. His statement follows:

"The commission of inquiry appointed by the nationalist government to investigate the Nanking incidents has reported that the Nunking disorders were the work of reactionary and counter revolutionary elements who during the confusion following the defeat of the northerners and White Russian mercenaries instigated the rebel remnants and local ruffians to attack and loot the foreigners in the city. Many reactionaries arrested by the nationalist soldiers wore uniforms taken from nationalist soldiers previously taken captive.

Tells of Foreigners Slain.

"The British, American, and Japanese consulates were attacked and a few foreign lives unfortunately were lost and some foreign property looted before order was restored by the nationalist forces which entered the city at 5:30 p. m., March 24. The nationalists already have executed a number of those responsible.

"Six foreigners were reported killed and six wounded during these disturbances, but on the other hand the Chinese casualties resulting from the American and British bombardment number more than 100 killed and wounded for every single foreign casualty. While the nationalist government denounces the attack on the American and British and the consulates and expresses deep regret for the foreign lives lost and the wounding of the British consul and other foreigners, they have lodged a strong protest against the bombardment of the Chinese civilian population by the British and American gunboats."

Chiang Kai-shek, Cantonese commander, closed the labor union headquarters at Hangchow today following a fight in which eight laborers were killed and seventy wounded. At Chungking, Szechwan province, a fight also developed between communists and anti-communists. The troops fired on a mob, resulting in 150 killed and wounded.

The nationalist government today ordered the mobilization of the forces of the Christian general, Feng Yu-hsiang, instructing the commanders to advance against the Fengtien forces on two fronts, toward Honan and toward Peking, from the vicinity of Kalgan. The nationalists at the same time are beginning to advance against the Fengtien forces on the southern side by way of the Peking-Hankow railway and the Tientsin-Pukow railway. Pengpu, an important point on the latter railway, is reported to have been taken by the Cantonese without a fight. Americans are reported to be evacuating Tsinanfu, on this same railroad. This definitely spells the doom of the Mukden war lord, Chang Tso-lin, and means his early evacuation to Manchuria.

Japan Opposes Force.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

TOKIO, Japan, April 2.—Japan is ready to participate in a joint investigation of the Nanking riots and possibly to join in the presentation of demands for punishment and indemnities, but it will not participate in any demonstration of force, according to the foreign office. Two Japanese cruisers have been ordered from Tsingtao to Shanghai.

Orders Americans Out.

CANTON, April 2.—(AP)—Evacuation of all Americans in the vicinity of Canton and those in the native section of the city was ordered today by the United States consul. The Americans were ordered to proceed to Shameen, the foreign colony of the city.

Seize Episcopal Churches.

New York, April 2.—(AP)—Seizure by students and soldiers of three pieces of church property in the Shanghai missionary district was announced today in a cablegram received by the department of missions of the Episcopal National council.

POPE SEES NEW CHRISTIAN HOPE IN CHINA'S CHAOS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME, April 2.—Conditions in China are similar to those which existed in western Europe at the time of the breaking up of the Roman empire, Pope Pius said in a private conversation today.

Generals with individual followings are fighting among themselves and breaking up a great civilization which has existed for many thousands of years.

The Christianity which fostered and carried on the traditions of Roman civilization in Europe was developed from the chaos, so the pope believes that from the chaos in China will arise a great revivifying force of Christianity like that which arose in Europe after the fall of the Roman empire. This force would not necessarily take on a western aspect. Rather it would be a Chinese expression of Chinese ambitions, he believes.

China, which long has been a dormant world force, is rising and stretching, he continued.

U.S. CONSUL PUTS MURDER BLAME ON CANTON ARMY

Tells How Troops Fired on Yanks and British.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 2.—Full responsibility for the killing of foreigners during the Nanking outrages was placed squarely upon Nationalist soldiers and authorities by John K. Davis, American consul at Nanking, in a report submitted to the state department today. The report carries the conclusions reached by Mr. Davis following a full investigation made at the order of President Coolidge.

Mr. Davis' conclusions, it is believed here, will be followed by filing of demand against the Cantonese government by the interested powers.

U. S. Consul's Story.

The state department outlined the conclusion reached by Consul Davis in the following statement:

"The American consul at Nanking, Mr. John K. Davis, has sent the following conclusions concerning the Nanking outrage.

"Consul Davis reports that Nationalist soldiers deliberately fired upon, with intention to kill, the British, Jap, and American consuls, knowing them to be such. In the consul's own case, he had just given them his card and asked to see their officer.

"In the case of the Jap consul he was shot at while ill in bed.

"All three consulates were deliberately looted, and although this was known by Nationalist officers, no effective measures were taken to afford protection up to the time of the naval barrage to rescue the party that had taken shelter in the Standard Oil company's houses.

Foreigners Robbed, Slain.

"Murder, robbery, attempted assault, and other outrages were committed upon Americans and other foreigners in all parts of the city from 8 o'clock on the morning of March 24, with no attempt at official restraint until after the naval barrage at 4:30 p. m.

"Although the consul attempted all day, through police authorities and several other channels, to see some responsible officer, none would see him.

"From statements made to Consul Davis and to many other Americans by soldiers, from soldiers' conversations overheard by Americans in hiding, and from the fact that soldiers proceeded in bands whose movements were under direction and were promptly assembled by bugle call upon commencement of the naval barrage, it is proven that the outrages were planned and could not possibly have been an accidental getting out of hand of a few troops.

"On March 24 and 25 the Nationalist commander-in-chief not only refused to send them a high officer to consult with naval and consular officers regarding the safety of foreigners remaining in the city but his reply was both evasive and insolent.

"The consul points out:

"1. That the outrages were committed by the same troops who were engaged in disarming the remnants of the northern armies and they carried on their conversations in the dialects of Canton, Kiangsi, and Hunan provinces. These soldiers bore no resemblance whatever to northern soldiers and it was absolutely impossible for them to have been agents for the northerners. This last fact is borne out by their having operated for nine hours in large bands in all parts of the city without any restraint.

"2. Not until the naval barrage was laid down did the authorities take any restraining steps.

Loot American Homes.

"3. Throughout the 26th the looting of American houses continued and British houses were being looted on April 1.

"4. Three civilian Chinese were killed by the barrage, according to information received from a wide range of disinterested sources.

"5. Seven people were killed in cold blood by soliders in the uniform of the Nationalist army and thirteen American houses were burned."

A message received by the navy department from Admiral Williams today said he has sent the gunboat Asheville from Shanghai to Tientsin.

Eleven Things You Want to Know about 100% Cooperative Apartment Ownership

1. Economy: Saving of approximately 30% in rental (in addition to 6% on investment) through elimination of landlord's profit, vacancies, redecorating, etc.

2. Permanence: Apartment the property of tenant-owner in every sense for as long as he wants it. Can be altered, changed about or redecorated to suit his wishes.

3. Location: Socially desirable location where cost of individual home of equal merit is almost prohibitive.

4. Choice of Neighbors: No family may become a tenant until approved by the other tenant-owners.

5. Freedom from Care: Property under efficient management which looks after all the details of ownership and upkeep, entirely relieving the tenant-owner of all cares.

6. Superior Service: Tenant-owners are the actual employers of all house servants, who, through permanence, develop an efficiency and interest that assures better service.

7. Voice in Management: Every tenant-owner enjoys an equal voice in the management and operation—but no personal service is required of him.

8. Investment: In addition to saving on rental amounting to about 13% on the investment, the tenant-owner enjoys his proportionate share of all increase in the value of the property.

9. Social Advantages: Ownership of one's apartment in a fine residential district carries with it a definite social distinction.

10. Master of Your Home: The tenant-owner is in fact his own landlord. He is in full and complete possession to do with his apartment as he wills.

11. Better Planning and Construction: The 100% cooperative apartment house is in reality a group of the finest, modern, city homes, built for the permanent occupancy of their owners and therefore designed and constructed with that care found elsewhere only in the most expensive private homes.

BORDER PATROL HAS 1,000 FIGHTS WITH RUMMERS

Admits It Can Stop Only One-Tenth of Booze.

BY GEORGE SELDES.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

El Paso, Tex., April 2.—The biggest gusher in the southwest is the booze stream pouring through the Mexican line into Texas, New Mexico and Arizona. Customs officials and the border patrol frankly admit that catching a thousand gallons a week at El Paso alone isn't a tenth of the total merely at this point. And that isn't even the half of it. Mexico is the biggest dope dispenser to the States, and narcotics are about impossible to stop at the border. The smuggling in of aliens is about under control.

Yet the finest frontier work in the country is being done here by the handful of men constituting the border patrol, organized less than three years ago by George C. Harris, who made a hobby of the Rio Grande. He wanted a troop that would be a combination of the Royal Northwest Mounted, the Pennsylvania state constabulary and the old Texas rangers, and retain the best features of each, and he about got it.

1,000 Gunfights in 3 Years.

The outfit was organized in July, 1924, and has had a thousand gunfights since then, two men killed, and three wounded, the biggest scrap taking place on February 4 last at San Elizario. A Mexican booze runner was shot after three of the patrol had waylaid the lookouts and had ambushed the liquor wagon which opened fire.

Halting a rum train just as it has forded the Rio Grande is the stiffest assignment of all, because it is certain to bring out gunfire from the Mexican side. Practically the only armed forces in Mexico today are government forces, and certainly the only rifles in Juarez are those of the Mexican fiscal guards. After the big fight at the standing pipes in the canal that borders the Rio Grande on the outskirts of El Paso a few months ago, the patrol examined the bullet holes in the dobe walls made from guns across the river. The caliber matched that of the Mexican federals' guns.

Easy to Smuggle.

Contrary to the usual opinion east and north, the Rio Grande is not the sole border line between Mexico and the United States. In several spots there are mile-long stretches where the river gets sick of being in dry territory and swings into Mexico for a drink. At these points the border line is an arid stretch of just nothing at all except tin cans and white monuments that look like something marking a grave. All a smuggler need do at these points is throw the bottle across the line and roll over after it out of the alfalfa and mesquite.

This is the physical condition which has made Cordova island, smack within the town limits of El Paso, one of the most notorious smuggling spots in the world.

Need More Men.

They need more men and two airplanes, besides their five horses and dozen touring cars, and they need a few dollars more salary, so that they will at least be in the financial class of ordinary policemen. At Christmas time they had to stand on the ground and just watch the rum airplanes perform their return engagements back and forth across the line.

The dope that most frequently comes across is heroin. Now and then they land a few "bindles" on some small peddler, or get a tip that they had better rip the patch off the two inch slit in the tube of the balloon tire on that green coupe; but when it is understood that $50 worth of dope can be transported over the bridge in the grease cup on a Ford differential, the hopelessness of controlling narcotic traffic save at its source, principally in Germany, becomes apparent.

FRIGHTENED GIRL STANDS ALONE ALL NIGHT IN SCHOOL

Philadelphia, Pa., April 2.—(AP)—During the long hours of last night a little girl, Helen Wilkus, aged 7, stood in a corner in a schoolroom. Throughout the night, too, her parents and friends searched for her.

Today a sister went to the sewing room in St. Casimir's parochial school. There were no classes today. A stifled sob caught the sister's ear and she saw a weary little figure in a corner.

"I was waiting for my sister Eva to take me home," Helen said. "Some boys came down the hall, pushed me into the room, and told me I must stand in the corner for punishment. They told me not to dare leave the corner."

DEMANDS MEXICO CAPTURE BANDIT SLAYERS OF YANK

Vigorous Note Filed by U. S. Ambassador.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MEXICO CITY, April 2.—Ambassador James Rockwell Sheffield today made a vigorous demand on the foreign office for the apprehension and punishment of the bandits who assassinated Edgar Morris Wilkins, an American engineer, near Santa Ana Acatlan, Jalisco. Mr. Wilkins' body was found yesterday in a bad state of decomposition. He had evidently been dead four days.

Mr. Wilkins was electrical engineer of the Chapala Electric company of Guadalajara. He is survived by a widow and 10 year old son. He was a native of Savannah, Ga.

Accompanied by his son, the late engineer drove out from Guadalajara last Sunday on a trip of inspection of the Chapala Electric company's lines. Just beyond the village of Santa Ana Acatlan he was captured by a party of bandits. They sent his son back with a demand for 40,000 pesos ($20,000) ransom.

Troops Clash with Bandits.

The American consul, Dudley G. Dwyre, who was notified, in turn reported the kidnaping to Gen. Jesus Ferreira, military commander of the state of Jalisco. Troops were sent to rescue Mr. Wilkins.

At a point called El Colil, several miles west of Santa Ana Acatlan, the troops surprised the bandits and killed several of them. The remainder of the band fled. A searching party yesterday came upon Mr. Wilkins' body in the underbrush near El Colil. The American had been stabbed to death.

Second American Slain.

This is the second American who has been kidnapped and killed by bandits in recent months. Jacob Rosenthal of New York, here as a guest of his son-in-law, was kidnapped while returning from Cuernavaca, Morelos, a health resort much frequented by Americans in Mexico City. The ransom demand in this case was for 20,000 pesos ($10,000). When troops undertook to surround the bandits the latter stabbed Mr. Rosenthal and left his body by the roadside.

Greece May Tax 'Em Each Time They Bob Their Hair

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ATHENS, April 2.—Experts of the Greek ministry of finance are studying a proposal for taxing women with bobbed hair—a levy of 2 or 3 cents on each bobbing is suggested. The tax would be collected at the source, the hairdressers handing over part of the receipts and being responsible to the government. Bobbed hair still is considered a luxury by a majority of Greek women outside the larger cities.

ROW ON VOTES FOR WOMEN JARS BRITISH CABINET

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, April 2.—While the British cabinet is united over foreign affairs questions, it is faced with a serious split over what has become known as a "votes for flappers" movement.

At present the British women cannot vote until they are 30 years old, but some time ago Prime Minister Baldwin and Sir William Joynson-Hicks, home secretary, promised legislation this year giving the vote at 21, on the same terms as for men.

This immediately aroused vigorous opposition among the old fashioned Tories. The leadership of the "anti-flapper movement" was taken by the earl of Birkenhead, secretary of state for India, and Winston Churchill, chancellor of the exchequer. It is now reported that they have prevailed on the prime minister to dodge the issue by appointing a royal commission to investigate. This is the favorite way in Great Britain for sidetracking inconvenient demands for legislation.

The commission may sit for years before bringing in a report.

It is reported today that Sir William, because of his promise, threatens to resign if this course is adopted.

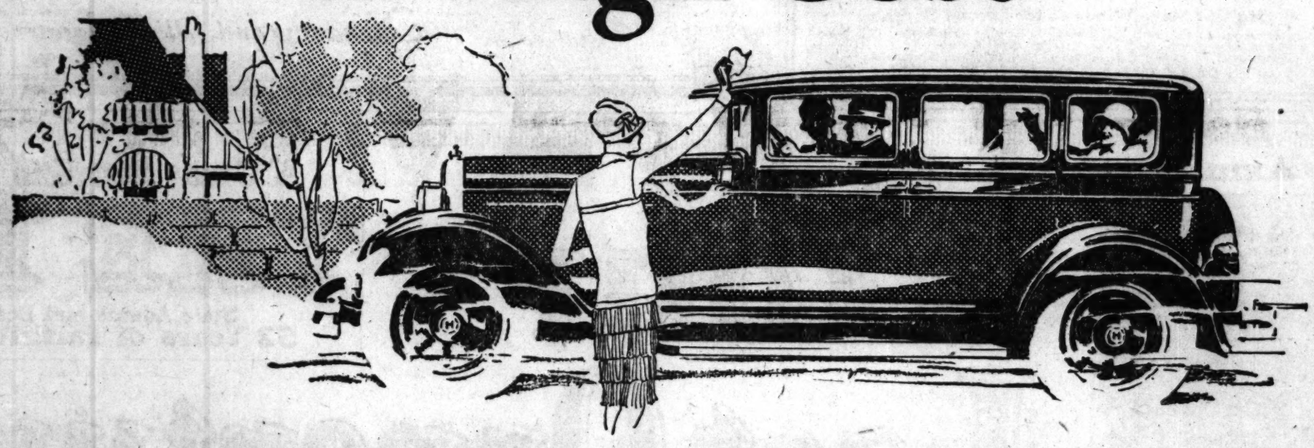
The Finest Eight Performance without Penalty of High Cost



UNTIL the coming of the Hupmobile Eight, this most luxurious form of motoring entailed both high first cost and prohibitive cost of upkeep.

Hupmobile changed all previous conceptions of eight-cylinder performance with a straight-eight of elemental simplicity, designed to give superior smoothness on long fuel mileage.

Thus Hupmobile removed the last obstacles which had prevented thousands from driving an eight, demonstrated its superiority over the higher-priced sixes, and won the largest straight-eight following in the world.

The only way to appreciate the vast difference between Hupmobile Eight and lesser types is to drive this Eight yourself.

CHARGE WEALTHY FOSTER PARENTS MALTREAT CHILD

Girl, 6, Taken from Pair at Hotel Plaza.

New York, April 2.—[Special.]—Roberta Jane Pratt, 6 year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Everett S. Pratt of Des Moines, Ia., at present making their home at the Hotel Plaza, was taken from her wealthy foster parents by agents of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, following complaint that the child had been neglected and maltreated.

The little girl was taken before Justice Samuel D. Leavy in the Children's court today, where Vincent Pisarra, superintendent of the society, produced a surgeon's certificate showing she was suffering from abrasions, wounds and burns. He requested that the child be placed in the custody of the society.

Guests of Hotel Complain.

According to the agents of the children's society, guests in the hotel had complained that the child was being neglected. Investigators went to the room occupied by the Pratts for which they pay $16 a day. As a result of the examination by physicians Roberta was taken to the headquarters of the society.

The investigation disclosed that the child had many deep cuts on her body. There were also scars from burns which society agents say resulted from a heated curling iron being placed against her legs.

Foster Father Is Prominent.

Mr. Pratt, who is about 52 years old, is vice president of the Pratt Paper company of Des Moines, and is socially prominent in that city.

Roberta was adopted about two years ago. Her name was then Roberta McCormick. She was found in 1925 by Sherwood Eddy, the well known social worker, during a visit to Des Moines, living with a family in an environment which caused him to call the attention of the juvenile authorities to her condition.

JAPAN WILL TRY 99 COREANS FOR PLOT TO REVOLT

TOKIO, Japan, April 2.—(AP)—The courts have decided to prosecute ninety-nine Coreans who were arrested last summer as plotters against the state. It is said a preliminary investigation, following last summer's wholesale arrests in Corea, has revealed a plan for organizing a communist society of 1,000,000 members with the object of starting a revolt against the present régime.

[Dispatches from Tokio last June reported the arrest of about 300 Coreans who were charged with plotting to obtain the independence of Corea from Japan.]

CICERO CHEERS BANK'S DEPOSIT CHUTE DEVICE

Members of Cicero's sporting fraternity yesterday rejoiced at learning of a novel device fashioned by the new Western State bank, 22d street and Cicero avenue, whereby money may be deposited through a safety chute at any time after regular banking hours. No longer, it was declared, may a successful gambler fear being compelled to transport his winnings homeward along a dark street.

Every known safety device will be in operation to safeguard money tossed into the chute, officials of the bank declared. An intricate system of electrical burglar alarms is installed, as well as a radio sound wave apparatus designed to set off the burglar alarm system should the vault door be tampered with.

FOUR CONTINENTS FLYER ARRIVES AT SAN ANTONIO

De Pinedo Makes Land Hop from Galveston.

San Antonio, Tex., April 2.—(AP)—Commander Francesco de Pinedo, Italian airman, who is touring four continents on a 30,000 mile aerial journey, waved good-by to the Gulf of Mexico today and completed his first dry land hop in the United States when he flew from Galveston to San Antonio.

His gigantic twin-motored monoplane, which is equipped to land only on water, made the 250 mile journey without mishap and was in shape to speed away tomorrow morning for Elephant Butte Dam, N. M., where it will land on the waters impounded by the dam. The next hop will be to the Pacific ocean at San Diego, Cal.

Commander de Pinedo turned his plane to the west early this morning at New Orleans, his first stop in the United States, and flew approximately 500 miles along the gulf. After three hours spent in dining and tuning his plane he took off for San Antonio and flew almost due west until he crossed the city and came to rest on the waters of Medina lake.

Five army planes met the flyer near the outskirts of the city and formed an escort for him until he had located the lake, which is hidden among deep hills.

COVENECK POLLS JAMMED IN LAST HOUR; 12 VOTERS

New York, April 2.—[Special].—A last minute "jam" at the polls in the election at Coveneck, L. I., New York state's newest village, took place today. Of the twelve voters in the village, only one had appeared during the first three hours after the opening of the polls. This early voter was Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt Jr. She is on the ticket.

The polls closed at 2 p. m. The other eleven voters drove up in limousines in the last hour of voting. They all are owners of country estates in the square mile of land which seceded from Oyster Bay and became incorporated as a village on March 2.

The voting booth is in the garage on the estate of Howard C. Smith. In spite of the heavy balloting, the mechanical voting machines favored in some elections are not being used. The more informal hat is doing duty instead. There is only one ticket, opposition slates being considered superfluous.

The ticket is as follows: Village president, Howard C. Smith; trustees, James B. Taylor and Alexander M. White; treasurer, Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt Jr., and tax collector, Alfred L. Mills. Added interest is attached to Coveneck's election because the new village includes Sagamore Hill, long the home of President Roosevelt.

Rotary Speakers to Boost Merits of Their Suburbs

Three hundred members of Rotary clubs in the Chicago district next Tuesday will hear speakers from the various communities discuss "Why My Town Is the Best to Live In." A silver trophy will be given the club whose speaker makes the best impression. Walter A. Strong, William R. Dawes, and Edward E. Gore will be the judges. The list of speakers includes James A. Richards of Winnetka, R. B. Dennis of Evanston, Will Robb of Cicero, Tom Roberts of Oak Park, J. R. Harper of Wilmette, the Rev. Elmer Krause of Maywood, and Ed Houser of Chicago. The speeches will follow the weekly Rotary luncheon at the Hotel Sherman.

VICTIM'S PLEA WINS FREEDOM FOR PICKPOCKET

CRIMINAL COURT.
Dominick Szypionski and Theodore Osiniski, assault to commit rape, sentenced to 1 to 20 years by Judge Harry B. Miller.
Moritz Falkman, confidence game, sentenced to 1 year in House of Correction by Chief Justice William J. Lindsay.
John Mosley, murder, sentenced to 14 years by Judge Emanuel Eller.

George Nardi, 3022 South Wells street, was freed yesterday on a pickpocket charge before Municipal Judge Max Luster, in South Clark street court, after Nardi's victim, Peter Iderstein, 70 years old, 6864 Michael court, had pleaded for leniency.

"He has a wife and three children and tried to steal for them," explained Iderstein.

Nardi confessed trying to rob Iderstein and of striking the aged man when he resisted.

"I ought to punish you for striking so old a man," declared Judge Luster.

Nardi was caught in the act of assaulting Iderstein by Policeman Joseph Judge and promptly arrested, although at the time Judge had in custody a man accused of annoying women.

Mountain Lion Killed with Stones by Two Men

Emmett, Idaho, April 2.—(AP)—A mountain lion was killed with stones near here recently by two unarmed road workers. The account which reached here today said that Charles Banister and "Indian" Jake were attacked by a nine foot cat which leaped from an embankment. The animal landed on Jake's shoulders, felling him, but Banister shattered its shoulders with a large stone. As the beast turned upon Banister, Jake smote its head with another rock.

Discriminating Chicago is accepting The Park Lane

HUNDREDS of visitors attest the quick interest which the PARK LANE has aroused.

In the PARK LANE all rooms are unusually large. Closet space has been an important consideration, not an afterthought. Architecture and furnishings are blended in unobtrusive Italian Renaissance beauty.

To offer such unusual accommodations at rates even below the prevailing scale characterizes the keen vision of experienced management. It was apparent that an apartment hotel such as the PARK LANE would appeal to families desiring a permanent residence; that economies resulting from a fully tenanted building would balance the liberal rental values given.

The many discriminating families who have already leased give the PARK LANE its enviable social prestige.

Apartments of 3, 4, 5 or 6 rooms with 2 or 3 baths. Also 1 and 2 room apartments with or without kitchen facilities. Ready May first. Agents at the building, 9 A. M. to 9 P. M. daily. Visit us today!

BOARD OF TRADE LULL IS LAID TO STATE INQUIRY

Speculating Declines as Banks Cut Loans.

A marked falling off in speculative grain trading was noted on the Board of Trade yesterday. Traders laid this reduction to disclosures made in the state assembly inquiry. At the same time attention was called to substantial cuts in loans by banks on warehouse receipts.

Revelations made to the committee of the house of representatives, of which Representative Thomas Curran is chairman and Representatives Frank A. McCarthy, Frank Ryan, Charles W. Baker and John M. Lee are the other members, are said to have made it certain that changes will be made in personnel and methods of the Board of Trade.

Chairman Curran said the evidence so far has shown that the Board of Trade was dominated by a certain clique. Rules of operation of grain elevators need a revision, he said. He said he had the assurance of a large portion of the Board of Trade membership that the work of his committee is regarded as helpful by them.

Causes Hardship to Farmers.

Besides the lull in grain trading, Attorney Benjamin F. Goldstein, special counsel for the legislative committee, said the conditions exposed have for the time being caused a hardship to the farmers.

"The public and the farmers are already suffering because of the frauds practiced by certain members of the Board of Trade," he said. "Since the revelation of conditions that had existed at the Northwestern Elevator and at the Armour Grain company's elevator "C," as well as what was learned through the Rosenbaum-Armour dispute, the banks have cut down the loans on warehouse receipts very considerably.

"In some cases the margins necessary to carry the grain above the bank loans have been doubled, for instance, the wheat margins have been raised from 3 cents to 18 or 20 cents, rye from 4 or 5 cents to 7 to 10 cents, corn from 4 to 7 or 8 cents, oats from 3 to 5 or 6 cents.

Tells Effect on Farmers.

"The effect on the farmers and the public is as follows: By increasing the margins there is an increase in the interest charges which enters into the carrying charges which are absorbed by the public. By increasing the margains the middleman or brokers requires more capital to handle the same amount of grain, or with the same amount of capital can handle less grain.

"This has made the moving of grain more difficult and has demoralized the orderly marketing of grain."

A financial authority explained the same situation in this way:

"Whereas, in the past the banks would loan, say, 75 cents per bushel with warehouse receipts as collateral, now they would only loan perhaps as little as 50 cents per bushel. Those figures are not exact; they are only proportionate."

Hunt Marketing Faults.

The legislative committee this week will go into the organization and collapse of the Grain Marketing company, which was heralded as being a farmers' coöperative system. Its other plans are said to call for a continuation of its search for faults in the marketing system.

A letter was sent yesterday to Senator Harold C. Kessinger, who has asked the appointment of a committee of senators and farmers to join in the grain investigation. Representative Curran's committee invited Senator Kessinger to join with it.

Farmer's Wife Has $149,646 Liabilities and No Assets

PAINTER SHOWS DINOSAURS KNEW GAME OF BLUFF

Their Timidity Hidden by Hard Boiled Front.

BY GENEVIEVE FORBES HERRICK.

Those old fossils weren't so dumb.

Not when you recollect that the old time dinosaur played the up to date game of camouflage; or rather, let nature furnish him with the cards for the game, and did the playing himself. For the more timid and cowering a beastie really was, back there in prehistoric time, the more grewsomely fearsome did he try to look, Charles R. Knight of New York pointed out yesterday afternoon in his lecture on "Prehistric Animal Life," delivered at the Field museum.

To illustrate his theory Mr. Knight flashed across the screen an artistic restoration of an old time animal. Each one of its vertebrae was extended into an individual spine. The whole formed a fantastic fan shaped bit of equipment of bone, sharpened, radiating many feet from the creature's back.

All a Bluff, He Says.

But it was all a bluff. The animal, Mr. Knight, admitted, was probably scared of his life of the carnivorous dinosaurs who might come over looking for a meal.

So the lecturer laid down this axiom: "The more pointed and spined an ancient animal was, the more horns he possessed, the more bumps and lumps he had, the more timid and frightened he was."

A curious panorama of animals appeared yesterday, in sequence, from the coal age period to the time of man. Whales that were in the transition period, having their legs turned into paddles; a bird that still had reptilian claws, the bone structure tail of a reptile and teeth; horses twelve inches high and twenty-four inches long, and a tremendous creature with a brain the size of a small banana.

Mr. Knight, who is now in charge of the mural decorations of the Ernest R. Graham hall of paleontology at the Field museum, described his method of picturing animals he never saw, except for a few of their bones.

How Pictures Are Made.

First, he explained, he investigates with tape measure and yard stick every minute portion and proportion of the skeleton of the creature he is about to portray. Then from this skeleton he builds a model in clay, since in the beginning it is easier to work with three rather than one dimension. These models he then takes outside, places them in the sun, and notes carefully the shadows they cast.

Working now from the other end of the sequence, he studies modern descendants, if the ancestral animal has any, learns of their skin, color, and other characteristics. The last step is the actual painted picture.

Twenty-eight of such panels, beginning with animal life at the beginning and taking it up to modern times, will be used in the murals at the museum.

PROGRESS

Bad will be the day for a business when it is absolutely contented with things as they are—with methods that it is pursuing—and with deeds that it is doing. New ideas, new people and new conditions make for a perpetual seeking for better things.

Its only fixed policy should be—

"Fair dealing to all," and its motto—

"Established yesterday with a thought for tomorrow."

TAX RECEIPTS FAIL TO REACH U. S. FORECASTS

March Collections Show Gain of $17,000,000.

Washington, D. C., April 2.—[Special.]—March income tax receipts showed an increase of only about $17,000,000 over the March, 1926, total according to complete official figures made public today by the treasury. The failure to make good on an increase of from $90,000,000 to $100,000,000 which was expected in advance of the March 15 payments, necessitates a revision downward of estimates of the prospective treasury surplus for the fiscal year 1927. Treasury officials now are not so certain that the surplus will be in excess of $500,000,000 as they were two weeks ago.

Income tax receipts during March totaled $516,534,789.55, as compared with $499,628,780.29 in March, 1926. The treasury had estimated that the total would be about $580,000,000.

Increase Now $222,000,000.

For the fiscal year up to March 31 total income tax receipts were $1,649,971,888, as compared with $1,427,118,713, an increase of $222,853,175 over last year.

The $17,000,000 increase in March income tax receipts is no more than was anticipated at the time budget estimates were submitted to congress in December. Those estimates showed a prospective surplus of $383,000,000 for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1927. On the basis of the March receipts and the likelihood that the June income tax payments will show no greater proportionate increase, it now appears probable that the estimate made in December will be substantially correct.

Mellon Predicted $500,000,000.

Secretary of the Treasury Mellon predicted a surplus in excess of $500,000,000 two weeks ago on the basis of the optimistic estimates which had then been made with respect to the March receipts. Treasury officials now are not so certain that the $500,000,000 mark will be reached.

FORD CONSENTS TO BODYGUARD AFTER MISHAP

Detroit, Mich., April 2.—[Special.]—Henry Ford spent a restful night and is past the danger point, the bulletin given out this morning by his attending physicians stated.

Despite statements of the Ford organization that the manufacturer does not believe the auto mishap in which he was injured was a deliberate attempt to murder him, it became known today that Mr. Ford had at last consented to a body guard accompanying him wherever he goes. Heretofore he has refused to permit this despite the insistence of friends.

Although the two men in the big car which last Sunday night sideswiped Mr. Ford's coupe, forcing it down a steep embankment, are known to the Ford detectives no move to prosecute them will be made. This was made known to Robert M. Toms, prosecuting attorney of Wayne county, by Henry Bennett, head of the Ford investigating service, who believes the mishap was an accident.

CAMP FOR YOUR CHILDREN...

OR EUROPE ?

DON'T say, "Camp, of course. We can't afford Europe." Let us just find out the difference in cost. A camp—any good camp—costs $300. It is most likely in Maine. An average fare would be about $50. Equipment amounts to another $50.

Now—a round trip to Europe, Tourist Third Cabin—thousands upon thousands praise it!—on a smart steamer like the Majestic, world's largest ship, is $182. Three weeks of travel at an average of $10 a day (and that is more than generous at the present rate of exchange) comes to $210.

Roughly, that makes $400 for camp, and $392 for Europe. Isn't it worth looking into—now!

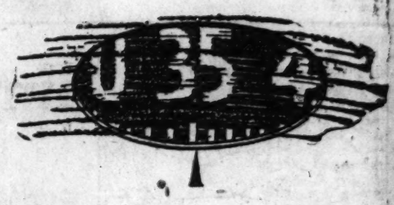
Masterful Power

Over the top ~ ~ ~ ~ with plenty to spare



Hills that have been the traditional test for motordom's most powerful cars are topped by the Hudson Super-Six on a rising speedometer.

Alertness and immediate response to the throttle account for the way the New Hudson Super-Six takes advantage of every driving opportunity.

There is no motor labor. There is no sense of the mechanical. All feeling that there is a motor and complicated mechanism is absent.

And whether in city driving or in high sustained speed over country roads the action and comfort of your Hudson is the very luxury of motion.

ALL BUT SHOUTING OVER FOR SMITH IN '28—EDWARDS

Democrats Solidly in Line for Al, He Says.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 2.—[Special.]—Gov. Al Smith's nomination for the presidency by the 1928 Democratic national convention is practically a foregone conclusion, according to a forecast today by Senator Edward I. Edwards [Dem., N. J.], based, he declared, on the results of conferences with prominent Democrats representing all sections of the country.

Smith, the senator asserted, will go to the convention with the 118 votes of New York and New Jersey solidly behind him, and added to this assured support will be large blocks of votes if not entire delegations from Illinois, Massachusetts, Montana, California, Arizona, Wisconsin, Texas, North Carolina, Rhode Island, Maryland, Connecticut, Minnesota and Delaware.

Religious Issue Wanes.

"If Miss Democracy can not win with a standard bearer of this recognized strength, there is no need of holding a convention," Senator Edwards asserted. "Smith will be nominated at the 1928 national convention just as sure as he lives and the Democratic party endures."

The religious issue against Smith "in the cowardly wailings of bigotry" is on the wane, according to the senator, even in the south, where the issue is most seriously urged.

Borah Sees Smith's Strength.

"Smith's unbiased foes as well as his friends, admit his strength," continued the senator. "The independent but oftimes regular Republican, Borah, believes Smith will be the candidate.

"President Coolidge threw his secretary of the treasury overboard and listened to Wayne B. Wheeler when he appointed Roy A. Haynes to be acting prohibition commissioner and the astute President Coolidge had in mind the Smith strength as compared to 'bone dry' Anti-Saloon league votes."

ILLINOIS THEATER SITE BOUGHT BY AMUSEMENT CO.

Purchase of the Illinois theater site was announced yesterday by Harry J. Powers, president of the Amusement Company of Illinois, whose majority stockholders are Mr. Powers and A. L. Erlanger. The company has had a 99 year option on the property. Details of the transaction will be disclosed this week by Alfred S. Austin, attorney for the company.

Mr. Powers, pointing out that the property is too valuable to be devoted to theater use alone, declared that the building and site may be sold to prospective office or hotel builders, who, he said, are eager to buy.

After a conference with Mr. Erlanger Mr. Powers said that plans for a new $1,000,000 theater to be constructed by the associates on another location will be made public. Mr. Powers arrived in Chicago yesterday from Los Angeles to attend the opening performance of "Sunny" tomorrow night at the Illinois theater.

BUTLER TO TOUR U. S. TO SURVEY SITUATION FOR 1928 CAMPAIGN

Washington, D. C., April 2.—(AP)—After a conference with President Coolidge, William M. Butler, chairman of the Republican national committee, announced today that he would make a countrywide survey of the Republican political situation beginning about April 15.

Asked if one purpose was the sounding of sentiment on the question of the renomination of President Coolidge next year, Mr. Butler said candidates were not being considered at this time; that the idea was to tighten up the party machinery.

The national chairman is expected to give particular attention to conditions in border states, but the extent of his activities in territory where the names of Frank O. Lowden of Illinois and others have been brought out as possible opponents of Mr. Coolidge is not made clear at this time.

While on the road—and his trip is to consume at least a month—Mr. Butler will look over facilities offered by various cities for the Republican convention next year. Movements already are under way to obtain the gathering for San Francisco, Chicago, St. Louis, Detroit, Cleveland, Kansas City, New York, and San Antonio.

SCIENCE AND AN ACCIDENT SAVE 700 FROM DEATH

Pittsburgh, Pa., April 2.—(AP)—Science and an accident combined to save the lives of some 700 coal miners in the Pittsburgh field during this week. Two mine explosions, at first believed to have taken a heavy toll of life, were found to have been localized, and while 10 miners in the immediate vicinity of the blasts met death, 700 others escaped uninjured.

Science had its day today when, because the mine was rock dusted, an explosion in a big workings at Cokeburg failed to spread. A half dozen men, trapped in the immediate region of the explosion, were killed. Five others were burned but will recover. Four hundred others, working in the mine, were not affected, for the rock dust, covering the highly explosive coal dust, formed a perfect insulation and the blast was localized.

An accident in the Ehrenfeld mine Wednesday was believed to have saved the lives of 300 miners. Here only four were killed when a terrific explosion rocked the mine, causing damage on the surface.

A score of loaded coal cars were wrecked in a main heading, breaking an electric line, which caused a spark. This ignited coal dust. The wreckage, however, effectively blocked the tunnels to points where 300 men were at work. The blast, thus blocked from entering the workings, raced with air currents to the surface and spent itself on the outside.

The North American's low prices are made even lower by the size of the food portions. For instance:—

One North American order of Halibut and Peas at 45c is usually enough for two people

There is no extra charge when one portion is shared by two people. So, by dining here with a companion your share for a fine helping of this delicious halibut with peas will figure only 22½ cents.

So far as quality is concerned we would be glad to have you compare it with the fish for which you pay high prices in the expensive restaurants and hotels. This halibut is one of the finest sea-foods coming into Chicago. We cook it in small quantities, so it reaches you "hot from the pan," juicy and tasty instead of being dry and tasteless as is so often the case with fish.

Try it and you'll agree you never had any finer fish. And this is only one example of the worth-while savings you can make by "serving yourself" in this Common-Sense Restaurant.

Among our other amazing food values are such delicious items as:—

Filet of Sole: Two big pieces with Tartar Sauce. An example of the North American's unusual sea-food values. . . . 50c

Whitefish Dinner: A big portion of Jumbo whitefish with potatoes and salad. 65c

Pork Tenderloin Another item which proves that by dining here you can get big portions of the best food at low prices . . 45c

Steak Dinner: A big juicy steak, with French fried potatoes and tomato salad 65c

And for Breakfast:—

Honey Waffles: With 3 strips of bacon or Mickelberry's Old Farm Sausage, butter and pure maple sap or honey 30c

Bacon and Eggs: Two fresh eggs, fried in butter and 4 strips of bacon 35c

MORTON PREPS WIN U. S. BASKET TITLE

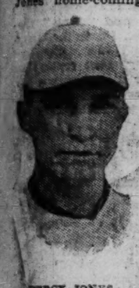
CUBS FALL AT DALLAS; SHREVEPORT WHIPS SOX

STEERS TRAMPLE BRUINS, 7 TO 4; HOSE BEATEN OUT IN 9TH, 4-3

Percy Jones Victim of Texans' Attack.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Dallas, Tex., April 2.—Percy Lee Jones' home-coming celebration didn't turn out as well as expected today. Some fellow townspeople presented him with a diamond studded Masonic ring, a lady friend of the family sent him a home-baked cake, and the Texas Steers fairly overwhelmed him with a lot of base hits. Mixed with the hits were numerous passes for which Jones was personally responsible, so the Cubs didn't have a chance and lost an exhibition decision to the Dallas champions, 7 to 4.



PERCY JONES.

Jones' troubles were only part of the day's proceedings. The Cubs were beat further by inability to hit the ball and also got into an argument with the "necessary evil" who was calling balls and strikes. The gentleman guesser didn't do so well when Hack Wilson was batting in the eighth, and Hack, besides making a speech, made motions as if bent on wrapping his bat around the ump's head. For his outburst Hack was banished, much to the delight of the attending populace, and Charley Grimm also would have been excused from further duty if there was any one else to fill his shoes.

Jones Can't Find Plate.

The Cubs claim that hitting on the local baseball pasture is a matter of great difficulty, but we are inclined to attribute their meekness today to the stinging provided by the opposition. The first Steer to operate on the knob was Russel Pence, ex-Cub, ex-Sox, ex-Chicago cop. Pence hung around with his funny foolers for six innings and during his régime only three Cub hits were exploded. If he hadn't been slightly wild at times the major leaguers might not have scored against him. For the remaining three chapters a southpaw entitled Shuman did the hurling and the Cubs got to him for the impressive total of one single.

The Steers stampeded against Jones in the third inning, three runs scoring. Only two hits were made, but scoring was easy because of three passes. Then Percy Lee fell into a terrible mess in the fifth and the ball game went blooey with four runs going over the pan. Ten men batted and six of them hit safely, while one walked. Following this inning, McCarthy called out Luther Roy, and the former Southern leaguer prevented the hostiles from making any further demonstration.

Root to Hurl Today.

The first hit made by the Cubs was a double by Gonzales in the third, but he got nowhere. The Cuban was pastiming despite his sore arm because Hartnet turned up with a sore finger as the result of a foul tip the day previous. Then in the fourth the Cubs fetched home a run without a hit. Heathcote managed this tally on a pass, a wild pitch, and a couple of infield outs. The remaining two Cub tallies scored in the sixth, when Hack Wilson produced a hit after a couple of his mates had walked.

Schalk Banished for Wrangle with Umpire.

BY EDWARD BURNS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Shreveport, La., April 2.—Across the hall from where this piece is being written, Ted Lyons' persevering portable gramophone is playing naughty but sad songs. Ted, who hasn't won a baseball game this spring, lost another one this afternoon. The refreshed Shreveport Sports did it, 4 to 3.

TED LYONS.

The contest wouldn't have been so depressing if it hadn't appeared for a time that the pride of Baylor university was going to register his first victory of the 1927 spring training season. The Shreveport batters were unable to make a hit off Ted in the first five innings, and in the fourth it was his double with the bases full that scored all the Sox runs.

Truly, about as neat a tableau as any ambitious baseball thrower could conjure up for himself.

Sports Tie the Score.

The first hit off Lyons came in the sixth after two were out. It didn't mean anything, for the third man was retired immediately thereafter.

But the seventh—that was something else again. All at once the air was full of base hits. Three men swished clear around the bases. The score was tied.

It was in this distressing seventh, incidentally, that Schalk received his first banishment since assuming the job of manager. He was told by one of the umpires that in the south they don't use that kind of language even when talking to a stigmatic umpire. The Texas league official challenged Ray to fisticuffs but nothing came of this phase of the controversy for Cracker went to the clubhouse without poking anyone.

Maderas Wins Game.

In the ninth inning the Sports made three straight singles for the winning run, all before a batter had been retired. All four of the Shreveport runs were batted in by Maderas who last year was with Springfield in the Three Eyes league.

Judge Landis, who leaped past the Sox via airplane in his tour of the southern training camps, tonight was challenged by Schalk to come to Shreveport Monday prepared to defend his golf laurels against Peckinpaugh and Ward, the links sharks of the Comiskey outfit.

The Sox and Sports will play again this afternoon.

Hornsby Case Gives Heydler First Big Job

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, April 2.—Rogers Hornsby has grasped the great National league by the tail and at this hour is pensively tying the tail into hard knots to the great distress of the National league. The gentlemen who own the eight baseball firms comprising the league have been summoned to confer with themselves in Pittsburgh one day late next week, probably on Friday, to decide how much they can afford to pay Mr. Hornsby to let go.

While they are about it they undoubtedly will decide to dock this troublesome suffix or at least braid it up behind the reach of the common or perspiring type of baseball man. Once they replevin the stock in the St. Louis Cardinals which Hornsby is holding for $105 a share they are pretty sure to protect themselves from future embarrassment of the same nature by writing a law into their own peculiar code whereby it will be made impossible for an active ball player to own stock in any of the eight firms.

Mr. Heydler is Worried.

John Heydler, the peaceful president of the league, called the Pittsburgh conference when it became evident to him that Hornsby could not be shaken off and would have to be bought off. Mr. Heydler is troubled in his mind because, regardless of the vulgar business wrangles and political revolutions in the American league, his league under his administration enjoyed unmitigated serenity until the St. Louis ball club traded Hornsby to the Giants.

At first Mr. Heydler thought of calling a conference of the board of directors, but as Sam Breadon, president of the St. Louis club and Hornsby's most cordial enemy, is one of the directors, it was thought that Mr. Breadon might be embarrassed in deciding the matter. However, this solicitude for Mr. Breadon's feelings seems rather elaborate, for no chance to inconvenience Mr. Hornsby would embarrass him. On the contrary, this would suit Mr. Breadon's idea of a wonderful time. And, to complete the situation it should be added that Mr. Hornsby's idea of pleasant reading would be a newspaper reporting that Mr. Breadon's house burned down without insurance, that his business had failed and his yacht had sunk in extremely deep water with Mr. Breadon in it.

A Perplexing Problem.

The eight proprietors face a perplexing affair, for Mr. Breadon is the only one among them who can ethically buy Hornsby's stock and he refuses to pay anything like Hornsby's price, having offered $60 a share, whereas Horinsby claims the certificates are worth $135 and demands $105, no less. Mr. Heydler trusts that after they have conferred Mr. Breadon will be persuaded to offer more and that Hornsby accept less.

In the meantime John J. McGraw has perused the bylaws of the National league and discovered that there is no actual rule forbidding a ball player employed by one club to own stock in another; in fact, under the rules one magnate might own all eight firms in the league and the supposed crime of syndicate baseball becomes no crime at all but only a practice of questionable taste.

Mr. McGraw therefore will insist on playing Hornsby and unless the conferring proprietors devise some means of peddling the stock at Hornsby's price Heydler will instruct his umpires to order him out of the game as he goes up to bat for the first time. In that case McGraw would go to the United States courts for an injunction and the baseball business once again would find its own peculiar legal forms and practices under the cold, unsympathetic scrutiny of the judges.

As for rescinding the trade whereby Hornsby came to the Giants, Mr. Heydler has gloomy ideas. Every trade made in the National league this year might be traced back to that deal.

NEBRASKA WINS IN TRIANGULAR MEET AT DENVER

Denver, Colo., April 2.—(AP)—The University of Nebraska track squad had a little trouble in disposing of the Colorado Aggies and Denver university in a triangular meet today. The Cornhuskers piled up 81 points to 27 each by the Aggies and Denver.

Roland Locke, holder of the unofficial world's record for the 100 yard dash at :09 5-10, did the distance in :09.8 in an exhibition and in an exhibition 220 yard race against Haynes made a time of :21.4.

The Nebraska squad is en route to California to meet the University of Southern California.

JACKSON RALLIES AFTER OPERATION

Memphis, Tenn., April 2. — (AP) — Travis Jackson, New York Giant shortstop, who underwent an operation here last night for appendicitis, was rallying as well as could be expected today, attendants at his bedside said this morning. Attending physicians declared shortly after the operation last night that Jackson would be able to be back in the game by May 15, barring unforeseen complications.

WILLING TO TRADE STOCK

Memphis, Tenn., April 2.—[U. P.]—"If the St. Louis club wants to get my stock without paying me cash let it trade me the Houston club of the Texas league," Rogers Hornsby, second baseman of the New York Giants, said here today.

"I have 1,167 shares in the St. Louis club and the St. Louis club controls the ball clubs in Houston, Syracuse, Fort Smith, Danville and Austin.

"The suggestion that I should accept $60 a share for my stock never will be accepted. I think it is worth $105 a share and I have received an offer of $80 a share from New York brokers."

CURLEY CLAIMS SHARE OF WOOD CHOPPER'S COIN

New York, April 2.—(AP)—Jack Curley, fight promoter, today applied for a warrant to attach the ring earnings of Paulino Uzoudun, the "Spanish woodchopper," who won a ten round bout from Tom Heeney, Irish New Zealander, last night.

Curley claimed Paulino owes him $2,000 under an agreement entered into Nov. 4, last, through which Curley was to be agent for the fighter and receive ten per cent of the woodchopper's earnings.

He said he advanced Paulino $700 for his trip from Buenos Aires to New York and estimated the fighter had received about $20,000 from boxing exhibitions.

TILDEN, WEINER BEAT LOTT AND BAGGS IN FINAL

Augusta, Ga., April 2.—(AP)—William T. Tilden II. and Sandy Weiner, Philadelphia, his protégé, defeated George Lott, Chicago and Fred Baggs, New York, 6—3, 6—2, 6—3, in the finals of the doubles matches in the South Atlantic states tournament here today.

Lott and Baggs took the first set by playing steady tennis and making their shots count. However, in the second set, with Weiner starring, the tide was turned and Tilden and Weiner crashed through to take three straight sets.

Miss Clara Zinke of Cincinnati took the women's singles honors and Miss Zinke and George Lott of Chicago won first place in the mixed doubles. Miss Zinke defeated Elsie Cox of Asheville, 6—4, 6—2, in the finals, while Lott and Miss Zinke won from Fred Baggs of New York and Elsie Cox, 6—0, 8—6.

BATESVILLE, ARK., FALLS IN BITTER FINAL GAME, 18-16

Kawalski Paves Way for Triumph of Cicero Five.

BY HARLAND ROHM.

A junior league of nations masquerading as the basketball team of Morton High school of Cicero, won the national prep championship at Bartlett gym last night by two points in a game as bitter as a Dakota winter, chiefly through the work of Capt. Edward Kawalski. They defeated the team from Batesville, a town of 4,000 in northern Arkansas, 18 to 16, before a howling mob that packed the low capacity gym to the uttermost inch while those who couldn't get in stood in a dense jam outside, getting bulletins on the progress of the game from the more fortunate youngsters perched in the gym's second story windows.

TOM MURPHY.

The game, transcending basketball, rose to the dignity of war. It was a fighting, tearing crew of boys who fought from the first tipoff with a fury of fanatics. Neither team was ever more than four points ahead and that for only a few seconds. Three-fourths of the time a basket would have changed the lead or sent the game into another tie.

Players Scattered on Floor.

Time and again, one, two or three boys sprawled at full length on the floor or crashed into the crowd so furious were their drives at the ball, regardless of what human bone and muscle was in the road, that a few times the game resembled vicious football tackling. There was no intention to maim, it only seemed that way.

Without detracting an iota of credit from Mike Rondinella, Ossian Nystrom, Lewis Rezabeck or George Fencl, the story of victory is about Kawalski, a tall, powerfully built boy, with the fighting face of an old time pug. It was Kawalski's jumping at center that forced the Batesville boys into the continual disadvantage of diving high into the air whenever they were to get the ball at the center tipoff.

It was Kawalski whose height took the ball off the backboard and blocked many and many a second shot. It was Kawalski's height and long arms which forced many a held ball and held ball with Kawalski jumping meant it was Morton's ball.

Five Man Attack.

So much for Kawalski, which doesn't say half enough about the fight which the four others—Italian, Swede and Bohemian—put into the game. It was a five man threat at all times, as every lad of the five is fast and every one can shoot.

The Batesville boys, tal land wiry, got a jump in the first quarter through the shooting of Alvis Carpenter, Sandy haired toothpick. The passing of his brother, Wesley, helped him sink a couple of baskets in that first eight minutes, and another by James Pickren, center, made the score 6 to 3 at the quarter. Morton hadn't sunk a basket, but in the second quarter they came back fast.

Rezabek sank two baskets from none too close to the basket and Rondinella added another, and just as the gun sounded a free throw to give the Morton the lead, 11 to 8, at half time.

Battle Wages Desperately.

Going into the second half the tensity increased and the game became furious. Boys on each team were diving for the ball, rather than trying to slap it out of an opponent's hand, and the result was many spills and many fouls.

Pickren brought the score to 11—10, but Nystrom on a fine pass from Kalwaski sank a short shot. Wesley Carpenter got a basket, but Nystrom equaled it and the score was 16—12, the widest margin of the game. Then Pickren scored a free throw and Blue who took Capt. Murphy's place when the latter went out on fouls in the middle of the quarter scored a basket to bring the count to 18—14, with Morton leading at the end of the third quarter.

Starting the fourth quarter, Morton began to stall and pass with fine results for a moment and then Wesley Carpenter got his second basket and the score was tied. The speed of the previous minutes was forgotten in a new whirl of fury. The Morton boys were fighting in the last ditch, battling with every ounce of their lithe young bodies.

Batesville, fighting desperately fell into fouls, and Rondinella dropped in a point, and Morton again stalled to hold their lead.

Batesville tried long shots, many from far back on the floor and none of them hit. Rondinella went down on a crash with Blue and he sank the foul, the second of five he had tried. But it was enough. With seconds to play Morton held the ball until the final gun was fired.

Florence Wins Third Place.

Florence, Miss., beat Huron, S. D., out of the silver basketballs for third place by stalling to a victory after nearly losing a fine lead Taylor, forward, had built up in the first half. The final score was 19 to 16. Taylor, on the receiving end of a passing game, sank six baskets in the first half, all on short tosses. With Taylor out on four personals and the score at the half 16 to 6, the Mississippians stalled through the third quarter, losing three points of their lead.

In the last quarter Marquis sank a basket in the early seconds and Perrin followed it with two more in quick succession, bringing the score to 17-16. Berry, Florence forward, got a basket a moment later, and from then on he and his teammates stalled the remaining few minutes.

It was a close guarding game, with Huron shooting the long shots and not getting them.

Kansas City Wins Consolation.

Northeast High school of Kansas City won the final game of the consolation tournament, 24 to 23, by a free throw sunk after the gun ending the game had sounded. Renfro was pushed by Moss as the gun barked and he sank the basket.

Morton went into the finals when the suburban school battled from behind to set down Florence, Miss., 28 to 20, in the second semi-finals game yesterday afternoon.

In the first semi-final tilt Batesville outpointed Huron, S. D., 25 to 16, to oppose Morton in the finals.

Morton Trails at Half.

Morton got the surprise of its life in the opening of the semi-final game, for Taylor, Mississippi's star forward, poked two short shots in to give Florence a lead which they maintained tenaciously until the close of the first half. Morton didn't seem to understand the situation, for throughout the tournament Florence had been classed as a sleepy team, sliding through easy games.

Florence lead at the half, 14 to 10, for Morton in spite of much dribbling and shooting, was still quiescent, but with the opening of the second half a startling change took place. Four straight Morton baskets, a short under the basket shot from Kowalski's finger tips, a long one by Rondinella seemingly but a second later, a one-handed side shot by the big center, and a long swooping net twitcher by Rezebek, all within two minutes were enough to send Morton safely ahead of Florence, from which lead they were never turned.

Batesville Wins, 25 to 16.

Then Morton stalled, but not successfully, for Florence broke up Rondinella's dribbling and on the opening formation of the fourth quarter pulled up to within one point of Morton, 18 to 19. But Morton pulled ahead again, and stalled successfully while Florence, facing the toughest of luck in the closing minutes, seemed on the point of getting baskets, only to have the ball roll out again.

Batesville made an easy victory out of what was doped to be a hard match in the Arkansas-Huron, S. D., game, which Batesville won, 25 to 16.

The game opened with a fight, as the score at two all to end the first quarter would indicate. Things opened up a bit in the second quarter, and each team scored some, in even play though the half ended, 10 to 8, in Batesville's favor. Then Batesville started, the Carpenters got going, and the southerners kicked out, 20 to 12, at the end of the third quarter, while Huron fumbled and missed when they were able to get by the Batesville line of defense, which appears to be the best in the tournament.

Athens Beats Durham, 24 to 17.

In the first battle of the consolation semi-finals yesterday morning Athens bested Durham, 24 to 17, in a game remarkable for its tightness.

Northeast and Gilbert indulged in a much closer battle, with Scott of the Arizona team counting eight baskets for the second day in a row. Gilbert took a huge 13 to 2 lead in the first quarter, but couldn't hold it, even though Scott was popping baskets in from all corners of the floor. At the half, Gilbert lead only 15 to 10, after Chilton and Renfro of the Kansas City boys got going. In the third quarter, Northeast took the lead, 18 to 17. The final score was 25-24.

Gilbert, Ariz., took third place in the consolation play off by trouncing Durham, N. C., 36 to 19 in the last game of the afternoon. Gilbert had no trouble with the southerners, with Scott and Cooper of the Arizona team caging six baskets each. Lineup:

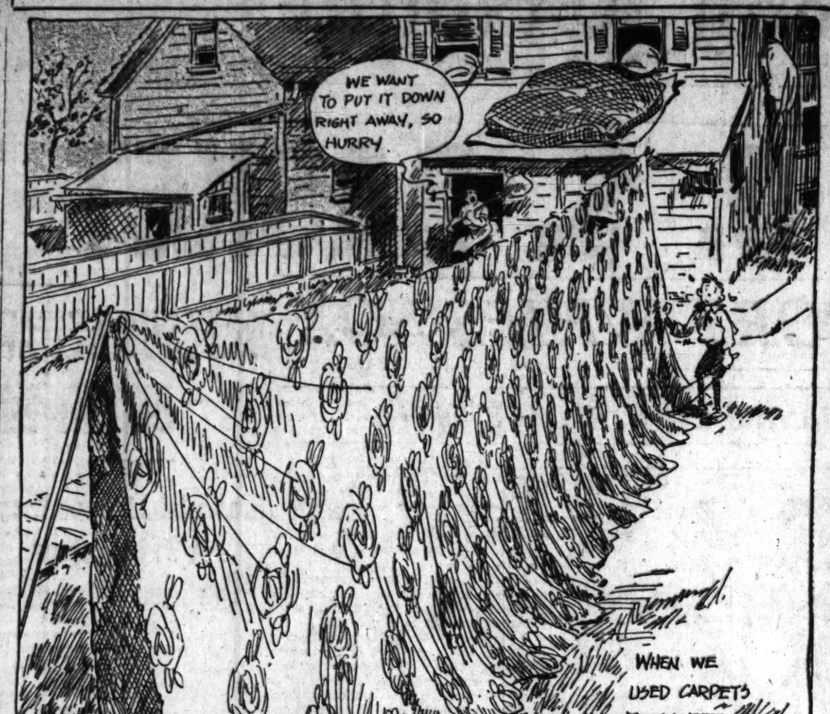
AMONG THE FOLKS IN HISTORY



Prep Cage Champs Had to Beg Chance to Show Their Class

Morton High school basketball athletes, who now can write "Champions of the United States" after their names, got into the tournament only at the last minute and by a direct appeal to Athletic Director Alonzo A. Stagg.

They had won 19 games and lost 3. They had beaten New Trier, which was invited; they had won their district championship and had lost in the finals of the sectional at Joliet with Rezabek and Rondinella sick and unable to play. An appeal on their record put them in.

Edward Kawalski, the captain and center, also was center of the football team. He won his lightweight letter in basketball in his sophomore year and won his heavyweight letter last year and this. He's six feet one inch tall, weighs 180 pounds, and lives in the Grant works district of Cicero. His parents are from Poland.

Rezabek Team's Sharpshooter.

Louis Rezabek, left forward, of Bohemian ancestry, is rated the best basket shot on the team, particularly on long shots, which he proved in the semi-final and final game yesterday. He's 5 feet 7½ inches tall and weighs about 145 pounds. His shooting is the result of steady plugging practice since he was a freshman. An enthusiast at basketball, he has plugged along until yesterday he had his big day. His sister plays basketball with the Continental and Commercial bank team. Rezabek wants to be a druggist and he's going to continue his schooling for that purpose.

Michael Rondinella, Italian, is a newsboy and rises at 6 each morning to sell papers. But yesterday he turned over his paper stand at the Austin L station to his younger brother and slept late. He's been playing through this tournament with an infected knee, but didn't let a nasty bump in the ribs which laid him low in the last quarter of the final game put him out. He's 5 feet 6 and weighs 140.

Ossian Nystrom, as his name indicates, completes the league of nations with Sweden. An orphan, he lives with an aunt and is rated one of the best mentally on the team. He's captain and catcher of the baseball team, though he only carries 138 pounds on his 5 feet 7 inches.

Fencl Baby of Squad.

George Fencl is the youngest and lightest of the team. He's 16, while the others are all 17 and 18, and he weighs but 130. His height is 5 feet 6 inches, and he bears another distinction of being the only junior on the team. The others are seniors.

Coach H. Karl Long, who has been at the school five years, is a graduate of the Springfield [Mass.] college of physical education, where he wasn't a varsity basketball player, but was on the football team. He coached at Bordentown Military academy in New Jersey and St. Luke's school in Philadelphia before coming to Morton in 1922. His first year he had a team in the University of Chicago tournament, but it was put out in the second round by Tilden. He's married and has two "future basketball" players, Jack, aged 2, and H. Karl Jr., aged 5.

Tilden Swim Team Wins St. Louis Meet

St. Louis, Mo., April 2.—(AP)—Tilden Tech High school of Chicago, won the Washington university interscholastic swimming meet here tonight. The Chicagoans scored 40 points. Danville, Ill., with 30 points, was second.

WHALEN TO BOX THOMPSON.

San Francisco, Cal., April 2.—(AP)—Russ Whalen, Chicago boxer, who has been having a run of successful bouts in southern California, has been matched with Young Jack Thompson, Negro lightweight of Los Angeles, for a ten round bout here Friday night.

English Soccer Eleven Defeats Scotland, 2 to 1

GLASGOW, Scotland, April 2.—(AP)—England defeated Scotland in an intersectional football match at Hampden Park today, 2 to 1.

WIDE RACES TO WORLD'S RECORD AT MILE AND HALF

Clips Nurmi's Mark by 1 3-5 Seconds.

New York, April 2.—[Special.]—The Nordic supremacy myth became a fact on the floor of the 102nd regiment armory tonight when Edvin Wide of Sweden ran to a new world's indoor record for one and a half miles. The Swedish school master taught a lesson to all those who have been looking a little askance at his unfulfilled boasts in previous meets by lopping one and three-fifths seconds off his record of 6:39 2-5, which Paavo Nurmi set on Jan. 28, 1925.

No more decisive victory has been scored this season than that of Wide over Willie Goodwin, America's national two mile champion, and Elmer Sanborn and Frank Bayley of the New York A. C., and William Ruckel, of the Millrose A. A. Wide lapped them all. He beat Goodwin by almost a hundred yards.

Runs on Unbanked Track.

Wide's performance was made before a crowd of more than 4,000 persons who attended the first track and field meet of the New York lodge No. 1 of the B. P. O. Elks.

If ever a man's face wore a "win or bust" expression it was Wide's. He won and did not bust, for he bowed coolly and calmly to the plaudits of the 4,000 when the announcement of a new world's record was made.

There were few who gave Wide much of a chance to break the record before the race. The reasons were three in number. He had little competition to expect from Goodwin, who was best of the field, and he had to run without spikes in his shoes and on an unbanked track. That Wide broke the record under these conditions was little short of sensational.

Leads All the Way.

Wide took the lead at the start and was never in danger. Goodwin was within three yards of his heels for a mile, at which Wide was timed in 4:25 1-5. The armory track measures eight laps to the mile. At the end of the first of the last four laps Goodwin was ten yards behind. He was thirty behind two laps from the finish, and sixty behind one lap from the finish. At the end Wide had lengthened his margin to nearly a hundred yards. The Swede's fractional times follow: Quarter, 1:02 4-5; half, 2:10; three-quarters, 3:18 2-5; mile, 4:25 1-5; mile and a quarter, 5:33 4-5.

Dr. H. E. Timm of South Shore was high gun for the day. He broke 96 targets out of a possible 100.

Cambridge to Send Track Team to Penn Relay Meet

Philadelphia, Pa., April 2.—[U. P.]—Lord David Burghley, England's best hurdler, will be the star member of a Cambridge university team that will compete in the Pennsylvania relay carnival here on April 29 and 30, the management announced today. Four other members of the team are G. C. Weightman Smith, T. C. Livingstone-Learmouth, H. P. Bowler, and J. O. Richardson.

One-Arm Athlete Looms as Hurling Ace at Boston U.

Boston, Mass., April 2.—[Special.]—Boston university has a one-armed pitcher who gives promise of being as famous in the collegiate world as One-Arm Daley was in the National league. He is Francis Burns of Charlestown.

This is Burns' first year on the squad. Although he lacks the ability to oust Don McDonald, star of the pitching staff, his remarkable progress is enough to warrant his retention on the team. He is being groomed by Coach Gaw to take his regular turn in the box and has been receiving plenty of work pitching to the batters.

He has a fair hook and a mighty fine fast ball that fairly zips across once he gets warmed up. He is fast and shifty on his feet and covers his position in fine style. When in high school he captained both the basketball and football teams and his former coach, Bill Ford, declares he never had a more courageous or willing player under him during his régime as coach of the Bunker Hill school.

Young Burns was born with his physical handicap, but it never held him back from participation in athletics from the time he was able to toddle down to the Sullivan Square playground. Besides being the leading athlete in the freshman class Burns is a fine scholar, and captured many high honors during his four years at Charlestown High school.

GOVERNOR BARS STRIBLING BOUT IN ALABAMA

Montgomery, Ala., April 2.—(AP)—After Gov. Graves had announced today that he would not permit the boxing match here April 11 between Tommy Stribling, Atlanta, and "Tiny" Herman, Portland, Ore., Promoter Grantham said he would stage the bout either on the government reservation at Maxwell field or at Columbus, Ga.

The governor told newspapermen that such a bout would be illegal in this state and added, "There will be no Stribling-Herman or other prize fight in Montgomery or elsewhere in Alabama."

CHRYSLER

Now 4th of World's Greatest Companies

Swept past all but three in dollar volume by public endorsement

MOTOR car figures for the last six months of last year and the first few months of this, register an amazing reversal of public opinion.

After three years Chrysler has been swept by popular approval from twenty-seventh to fourth place—led only by one great independent manufacturer and by two units of a corporate group.

The Chrysler watchword from the very first has been emphasis upon quality rather than quantity—but quantity has rolled up in ever increasing volume as a result of this outstanding Chrysler quality.

In the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, after only three years of public history, Chrysler has been swept in recent months past all but two individual cars which are units in a corporate group of seven cars.

No such realignment has taken place since automobiles were first built; and yet the process is strictly in line with the public disposition to approve and admire individual initiative, to recognize and reward engineering progressiveness and valorous disregard for out-worn traditions.

Because nothing like it has ever happened before in the history of motor cars, the moral is so plain that there is nothing left for the discriminating buyer to do but learn through actual riding and personal experience why Chrysler has registered this amazing advance.

The four great Chrysler cars are themselves the strongest evidence of the new standards and new qualities of performance and long life which have brought about such an amazing readjustment in America's greatest manufacturing industry.

N. A. A. U. SWIM MEET ATTRACTS NATION'S STARS

Weissmuller, Laufer, and Spence to Compete.

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Stars of the swimming world, several of whom are certain to be members of next year's American Olympic team, will compete in the National A. A. U. indoor men's senior swimming championships to be held in the pools of the C. A. A. and I. A. C. on Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday nights. These championships, which will be held under the joint auspices of the two Michigan avenue clubs, are open to the public.

Topping the list is Johnny Weissmuller of the I. A. C., who won six events in the Central A. A. U. indoor championships and who is regarded as the fastest swimmer in the world. Johnny will compete in all free style events and relays. His presence in so many contests makes the Tri-color club team a strong favorite.

Laufer, Spence to Compete.

Walter Laufer of the Cincinnati Y. M. C. A., champion in the back stroke, will defend his title, while Walter Spence of the Brooklyn Y. M. C. A. will be here to compete in the 220 yard breast stroke, which was won last year by Rademacher of Germany. C. B. Brainerd of the C. A. A. should be a strong contender for the title in this event.

Al White of the Olympic club of San Francisco will not be on hand to defend his titles in the high and low spring board diving. Pete Des Jarden of Florida, the national outdoor diving champion, will arrive today to prepare for both diving events. Elder Halvorsen of the C. A. A. and Colbath of Northwestern university are other possibilities, while the Cincinnati Y. M. C. A., 400 yard relay champion will be present to defend its honors.

The championship committee has eliminated the 50 yard free style swim and plunge for distance from the regular list of events. In place of these contests a medley 300 yard relay has been substituted. In this race, the first swimmers will cover 100 yards by breast stroke, the second century by back stroke and the third 100 yards, free style.

Meet Opens at C. A. A.

The competition will open at the C. A. A. on Tuesday night when the 100 yards free style swim, low spring board diving and 300 yards medley relay will be held. On the following night, the 400 yards relay, 220 yards breast stroke, and 150 yards back stroke will be held at the same place. The 220 yards free style, 300 yards individual medley and preliminaries in water polo will be held in the I. A. C. pool on Thursday night. On Friday night, the 500 yards free style swim, high spring board diving and finals in water polo will be conducted.

In the water polo competition the New York A. C., Detroit A. C., University of Chicago, I. A. C., and C. A. A. will be represented by teams. The C. A. A. is the present champion.

In the individual events the winners will be rewarded with five points, second place with three points, and third with one. Relay races will be scored 10, 6, and 2 for first, second, and third places respectively. The water polo champion will be rewarded with 15 points, second with 9, and third with 3.

John T. Taylor, chairman of the National A. A. U. championship swimming committee, will be referee and starter.

READY TO ATTACK SWIM MARKS

RALPH BREYER. C. B. BRAINERD. JOHNNY WEISSMULLER.

These are among the nationally known swimmers who will compete in the N. A. A. U. championships at the Illinois A. C. and Chicago A. A. pools this week. The meet openss Tuesday night.

Detroit Beats Binghamton for Y. M. C. A. Basket Title

Buffalo, N. Y., April 2.—(AP)—Detroit retained its championship of international Y. M. C. A. basketball by defeating Binghamton, N. Y., 24 to 18, here tonight. Oak Park won third place.

33 TEAMS ENTER RELAY CARNIVAL AT MARQUETTE U.

Milwaukee, Wis., April 2.—[Special.]—With a month remaining before entries close, thirty-three representative schools from five states already have been entered in the fifth annual Marquette university national high school relay carnival to be held in the Marquette stadium Saturday, May 7.

Last year the Marquette relays attracted a field of forty schools, so that Athletic Director Conrad M. Jennings, in charge of the program, is optimistic over this year's chances and is of the opinion that all previous records will be broken. He especially has been encouraged by the number of newcomers to the carnival.

SWEETSER WILL NOT COMPETE IN BRITISH AMATEUR

Asheville, N. C., April 2.—[U. P.]—Jess Sweetser, who won the British amateur golf championship last year, will not return to England this summer to defend his title, he said here today.

He told friends he will enter only one major tournament, the national amateur championship. He was prevented from competing in this event last year by a breakdown following his victory in the British amateur event.

Sweetser came to Asheville last fall and has been recuperating in the mountains of western North Carolina.

CAMBRIDGE WINS FROM OXFORD IN RACE ON THAMES

Yankee Oarsman Stars for Losing Crew.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, April 2.—Making a thrilling spurt over the last mile Cambridge won the university boat race classic in the River Thames this afternoon by three lengths in 20:14.

Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin headed the 100,000, including cockneys, flappers, beggars, preachers and country squires, who jammed the four mile towpath bordering the Thames as spectators of Great Britain's most important scholastic sporting event.

H. T. KINGSBURY.

Fourth Straight for Cambridge.

This marked the fourth straight victory for Cambridge, which was heavily backed to win. Oxford gave a desperate battle, its heavier and stronger crew leading for the first two miles in the nip and tuck race.

On the final half of the course Cambridge's superior watermanship and better and smoother rowing style sent their shell gradually to the lead, especially during the third mile, when the choppy water was badly negotiated by the Oxford stalwarts. The final dash, executed in splendid rythm, gave a victory of style over brawn.

American Stars for Oxford.

Oxford won the toss, which gave it the choice of the inside course, gaining the advantage on the first mile. Both crews were badly distressed at the finish. The brilliant effort of H. T. Kingsbury, the American, who was number six in the Oxford shell, accounted largely for his crew's lead in the early part of the race.

Kingsbury last year was captain of the crew at Yale. This was the first time in his eight years of scholastic competition that he ever rowed with a loser.

The La Grange team piled up 51½ points, New Trier being second with 42½, and Proviso was third with 26. Cave of La Grange was high point man with 13¼ points.

They Wind Up Jones; Then He Clicks Off Par, Par, and Par

BY HARLAND ROHM.

"They wound up the mechanical man of golf and sent him clicking around the East Lake Golf course," wrote Kerr Petrie, Carnoustie born golf writer, of Bobby Jones' magnificent round of 66 in the Southern open. The phrase nearly sent O. B. Keeler, Bobby's confidant and biographer, into hysterical giggles, for it did most aptly describe not one round of Jones' golf but all of them.

It isn't birdies or eagles that has won Bobby his five major golf championships—the national amateur twice, the national open twice and the British open once—but an eternal par, par, par, as sure and as mechanical as a machine. All that's necessary to complete the illusion of another Frankenstein creation, a golf machine, while watching Jones play golf is a clicking sound.

Shoots Par Consistently.

As a sample, take the figures of his rounds in his latest victory over his home course to show how Bobby takes exactly the number of strokes the golf architect planned a golfer should. Of the 72 holes, Jones played 53 of them in par and ten in a stroke more than par, which he almost counteracted by putting nine birdies on his cards. On not one hole of the 72 did he take more than one stroke over par.

He made 14 pars on each of the first and second rounds, 13 on the third, and 12 on the fourth. On the first and third rounds he played three holes in one over par, on the last round four, and on the third none. The first round had one birdie, the second four, and the third and fourth two each.

Checking it from another angle, on the four trips over the first nine holes Bobby's card shows three birdies, four one over par, and 27 pars. On the in nine he got six birdies, six one over, and 28 pars. His variation in score between the first and second nines was never more than two, his 37—35—72 on his first round. John Golden, who finished tied for second with Johnny Farrell, varied four strokes, 33—37—70, and Farrell varied one more in his 39—34—73.

At Peak Form on Fifteenth.

Checking Jones' scores hole by hole only drives home the awesome perfection of his golf game. On six holes—the first, second, third, fourth, fifth, tenth, and seventeenth—he never varied from that eternal par. His greatest variation on any hole was on the long fifteenth, where in four times he made three birdies and one par. On five others he varied from par twice; on the seventh one birdie and once a stroke over; on the eighth, twice a stroke over; on the fourteenth and sixteenth, twice a stroke over on each, and on the eighteenth, two birdies.

A percentage comparison with Farrell and Golden shows how the pros shot wild far oftener, but how they made it up, while Bobby rolled serenely along, making up a stroke here and there, but seldom wasting one. Complete cards for Farrell's and Golden's five rounds are not at hand, but Golden's best three and Farrell's best four will make the comparison fair.

On seventy-two holes Farrell scored 49 pars, 9 birdies, and 14 one or two over par, and Golden on 54 holes, 34 pars, 10 birdies, and 10 one or two strokes over. The percentages of pars are: Jones, 73.6 per cent; Farrell, 68.6 per cent, and Golden, 62.9 per cent. These variations show Jones' advantage, but they aren't so great. The figures on birdies, however, begin to show the greater divergence, which made a difference of eight strokes in the final total.

CHICAGO DISTRICT GOLF CLUBS SET TOURNEY DATES

Conversation on such golf flavored Chicago district names as Hullabaloo, Hy Jinx, Jamboree, and Silver Tassels is resumed. The Chicago District association has announced the dates for most of its invitational tournaments, beginning with an unnamed one at Sunset Ridge, June 16, and ending with Butterfield's Columbus day, Oct. 12. In between are all the old favorites which have been such bang-up good times in other years. Dates of the others are:

June 21-22, Bob o' Link Hullabaloo; July 14, Skokie Kiltie; July 19, Edgewater Hy Jinx; July 27, Exmoor Jamboree; Aug. 3, Ridge Powwow; Aug. 8, Ridgemoor Jabber-Walk; Aug. 4, Evanston Rodeo [tentative]; Aug. 10, North Shore Silver Tassels; Aug. 19-20, Glen Oak Roundup; Aug. 20-21, Elmhurst Blowout; Aug. 31, Hinsdale Buggy Ride.

The Jackson Park Golf club held open house at 1545 East 63d street last night and got in a bit of preseason skull practice yesterday on slow motion pictures and a demonstration by Joe Novak, California pro.

Cruickshank Tops Golf Pros in Trips to Cash Register

Pinehurst, N. C., April 2.—(AP)—Bobby Cruickshank, diminutive New York professional, has garnered an unofficial golf title—champion of the 1926-27 cash tournament circuit. He succeeds "Wild Bill" Mehlhorn.

During the last winter the little Scot probably has played in more tournaments than any other leading professional and found the way almost paved with gold and titles, netting him more than $11,000 and four championships.

The ordinary golf dub will marvel to learn that Cruickshank, in winning the titles, carded only three strokes too many to have a record of even fours.

He took the golden Los Angeles open with a 282, going ten strokes higher to capture the Texas open at San Antonio with a 292. At Hot Springs the little Scottish golfer gained the south central crown with 296, a relatively high score for tournaments this winter, while here he beat Walter Hagen to the north and south purse with a 285.

OTTAWA SWAMPS CANADIENS, 4-0, IN PLAYOFF TILT

Bruins' 6, N. Y. Rangers in Scoreless Tie.

MONTREAL, April 2.—(AP)—Ottawa Senators, leaders of the international section play in the National Hockey league this season, shut out the Montreal Canadiens, 4 to 0, tonight in the first of a two game series in the Stanley cup playoffs for the world championship.

The victory virtually clinched Ottawa's place in the finals against the American sectional champions, as the second of the two game series will be played on the Senators' ice Monday night. Total goals scored in the two games will decide the series winner.

Ottawa Starts Fast.

Ottawa played a whirlwind game against the Canadiens, jaded and legweary after fierce preliminary series victory over the Montreal Maroons. The Senators slammed home three goals shortly after the game opened, when Denneny, Kilrea, and Hooley Smith filtered through the Canadien defense in spectacular sorties. Nighbor added the final goal in the second period, and from that point on Ottawa was content to mass on the defense and smash the desperate attacks of Howie, Morenz, and Gardiner, stars of the Canadien offensive.

A crowd of 13,500 saw the contest.

BRUINS, RANGERS TIE.

Boston, April 2.—(AP)—The Boston Bruins and New York Rangers battled through sixty minutes of rough hockey to a scoreless tie here tonight in the first encounter of a two game playoff series that will determine the American division contender for the Stanley cup and the world's professional title. There was no overtime, as the total number of goals for the series determines the winner.

HORNETS BEAT MILLERS.

Duluth, Minn., April 2.—(AP)—The Duluth Hornets gained a big edge in the playoff series for the American Hockey league title here tonight, scoring a hard fought 3 to 0 victory over the Minneapolis Millers.

Marathon Golfer Lost Somewhere in Texas

Mobile, Ala., April 2.—(AP)—Joe Grahame, Mobile plumber, who left here to drive a golf ball to the Pacific coast, has dropped from sight somewhere in Texas, and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Grahame of Crichton, are worried over his safety. He was in the habit of writing or telegraphing his parents every day or so and kept in touch with the Mobile Register, but since March 22, when he telegraphed from Houston, Tex., nothing has been heard from him.

KRUG SIGNS TO BOX SHADE HERE ON APRIL 12 CARD

Rosenbloom Is Forced to Cancel Bout.

Phil Krug of Newark, N. J., has been substituted for Maxie Rosenbloom of New York to meet Dave Shade of California in the windup of James Mullen's next boxing show at the Coliseum on April 12. They will box ten rounds to a decision and make weight at 158 pounds at 3 p. m. on the day of the fight.

Promoter Mullen originally had signed Rosenbloom, who was scheduled to meet Frankie Schoell in Buffalo tomorrow night. Because of repairs being made on the building, the match was set back a week. Rosenbloom told the promoter he had signed with Mullen for April 12 and he even took the matter up with the New York boxing commission, which ruled that Rosenbloom must fulfill the Buffalo engagement or face an indefinite suspension.

Holds Verdict Over Shade.

The local promoter then scanned the middleweight division and decided upon Krug, who won a newspaper decision over Shade in 1924. Phil also is credited with a similar verdict over Mickey Walker, the present middleweight champion when Mickey was the welterweight king. In addition to these battlers, Krug has defeated Lou Bogash, Bobby Ward, Dave Rosenberg, and others. He will arrive in Chicago on Tuesday to finish training.

The signed articles of King Tut of Minneapolis, who will meet Billy Petrolle of Fargo, N. D., in the other ten rounder, were received yesterday. Tut has been a sensation on the coast, where he has defeated such fighters as Tommy Cello, Jackie Fields, Danny Kramer, Doc Snell, and Young Jack Thompson. He is a club fighter who can punch with either hand.

Lenard to Box Monroe.

Interest in local boxing circles this week will center on the show at the Ashland Boulevard auditorium on Friday night. Henry Lenard of South Chicago, who defeated Andre Routis, the French featherweight, in a recent Coliseum show, will meet Frankie Monroe, the California Mexican, in the main event. Harry Forbes of Columbus, who won a ten round decision over Harold Smith of the stockyards recently, will clash with Tommy Ryan of McKeesport, Pa., in the semi-windup. Three other bouts complete the card.

Criqui Beaten by Brown in 10 Round Bout at Paris

PARIS, April 2.—(AP)—Al Brown of Panama won a point decision tonight over Eugene Criqui of France, former featherweight champion of the world. The bout was ten rounds and was held at the Velodrome.

SPEAKING OF SPORTS

BY DON MAXWELL.

Last winter the spotlight shone brightly on the American league, its scandals and its whitewashing. The National league chuckled. Now the junior league is to have a chance for the last laugh.

Unless John Heydler proves an extremely clever diplomat it seems likely that the Hornsby problem is to cause the league no little embarrassment.

Sam Breadon, owner of the St. Louis Cardinals, you will recall, thought that Rogers Hornsby's salary demands were too high. After much wrangling the manager who had led the St. Louis club to a world's championship was placed on the trading block. McGraw acquired him in a deal for Frankie Frisch.

Subsequently it developed that Hornsby owned a large block of stock in the St. Louis club. Folks began wondering what would happen should he still own this stock when the season's opening found Hornsby in a Giant uniform. Then President Heydler issued his famous manifesto. Hornsby must sell the stock. The National league would not tolerate syndicate baseball.

The latter designation implies an unholy association between two rival ball clubs. In Mr. Hornsby's case it would mean that a highly featured player on one team had keen financial interest in the success of another. The baseball customers, innocent though they be, might be astute enough to give a thought or two to Mr. Hornsby's sincerity when he was opposing a team which he partly owned.

President Heydler's ruling everywhere was greeted with approval.

The head of the National league didn't know how awkward the situation was to become.

Before one can sell a large block of stock in a baseball club some one must be found willing to buy. That's a simple business theorem that even a baseball fan can grasp. In Hornsby's case Sam Breadon was the potential customer. And Mr. Breadon is not the easiest man to bamboozle as several ball players will testify.

When Hornsby asked $105 a share for his stock Mr. Breadon laughed. He didn't disparage the value of Cardinal stock, but he couldn't think of paying more than $60 a share. And there the deal has hung. Neither Mr. Breadon nor Mr. Hornsby are particularly in love with each other. That has added to the problem of fixing the stock's worth.

Major league baseball opens on April 12. And it's about time that Hornsby did something about the stock. There's a hint he doesn't mean to do anything in John McGraw's present stand.

"I'll play Rogers whether he sells that stock or not," the Giant leader is quoted. "His ownership of the stock is a business matter, personal with him. We traded Frisch for Hornsby in good faith and we can't see any reason for losing Rogers' services."

Bolshevik talk.

By way of emphasis McGraw threatens to take the Hornsby case into court if Heydler persists in his order barring him from play.

Heydler has called a meeting of his board of directors and offers to attempt to mediate between Hornsby and Breadon. The New York club is powerful in influence, but public opinion is stronger. And surely the public will have cause to wonder at the sincerity of baseball's leaders should McGraw succeed in flouting Heydler's wise ruling.

Outside of his record as a two year old the fact that Earl Sande is to have the mount is leading a great many turf followers to favor Osmand in the Kentucky Derby.

Sande still remains a king among jockeys. His knowledge of horses, his uncanny knack of getting the best out of his mount, his nerve and experience combine to make him one of the most successful of riders. Nature provides his only handicap. Sande of recent years has had difficulty in keeping his weight down. A late report says that he now tips the scales at 118. That is light enough for the Derby, where all the three year olds run with an impost of 126 pounds, but it's about six pounds too heavy for Sande to get many chances to ride.

A number of the smaller eastern college chiefs have adopted resolutions condemning the athletic scholarship. That is likely as far as the movement will go.

It is difficult to draw a line between the scholarship awarded a student who makes high grades in Latin or physics and the scholarship given the mediocre student who endowed with a splendid physique makes a high record in athletics. A college education should be as useful to him as to the Latin shark.

Many of his kind have done more for the colleges.

K. OF C. QUINTETS RENEW BATTLE FOR TITLE TODAY

Four Games at West Side Armory Gym.

Eight teams, survivors of the fifteen qualifiers for the final round, will clash in four games today to determine the semi-finalists in the Knights of Columbus basketball league championship series at the 132d Regiment armory, Madison and Rockwell streets. Three represent the south division, and two the west. The others are from the central, north and southwest divisions.

Santa Maria, champion of the southwest division, will clash with De La Salle, champion of the central section, in the opening game at 2 p. m. Santa Maria entered the second round on the strength of a bye, while the central division quintet qualified by upsetting De Soto in the first round.

Hennepin Meets Damen.

Hennepin and Damen, first and second place teams in the west division, will renew their feud in the second contest. Hennepin won the divisional title by beating Damen by two points in one of the most thrilling games of the year.

The third game will see the present league champions, Marquette of the north division, in action against Auburn Park of the south section. Marquette, winner of the league title in 1924 and 1926, has won thirteen consecutive final round games without a defeat and is a favorite to repeat this season.

Semi-Finals Thursday.

The final contest will be another divisional battle between the first and second place winners of the south section—Calumet and Aquinas.

Winners in today's games will be paired in the semi-finals Thursday night. The losers will compete in a consolation round for the last four places.

In the WAKE of the NEWS

PUBLICITY ON "FLUNKS."

EVER and anon we read of some athlete who has become ineligible scholastically for varsity competition. The more prominent the athlete the better story it is. The Wake always has resented this publicity without being able to suggest a remedy.

Scholastic difficulties are not confined to athletes. Thousands of near-students are sent home every year because they have not maintained college standards. But it is only the athletes who are pilloried before the public. That is unfair. Indeed, it often happens that representing alma mater has contributed to the temporary delinquency. If a good student, the athlete makes up his work. If a poor student, he draws the blue envelope just as other poor students do.

Possibly some one may crack about occupants of glass houses. Newspapers will publish the news when they have it. Correspondents will get the news if possible. Some colleges are able to exercise a censorship and prevent such publication. Those in or near large cities find it more difficult.

Now The Wake would prefer to see this practice stopped simply in the interest of fair play. If that cannot be, we urge all sports followers to remember that when the below grade fate of some athlete is announced, there are hundreds more in the same boat, and to form their opinions accordingly.

Poker Variations.

Dear Harvey: "Roll your own" derives its name from the fact that the dealer allows a player to name his own wild card and all four of that denomination are wild. Of course, you do not declare your wild card until the betting is over and the hands exposed.

The dealer may allow you to name your wild card in the hand alone, on the table only, or in either place.

The cards are dealt all faces down, with five faced down in the center. They are turned one at a time, the dealer having stated where the wild card must be, and the betting is done, as in stud, after each card is faced in the center.

Of course with so many cards wild, the hands run to fives most of the time. In our doctors' game the other night there were two straight flushes, one set of five kings and one set of five aces. It's fast and in keeping with this "jazz" age. R. H. W.

The Sparta soccer team is in St. Louis today, where the Bohemians will meet the Ben Millers in the western semi-finals of the national cup competition.

Sisters Make Family Affair of Net Finals

Brookline, Mass., April 2.—(AP)—The Misses Sarah and Mianne Fenderer of Brookline, 14 and 16 year old sisters, won two girls' national indoor tennis titles here today. Sarah defeated her older sister, 6—3, 6—2, to take the singles crown and then teamed with Mianne to defeat another sister, Lee, and Marie Fenderer of Englewood, N. J., in the doubles final, 6—3, 6—3, 8—6. Sarah and Mianne already held the girls' outdoor doubles title.

Even the defeated sister, Lee, had some honors, for it was her handling of her sister's drives and her volleying with unusual force and accuracy that the fore-court which tied the score after the first set had been lost and forced the match through a deuce third set.

An Engineering Prediction Come True

What Moon Engineers Predicted	What Moon Engineers Did
A demand for cars that withstand continuous high speeds—as the result of three billions spent in the last three years on hard, fast highways.	They designed high-speed, new type "6" and "8" motors that drive at continuous speeds of 60 and 70 miles per hour.
Lightning acceleration, perfect braking control.	Low safety chassis perfectly balanced with long slenderizing lines, equipped with perfected four-wheel hydraulic brakes for quick, sure, non-skid control.
The need of a new-type steering gear to insure ease in handling and parking.	Patented steering gear that gives undreamed-of ease even in close-to-the-curb parking.
Big-car roominess, compactly designed.	Bodies that hold five passengers with perfect comfort. New safety vision and many other improvements.
Individual body design to meet improved personal tastes in color, ease, grace of line.	An individual style, still unmatched for distinction, that has been the pattern for many 1927 cars of more expensive make.
Better quality, within and without, at lower prices.
Now read how Moon met these predictions well ahead of their day, in sixes and eights designed with a vision of future needs.

WEE SCHALK NOW CAN SHOW HE'S CEREBRAL GIANT

Faces Season Without Good Reserves.

BY EDWARD BURNS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Shreveport, La., April 2.—Ray Schalk, new White Sox manager, just about knows who will be in there battling for the Old Roman and the honor of the south side when the American league season opens a week from Tuesday.

URBAN FABER.

If he could but count on that opening lineup for the entire season, Schalk might be whispering a few pennant phophecies. But big league baseball teams, particularly the Chicago White Sox, have a way of needing their reserve strength as the season rolls on. And the Sox reserve strength, aside from the pitchers, is negligible.

But until accidents start happening it is just as well to consider the possibilities immediately at hand. Here's a guess at the opening lineup in Cleveland, April 12: Ward, 2d base; Kamm, 3d base; Barrett, center field; Falk, left field; Boone, right field; Sheely or Clancy, 1st base; Peckinpaugh, shortstop; Schalk, catcher; T. Blankenship or Thomas, pitcher.

Here's Another Possibility.

If the foregoing turns out to be a wrong guess the changes will be about as follows: Moore will play right field and will lead off, Ward batting fifth; Hunnefield will be at short, Grouse will catch and Faber will pitch. The first guess, based on conditions existent today, is by far the better of the two.

Regardless of who the pitchers may be on the opening day, the fans may rest assured they will see the following often throughout the season: Ted Rankenship, Al Thomas, Ted Lyons, right handers; Charley Barnabe and Bert Cole, left handers. Urban Faber, the old master, will be just as good as in recent seasons, according to the present outlook, but he won't be asked to throw quite as often as he did a few years back. It now appears that Red will be serving them up about once a week.

George Connally has the same rubber arm as formerly and will be relied upon to sustain his reputation as the best relief pitcher in the American league. The Sergeant has ambitions to start games, but that entails a problematical situation. His relief status is well established.

Kamm Fixture at Third.

Capt. Kamm is a fixture at third as long as his health holds out. His new responsibilities have stimulated his pep and this should be his best year so far in the majors.

No one will dislodge Ward at second and Falk in left field. The Chicago fans are going to be pleased with Ward's fielding and they are going to find Falk one of the ranking outfielders and hitters of baseball. He is touted to surpass his .345 mark which he made playing in every game in 1926.

Barrett is going strong and has broken up several games with his hitting during the training season. Boone, the ponderous slugger, has been something of an in and outer. Although inconsistent now, he had the stuff to establish an all time seasonal record for batting in the Texas league a few years ago and has shown flashes which indicate he may get going in a big way for the Sox. If he fails, Randolph Moore, the kid from the East Texas league, may step right into a steady job. The youngster seems to have the ability to look over wild pitching and has been successful as a lead off man in the games he has played.

Clancy After Sheely's Job.

For the first time in several years there is a question about first base. Sheely is the same masterful fielder of old, but his hitting has not been what it should be and his slowness on the base lines is considered a greater handicap than ever before, now that Bud Clancy, snappy left hander, seems ready for the big show. Sheely isn't through, but he'll have to attend to his knitting so long as Clancy is around.

When Comiskey traded for old Roger Peckinpaugh most everybody started worrying about his advanced years and the durability of his legs. The veteran has shown no weakness to justify such fears and with a fair run of luck should be at shortstop for more than 100 games.

Bill Hunnefield, the rip snorting Pennsylvanian, will be raring to go at any infield post except first base. Bob Way, a rookie, probably will be held for a time and there'll be a second string of pitchers which will include, for a while at least, Elmer Jacobs, Homer Blankenship, Leslie Cox, and Joe Brown.

R. CONGER, AMES STAR, TO COMPETE IN DRAKE RELAYS

Des Moines, Ia., April 2.—[Special.]—The performance of Capt. Raymond Conger, Iowa State's great runner, is expected to be one of the big features of the eighteenth annual Drake track and field carnival here, April 29 and 30.

Conger's best time in the half mile this season was made in the Rice institute games when he turned the 880 yards, running as anchor man on the Ames medley team, in 1 minute 55 7-10 seconds. His best time for the mile is something under 4 minutes 20 seconds, done in competition against Lloyd Hahn, crack Boston A. A. runner, who recently negotiated the 1,760 yards in the fast time of 4 minutes 12 1-5 seconds, one-fifth of a second slower than the world's record.

Conger is competing for his last time under the banner of the Cyclones. He will graduate in June.

WAKEFORD CAGERS WIN.

Wakeford basketball team defeated the B. B. Bs, 20 to 12, last night at the Division street Y. M. C. A. to win the 115 pound A. A. F. championship. Both teams played a fine game, with Wakeford having a 2 point lead at the end of the first half.

JOHN MOSTIL RETURNS HOME

Mostil Home; Says He Can Play in May

BY FRANK SCHREIBER.

Johnny Mostil came home yesterday resolved to be a better baseball player than he ever has been.

The star outfielder arrived early in the morning from the White Sox training camp at Shreveport, La. He hopped off the train with agility which belied the fact that he has been an invalid for more than three weeks. As soon as he had his feet planted on the platform of the 63d street station he began talking about his return to the diamond.

"I'll be in there by the middle of next month," he said, as he made the rounds among friends who were on hand to meet him. "I'm all right now, but of course I need a little work to unkink my muscles," he added.

Looks in Good Health.

And Johnny looked the part. He is tanned and robust. His spirit is good and he's "itching to get back in the monkey suit," as he puts it. In other words, he wants to play baseball.

The only traces of Mostil's injuries are a couple of bandages. He has a bandage on his left wrist and another on his left leg.

After greeting his friends at the station Mostil with his brother Ed went to Comiskey park with Harry Grabiner, secretary of the Sox, where he showed interest in the rebuilding of the stands.

Shows He Can Handle Bat.

While at the park Mostil picked up a bat and demonstrated that he'll be able to swing the stick when he gets back in the lineup. He gave an exhibition in the Sox office to show the writers and photographers that the tendons in his hands and arms were not injured and that he'll be able to take his full swing.

Mostil also visited Dr. Philip Kreuscher, the White Sox physician, who will have charge of the Sox outfielder until he's ready to play ball again. Dr. Kreuscher said he would allow Mostil to start light workouts this week, possibly tomorrow.

When the posing for pictures and talking was over, Johnny jumped into an automobile and started for his home in Whiting, Ind., to greet his mother.

Decatur, Ill., April 2.—(AP)—Fifty-two Illinois high schools have sent Director L. T. Johnson of Millikin university their acceptances of invitations to compete in the seventh annual Millikin prep relay carnival here on April 23.

The Inquiring Reporter

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

The Tribune will pay $5 for each question accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to "The Inquiring Reporter," Chicago Tribune. For today's question Mrs. John Kaveny, 1711 West 80th street, was awarded $5.

The Question.

Which do you enjoy more, a boxing bout between heavyweights or little fellows?

Where Asked.

Roosevelt road at Michigan avenue.

The Answers.

Milton Clarke, La Grange, Ill., chauffeur.—A match between heavyweights. There is more hard hitting and that's what every true ring fan enjoys. The little fellows put up fast bouts but they lack the punching power and because of that they do not appeal to me.

Herbert Strobel, 5951 South Hermitage avenue, police officer.—From the lightweight class down. Few heavyweights have the cleverness, speed staying power of the lighter boxers. The best exhibition I ever saw was at the Coliseum recently when Bud Taylor and Tony Canzoneri fought that draw for the bantamweight crown.

J. Seahill, 52 East Roosevelt road, restaurant proprietor.—The little fellow is more game and affords me greater thrills. I don't like to see knockouts and it may be because of this that I favor the lighter boxers. Few heavyweight shows are good, anyway. I don't think they would be a success in Chicago when there are so many good little fellows around.

H. Aiken, 1226 East Forty-sixth street, chauffeur.—I prefer a bantamweight match. The boys in this class have cleverness and speed and always put on a good exhibition. I think the majority of fans like to watch a boxer of this type and not one who carries dynamite in his gloves and ends a fight in the first or second round.

J. N. Steinbach, 710 South Second avenue, Maywood, Ill., cashier.—The little fellows are my favorites. I think the heavyweight bouts lack action and seldom give an exhibition like Taylor and Canzoneri at the Coliseum recently. There are few heavyweights of ability.

MIDWEST LEAGUE VOTES TOMORROW ON WEAVER CASE

Buck Weaver's status as a member of Bill Niesen's semi-pro team again will be considered by the Midwest league at its meeting tomorrow night at the Bismark hotel at 8 o'clock. A vote of the league members will be taken and the question definitely settled. Indications are that the former White Sox star, who was black listed after the 1919 scandal, will be allowed to play here this summer.

New clubs which wish to book games and other organizations which have not yet registered are requested to send delegates. It is hoped that a plan may be worked out whereby division titles may be settled and a league championship definitely decided at the close of the season.

Orbindos Victor in London Race; Pays 4-1

LONDON, April 2.—(AP)—Orbindos, owned by B. Coulson, won the Newbury spring cup today. Melon was second and Gateb was third. The betting odds on Orbindos were 4 to 1; Melon, 11 to 2, and Gateb, 8 to 1. Eleven ran.

CARDINALS SLAM YANKEE HURLERS FOR 20 TO 10 WIN

Savannah, Ga., April 2.—(AP)—Regaining their batting eyes, the St. Louis Cardinals pounded four pitchers for twenty-two hits today and defeated the New York Yankees, 20 to 10.

The game was featured by home runs. For the Cardinals, Snyder hit one in the fourth with the bases filled, Hafey got one in the fifth with two on and Holm hit for the circuit in the sixth with no one on. For the Yankees, Reuther hit a homer in the third with one on.

Twelve Cardinal batters faced Johnson and Giard in the fifth inning and scored nine runs. Bottomley hit a double and a single and Holm got two singles in that frame.

ROBINS TRIM INDIANS.

New Orleans, La., April 2.—(AP)—Joe Shaute blew up in the ninth after relieving Garland Buckeye in the seventh inning here today, and the Brooklyn Robins trampled on the Cleveland Indians, 8 to 3. Five hits in a row with two sacrifice flies and an error, beat the Indians after the game had gone into the final frame a 3 to 3 tie. Jess Petty and Jim Elliott, Brooklyn southpaws, held the Indians to four hits after the third inning.

HOUSTON, 3; PITTSBURGH, 2.

Houston, Tex., April 2.—(AP)—Tommy Taylor's double to left center scored Hock and Martin in the tenth inning of the second game with Pittsburgh here today and gave Houston a 3 to 2 victory over the major leaguers. Rhyne's error and a walk put the winning run on the bags.

Roy Mahaffey opened the game for the Pirates, and for five innings his fast ones kept the locals at bay. A bad throw by Martin in the first inning let in a Pirate run, and it was not until the tenth that Pittsburgh managed to score again.

DETROIT, 1; FORT WORTH, 0.

Fort Worth, Tex., April 2.—(AP)—A home run by Blue in the fifth inning gave the Detroit Tigers a 1 to 0 victory over the Fort Worth Panthers today. Whitehill and Johns, who twirled for Detroit, held the locals to two hits, while the Tigers touched Bird for seven.

MACKS BEAT PHILS.

Philadelphia, Pa., April 2.—(AP)—Branom, new first baseman, supplied the punch that gave the Philadelphia Athletics victory today in the first game of the city series with the Philadelphia Nationals, 3 to 1. The Phillies scored a run in the first inning on Baldwin's double, Gray's wild pitch and Williams' single and held the American leaguers scoreless until the eighth inning.

With two out, Eddie Collins singled, Baldwin booted Ty Cobb's grounder and Simmons walked, filling the bases. French singled, scoring Collins with the tying run and then Cobb and Simmons scored on Branom's single to center. Cobb got one hit out of four times up.

REDS BLANK MILLERS.

Decatur, Ala., April 3.—(AP)—Taking advantage of fielding errors and bunching hits off Malone, Owens and Hubbell, the Cincinnati Reds defeated the Minneapolis American association team, 6 to 0, today. Adolfo Luque, making his first appearance of the season, allowed the Millers three scattered safeties in five innings. Kolp, who pitched the last four, was no less effective, although he yielded one more hit than the Cuban.

FRENCH RUGBY TEAM WINS.

PARIS, April 2.—(AP)—France defeated England, 3 to 0, in their seventeenth meeting at rugby football today. It was France's first international victory of the year in the five cornered tournament with England, Wales, Scotland and Ireland.

KIECKHEFER AND REISELT TO OPEN PLAY TOMORROW

Former Champion Otto Reiselt's challenge match for the world's three cushion billiard championship won by Augie Kieckhefer in the tournament two months ago will begin in Reiselt hall tomorrow night at 8 o'clock. They will play five 60 point blocks for the championship.

Reiselt arrived yesterday and went to the Illinois Athletic club to practice his famed strategy and defense as means of stopping Kieckhefer's great shot making ability. Reiselt says he is in much better condition than in the tournament and is confident of capturing the title.

After the first block of the match tomorrow night, two blocks will be played daily at 2 and 9 o'clock, ending Wednesday evening. Play will be continuous, the balls spotted after each block, and play continuing from that position in the next block.

CRYSTAL GAZERS SEE KENTUCKY DERBY OPEN RACE

Field of 20 to 25 Starters Seems Probable.

BY FRENCH LANE.

An open race, a field of from 20 to 25 starters, with a possible victory for a long shot dark horse, is the way the Kentucky Derby shapes up six weeks in advance of its running on May 14.

EDWARD R. BRADLEY.

While 160 three year olds are still eligible, two in the original nomination list having died, the field at this time can by different forms of elimination be cut to 34 possible starters. In another week it can be trimmed to 30 or less, and by that time the fellow who each year offers to wager 5 to 1 you can't pick a Derby starter will step out of the picture.

Field Divided Into Two Groups.

This group of 34 candidates, any of which may get to the post, can be divided into two divisions. Eighteen of them can be placed in a class as those colts most likely to start. The sixteen others can be regarded as possible but doubtful starters. These groups are as follows:

LIKELY STARTERS.	POSSIBLE STARTERS
Afterglow	Buddie Bauer
Candy Blackbird	Bostonian
Bewithus	Canaan
Boo.	Enthusiastic Edward
Fred Jr.	General Lee
Justice F.	Jock
Kiev.	La Morte
Osmand.	Mr. Kirkwood
Point Breeze.	Nor'easter
Rip Rap.	Peter Peter
Royal Julian	Rolled Stocking
Scapa Flow	Sankari
Sweepster	Scotland
The Satrap	Willie K.
Terry	Fair Star
Valorous	Candy Queen
War Eagle
Woodlore

The 18 likely starters represent 14 owners, Harry Payne Whitney having two in the list, Edward R. Bradley two, Joseph E. Widener two, and Walter M. Jeffords two. And most of this quartet have one or more candidates in the possible starter list.

Winter Racing Cuts Starters.

Racing at the winter tracks has served to eliminate many of the candidates that have dropped by the wayside. At least 40 were tried at these southern testing grounds and found wanting. There is always that chance in racing that one of them may come to form suddenly and on Derby day step out and show his heels to those that are more highly touted. But that doesn't often happen.

Many others have gone the route that so many Derby candidates travel each year. They are backward in their conditioning and showing no ability at this stage of their training grind. A colt in shape on the day of the race should be well along toward top racing condition six weeks before the Derby is run.

Bradley Has Dark Horses.

While Boo's victory in the Louisiana Derby has caused many Derby followers to believe that this is to be another Bradley year, reports have come from Bradley's Idle Hour farm that Boo is not the stable's chief Derby reliance. Two of the best Bradley 3 year olds have not been to the races this winter. They are Bewithus and Buddy Bauer.

Afterglow and Whiskery, two of Harry Payne Whitney's candidates, are getting their Derby trials at Bowie. One or both may qualify to start in the big Kentucky race. But those close to Whitney turf affairs say that Volorious and Bonstonian are the colts which he is backing to win the Derby in his Eton blue and brown silks.

Contemplate Beats Tip Top 3 Lengths in Bowie Stake

Bowie, Md., April 2.—[Special.]—Splashing over a course deep in slop, the Flamingo farm's Contemplate carried the stable's cerise silks to victory in the Capitol handicap here this afternoon. A big crowd disregarded the drizzle, lining the rail as Church brought the 3 year old home in front, running easily at the finish.

Three were eliminated by the blue pencil from the Capitol, leaving a quartet to face the barrier for a poor start. Contemplate was shot right back after his nose second to Aucilla in the stake event of the opening day and the money poured in so fast that it was evident that a one horse race was expected.

Turkeys Too Wise; Becker Hunts in Vain

BY BOB BECKER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Tombigbee River, Miss., April 2.—Several young wild turkey gobblers, refusing to accept the challenge to fight a big tame gobbler, saved their skins this morning when all the arts of turkey calling were employed in the hope that we would get a shot at the big game birds which inhabit the swamps down here.

It was smart work on the part of the coming young swamp birds and no amount of insulting remarks flung through the swamp by our decoy bird could lure the young gobblers to strut their stuff and fight within shooting range.

It was long before daylight when Mister Charley routed us out of bed, as we had to be in the big swamp by the time the first streak of daylight showed in the east. A thin slice of a moon hung in the sky as we drove across the plantation toward the lowlands, where Ack, the colored assistant of the expedition, shouldered the tame decoy. Then we splashed and stumbled through the darkness toward the heart of the swamp.

Owls saluted the dawn with their dismal hootings and then the cardinals whistled. Shortly afterward we heard the first turkey hencall, "peet, peet." Mister Charley began to tune up his turkey call while Ack released the decoy from its box.

This old boy strutted, gobbled, and pranced around as he challenged every turkey within a half mile to do battle. From three different directions we heard the wild gobblers answer, but they were apparently young birds who had been taking their lickings from bigger and older birds, and hearing our husky, tame "tolk" they said, "Nothing doing; we'll give that heavyweight a wide berth."

Crouched behind a log, Mister Charley worked his wooden turkey decoy in masterful fashion, but no amount of coaxing nor any challenge of the live bird could lure those foxy gobblers into an arena. They stayed their distance, so we got no shots at the swamp kings.

Lessons in Bridge

Added interest was given to last week's radio game, broadcast from station W-G-N, by the fact that the contestants were four of New York City's most noted experts. Paired against Mr. Work and Mr. Whitehead were Sidney S. Lenz, called the champion of champions because of the number of whist and auction trophies he has accumulated, and John H. Smith, famous bridge player, publisher of Auction Bridge magazine and originator of radio bridge.

JOHN H. SMITH.

These were the hands:

Mr. Lenz, dealer, in the "south" position: Spades, 9, 7, 4; hearts, J, 8, 6; diamonds, 6, 4; clubs, Q, J, 10, 5, 4.

Mr. Work, "west": Spades, 3, 5, 2; hearts, 7, 5, 3; diamonds, A, K, Q, 3; clubs, 8, 6, 2.

Mr. Smith, "north": Spades, K, J, 3; hearts, A, 10, 9, 4; diamonds, 8, 7, 5; clubs, 9, 7, 3.

Mr. Whitehead, "east": Spades, A, Q, 10, 6; hearts, K, Q, 2; diamonds, J, 10, 9, 2; clubs, A, K.

The dealer passed.

Mr. Work properly bid one diamond on his four diamonds headed by the A, K, Q. This bid, even without any side strength, as in this case, is sanctioned by modern players, for first or second hand.

Mr. Smith's four card heart suit, however, was not strong enough in top honors even for a defensive bid, in spite of the fact that he had the king-jack of spades on the side. Mr. Smith passed.

Sure of Eight Tricks.

Mr. Whitehead, fourth hand, was so unusually strong that he could have passed his partner's diamond bid with comparative certainty that Mr. Work could make game—eleven tricks at diamonds. However, Mr. Whitehead bid one no-trump because, with his holding it seemed better to have Mr. Lenz, "south," as the original leader, particularly if spades or hearts were opened; also the no-trump seemed to promise a larger score. One no-trump held the bid.

Mr. Lenz led the queen of clubs, the proper opening from queen-jack-10. Dummy was spread, and Mr. Whitehead found himself confronted with a problem. Assuming that Mr. Lenz held five cards of the suit he opened, and not knowing the location of the ace of hearts or the king-jack of spades or the division of the six outstanding spades, Mr. Whitehead was sure of but eight tricks—two clubs, four diamonds, one heart and one spade—before losing or risking the loss of his second club stopper.

Leads from Dummy.

Mr. Whitehead played dummy's 2 of clubs to the first trick; Mr. Smith played the 3, declarer the ace. He then led his 9 of diamonds, both to conceal the diamond holding and to provide a fourth entry to dummy with the 3 of diamonds. Mr. Lenz played the 4; dummy the queen; Mr. Smith the 5.

Dummy led the 3 of hearts; Mr. Smith played the 4; declarer the king, a false card; Mr. Lenz the 6.

Mr. Whitehead led the 10 of diamonds; Mr. Lenz played the 6; dummy the king; Mr. Smith the 7. Dummy returned hearts, leading the 5; Mr. Smith played the ace; Mr. Whitehead played the 3; Mr. Lenz the 8.

Mr. Smith led the 9 of clubs, returning his partner's original lead; Mr. Whitehead played the king; Mr. Lenz the 4; dummy the 6.

Mr. Whitehead now reviewed the situation. He had won one heart trick, two diamonds, and two clubs—five in all. He had four set-up tricks in his combined hands—the ace of spades, the queen of heart, and two diamonds—enough to give him game. There were possible considerations in the spade suit of bringing in three extra tricks, provided the king-jack and one small spade lay in Mr. Smith's hand.

Plays Safe Game.

Therefore, although as the cards actually lay declarer could have made a small slam, he wisely took his sure game, instead of jeopardizing it for a possible slam.

He led his jack of diamonds; Mr. Lenz discarded the 4 of spades; dummy played the ace of diamonds; Mr. Smith, the 8. Dummy led the 3 of diamonds; Mr. Smith discarded the 9 of hearts; Mr. Whitehead played the deuce of diamonds, and Mr. Lenz discarded the 7 of spades.

Dummy next led the 2 of spades; Mr. Smith played the 3; Mr. Whitehead the ace; Mr. Lenz the 9. Mr. Whitehead then led his good queen of hearts; Mr. Lenz played the jack; dummy the 7; Mr. Smith the 10.

Mr. Whitehead then conceded the rest, as he knew that the remaining tricks would be lost to winning spades and clubs. He made his game in no-trump, with 30 for trick points and 30 for three aces.

New and Marvelously Beautiful Fisher Bodies —a host of Mechanical Improvements—New Features found only on the costliest cars —plus an Amazing Reduction in Prices!

America has always expected great things from its greatest industry. But the announcement of the Most Beautiful Chevrolet has been the automotive sensation of all time!

Here is a car which in beauty, luxury, quality and modern design challenges the costliest creations of the day.

Here, in a price class where average standards have been the rule, is now offered a car so far beyond all expectation that comparisons cease to exist.

Seven superb models styled as low priced cars were never styled before and offering such marks of fine car distinction as: full crown one-piece fenders, bullet type lamps and "fish tail" rear deck modeling! New and supremely beautiful bodies by Fisher! And above all, infinitely finer quality—the result of a host of additional improvements such as AC oil filter, AC air cleaner, coincidental steering and ignition lock, larger 17-inch steering wheel, gasoline gauge and many, many others!

All this is combined to a supreme degree in the long famous leader of the Chevrolet line—the Coach. It would be a brilliant achievement for any manufacturer merely to design such a splendid car to sell at any reasonably low price. But to sell it at the amazing price of $595 is a feat of history making proportions. This one price reduction alone would suffice to center world-wide attention on Chevrolet. But due to economies of tremendous production plus the vast resources of General Motors, Chevrolet also announces striking price reductions on other models.

For years Chevrolet has led the world in providing Quality at Low Cost. But now with a new and more beautiful car—with a car infinitely finer in quality and greatly lower in price, Chevrolet stands supreme and unchallenged in dollar-for-dollar value!

No matter in what price class you intend to buy or whether you plan to spend more or less than the price of a Chevrolet, come in today and see the most beautiful low priced Coach ever designed. Admire its marvelous style and grace! Mark its many new fine-car features! Learn for yourself by personal inspection why, at its new low price, it is the greatest sensation of America's greatest industry!

WEST TO OPPOSE SIDETRACKING OF ITS SEAWAY

Fears Move for Second Interocean Canal.

Washington, D. C., April 2.—[Special.]—Opposition by western interests concerned in the building of the St. Lawrence waterway to the sea is assured if an attempt is made by the administration to sidetrack that project for a new canal through Nicaragua or enlargement of the Panama canal.

Letters received here indicate that if the government commits itself to another large waterway through Central America to connect the two oceans, reasons of economy might impel the administration to suggest further delay in consideration of the plan to connect the great lakes with the sea by way of the St. Lawrence.

No Surface Signs Seen.

There are no surface signs that the administration has lost interest in the lakes to the sea project. In fact, it was made known today that the state department has notified the Great Lakes Tidewater association, representing 21 states, that it will proceed immediately to initiate negotiations for a treaty agreement with the dominion of Canada under which the United States and Canada can construct the St. Lawrence ship channel. William Phillips, the first minister of the United States to Canada, has been called to Washington for a conference on the proposed waterway negotiations before taking his new post at Ottawa.

Secretary Kellog said today that the treaty negotiations would be taken up by Minister Phillips and the new Canadian minister to the United States, Vincent Massey. He indicated that the American government has not been idle in the matter since a board of engineers representing the United States and Canada reported some months ago that the St. Lawrence project is feasible, and is submitting figures on costs.

Hint of Side-Tracking.

It was stated also that President Coolidge had agreed to order an investigation during the coming summer with the view to determining the most advisable course. These statements aroused the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence Tidewater association, which thought it saw in this a movement to lay plans for another great experiment on the Isthmus of Panama, an attempt supported by the Atlantic coast ports to block the St. Lawrence project.

GREECE PROTESTS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ATHENS, April 2.—The Greek government has presented to the Turkish minister in Athens a verbal protest against the violation of the Lausanne treaty by the recent Turkish law concerning the autonomy of the islands of Imbros and Tenedos, situated at the entrance to the Straits of Dardanelles. The treaty of Lausanne provides for complete autonomy, whereas the Turkish law accords only partial autonomy. Greek instruction in schools is forbidden, despite the fact that the population is mostly Greek. The government will apply to the league of nations if necessary.

GIRL PRODIGY KNEW MANY THINGS, BUT NOT HOW TO HOLD HUSBAND

New York, April 2.—(AP)—A recommendation that a decree of divorce from Louis H. Hyman be granted Mrs. Winifred S. Hyman, author and daughter of the "Mother" Stoner, who would banish Mother Goose from the nurseries of the world, was made in a report filed in Supreme court today by Referee Joseph Kahn.

Mrs. Hyman, now 24, was regarded as an infant prodigy for having used the typewriter at the age of three years. When seven she wrote children's jingles in Esperanto. She charged her husband, to whom she was married in Greenwich, Conn., in 1925, with misconduct with an unidentified woman. The referee said she asked no permanent alimony because of her income as a writer.

Kenosha Moose Will Dedicate New Temple

Kenosha, Wis., April 2.—[Special.]—Leaders in the Moose in state and nation will help the Kenosha lodge dedicate its new $300,000 temple Sunday afternoon. Joseph Davis, deputy director general of the order; Thomas M. Howell, general dictator of the Supreme lodge; W. E. Buhler, dictator of the Chicago lodge; and Patrick J. Kelly, national orator of Chicago, will be the speakers.

U.S. TRADE BOARD TO REPORT AGAIN ON G. E. AFFAIRS

Senate Has Asked Data on Electric Power.

Washington, D. C., April 2.—[Special.]—The federal trade commission has virtually completed another investigation of the affairs of the General Electric company and will soon make a report supplemental to the one submitted to the senate on the electric power industry of the United States, which discussed the extent of control wielded over that industry by the General Electric and other companies.

While the first report dealt primarily with the organization, control, and ownership of the commercial electric power industry, the second is intended to be a comprehensive discussion of the organization and control of the electric machinery and equipment industry. A senate resolution offered while Muscle Shoals was a subject of much interest called for these data.

Company Forging Ahead.

It was declared today that if the 70th congress goes into the power situation, as recommended by the commission, much of the data which has been gathered so far may be out of date because of the tremendous strides forward that will have been made by the end of the present year, and that congress may have to make its own investigation for first hand information.

"Extensive grouping" of electrical power companies, which often brings their operations into the field of interstate commerce, was proposed by the federal trade commission in its initial report, as necessitating legislative consideration. This had in mind the transportation of power from one state into another.

Pyramiding Is Cited.

Attention to "pyramiding," alleged to be practised by the power corporations through holding companies, was directed in that report. It was believed today in informed quarters that this situation has not greatly changed and it was declared, also that no one can tell accurately at the present time the money value of the power industry in the United States, because of its rapid growth.

BREAK OPEN SAFE; SEIZE CONTENTS.

Safecrackers entered the Pentecost Brothers' Fishery, 557 West Randolph street, Friday night, hammered the combination from a safe, and escaped with its contents, the value of which could not be learned.

ONE STUDENT, ONE TEACHER IN HIGH SCHOOL IN WYOMING

Cheyenne, Wyo., April 2.—(AP)—For a high position on the list of small things that are being done in a big way, Lewis C. Tidball, secretary of the Wyoming state board of education, submits the Elk Mountain High school.

This school is housed in a one room building. Mrs. Helen Castle, a college graduate, constitutes the faculty and Helen Chesbrough is the student body.

Last year, when Helen Chesbrough was in the eighth grade, Elk Mountain had no high school. But after the graduation exercises, the school board, which is composed of Helen's parents and one other person, decided to move for higher education. They abolished the grammar school and established the high school.

Wyoming has more than 200 one and two pupil grammar schools, but the one student high school is a new wrinkle in state education, Tidball said.

INDICT WIFE OF EX-MINISTER FOR SLAYING PASTOR

Justified, She Says of Shooting.

Tuscola, Ill., April 2.—[Special.]—Mrs. Mary W. Thornton, age 39, wife of a retired minister, today was indicted on a charge of first degree murder for the death of the Rev. Simeon Ralston Reno, aged 70, retired minister. The shooting took place in the Thornton residence Villa Grove on Mach 19.

Mrs. Thornton insists that the shooting was an accident, but says that even had it been intentional it would have been justified as, she claims, she thought Mr. Reno was the secret agent of the woman who once had broken up her home.

Wrote Prize Sermon.

Mr. Reno was well known in church circles. Before his retirement he had been awarded the prize for the best written sermon of the year by a national church magazine. Since his retirement from the pulpit he had been soliciting subscription for a Champaign paper.

It was in connection with that work that he had gone to the Thornton home. As he entered he said. "Well, Mrs. Thornton, have you a bouquet for me today."

"Yes, I have," she replied. "I will show it to you."

Going into the dining room, she took up a .22 caliber rifle, went back into the kitchen, and loaded it in his presence.

Orders Him Out.

"Now, you get out," she said, and pointed the gun at him. Laughingly, Mr. Reno pushed the weapon aside and turned to leave. When within a few feet of the front door a jab in the back by the gun was followed by an explosion.

Mr. Reno continued steadily to the door, turned back, laughed, and tried to say something, then he stumbled to the porch swing, sat down, and fell to the floor, dead.

STEAL SAFE AT RESTAURANT.

Today an ever-widening circle of enthusiastic owners is helping sell Gardner Eights-in-line

Right on the heels of a record-breaking 1926, Gardner was forced to expand its plant facilities so that twice the number of Gardner Eights-in-line built in 1926 could be produced in 1927.

And then—as retail sales of the Gardner Eight-in-line soared to a new high peak with the coming of the new year—it quickly became apparent that it will be virtually impossible for Gardner to build enough Gardner Eights-in-line for all who want them this year.

This constantly growing public esteem is the natural and inevitable result of the universal esteem in which the Gardner Eight-in-line is held by Gardner owners everywhere.

The speed and stamina of this European-type Eight-in-line . . . the distinctive beauty of its colorful, custom-tailored bodies . . . the rugged staunchness of its new-type chassis with double-drop frame, low center of gravity and other engineering developments far in advance of current practice . . .

. . . these and other features of the Gardner Eight-in-line have rolled up a great wave of owner esteem for this new-type car of Old World luxury and distinction that is now being reflected in Gardner's steadily mounting Eight-in-line sales.

COOLIDGE TURNS RESERVES OF OIL BACK TO NAVY

Revokes Order Used for Doheny Leases.

Washington, D. C., April 2.—(AP)—President Coolidge has revoked the order issued by President Harding under which Albert B. Fall as interior secretary negotiated with Edward L. Doheny and Harry F. Sinclair the naval oil reserve leases which led to both civil and criminal actions in the federal courts.

The revocation was dated March 17 and it was stated at the White House that it was issued in keeping with the decision of the United States Supreme court revoking the contracts and leases made with Doheny covering the Elk Hills, Cal., reserve and oil tank storage at Pearl Harbor.

Navy Again Controls Reserves.

By this order jurisdiction over all of the reserves save that in Wyoming, the celebrated Teapot Dome, is left exclusively with the navy department. The Wyoming reserve still is in dispute, with Sinclair appealing to the supreme court from a Circuit court decision revoking the lease.

During the senate investigation and the hearings on the civil suits for the recovery of the reserves, President Harding's order was attacked as illegal because it in effect set aside an act of congress placing jurisdiction in the navy department.

Evidence before the senate oil committee was that the order which Harding signed was drawn in the interior department, and the charge was that the plan of leasing the reserves originated with Fall, who accepted $100,000 from Doheny during the negotiations covering the Elk Hills reserve.

Court Frowns on Secrecy.

The executive order was approved at the navy department and it was taken to the White House for Harding's signature by Theodore Roosevelt, then assistant secretary of the navy.

In holding that the Doheny lease and contracts were tained with fraud, the Supreme court cited the secrecy which attended their negotiation.

SINGER LOSES IN $250,000 LIBEL SUIT IN NEW YORK

New York, April 2.—(AP)—Mme. Johanna Gadski Tauscher, former soprano of the Metropolitan Opera company, has lost a $250,000 libel suit she brought against the New York Herald-Tribune because of an article appearing in that paper in 1923 which she contended made it appear that she sang a song lauding the sinking of the Lusitania.

The article, a history of German opera, had been written by the late Henry E. Krehbiel, music critic. In it he said "At the home of one of the singers of an opera, the sinking of the Lusitania was celebrated with cups and song and the clinking of glasses."

This last sentence, she contended, made it appear that she was the singer of the song. The defense, however, contended that the article meant nothing more than it said, namely that the party had occurred at the Gadski home.

Evidence showed that at the plaintiff's home on New Year's eve, 1916, Otto Goritz sang in German a song, one stanza of which said:

"The clouds are gathering, a ship ploughs through the waves
Filled with ammunition to the top.
America puts a Yankee on every ship as a safeguard.
Suddenly the ship begins to vibrate.
For never will U-boat be idle.—
God save you! We had to give you one.
God save you and Neptune greet you!"

The supreme court jury which had been hearing the case for five days, returned the verdict in fifteen minutes.

STATE TO CALL 60 WITNESSES IN SNYDER TRIAL

New York, April 2.—[Special.]—Between sixty and seventy witnesses will be called to testify for the state in the trials of Mrs. Ruth Snyder and her lover, Henry Judd Gray, on the charge of murdering her husband, Albert Snyder, it was announced today at the office of the district attorney in Queens. It was estimated that the trial, if both are tried together, will last at least three weeks after the jury has been selected. The trial now is scheduled to start on April 11, and it was said the state will be ready at that time.

"Dever's administration is costing the taxpayers $1,000,000 a week, or $100 a minute more than mine"

"In our school histories is poisonous pro-British propaganda, put there by enemies of 'America First'"

"If any copper breaks down your door without due warrant of law I'll fire him"

20 Deadly Parallels

William Hale Thompson and William E. Dever Have Both Served as Mayor of the City of Chicago. Judge Them by Performance, Not Claims. Let This Record Be Your Voting Guide.

1. Mayor Dever and Boss Brennan voted for the League of Nations in the National Democratic Convention—a vote to boost England at the expense of their own country.

Thompson is unalterably OPPOSED to the World's Court and the League of Nations. He believes with George Washington and the 26 Presidents who have succeeded him that America should avoid all "entangling alliances" with foreign powers. "America First" upholds the Ideals of the "Father of our Country." Keep out of Europe and keep our boys off of European battlefields.

2. Mayor Dever imports outsiders to fill positions in Chicago. Among these is William McAndrew, Superintendent of the Chicago Public Schools, brought to Chicago from New York.

Mayor Thompson is pledged to oust him when elected, and to appoint, as vacancies occur, men and women on the Board of Education of proven Americanism. He condemns as treasonable the action of the Dever School Board in revising school histories to teach the Chicago children that George Washington was a "rebel," and that Von Steuben, Koskiusco, Pulaski and other patriots who aided Washington in establishing this Government were conscienceless adventurers. He will replace these pro-English so-called "histories" by American histories teaching respect and reverence for the heroes of the Revolution.

3. Mayor Dever stands for the installation of 400,000 water meters in the homes of Chicago citizens, thereby increasing the cost to the water-users 1,000% more than at present.

Thompson stands for the immediate repeal of the infamous water-meter ordinance; for the free, unstinted, unmetered flow of water into the homes of the Chicago people. He points out that it will cost the Chicago people $30,000,000 to install these meters, and $34,000,000 a year MORE than at present for the use of water. He is informed that a private water company is organizing to supply Joliet, Elgin and other suburban towns with Lake Michigan water, taken from a 22nd Street crib. If these cities can have unmetered water, why has Chicago got to stand to be unmercifully GOUGED?

4. Mayor Dever stands for an 8 cent car fare, with no provision for good transportation, or any assurance of fair working conditions for the employes.

Thompson stands for the best transportation in the world; for the lowest possible fares; for honest interest on moneys actually invested; for six days' work for the men; for a pension for them at the end of 20 years service; for submission to the people in a city-wide referendum vote of any proposed settlement of the Traction question whether by legislative act or Council ordinance.

5. Mayor Dever says he has made the Chicago Fire Department the best fire fighting machine in the world.

Thompson motorized the Chicago Fire Department; gave the men the double platoon system. During his term the average fire losses each year were $5,091,000, or $1.74 per capita. During Dever's term the fire losses have increased to over $10,000,000 per year, or $3.42 per capita. These figures are compiled from the Chicago Fire Underwriting Association.

6. Mayor Dever says he is satisfied with crime conditions in Chicago.

Thompson points to the fact that the insurance companies have DOUBLED their premiums on burglar insurance during Dever's term. When Charles C. Fitzmorris was chief of police under Thompson the crooks were run out of Chicago. Although there are 7,000 policemen in Chicago, Dever has none of them walking the beats to protect your homes and your lives. The city is overrun with morons and other vicious elements. The papers teem with accounts of murders and other horrible lawlessness. Thompson pledges himself to change these conditions, and make life and property once again secure in Chicago.

7. Mayor Dever says there is no commercialized vice in Chicago.

Thompson charges that commercialized vice is rampant, with no effort to eliminate it. That at no previous time in the history of this city has it been so unblushing, so flagrant. He says in addition that gambling "hells" are operating openly, and 75 roulette, faro, chuck-a-luck and other "skin" games are fleecing the public. Under his terms of office these conditions did not and could not exist. He will restore decency when elected Mayor.

8. Mayor Dever claims to have widened the streets.

Thompson asks "what streets?" If he refers to Wacker Drive it was the Thompson administration that fought out the preliminaries of condemnation and special assessments, mastered the financial problems and smoothed the way for the construction of Wacker Drive. All Mayor Dever had to do was to "Go Ahead" and finish what Thompson had already made a certainty.

9. Mayor Dever says he built 9 playgrounds during his term.

Thompson built 41 the first year he was Mayor. As Alderman Thompson, he passed the FIRST ordinance for Municipal playgrounds. He is pledged to give more playgrounds, more recreation opportunities for the children, more parks for all.

10. Mayor Dever says he has built 51 new schools.

Thompson says it will require $10,000,000 to repair the faulty construction of the schools erected under Dever. The Chicago Federation of Labor on July 26th, 1924, and recently reaffirmed, protests against the Platoon School, the Junior High School and the classifying of children on the so-called "Intelligence tests." It says: "The platoon system is declared by educators to be exactly the factory system applied to the education of the child, and a cheap way of housing school children by crowding more children into a school than the school will seat." Dever increased the taxes for school building, receiving $17,000,000 MORE than Thompson at a cost of $708 per seat as compared with $305 per seat during the Thompson terms. Dever is the only Mayor to build schools without a yard and a playground. No school erected during the Thompson terms is without a yard and playground.

11. Mayor Dever claims to know what is going on although he is frequently absent from Council meetings.

The records show that the sum total of the hours of absenteeism on the part of Dever from Council meetings is more than that of former Mayors Dunne, Busse, Harrison and Thompson combined. Thompson believes that a Mayor should be present at Council meetings for the welfare of the City. It is one of his civic duties if he is to safeguard the interests of the citizens.

12. What is Mayor Dever's stand on the Waterway? How has he contributed to its success?

During his term as Mayor, and when he was a private citizen, Thompson spent his money, time and labor wholeheartedly to this great project. Congressman Madden in a signed statement says that Thompson is responsible for the passage of legislation that gives the assurance that this Waterway will be constructed. It will double our exports by giving cheap coal rates, so that new factories will come to Chicago; will reduce the cost of coal to the people $1 a ton. That will be the cheapest coal on the Great Lakes and it will usher in a great era of prosperity, which will mean more jobs for more men.

13. How does Mayor Dever explain the Surety Bond scandal.

Boss Brennan wrote the County Treasurer's Surety Bond at $80,000. Thompson's friend, County Treasurer Harding, rewrote the same bond at $40,000. Thompson asks the fair question: "Who got the difference? Into whose pocket did it go?" What about the other 10,000 bonds that have been written? Let's have the light!

14. Mayor Dever does not explain his violation of the law that requires 85% of all vehicle taxes collected in each ward be spent for street repairs within that ward.

Thompson, as the record shows, upheld the spirit and letter of the law and spent this money as the law prescribed.

15. Mayor Dever claims his administration is "economical."

Let's waive claims and cite FACTS. Dever's last yearly budget is $212,000,000; Thompson's last budget was $154,000,000. This reveals an excess of Dever's expenditures over Thompson's of $58,000,000, or more than $1,000,000 a week, or more than $100 a minute. Yet in the face of this great saving Thompson doubled the salaries of the men and women on the city payroll, because of the increased cost of living created by the war.

16. Mayor Dever refers to "prosperity" under his administration.

When the bread lines formed at 7 A. M. at Washington Boulevard and Peoria Street, Mayor Dever bolted for Biloxi, Mississippi, to play golf. These lines are forming with distressing regularity each morning.

When men were out of jobs, as an aftermath of the war, Mayor William Hale Thompson launched the Pageant of Progress at the Municipal Pier, stimulating business, starting factory wheels humming, giving employment to the unemployed and averting BREAD LINES. All recall Thompson's inspiring slogan, "THROW WAY YOUR HAMMER, GET A HORN AND BLOW!" His constructive genius increased building activities from less than $100,000,000 to more than $300,000,000 annually. He is an optimist, not a pessimist—a DOER, not a DRONE.

17. Boss Brennan says he is WET; Mayor Dever, his "Yes Man," says he himself is DRY. Both of them voted DRY at the National Democratic Convention.

Thompson doesn't beat about the bushes. He is unalterably AGAINST the Volstead Act; AGAINST the search and seizure laws of the State of Illinois. He is against policemen snooping into Chicago homes, frisking hip flasks from bedticks, and persecuting decent citizens for minor infractions of the so-called DRY law. He is unalterably opposed to the return of the old saloon, the brass rail and back room where young girls were debauched. He feels that the saloon pendulum swung too far one way, the Prohibition pendulum too far the other way, that a happy middle ground will insure every citizen the privilege of alcoholic beverages if he wishes them, while doing away with the un-American invasion of personal liberty.

18. Mayor Dever says he is GOING TO BUILD A SUBWAY.

Thompson is curious about the fate of the one Dever was "going to build" four years ago. Dever said at that time "the dirt will fly before the snow flies." Thompson refers you to weather reports which show many snow storms since Mayor Dever gave this promise to the voters of this city. The strap-hangers haven't short memories, Mayor Dever!

19. Mayor Dever claims Union Labor is backing him.

An investigation shows that if any Unions have endorsed him their officials are on the City Payroll. Published endorsements of Thompson show 95% of all labor unions endorse Thompson. Irresponsible claims mean nothing—FACTS alone count.

20. Mayor Dever says he installed 25,000 electric lights, or more than any other Mayor.

Let's consult the official records. In Harrison's administration 40,193 street lamps were in use at an operating cost of $1,374,302.25, or $34.24 per lamp. Thompson's administration in 1922 shows 72,023 street lamps in operation, the operating cost being $1,981,921.06 or $27.56 per lamp. On January 1, 1927, there were 83,453 street lamps in operation, the operating cost being $4,023,525 or $48.21 per lamp. This astounding increase under the Dever administration is not due to any increase in cost of labor or materials, the cost of labor being the same, while the cost of materials has declined 7%. If no more street lamps are installed during the next four years the loss to the city of Chicago, under the Dever method of operation will be $6,900,000. The price the City of Chicago paid for Dever in the operating of its street lighting system alone for 1926 and the rest of his term in 1927 will be $3,600,000. In 1922, the last year of the Thompson administration, 11,853 street lamps were installed at a cost of $1,452,218.59, or a cost of $122 per post. During the Dever administration—1924-25-26—there were 15,421 street lamps installed at a cost of $2,688,960.97, or a cost of $200.35 per post, a difference of $77.82 per post as compared with Thompson installation. This is a loss to the City of Chicago of $1,044,400.

Voters of Chicago! Here in the cold light of facts are the records of William Hale Thompson and William E. Dever. On them base your decision as to who is best entitled by actual performance to your support and confidence. In the enforcement of law, the practice of economy, the upbuilding and protection of the Chicago School System, loyalty to Home Rule, straight-thinking and straight-shooting—who is best qualified to serve you as Chief Executive of this great City? III.—SPRING CIRCLE O VER LINCOLN TRAILS

RAIN and thaw have failed to hamper through spring traffic on the roads shown in this week's tour suggestion, although high water on Illinois route 4—the Illini boulevard—has caused trouble for motorists in weeks past.

The circle tour shown is one of the most interesting to be found in Illinois, following as it does many of the trails where Lincoln rode as a young lawyer and ending in the final resting place of the best beloved of all Illinois sons.

Murder Will Out.

Most motorists do not keep their cars long enough to discover the weaknesses and strong points of design incorporated in their property. But the junk heaps tell the stories. The man who is the third or fourth owner of a car, and who finds he can no longer repair it without rebuilding, can point out the weaknesses without hesitation. While the original owner may not be seriously troubled by poor design, much of the minor trouble he experienced doubtless was due to certain badly designed parts of the car starting to go wrong.

Avoids Damage.

Needless tire damage can be avoided if drivers of cars involved in mishaps on the highway would remove the broken headlight or other glass before traffic spreads it over the road.

Taxi Kings Plan Safety Campaign for U. S. Cities

PLANS have been completed for the fourteenth annual convention of the National Association of Taxicab Owners, at which the main feature will be a concerted attempt by owners of large fleets of taxicabs in more than 125 principal cities to find means for increasing safety on the streets and highways of the country as a whole.

This was announced yesterday by J. G. Williams, executive secretary, at the national headquarters of the association here. The convention will be held April 4 and 5 in Chicago at the Sherman hotel.

W. W. Cloud, taxicab operator of Baltimore, Md., and president of the association, who will preside at the convention, is one of the leaders in the safety movement, not only for taxicabs but for all classes of vehicles, and was one of those who worked on Secretary of Commerce Hoover's national conference on street and highway safety to draft a uniform safety code and model traffic law for all states.

Another safety leader who will speak at the convention is Sidney J. Williams, secretary of the National Safety council, and one of the country's most prominent safety experts. Isaiah Hale, safety director of the Santa Fe railroad; J. T. Smith, Philadelphia taxicab executive and chairman of the taxicab and fleet owners' section of the National Safety council, and Harvey D. Wood, safety director for the Chicago Yellow Cab company, operating 2,500 taxicabs, are others who will make recommendations for accident prevention measures. Orlando J. Bickford, owner of a fleet of sixteen taxicabs in Fitchburg, Mass., who operated them without a single accident even of a minor character, during all of 1926, and with only $100 in damage claims during the last seven years, will tell the convention how he did it.

Among other subjects to be discussed are compulsory automobile insurance, upon which C. C. Hanch, manager of the National Association of Finance Companies, will talk; gasoline taxes, public relations, and various phases of taxicab operation.

Other speakers on the program include John W. Welbley, treasurer of the Pittsburgh Taximeter company; A. O. Smith, taxicab owner of San Francisco and Los Angeles; Dale Harman, taxicab executive, of Kansas City, Mo., and W. L. Huggins Jr., public relations director of the St. Louis-San Francisco railroad.

Plans for a determined fight against the wave of bills seeking legislation requiring compulsory automobile insurance, now being introduced in many state legislatures, will be drawn up at the convention. The taxicab operators contend that these laws fail in their purpose of making drivers more careful and that they impose an unfair burden upon the taxicab business, for which in the long run the general public would have to pay in increased fares that such laws would necessitate.

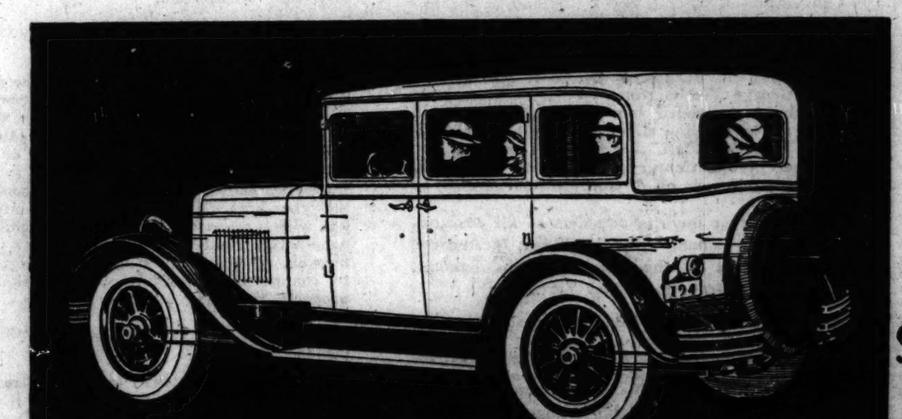
Bright Ideas.

In the matter of locks and other safety devices, numerous "bright ideas" have been brought out. Some have suggested that it would be advisable to remove the steering wheel before an owner leaves his car for any length of time. Electrification of the driver's seat to shock the chief away from his evil intention is another. Still another suggestion, from one of a mechanical turn of mind, was to place a bell in the car in such a manner that it would sound an alarm when a visitor other than the owner's friend sat in the driver's seat.

MORE ACCIDENTS.

The fact that where pedestrians are required to obey the signals given for any given intersection approximately 50 per cent is a strong argument in favor of pedestrian traffic ordinance, according to the safety first bureau of the National automobile club.

6 GOOD REASONS WHY YOU SHOULD BUY THE ERSKINE SIX CUSTOM FOUR-DOOR SEDAN



$995 F.O.B. FACTORY

1 All steel body, custom design, with deep drawn steel stampings forming beautiful curved lines at the back, and curved side members carried over the top, constituting the finest possible body construction. Body trimming of Bedford cord and broadcloth. Novel instrument board in duotone colors with cigarette and glove boxes built in, gasoline gauge and customary instruments. Fine hardware and interior decoration. Entire body much superior to any competitive $1,000 job ever offered in America. Comparisons are urgently invited and will prove convincing.

2 Chassis of modern simplified design. Material and workmanship of Studebaker quality throughout, comparable to the finest obtainable. Self-energizing four-wheel brakes, nickel plated bumpers front and rear, motometer, beautiful crown fenders, and numerous other quality features never before furnished in a $1,000 car.

3 Beauty and smartness characterize the car. The body, fenders and general outlines were designed by R. H. Dietrich, one of the foremost custom body designers of the country. The car has irresistible style appeal. It created a sensation at all of the European automobile shows and the shows in this country, where it was viewed by over two million people.

4 The performance of the car is remarkably efficient and much superior to most, if not all, cars in the $1,000 field. It will accelerate from 5 to 25 miles in 8½ seconds; climb an 11% grade in high gear and develop 60 miles per hour. It is free from mechanical defects and will stay out of the repair shop.

5 The car is well balanced, with scientific spring suspension and seat cushioning. The result is the superior riding qualities of the big, high priced cars. In riding comfort, the car is equaled by few, if any, small cars on the market.

6 The price of $995 f. o. b. Detroit is low compared with half a dozen other Sixes selling for more money. Actual comparisons with such cars, ranged alongside an Erskine, will demonstrate the truth of this assertion.

If you appreciate quality and value, examine and drive an ERSKINE SIX before you buy any car this Spring

Other models are the Tourer, seating five, $945; the Custom Coupe with dickey seat, seating four, $995; and the Business Coupe seating two, $945 f. o. b. factory, with excise tax and freight to be added.

Motor Industry Awaits Moves by Mysterious Chiefs

Spring Weather Brings an Increase in Car Deliveries.

BY WHITCOMB WILLIAMS.

DETROIT, Mich., April 2.—[Special.]—For several months the big question in the automobile industry has been "What is Henry Ford going to do, and when is he going to do it?" Now a second query has been added to the list. It is: "What is William C. Durant going to do?"

This question took its place in financial and automotive circles following the announcement by Durant himself that during the early part of April he would make an announcement that would astonish the industry. This was somewhat mystifying, and the grist of rumors were set afloat. It was stated authoritatively during the last week that Durant had returned to active participation in his motor car interests and that all other interests had been made secondary. Illness and attentiveness to the stock market have tended to distract his attention from automobile production activities, and the success of the component units of Durant Motors is generally admitted to have suffered as a result.

Durant promises a fully constructive motor car program that is hoped to duplicate his previous accomplishments in this field. So the question now is: will it be merely that he has started an intensive sale and production campaign with his present motor car manufacturing companies, to be accompanied by an announcement of new models, or that he has effected some important merger with a company or companies outside his own organization?

Opinion generally expressed is that the next model Ford will be of a four cylinder type on a 104 inch wheel base, the real feature being a four speed transmission. Later in the year, so the story goes, a new Ford "six" is quite probable.

Favorable weather has reawakened the demand for automobiles and sales momentum is gaining slowly. Since the first of the year delivery of cars has been been below those for the corresponding period of last year by about 12 per cent, and it generally admitted in the industry that the total for the year will fall below that of 1926. Conditions continue "spotty" as regards the business of various companies. Some are accumulating unfilled orders, while others are only getting back to normal stride or maintaining schedules which a few weeks ago were due for forward revisions.

A slight decrease in the number of men employed in the various Detroit plants for the week. The decrease was 598, leaving the total number employed 227,051, which is approximately 41,000 below the figures for the corresponding week of 1926. In January 11,706 were added to the pay rolls; in February 7,808, and in March 8,408. Flint and Pontiac plants report a steady and healthy increase in the number of men employed in plants of those automobile producing cities.

The gradual strengthening of demand is reflected in increased schedules of leading companies. Chevrolet completed its schedule of 106,000 cars and trucks for March. Hudson-Essex is running around 1,500 daily. Chrysler announces to date that it has gained third place in the automotive industry as a production and sales concern. This plant is being worked to its utmost capacity, which is near the thousand mark.

All General Motors units are at practically peak production, and Dodge is operating on a daily schedule of 650 cars. The Ford assembly department recently went on a four day basis after operating three days a week since the first of the year. Production figures are not available. Packard reports a big increase in the actual delivery of cars to purchasers immediately following the recent price reduction.

The Canadian market is enjoying a substantial increase of automobile sales, and the year bids fair to set a new high figure for cars bought across the border. Under the Canadian budget of 1926, if motor cars and trucks made in Canada are 50 per cent of Canadian production, labor and material, the company, on such motor vehicles costing less than $1,200, is entitled to a duty drawback of 25 per cent. To this provision is attributed the present prosperity and expansion in the Canadian motor industry.

THE INQUIRING REPORTER

He's Out to Learn the Truth About Motordom

The Tribune will pay $5 for each question accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to "The Inquiring Reporter," Chicago Tribune. For today's question, Nellie Diesecker, 3157 Broadway, Chicago, was awarded $5.

The Question.

What is the biggest improvement that a new city administration could launch to benefit Chicago motorists?

Where Asked.

Grant park.

The Answers.

Thomas Simmons, Grant park parking station, gateman.—The mayor elected next Tuesday and his new administration can help Chicago motorists most by starting the long delayed subway and throwing another bridge over the river at Wabash avenue. It can improve traffic conditions in the loop by creating one way streets and arranging the signal lights so a driver can run two blocks without being stopped.

Bob Stiewe, 2520 West Iowa street, photographer. — The new administration can make a hit right off the bat by creating new through traffic streets from the loop to the west city limits and by improving the old pavements leading west. It can help all motorists too by starting a city-wide campaign for street pavement repair with Rogers Park and the west side as starting points.

Charles Millen, Allerton club, manager.—The first step for the new administration should be improvement and opening of new through traffic streets to the west from the loop. Traffic regulations all over the city could be revised and made uniform as another big improvement, and many street pavements could be repaired as another help for motorists.

W. C. Lenhart, 437 West Ontario street, salesman.—Better streets leading west from the loop district and new parking regulations in the congested district are two important improvements up to the new administration. Traffic lights all over town should be timed so that drivers can keep moving over longer distances.

Harry Johnson, 6208 North Fairfield avenue, supervisor. — The new administration can make a hit by connecting up the north and south drives to carry through traffic outside of the loop. Repair of pavements leading west from the loop is another important project for the new administration to tackle.

Motor Accidents Claim 48 Lives as Daily Tribute

AUTOMOBILE accidents took a daily toll of forty-eight lives last month. Approximately 930 of the 1,340 victims killed during February were pedestrians. Three hundred boys and girls under 15 years of age met accidental deaths on the streets and highways during those twenty-eight days. There were fewer auto fatalities each day in January, the first month of 1927 claiming 46 lives daily, estimates C. E. Robb, of the National Safety council.

Home accidents last month, however, showed a decline, the daily toll being 55, against 64 in 1926 and 71 in 1925, and 69 in January of this year. Most of the fatalities in residences were due to falls, asphyxiation and suffocation and burns and scalds.

There were no automobile fatalities last month in thirty cities of the United States.

Pedestrian Hazards.

Jaywalkers in Paris henceforth will incur the risk of being arrested and fined besides being run over by reckless taxicab drivers. That is the outcome of a legal quarrel concerning the right of the prefect of police to forbid pedestrians to cross streets except at specifically designated points, which has been occupying various French courts, finally going to the highest legal authority.

FUSE TROUBLE.

A corroded fuse will cause the lights to go on and off. Even the horn becomes hoarse when this condition exists.

News and Views of the Auto Trade

SUPPLEMENTRY to the special display of "gold seal" Buick cars in all dealer show rooms of the Chicago territory, C. F. Yonkers, manager of the Buick Chicago branch, announced yesterday that a national survey has established that the first 10,000 to 16,000 miles of use no more than taps the reservoir of service of modern models of that make. Acting on this survey the vast Buick organization has reorganized its entire used car activities to offer a new car guarantee on all of the used cars offered to the public.

Verifying the current rumor that Reo has set May 6 as the announcement date for its new and smaller models, which will be offered in addition to the "Flying Cloud" line, C. E. Eldridge disclosed yesterday that 4,395 units made up the March shipments of the Reo company. Of these shipments, 2,782 were passenger vehicles and 1,613 commercial cars—just twice as many as were shipped from the factory in March, 1926. April shipments, he added, will be 60 per cent greater than those in any previous Reo month.

Wade Morton, driving a stock Auburn car on the Culver City track, has hung up a new endurance and car performance record for industrial marksmen. According to official figures released by the A. A. A. contest board, the stock Auburn covered 1,000 miles in the run in 14 hours, 37 minutes, 30.23 seconds, with an average of 68.37 miles an hour for the journey.

Use of sturdy, rubber ribbed separators between battery plates is the interesting and newly patented feature just announced by the Prest-O-Lite company of Indianapolis as a successful method of lengthening the life of automobile batteries.

Six Chicago men were among the leading salesmen of Paige cars in the United States during February, according to factory anouncement of prize winning contestants. They are: Arthur A. Woods, E. G. Hunt, Paul Rich, W. J. Kowal, A. J. Wolken and Earl F. Moody of the Bird-Sykes company.

A new high record for a single day's shipments of new cars was established in March by Studebaker when 940 Studebaker and Erskine cars were shipped from the South Bend, Detroit and Walkerville plants.

Chicago's spring driving difficulties seem sporting joys in comparison to reports of conditions faced by drivers in the far corners of the world, received last week by Elmer Rich, head of the Simoniz company, whose Chicago organization now reaches to every known spot on the globe. The reports from Simoniz distributors jump from Manchuria, where radiator "muffs," spring "gaters" and supercheaters fail to prevent bursted cooling systems and cracked cylinders, to central Africa and India, where sand storms and furnace heat serve to melt the metal on the sand trails. These difficult districts, according to Mr. Rich, are sources of prolific business for his big Chicago concern, which specializes in the protection of fine car finishes in all climes.

Shipment of Gabriel snubbers from the Cleveland factory indicate that the first quarter of 1927 will pile up the sale of 25,000 sets over the corresponding period of 1926, it was announced yesterday by E. A. Blumenthal of the Chicago office.

Highway Education Board Hangs Up Rich Safety Plums

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 26.—[Special.]—Should children be taught street and highway safety at home or at school? This question, of concern alike to parents and school officials, is one that hundreds of thousands of elementary school pupils will be asked to solve for themselves within the next few weeks in connection with the sixth annual safety campaign, announced here today by the highway education board.

The decision will be made in the form of essays by pupils and practical lessons by teachers, submitted for consideration in the board's national contests, undertaken with the active cooperation of school officials throughout the United States. As an incentive to participation in this phase of the national campaign the board announces the gift of $6,500 from the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce to be expended in prizes allocated throughout the several states and in the territories, such as Alaska, the Philippines, and Hawaii.

The contests are reopened by the board, officials announce, in response to the demand for this educational competition, coming alike from the pupils, teachers, school officials, and parents. Children are asked to write 500 word essays on the subject "Why I Should Be Taught Street and Highway Safety at Home and at School."

For their efforts 438 valuable cash prizes, in addition to the same number of gold, silver, and bronze medals, will be distributed through the state departments of education or school officials. The number of prizes for each state vary in proportion to the elementary school enrollment, New York, for instance, having twenty-seven state prizes, with Pennsylvania next in line with twenty-five. Wyoming, Nevada, New Hampshire, and Rhode Island receive three state prizes, while Ohio will rank seventeen prizes, Texas nineteen, Illinois twenty, Massachusetts eleven, Michigan fifteen, Colorado eight, Maine four, and so on.

The number of awards, however, differs only in the third prizes to be given. A pupil in each state will receive one first prize, which consists of a gold medal and fifteen dollars in cash. Likewise a pupil in each state will receive as second state prize a silver medal and ten dollars. The third prizes, which are bronze medals and five dollars, vary in proportion to the enrollment.

In addition to these awards, three valuable national prizes are offered pupils whose essays finally win out in the elimination process that is used to select the national winners. The pupil whose essay is considered the best in the nation will earn, in addition to the first state prize, a trip to Washington, with all expenses paid, where board officials in the past have taken the greatest pains to see that their young charges see everything of interest in the historical capital of the nation. Second and third national winners receive handsome gold watches, as does the first national winner, the timepiece being presented at exercises at Washington when the trip is made.

Dorothy Jean Utley, Bemidji, Minnesota, schoolgirl, was the last winner to visit Washington, being accompanied by her mother as chaperone, whose expenses also were paid. Another winner, chosen from the 1925-'26 contest, will be announced in the near future.

One thousand dollars of the prize money is set aside for teachers who write the best safety lessons while their young charges are preparing the more simple masterpieces in essay form. The teacher winning first national honors will receive a check for $500, and also will make a trip to Washington, with all expenses paid, whether she comes from Maine or California or points in between. The teachers winning second and third national awards will be the recipients of $300 and $200 respectively, but they will not be invited to Washington as the board's guests.

Illustrated literature in the form of posters and folders, giving the simple rules of the contest, is now being distributed to schools, Boy Scout organizations, Camp Fire Girls, women's clubs, safety councils, automobile clubs and kindred organizations. The contests close to participants May 6, leaving only a few weeks of intensive effort for the preparation of papers by those who are to compete.

MOTORDOM

Giant Building Program Answers Highway Demands

State, County, and City Launch 620 Miles of New Roads.

BY J. L. JENKINS.

FIRST construction hurdles were cleared away for the building of 620 miles of new highway and street pavements in the Chicago region last week.

Although the major part of this unprecedented mileage is to be new 20 foot pavement, with widening work confined to short sections here and there where few legal or engineering difficulties appear, the action taken by state, county, and city officials is considered the biggest and most important coöperative construction plan ever launched in a spring season for the benefit of Chicago and Illinois motorists.

State road leaders under the direction of Col. Cornelius R. Miller, director of the department of public works and buildings; Frank T. Sheets, chief engineer of the state highway division; George Lamb, district highway engineer, and other officials, took the lead in this whirlwind building campaign by completing public hearings on the location and making ready for award of paving contracts on a total of 432 miles of new $100,000,000 bond issue routes, all of which will serve as auxiliary traffic arteries leading to Chicago.

President Anton J. Cermak of the Cook county board, the board's committee on roads and bridges, and Maj. George A. Quinlan, county superintendent of highways, placed 40 miles of new road pavements under contract, announced that 40 miles more are ready for contract awarding, and that within 60 days a total of 120 miles should be under construction by the county.

Mayor Dever and officials of the Chicago board of local improvements announced that 50 miles of Chicago streets, connecting with and forming terminals for the county and state highways will be under contract for widening and improving this spring.

Officials of neighboring counties cleared their decks for the building of new pavements to connect with Chicago's new trunk lines.

Interest in the state's legally defered construction campaign about Chicago reached fever heat during the week. A total of more than 3,000 property owners, city and village officials and road boosters attended the route hearings held in the Sherman hotel and in Waukegan, and McHenry, and ironed out most of the differences in opinion concerning the final location of the roads.

Their most vital contribution toward the 1927 building program lay in pledging 100 foot rights of way free of cost to the state. This new right of way width, 20 feet wider than the old state standard, provides against the usual delays in construction caused by the refusal of a few property owners to dedicate the needed land strips. It also creates a new and wider standard for all future new highway building and gives assurance that both state and county will own strips of sufficient width to carry 40 foot highway pavements in the future.

The state's paving projects now ready for completion of plans and the last steps before award of contracts include:

R. 49—Chicago to Mones	22 mi.
R. 51—Justice, south through Frank't	22 mi.
R. 54—North avenue to Elmhurst, joining
R. 55—S. to Sag bridge, southeast to Blue Island, Thornton and Indiana line	53 mi.
R. 64—Maywood to St. Charles and Sycamore	45 mi.
R. 62—Chicago to Algonquin	32 mi.
R. 63—Chicago to Dundee and Barrington	40 mi.
R. 60—Chicago-Lake Zurich-Genoa City	45 mi.
R. 57—Chicago to Highland Park	16 mi.
R. 58—Evanston to Elgin	30 mi.
R. 61—Crystal Lake to Richmond	20 mi.
R. 68—Telegraph road, Lake Bluff to Wisconsin line	15 mi.
R. 172—Milwaukee avenue, Libertyville to Gurnee	6 mi.
R. 176—Libertyville to Crystal Lake	15 mi.
R. 53—Belt line, Half Day to Joliet	40 mi.
Belt line, Harvey to Indiana line	8 mi.
R. 59—Antioch-Fox Lake-Barrington	20 mi.
Total	432 mi.

With these public hearings out of the way, state officials plan to return to Springefild armed with all data and with the promise that 100 foot rights of way will be dedicated by property owners all along the new road routes. They will work out final locations of the routes and proceed with their construction as soon as possible, according to Chief Engineer Sheets.

In addition to the big building program launched in Cook county through the coöperation of the state and the $15,000,000 widening and improvement bond issue voted last fall, three neighboring counties have turned loose their highway guns against the congestion which has threatened to smother terminal traffic in the state. R. M. Lobdell, superintendent of highways for Lake county on the north, is already well along on the new $730,000 county bond issue program which is supplementing the state's new bond issue work.

Du Page county's final bond issue money was released recently for construction purposes and E. L. Gates, county superintendent, is pushing the contract letting and new work to meet new Cook county roads.

Meantime, according to William Busse, chairman; Frank Wilson and other members of the county roads and bridges committee, the Cook county board and highway department is working out details for the widening of the old main highway pavements and completing surveys to give Cook county voters the widening demanded in the bond issue as soon as possible.

DANGEROUS STUDIO

There are at least a million spots in the big cities of the country that might be chosen by art students as safer vantage points for sketch making than this one. It is the exact center of 5th avenue in New York, where, in the heart of fast traffic, Myra Sobel and Pauline Rosenberg, art students, made their sketches recently for the forthcoming Exposition of Architectural and Applied Arts.

Veteran Pilot and Front Drive Car Enter 1927 Race

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind.—The third entry to be announced for the 1927 international motor sweepstakes race at Indianapolis Motor speedway on May 30 is that of Dave Lewis, 43 year old veteran of the roaring road. Dave's mount this year will be a front drive car, and 1927 will be the third year he has driven one of these.

The first time was in the race of 1925. Dave's was the only front wheel drive that year. He started the race in fifth place and never fell below that position. Not only did Dave hold his starting point, but he proceeded to move on up as the race progressed. Had he not been compelled to wear himself out by getting his car ready, working day and night, the story might have been different. At 325 miles he was in the lead. At 350 miles no one had been able to crowd him out of the place. At 390 miles Dave led Pete De Paolo by 44 seconds. At 425 miles Lewis was still ahead, but shortly afterward he pulled into the pits for relief and De Paolo and his Duesenberg Special shot ahead. Benny Hill, who relieved Lewis at the wheel of the Junior Eight drove a creditable race for the last 70 miles, but he was not up on front drive procedure as well as Dave, and so when the checkered flag fell it was for De Paolo, with Hill coming along into second place 58 seconds later.

Last year both Lewis and Earl Cooper came to Indianapolis with front drive cars, but neither of them finished. Later on at Altoona Dave achieved his ambition of being the first man in present racing to win a victory with a front drive. Cooper later won a race at the Rockingham speedway track at Salem, N. H., and from then on the front drives managed to acquit themselves creditably. This year Lewis comes into the picture once more. When he gets under way he will have thousands of fans who watched his game fight in 1925 pulling for him to show the whole field the way home. The race this year will be the second Indianapolis event for cars of 91½ cubic inches, last year's event being won in a car of that size, a Miller Special. Frank Lockhart was the winner.

TO GROUND WIRE.

When grounding a wire to the frame of a car a better job is done by cleaning off the paint thoroughly.

VETERAN OF LONG TRAILS.

Twenty-three years of honorable service have been rolled out behind the wheels of this granddad of the modern speedster, which is still doing its one cylindered stuff under the direction of Van E. Purcey and Frank E. Hanke, 1638 Belmont avenue. The car is powered by a one cylinder engine and is driven by a chain using two speeds forward and one reverse. It can boast of neither fan, clutch, windshield, nor any of the accessories that make modern motoring a pleasure instead of an arduous adventure. Two dry cell batteries furnish the ignition and the lights are gas. The original price of the car, equipped with wooden axles and coil springs, was $510. It is said to be among the oldest automobiles still in service in Chicago.

Strict Laws.

Automobile drivers in Holland are required to pass a physical and mental examination. A committee of physicians has urged members of the medical profession to refuse to give certificates for the present to avoid assuming unnecessary responsibility until a commission has been appointed to establish a standard of qualifications needed by drivers and chauffeurs.

Arrest Cars.

Two automobiles were "sentenced to jail for 30 days" by Justice of the Peace Oliver Young, in an effort to curb violation of traffic laws in Berkeley, Cal. He ordered the police to take custody of the cars, whose drivers were found guilty of traffic offenses. The plan is an experiment to test whether deprivation of the car will be more effective than a fine.

Iowa Votes for State Control to Banish Mud Road

THE Iowa legislature recently passed and the governor signed a bill by which that state will have a primary road plan similar to the trunk highway plan which neighboring states adopted years ago.

Up to this time the Iowa primary roads, although under state supervision and receiving some state aid, have been under county control and dependent on county financing. The new law retains the same routes, but permits slight modifications, and places full control and responsibility for the improvement and maintenance on the state highway department. This is expected to bring about uniform maintenance and the improvement of continuous routes.

Motorists who have occasion to drive through Iowa may look for a marked improvement in the Iowa roads in a few years. The law provides, however, that not more than 20 per cent of the primary road fund may be expended for paving until the entire mileage of the primary roads has been graded, drained and bridged. At the writing the bills for a $100,000,000 bond issue and a three cent gas tax are still pending.

The North Dakota legislature has passed a bill reorganizing the highway department and giving it greater and more definite power over the state road system. It provides for a primary road system of not to exceed 7,500 miles, to be designated and located exclusively by the state department.

SHIFT QUICKLY.

You waste gasoline when the throttle is kept wide open up a steep hill as you operate on shifting to second gear. Do not shift before the car slows down your speed has the advantage of momentum. Momentum is a gas saver.

Week-end offerings of hogs cleared at generally steady prices, extreme top and general average remaining unchanged at $11.75 and $10.90, respectively, showing a drop of 35@50c since the close of the previous week.

Inbetween weights averaging 190@225 lbs, met slow outlet on a catch as catch can basis after urgent outside orders were filled. Fresh receipts of 1,000 were below expectations, including 1,000 directs. Shipments totaled 2,000, including 500 through hogs, billed to eastern points. Most of the 4,000 hogs estimated in the pens at the close were held off of the market on the strength of the light run in the west yesterday.

The irregularity in marketing last week's hog supply, rather than the increased size of receipts was the paramount depressing influence in the trade. Offerings early in the week were among the heaviest in recent years, over 45 per cent of the week's totals being unloaded Monday, while receipts during the last half of the week were far below normal. Total arrivals at 156,800 were several thousand below the average weekly supply thus far this year.

Last week's general average price of hogs was pounded down 35c at $10.90, lowest since December, 1925. Average a year ago was at $11.70 and two years ago at $13.10. More light and light butchers in recent arrivals lowered the week's average weight to 239 lbs, equaling the lightest in a month, against 249 lbs a year ago, and 228 lbs two years ago.

Cattle Prices Advance.

Beef cattle scored further advances last week, elevating the peak price to $13.65, highest of the year, and top for heavy cattle since December, 1925. Prime 1,422 lb averages reached the price Tuesday, with 1,436 lb averages at $13.60 Monday. Handy weight cattle averaging 1,272 lbs at $13.25 was also a new high for that weight. Governing influences in the trade were bullish and the week's general average advanced 20c at $10.90, high since October, 1925, against $9.50 a year ago. Cattle prices are averaging above any corresponding period since 1920.

Lamb Market Erratic.

The appearance of $17.00 lambs in midweek caused an erratic turn of the lamb trade, with closing prices lowest. Prevailing quotations are still 25@40c above the close of the previous week, stock without fleece showing the full gain. The week's receipts at 61,800 are second smallest since last July. Colorados and Iowa fed westerns reached the peak Wednesday, with top shorn stock at $15.60. Mixed yearlings and twos brought $14.00, and top old wethers $11.50, averaging 140 lbs. Medium weight old ewes reached $10.50.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 20,000 cattle, 46,000 hogs, and 18,000 sheep, against 20,437 cattle, 69,905 hogs, and 11,301 sheep a week ago, and 16,678 cattle, 38,419 hogs, and 17,203 sheep the corresponding day a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at 52,000 cattle, 135,000 hogs, and 70,000 sheep, against 49,190 cattle, 114,435 hogs, and 75,722 sheep a year ago.

FINANCIAL NOTES

Gary works of Illinois Steel corporation, a subsidiary of the United Steel corporation, in March established a month record for output of pig iron, according to preliminary estimates. It is estimated that 229,000 tons were produced, or about 5,000 tons more than in the previous record month, March, 1926. Inland Steel company broke all-time records for shipments with a gain of about 12½ per cent over March, 1926, the previous best month in the history of the company.

Failures for March totaled 1,852, almost identical with those in February, but 1.9 per cent below March a year ago, according to Bradstreet. Liabilities, swelled by numerous bank suspensions, particularly in Florida, totaled $97,904,546 in March, an increase of 49 per cent over February and slightly more than double the total for March of last year. There were 494 commercial failures last week, compared with 492 in the preceding week and 439 during the corresponding week last year.

The wholesale markets displayed somewhat greater resistance this week to the downward trend of prices than has prevailed for some time past, with 25 out of the 53 changes that occur in the list of quotations collected by Dun's Review being declines against 28 advances. In last week's compilation there were 36 reductions and 25 increases; in a similar comparison for the corresponding week a year ago, 46 recessions contrasted with 24 advances. Bank clearings for week ended March 31 totaled $8,732,312,000, against $10,090,497,000 in the same week in 1926, a decrease of 13.5 per cent.

Loans, discounts and investment of the New York clearing house banks and trust companies increased $134,058,000 last week, according to the statement issued by the Clearing House association. Excess reserve decreased $94,725,060, creating a deficit of $31,714,740 in reserve. Net demand deposits gained $163,870,000. Time deposits were up $16,287,000. Aggregate reserve was $595,210,000.

Scheduled operations of steel companies in the Mahoning valley for this week are 85 per cent. Truscon steel is at 90 per cent of capacity, despite a 20 per cent increase in plant capacity in the last year. Steel operations show little or no effect from the start of the coal strike, producers having made ample preparations to protect fuel supplies.

The Bethlehem Steel corporation has bought between 150,000 and 200,000 tons of Swedish and North African iron ore for delivery at Sparrow's Point, Md., during the current year.

Production of crude petroleum in the United States in February amounted to 67,874,000 bris, a daily average of 2,424,000 bris, according to figures compiled from pipe line runs reported to the bureau of mines. This is the highest daily average production ever recorded, exceeding that of the previous month by 119,000 bris, or 5 per cent, and the previous record figures of December, 1926, by 100,000 bris.

HAVE YOU A CHILD TO SPARE?

The Dragon of the Underworld Is at Your Door!

He is ready to drag your child into the pitfalls of vice through commercialized crime.

He has the protection of our political bosses who divide the spoils through organized crime rings!

Thompson or Dever Cannot Destroy Him

While Thompson was Mayor and Fitzmorris was Chief of Police, booze and crime rings were organized.

They have been permitted to flourish under Dever, resulting in over a murder a day.

Crime Incubators

Major crimes are not committed by first offenders.

Major crimes have their origin in the brothels of vice, gambling dens, booze and opium joints, and the curtained "speak-easy" soft drink parlors.

Our children are the victims.

Thompson's Shameful Pledge

Thompson has made the shameful and repulsive statement to the effect that he will open "10,000 new places"—hatcheries of vice and crime.

Criminals Licensed to "Go On"

Dever makes the public statement that he cannot suppress crime. His record shows that he has not.

This statement admits defeat and encourages vice and crime.

Robertson Will Smash Crime

Robertson is free of the Crime Trusts.

He is free from taint of underworld gold.

He will make crime unprofitable. Then the crooks will leave Chicago.

He has pledged himself to appoint Edwin A. Olson, former U. S. District Attorney (who has convicted 10,000 criminals) as Chicago's Chief of Police.

By voting for Robertson you write an insurance policy for the protection of your children and the sanctity of your home.

"And who is able to war against this beast?"

(From the Bible, our Greatest Guide and Teacher)

REVELATION, Chapter 13: "And I saw a beast coming up out of the sea . . . and it was given unto the beast to overcome the innocents . . . and who is able to war with the beast? . . . If any man hath an ear, let him hear."

(1) THOMPSON Says:

I will not destroy the beast. I will feed the beast. I will open up "10,000 new places."

(2) DEVER Says:

I cannot destroy the beast.

(3) ROBERTSON Says:

By the Grace of God and the prayers of our Mothers I WILL DESTROY THE BEAST.

Free Citizens Will Elect Robertson

There are more than 500,000 free citizens of Chicago "who have not bowed the knee to Baal."

These free citizens will elect the next mayor of Chicago. More than 325,000 of them, over their signatures, have declared themselves for John Dill Robertson for mayor.

Over 325,000 have already enlisted in Robertson's army and will fight the beast of commercialized crime—born and fed under Thompson, watered and nourished under Dever.

Thousands more are enlisting every day. Why not you? Do not be fooled by the phoney straw votes published in the newspapers. They are not based on true straw ballots, but are manipulated by the newspapers for a purpose.

If you vote as the newspapers tell you, instead of voting for your own interests, you throw away your vote! Do not be fooled!

AS YOU VOTE SO MUST YOU PAY!

IT'S OFT FASHION TO KICK CAPITAL, LAUD POVERTY

BY HARPER LEECH.

Here are two items from widely separate sources:

A commercial bulletin on the prospects for rubber culture in northern tropical America notes that in the low lands of Central America, laborers receive from $1.00 to $1.50 per day, but in the highlands the rates vary from 20 to 60 cents.

A railroad news note discussing the plight of British railways, says: "There has been an extraordinary increase, too, in breakage and pilferage. This has compelled dozens of shippers to send their goods by lorry, instead of by rail. It is generally agreed that the discipline of the railroads has been broken down. The younger workers are 'clumsy, destructive and lazy,' says a London editor."

It is in the lowlands of Central America that the banana companies, the sugar barons and the lumber corporations, with other ruthless imperialists, exploiters and such have plundered the poor natives by tripling their pay. In the highlands they continue to live in the blissful mediavelism, so dear to the hearts of the cloistered intellectuals, who are supported in capitalistic societies on endowments, inherited wealth or the tax roll, and enabled to express their anti-capitalistic personalities to the fullest in print and speech.

It is in Britain that the cult of anti-capitalism has reached great heights, enlisting not only the vocal elements to an unusual degree, but also lords and ladies galore. British labor, or its political ringmasters at any rate, has the heartiest blessing of our own unctious ideologists.

It all gets down to this. Property and accumulation are of the very essence of morality—if by morality we mean conduct of a social nature, which promotes the vigor and health of the race. The astounding inversion of ethical values which colors so much of our cultural heritage—the idea that poverty is prima facie evidence of virtue, that wealth, strength, and leadership are somehow akin to sin, is an increasingly dangerous anachronism in an age like this.

The evidence of moral deterioration among the younger British workers, infected by the socialism preached so long and assiduously by the British Fabians, intellectuals and pacifists, might be construed as a useful hint about our own alleged problems of "flaming youth."

In the last two decades an abundance of sociological clap trap has been dished out by our school men.

Laws have been passed and institutions set up to relieve the individual of responsibility for his actions and to weaken family authority.

All that has dove tailed in with the demagogic teaching that there is antagonism between the rights of property and the rights of humanity. Of course, with the property sense impaired, humanity would be incapable of enjoying any "rights."

Over wide areas just now many of Mr. Kipling's "lesser breeds" are asserting the "rights of humanity" by suppressing the rights of property. No one need be in doubt as to where that will land them.

But it is interesting to note that they have the automatic and stereotyped sympathy of certain classes of our own people.

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

Tightness in the wheat market, particularly in May, was said to be largely responsible for the closing bulge, as several of the largest shorts, finding absence of pressure, were active in covering. The disposition is to look for a better tone for a few days, with more support on breaks. Accumulation of July wheat by local traders the last few days has been a factor and selling pressure has subsided, although it is expected to increase on any further material bulge.

Those who are bearish on wheat say that the technical position has been weakened by liberal covering of shorts and that if there should be a continued large export demand it will have to be on a declining market. As indications are for a liberal carry over and with good crop prospects, caution should be used in buying on high spots.

"In spite of large clearances every week, European buyers are constantly bidding for wheat, rye, and barley," says Broomhall. "The American winter wheat crop is at the present time expected to equal or surpass last year's, and the carry over this season is expected to be above the average. The rye crop estimate is for a yield of 3,000,000 bu in excess of last year. A great deal of wheat put afloat on ocean passage is destined for "orders," but very little is being consigned unsold.

Kansas has the promise of 146,000,000 bu winter wheat this year, as estimated by N. C. Murray, compared with 150,000,000 bu raised last year. Oklahoma, 58,000,000 bu, against 74,000,000 bu last year. Texas is given 29,000,000 bu, against 33,000,000 bu last year. The Kansas condition is 85, or two points under last year, and Oklahoma 87, or three points under last year, while Texas is 93, the same as last year. In the fourteen leading winter wheat states there is the promise of 425,000,000 bu, compared with 458,000,000 bu last year. Colorado and the north Pacific coast states have a better promise than last year.

Moderate temperatures followed by colder is the prediction of the weather bureau for the week over the leading agricultural regions.

Indications are for a moderate decrease in the visible supply of wheat for the week. World's shipments are estimated at 17,300,000 bu, a good increase over the previous week and compared with 10,887,000 bu last year. Chicago stocks of wheat and corn should show a fair increase. Kansas City wheat stocks decreased 607,000 bu and are 8,987,000 bu. Minneapolis stocks decreased 200,000 bu.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, April 2.—[Special.]—In its heaviest Saturday trading since February 26, spurts by General Electric, Pennsylvania railroad, Norfolk and Western, and United States Steel common marked the stock market today. The first of these stocks was said to a new peak for the year, and that for the fifth time during the week was carried to the highest point in its history.

Today's peak for United States Steel common was 170¾, which represents a gain of 6¾ points from the week's low. The sustained strength in Steel common is based very largely on Wall street's conviction that the $7 dividend rate will be maintained and that earnings for the first quarter will be found to have been impressively large.

Rail Shares Show Strength.

The rise in the stock of the Pennsylvania railroad to 61, the highest quotation since 1914, is regarded as an effectual index to the position of investment rail shares in general.

Other railroad shares gave a vigorous account of themselves in the closing hours of the market. The fact that new highs were made by issues of roads like Chesapeake and Ohio, Norfolk and Western, and Texas and Pacific, all of which are prominent in the gossip of the day, gave some confirmation to the widespread belief that revolutionary developments are pending.

General Electric's upward movement after a period of comparative inactivity reflects the favorable annual report made earlier in the week.

Market Sags Toward Close.

Toward the close there was the usual week-end profit taking, which served to sizzle some of the stocks which have been strongest in the last few days. This includes the twin market leaders, United States Steel and General Motors, both of which closed below Friday's level. Baldwin Locomotive also had a sinking spell, losing 3¾ points. Foundation company was another weak spot and sold off three points.

There was an effort to turn the motor stocks downward which met with only partial success. Bear traders applied pressure to General Motors making use of the rumors that Ford Motor company was about to announce new models and price revisions. Studebaker, in which a considerable short interest is said to exist, showed a substantial gain on the day.

Oil Shares Under Pressure.

New low records for the year were recorded in some of the oils, while others were barely above the low points. Selling in this group appeared to be based on expectations of another downward revision of crude oil prices in the mid-continent field next week which probably would be followed by another series of price cuts in petroleum products throughout all the country.

Expectations of an improvement in trade conditions next week served to check pressure in many of the seasoned dividend payers and to some extent steadied the market, but losses in many of the active stocks gave the market a weak appearance.

PART 3 | REAL ESTATE HOME BUILDERS

Thousands Attend Opening of Own Your Home Exposition

MIDWAY PROFS TO HAVE A 13 STORY CO-OP

Will Be at 58th and Dorchester.

(Picture on page 3.)

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

Midway university professors are going to have a coöperative apartment building of their own at the southeast corner of 58th street and Dorchester avenue, which will compare in beauty and comfort with the gold coast own-your-own skyscapers, it was announced yesterday. Of course, the University of Chicago profs aren't going to be the only tenant-landlords in the proposed big building, but the percentage of professional residents will be so high, it is claimed, that they will dominate the situation.

JOHN C. HILLENBACHER.

To be specific, the builders of the structure state that it'll probably be sold to members of the medical faculty of the University of Chicago and to parents educating their children in the University School of Education, nearby.

Name! Well, Hardly!!

The new Hyde Park co-op will not have any name—it'll merely be called "5811." This seems to be going the Gold Coast christeners one better, for not even the street will be mentioned.

The attractive design of Granger & Hillenbacher, architects of the project, calls for a covered path across the front known as a "cloister garth."

The building is to be erected by the 58th and Dorchester trust, the trustees of which are Charles F. Axelson, Norman Pritchard, J. O. McKinsey, Foye Hutchinson, J. C. Hillenbacher and Earle A. Shilton. All but two of these trustees are University of Chicago graduates.

To Be 100 Per Cent Coöperative.

There'll be thirteen floors, twelve of which will be laid out in apartments, seven to each floor. The suites will be arranged in four, five, six, seven and eight rooms. Earle A. Shilton & Co. will have charge of the marketing of the apartments. It'll be a 100 per cent coöperative.

The exterior will be a modern adaptation of Romanesque architecture with exterior walls of red brick and Indiana limestone trim. All outside surfaces will be of the same material. Roof tanks will be hidden in penthouses, which will be architecturally treated as part of the building.

The building site fronts 150 feet on both Dorchester and 58th. It'll be directly across from Jackman field. It's now occupied by five old frame residences erected in 1893. Work will start June 1st and the tenant prof. probably be able to call themselves landlords about May 1, 1928.

IT WASN'T BILL, IN SPITE OF THE NOISE HE MADE

Earle G. Krumrine, Chicago realtor, on his way to Boston, writes the following intriguing bit of political news:

"While I was in the diner today a big, fat, jolly looking bird was talking so loudly that every one else had to put the brakes on his own conversation. At last, I got up and strolled over to his table, stuck out my hand, and said, 'Hello, Bill.' He got up, grinned, shook hands cordially, and replied: 'My name isn't Thompson; my friend's a little deaf.'

"Naturally a lot of politics followed that and we discovered there was only one lone 'America first' champion in the car."

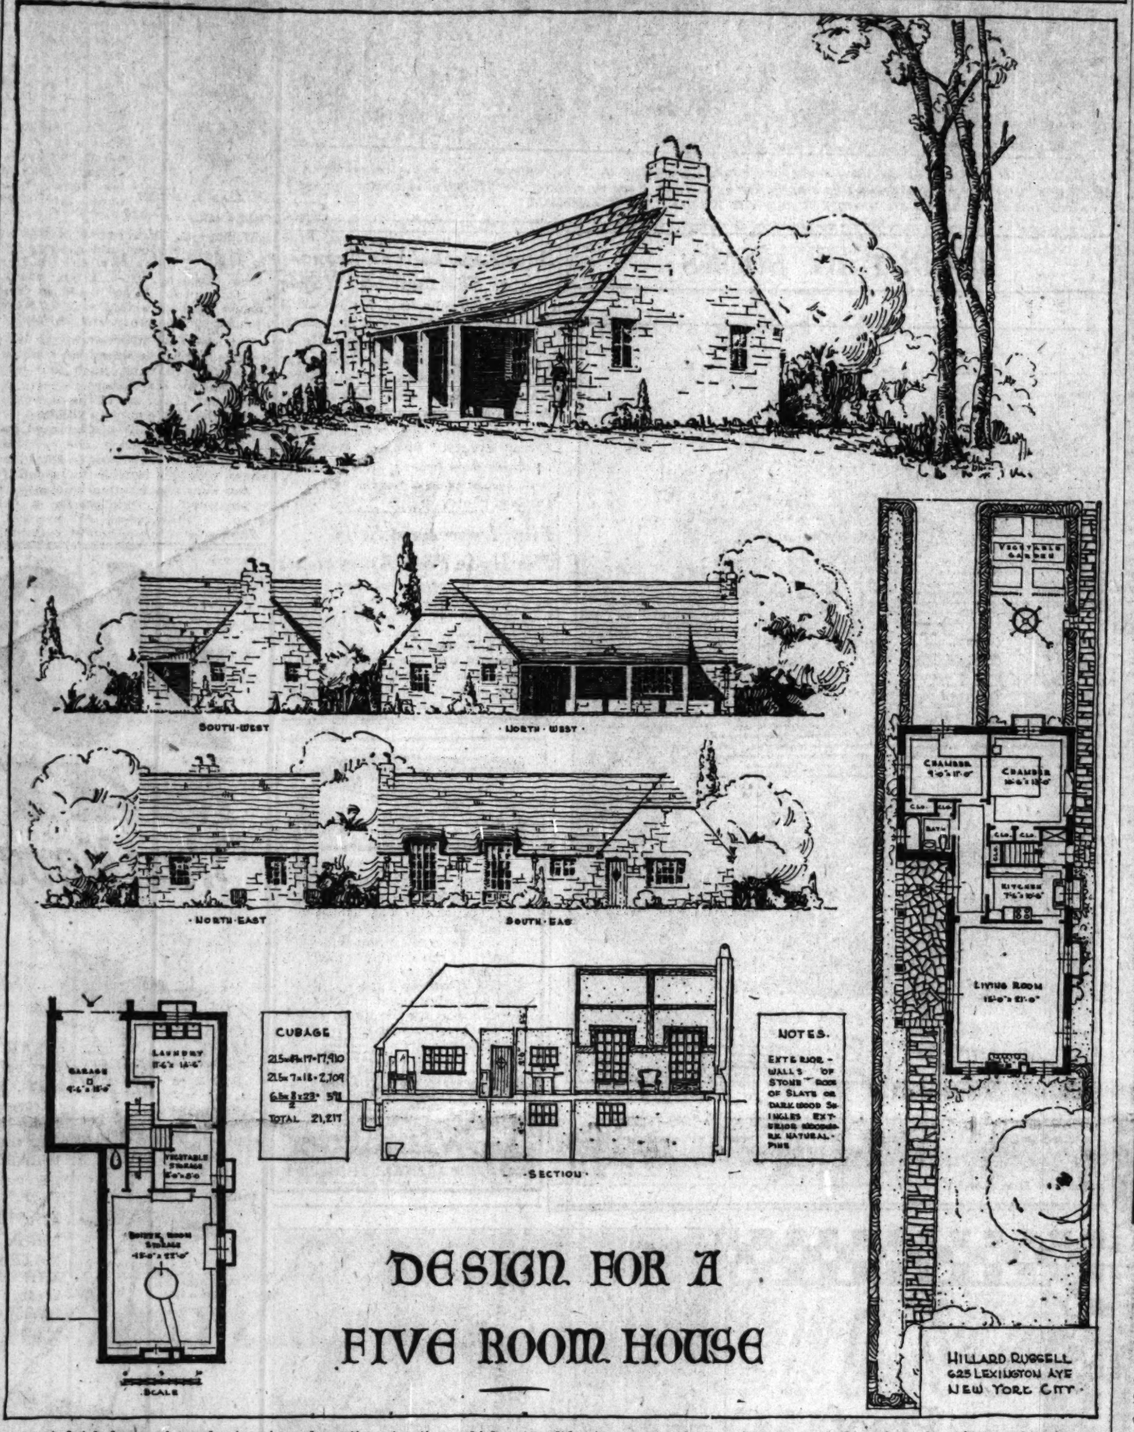
PAYS $500,000 FOR SHERIDAN SHORE FLATS

The seven story Sheridan Shore apartments, at 947 Sheridan road, were sold by Harry H. Paul to Cathrine M. Brendenburg for a reported $500,000, subject to $302,000. The building contains forty-seven furnished suites. The twenty-four flats at the northwest corner of Foster and Lea were given in trade at $165,000. The Hensel-Coffman company was broker. Ralph Merriam and I. J. Berkson were attorneys.

EVANSTON FLAT BUILDING SOLD FOR $200,000

C. Fred Stewart has sold the thirty flats, two stores and seven car garage at 722 Washington street, Evanston, known as the Washington apartment hotel, to Karl S. Blank for a reported $200,000. The Hensel-Coffman company was broker.

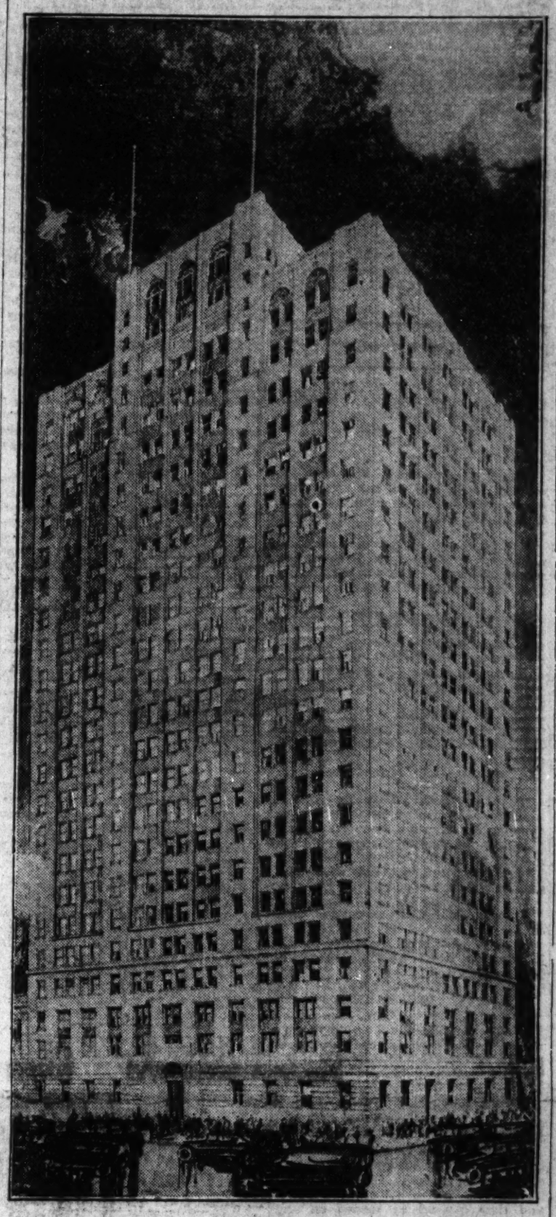
A PRODUCT OF AMERICAN SKILL



DESIGN FOR A FIVE ROOM HOUSE

A brick home of purely American domestic extraction, which exemplifies in extreme clarity what can be fashioned by the skilled architect on a thirty foot lot. It is the fourth prize winning house in the five room division of The Tribune Homes Competition and was designed by Hillard Russel, 625 Lexington avenue, New York City. Roof is of slate, in variegated shades. Story on page ten.

NEW NORTHWESTERN BUILDING



President Fred W. Sargent of the Chicago and Northwestern railroad has announced that a new office building will not be erected at the railroad's west side terminal until the present structure at Jackson and Franklin has been sold. It is now on the market. Meanwhile three studies of what can be done at the terminal have been made by Charles S. Frost, architect. Two of these call for structures to be over the concourse—not over the main building or trainsheds, as has been reported. The third study, and the one which apparently has advanced the farthest, is shown above. It calls for a twenty-five story structure, to be erected at the southwest corner of Canal and Lake, on a bit of land not occupied by tracks. It would be connected by a covered passageway with both the Lake Street "L" and the Northwestern terminal and concourse.

EVERYTHING FOR MODERN HOUSE ON EXHIBITION

Show at Coliseum to Last Week.

The Chicago Tribune has a booth at the Own Your Home exposition. Here interested visitors may secure copies of the Chicago Tribune Book of Homes, and working drawings of the three prize winning houses in the recent Tribune Homes Competition.

The Home Harmonious department of The Tribune will also be represented in this booth as well as the Tribune Want-Ad Contest.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.
[Home Builders' Editor.]

Home lovers of Chicago and its suburbs were well represented when the annual Own Your Home exposition opened its doors to the public at the Coliseum last night, many thousand being in attendance. The exposition, which is to be open until next Saturday night, covers every feature of interest to the prospective home owner or to those who want their domicile to be the last word in convenience and beauty.

From start to finish the Coliseum abounds with fascinating exhibits of every kind. The slogan of the exposition, which is to visualize home ownership, has been vividly emphasized in a complete portrayal of all features which pertain to the planning, home site selecting, constructing, financing, decorating and equipping of the home.

Carefully and in detail, does this vast exhibit carry one step by step through all the various phases connected with the owning of the home.

Never was there such a wealth of building materials from which one may make his choice; materials from which the selection of the house exterior may be made, the house insulation, the house roof, the foundation itself.

Never were there so many different ways of heating the home; comfortably, conveniently, tollessly, economically.

For Rich or Poor.

Never were the built-in features so abundant, so alluring. Features which can accommodate themselves to small pocketbooks or large. Features which make possible a small house and give it the serviceability and usefulness of the old time larger home.

Every member of the family has been remembered. The modern kitchen is now a delight to every homeowner, its conveniences for lightening labor many, and inexpensive.

Incineration which is built-in, a saver of infinite steps. Incineration which removes the fire menace in undisposed of rubbish, the health menace in unburned refuse. Mechanical refrigeration is shown, with all its advantages, its labor saving points, its cleanliness, its food saving value, not to mention the comparative low cost of such refrigeration at the present time.

All Types on View.

Since the only purpose of this exhibition is to promote the better construction of homes, the large feature of this year's display is the court of homes surrounding a charmingly laid out garden. There are front elevations to be seen of a number of different types of homes. Brick, frame, stucco, coacrete, concrete faced, are all placed around this court. Then as if a huge knife had been cut through them, the ceilings, halls, floors and foundations are laid bare.

The exposition is conducted under the auspices of the Chicago Real Estate board. Its officers appointed committees several months ago that totaled fifteen different divisions, and these men inspected all the exhibits and tested them before permitting their appearance in the Coliseum.

A Careful Inspection.

All irresponsible concerns, selling products some of which should never have been placed on the market, have been rigorously ruled out by a strict application of the code of ethics under which the exposition is conducted. New building materials have been welcomed, the latest in domestic equipment accepted, but all have been inspected with a view to their economy and durability.

A Week of Lectures.

For those who enjoy lectures and who wish to secure more information perhaps, than they can receive by looking at exhibits there will be opportunity to listen to talks given both in the afternoon and evening by speakers who are specialists in their particular field.

Monday is "Planning the Home" day.

Tuesday is "Selecting the Homesite" day.

Wednesday is "Financing the Home" day.

Thursday is "Building the Home" day.

Friday is "Equipping the Home" day.

Saturday is "Decorating, Furnishing, and Landscaping the Home" day.

The country's leading manufacturers and dealers in the vast field of home construction are well represented at this exposition. There are dealers in the different insulating materials which in recent years have contributed so tremendously to home comfort, to warmth in winter and to coolness in summer, and also to lowered cost of fueling during the winter months, lime and cement companies, steel companies, roofing companies which represent the different charming roofing materials which go far towards making a house lovely to look at as well as enjoyable to live in, are here.

Swiss, German 'n' Russ Candy Shops for Loop

"I don't want my candy shops like a United Cigar store or a Childs restaurant—that is, one looking just like the other," said George De Met to Graven & Mayger, architects, in outlining plans for three new loop establishments.

A. G. MAYGER. [Bloom Photo.]

"Righto," said Mr. A. G. Mayger, "I'll make 'em Russian, Swiss, and German, and if you can find anything alike in the three I'll buy you a box of Sam 'n' Henry chocolates."

"Ouch!" said Mr. De Met. "Go ahead."

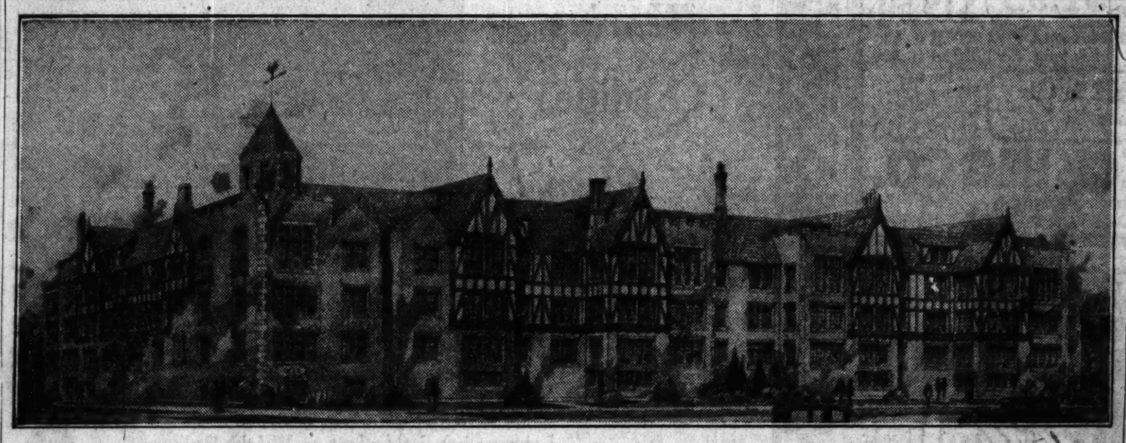
The De Met store at State and Adams, now occupied by Peacock's, will be modern German, with a ceiling which, according to the architects, is a sort of decorative satire on the fad for blue sky effects now prevalent in cinemas, cafés, and candy shops.

It'll be a futurist or impressionistic sky of blue and gold of such an eye-arresting design that the flapper who glances upward from her chocolate malted will think she's been drinking an absinthe frappe. Even the light fixtures will be stars, moons, suns, comets, and other celestial bodies.

Swiss design will predominate in the proposed new shop in the Bankers' building, Clark and Adams, with contented cows nibbling milk chocolate and Alpine yodlers warbling from the decks of Switzerland's justly famous navy.

The new Monroe street store, just east of Wabash, will be in modern Russian design. According to George De Met, $250,000 will be spent in the three shops.

AS IN A LONDON SUBURB



Picture of a coöperative apartment building which will be erected by Harry C. Costello at the northeast corner of 70th place and Paxton avenue. Designed by Roy France & Co., the architecture is called English suburban, which probably means London to most of us. S. Chester Danforth drew the illustration. Story on page four.

W. JOERN & SON TO CONSTRUCT 37 NEW DWELLINGS

William Joern & Son, builders, announce a $750,000 building program for Parker, Schubert and Wolfram avenues, between Laramie and Lavergne, in the Belmont park district. There are to be thirty-seven structures in all. These include five room brick bungalows to cost $9,000, two flat buildings to cost $13,750 and five flat buildings to cost $30,000. John Neebe is the architect.

"The Chicago Real Estate board makes this public expression of the esteem and confidence which Mr. Culbertson was held in by all its members."

Mr. Cubertson passed away at his Oak Park residence last Monday. He was buried in Ohio.

Plan 17 Story Co-op Facing Lincoln Park

A syndicate of real estate men and architects, including David Saul Klafter and S. A. Frankenstein, has bought the six apartment building at 2142-46 Lincoln Park West, known as the Carl Mueller property, and contemplates erecting a seventeen story coöperative apartment building. Work will begin in September, it is understood. The sixty-six feet of frontage adjoins the Webster hotel on the south. Mrs. Arloa B. Glade of W. K. Young & Brother negotiated the site purchase.

ADEQUATE WIRING AT START SAVES MANY $S LATER

Outlets in Eery Room Are a Necessity.

BY HOMER GRANT.

There is a real luxury in thoroughly adequate electrical wiring installation. No oil can make the domestic machinery of housekeeping run more easily or efficient'y. Because of this, in the building of a new home, the original wiring specifications are of vast importance.

From the illuminated house number at the front door and the overhead porch brackets which shed a soft light upon all who enter, through the entire house down to the remotest light in the coal bin at the far basement cornet, there is no room, nor scarcely any corner of a room, which does not need its particular wiring specifications.

First, there is the entrance hall, which claims its pendant feature. In addition a hall should have, if possible, a duplex outlet for console lights and vacuum cleaner. Also a four way switch for its own light, the porch light, the extreme rear of the hall, unless it is a very small one, and another one for the upstairs hall.

Lamps Are the Thing.

In the living room there is at the present time a preference for local lighting. You hear many people exclaim, "Who wants an overhead light any more?" Wall brackets and lamps on the table and on the floor, lamps everywhere—are the thing. Still there are occasions in every home when the overhead light is a convenience.

And it is a wise precaution to include the needed wiring for this, in case, after a year or two, one's preferences change and one suddenly become desirous of an overhead light. This wiring can be concealed and merely kept in readiness for future use.

Some electrical authorities go so far as to say that in the living room, dining room and kitchen there should be a duplex outlet provided for every twelve feet of baseboard. This is a generous provision, and makes it possible for the home mistress to have numerous lamps and all kinds of electraci conveniences and comforts, such as percolators, waffle irons, toasters, heaters, ventilators, cleaners, etc.

Don't Forget Mantel.

In the living room the mantel should not be forgotten, nor an outlet near the fireplace for an electric grate, or for pecolator service in case of Sunday evening luncheons are served before the grate.

The usual dining room provision includes wall brackets and overhead fixtures. If there is a built-in glass cupboard fixtures inside of this are attractive as well as useful.

Kitchen lights are abundant in the well wired house, and besides an overhead fixture, there should be illumination over the sink, the kitchen cabinet, and the stove. Where refrigeration, electric or otherwise, is in a special entry there should be a light over this.

If one keeps in mind one's own comfort in the installation of convenience outlets they will be placed at least four feet from the floor. This obviates the necessity of too frequent stooping over in the process of attaching and unattaching them.

To Scare Away Burglars.

The woman who is timid as far as burglars are concerned can have a switch at the head of her own bed which automatically lights the entire house, upstairs and down.

In the laundry, besides the overhead light, there can be brackets between the tubs, and small outlets for such laundry equipment as washer, froner, dryer. A well lighted basement stairway seems an obvious necessity, but it is amazing how many homes are without it. A two way switch for the top of the stairs and the bottom is a double precaution against the danger of stumbling and falling and incurring a doctor's bill many times the cost of the light.

In bedrooms and baths, bracket lights as well as ceiling lights, are important. The baths should have a duplex outlet for electric heating. This heating can be accomplished either by movable heaters which can be carried from one room to another or built in heaters, flush with the wall, providig quick auxiliary heat on cold winter mornings, or on the cool spring and autumn days.

Plugs Over Beds.

Nor should an outlet plug near the bed in each room be forgotten. This makes a reading lamp easily possible, or in case of sickness, a heating pad. There can also be another outlet near the spot where the dressing table is to stand, for curling irons, vibrators and other feminine electrical beauty accessories.

Night lights are now so inexpensive that they can be afforded in the hall or bathroom or both. One switch can be made to control all of these lights and they can all be turned on and turned off from the same switch.

In this careful pre-planning of the electrical installation and making it sufficient at the start, one finds that the proverbial dollar in time saves nine—and even more—later on!

EMPIRE STATE LEADS IN DESIGNS ENTERED IN HOMES CONTEST

It is interesting to note that among the states represented in the recent Tribune Homes Competition, New York state heads the list, 135 architects sending in competitive home designs of five and six room houses. Illinois comes next, represented by 113 competing architects.

New York	135	Kentucky	4
Illinois	113	North Carolina	4
California	69	Kansas	3
Pennsylvania	39	Nebraska	3
Massachusetts	29	Georgia	3
Michigan	26	Washington, D. C.	3
Wisconsin	22	Maine	2
Ohio	20	W. Virginia	2
Florida	17	Montana	1
Missouri	17	Louisiana	1
Indiana	17	Utah	1
New Jersey	15	Alabama	1

Oregon	10	Virginia	1
Connecticut	8	Oklahoma	1
Minnesota	6	Delaware	1
Maryland	6	North Dakota	1
Canada	6	Tennessee	1
Texas	5	Melbourne, Australia	1

This does not represent the entire number of drawings received, as some of these designs, otherwise excellent, had to be eliminated because they did not adhere to the rules of the competition.

A Dining Hall.

Two stories high, the parish house is to care for the Sunday school classes. The junior and intermediate classes will be located on the first floor, with the primary and intermediate departments on the second. Further, the second floor will have a large social and dining hall adequate to serve the entire congregation. A kitchen and serving room will adjoin the dining hall.

Irregular in shape, the building's site measures 119x125x129x133. The exterior of the structure, of which a Gothic tower will be the most notable feature, will be of colored face brick on all sides. The roof will be of slate. Light toned face brick and rough cast plaster, properly tinted, will be used on the interior.

A Beautiful Window.

A large deep tone colored window will face Ogden avenue, while the other windows will be of glass of delicate shades. It is estimated that the cost of the structure, including the equipment, will be about $100,000. The church already owns the site.

Plans for the project are now nearing completion and the Rev. C. George Engdahl, the pastor for the last two years, is calling a special meeting for this afternoon to launch a drive for funds. This meeting will also serve to celebrate the fortieth anniversary of the church. Assisting the Rev. Mr. Engdahl will be the building committee of twelve members.

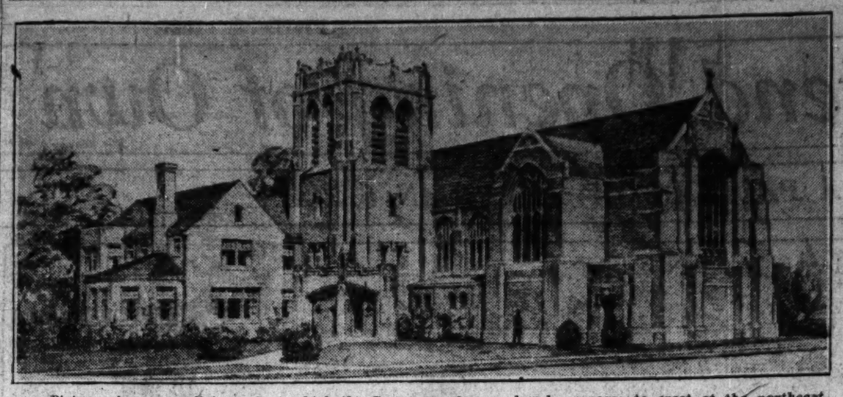
LINCOLN STREET FLAT BUILDING SOLD: $170,000

H. J. Goldberg of E. A. Hastings & Co. reports the sale of twenty-five apartments at 4853 North Lincoln street by Nick Catalano to Marius Jensen for $170,000, subject to $128.000. M. Maisel & Co. represented the buyer.

HARPER AVENUE FLATS SOLD.

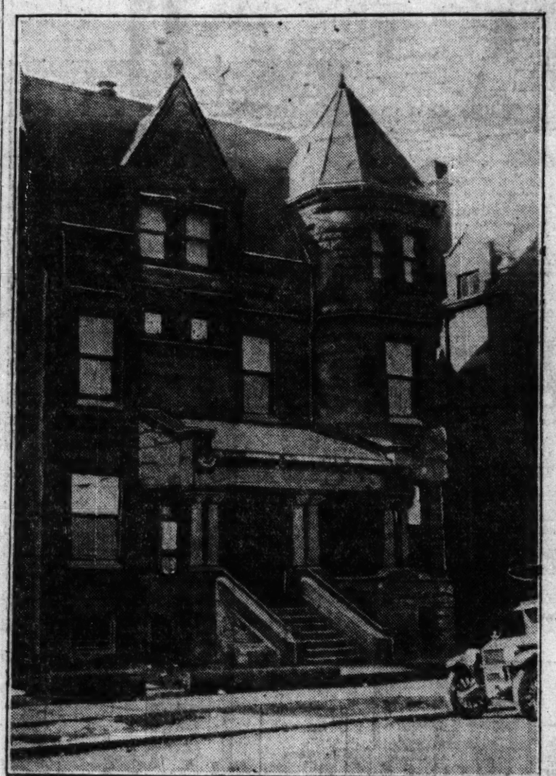
The six apartments at 6040 Harper avenue have been bought by Emma Harris from Stephen W. Mies for a reported $55,000. F. H. Doten and N. Y. Motherway, of Robert L. Gear & Co., were brokers.

HELPING SUBURBAN RELIGION



Picture of a new religious plant which the Grace Lutheran church proposes to erect at the northeast corner of Ogden and Kensington avenues, La Grange. The Rev. C. George Engdahl is the pastor of the church, and the architects are Harry K. Culver and Walter C. Eden, associated.

BOUGHT BY BOOKS



Henry K. Holt & Co., New York publishers, have bought the former south side Gold Coast residence at 2626 Prairie avenue, which they will use for their Chicago headquarters. The house was occupied for years by Mr. and Mrs. Keith Spaulding.

Buys Leasehold on Corner of Sherman and Noyes

Harry Johnston sold his leasehold in the lot, 131x230 feet, at the southwest corner of Sherman and Noyes street, Evanston, to Jacob Miller, for an undisclosed consideration. However, he took in part payment the twenty-four apartment building at the northwest corner of Central Park and Leland avenue. Paulson, Melvin & Schwartz were brokers, and the attorneys were Epstein & Feiwell and M. M. Chalkin.

Film Impresario Sells His Hyde Park Apartments

William K. Hollander, film impresario, has sold the two stores and sixteen flats at the southwest corner of 55th and University to George Bloom for a reported $92,500. Loeb & Hammel, Samuel Vig, of Robert L. Gear & Co., and Abe Barancik were the only brokers, so far as could be ascertained at the time of going to press.

OLD GOLD COAST RESIDENCE HOME OF PUBLISHERS

Henry Holt Purchases Spaulding House.

South side's "publisher's row" is having an interesting change as a result of Henry Holt & Co. of New York, one of the country's largest publishers of school books, as well as fiction, etc., having bought the famous old stone residence at 2626 Prairie avenue. This has been occupied for years by Mr. and Mrs. Keith Spaulding. This district, which now houses Chicago's publishing center, was once the city's Gold Coast.

WILLIAM G. SHIRER

William G. Shirer, resident partner of the Holt concern and chairman of the board of directors of the Du Page Trust company, Glen Ellyn, bought the former Spaulding residence from Eudora Hull Spaulding, wife of Keith Spaulding, for Henry Holt & Co.

The local Holt interests, which have been housed in the Macmillan building, 2451 Prairie avenue, have just been moved to the old time residence.

An unusual feature of the new quarters of the Holt company will be three sleeping rooms, as well furnished and equipped as any home, and certainly more homelike than those of any hotel. These will be available for members of the Holt organization who may be stopping off in Chicago for a day or so.

In case of a convention or gathering it will be possible to care for the [illegible] sons in the three rooms [illegible] so large it can accommodate [illegible] beds.

The Spaulding garage has been built into a modern, fireproof [illegible] house, 40x100. The residence [illegible] a lot 40x180.

News of the Architects

Max Lowell Cable, formerly at North Western avenue, and [illegible] H. Spitz, who had his offices at West Jackson boulevard, have [illegible] an architectural partnership under the name of Cable & Spitz, with offices in the Consumers building. The phone will be Harrison 7466.

In October 1924 Wright Rubber Bricks were laid on a section of the Michigan Avenue bridge, Chicago, illustrated above. Every 24 hours 80,000 vehicles travel over this bridge, approximately 2,500,000 every month, including 18-ton busses.

The frequent, sudden stopping of this entire traffic sets up a grinding, abrasive action, which however has little effect on Wright Rubber, further emphasizing the wear-resisting qualities of this material.

A two-year test proved the wearing qualities of Wright Rubber Bricks. The balance of this bridge will be laid this year as well as the La Salle Street bridge and the sidewalks of the Adams Street bridge.

Under any kind of service use Wright Rubber Bricks or Tile. See any of the dealers listed below for complete information and samples of color patterns and designs.

CITY'S BUILDING SIGNS POINT TO GREATEST YEAR

$102,005,300 in Permits Since Jan. 1.

BY THOMAS WREN.

With construction projects in the city and adjacent territory under course of completion at the cost of $114,000,000, Charles M. Paulsen, president of the Illinois Federation corporation, announced last night that the building pace since the first of January indicates that 1927 will establish a record for construction in the city's history.

CHARLES M. PAULSEN.

Mr. Paulsen said that since Jan. 1 Chicago building permits have totaled $102,005,300, which represents a gain of $25,857,900 over a corresponding period of time in 1926. For the first twenty-nine days of March the valuation of permits is placed at $45,-56,200, and for the corresponding period of 1926 the valuation was placed at $31,721,000.

"Building in all lines is continuing at a rapid pace and ranges from the skyscraper type in the loop district to home building in the outlying districts," Mr. Paulsen asserted.

"We find, too, that better transportation is giving all classes of workers an opportunity to build homes in virtually unthought of localities."

New Nearing Completion.

Through Edward M. Craig, secretary, the Building Construction Employers' association has compiled a list of the large projects now in the course of completion in the loop and adjacent territory. These projects and approximate costs follow:

Builders' building, Wacker and La Salle street	$6,500,000
Navy hotel, Michigan avenue, from 7th to 8th street	38,000,000
Lake-Michigan, Lake-Michigan	2,000,000
Mather tower, Wacker	3,500,000
Pittsfield, Washington-Wabash	6,500,000
Wabash-Monroe, Wabash and Monroe	2,500,000
Bank bldg., Lake-Wabash	2,000,000
Palmer house, Monroe-State	12,000,000
Business bldg., Clark-Adams	6,000,000
State Bank Bldg., La Salle and Monroe	5,000,000
Clothing bldg., Wells-Van Buren	1,000,000
Horton bldg., Washington-Wells	3,000,000
Chicago Mercantile, Franklin-Washington	3,000,000
Office bldg., 172-82 W. Washington street	1,500,000
Roanoke add., La Salle-Madison	3,000,000
Office bldg., 173-181 W. Madison street	1,500,000
Midland club, 169-175 W. Adams street	6,000,000
Office bldg., Adams-Franklin	7,000,000
Adams-Franklin bldg., Adams and Franklin	3,000,000
Medical-Dental Arts, Lake-Franklin	3,000,000
Furniture Mart add'n, Erie-Lake Shore drive	4,000,000

"Some of the buildings listed," asserted Mr. Craig, "are already nearing completion."

Projects Contemplated.

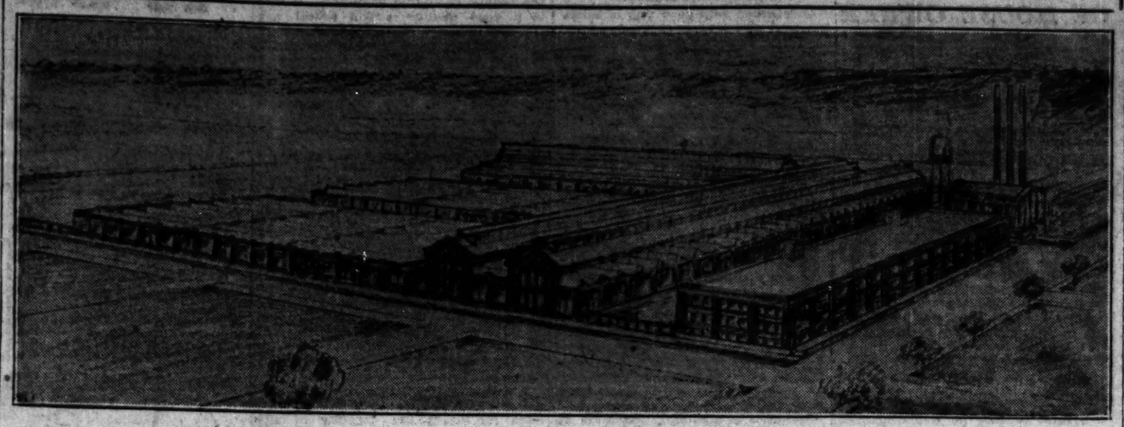
"Then there is a list of large projects, whose valuations will be placed at estimates ranging from $2,000,000 all the way up to $15,000,000, which are scheduled to be started in the loop and nearby locations during 1927," he said.

This list of contemplated projects with their approximate cost follows:

Engineers' bldg., Wacker-dr. and Wells-st.	$4,000,000
Marshall Field warehouse, Chicago river-Wells	15,000,000
Chicago Daily News, Canal-Madison	5,000,000
Harmon arcade, Madison-Wood	5,000,000
Paschen bldg., Michigan-av.	2,500,000
Civic Opera, Clinton-Adams	10,000,000
Board of Trade bldg., Jackson-La Salle-Sherman	8,000,000
City State Bank add'n, Randolph-Wells	5,000,000
Frontenac club, site still indefinite	5,000,000
Insurance Exch. add'n, Jackson, Sherman-Wells	5,000,000
Medinah club, Michigan-Illinois	6,000,000
Office bldg., Clark-Madison	3,000,000
Office bldg., 105 N. La Salle	2,500,000

"Chicago's building program," Mr. Craig asserted, "will continue through the summer months and into the winter season and the only element that will interfere then will be extreme cold weather."

TO KEEP THE WHEELS A-ROLLING



Here is a picture of the $4,500,000 shops which the Chicago Rapid Transit company is erecting at Niles Center. The huge plant will be bounded by Oakton on the north, Hamlin on the west, McCormick boulevard on the east, and the "L" right of way on the south. Designed by A. U. Gerber, the shops are to be in architectural harmony with the suburban surroundings. Work is already under way.

5811 DORCHESTER AVENUE

Granger & Bollenbacher designed the above thirteen story building to be erected at the southeast corner of 58th and Dorchester and operated as a 100 per cent co-operative project. Story on page one.

REALTY MAN TO BUILD FLATS ON VINCENNES AVE.

Work is to start at once on thirty-seven apartments and five stores at the northwest corner of 79th place and Vincennes avenue from plans by H. H. Richards & Co. The suites will have two, three, and four rooms, with mechanical refrigeration. The A. L. Salzman Engineering company has the general contract. Completion is set for Aug. 1. E. G. Renesch is owner and will occupy one of the stores with his real estate business.

FIVE AND TEN LEASE.

F. W. Woolworth company leased from Jacob Witkowsky the store and basement, 31x125, at 3655-57 Irving Park boulevard for twenty years and nine months from Aug. 1, 1927, at a term rental of $63,150. Farnham-Kuhn company represented both parties

$4,500,000 SHOP AT NILES CENTER FOR "L" RAILWAY

Will Cover Fifteen Acres; Work Under Way.

Old Man Dearborn's elevated railway cars that develop a pain in the wheel, need the bloom of their youth restored, or suffer any other of the countless ills to which they are liable hereafter are to take a jaunt out Niles Center way to get attention.

B. J. FALLON.

For the Chicago Rapid Transit company is building one of the largest plants in the country devoted to the needs of intra-mural transportation.

The plant is to consist of ten units covering an area of fifteen acres of the space bounded by Oakton on the north, McCormick boulevard on the east, Hamlin on the west and the elevated right-of-way on the south.

When completed this huge plant will represent an investment of $4,500,000 is is stated.

Will Consider Appearances.

Although considerably to the east of the residential section of Niles Center, the rapid transit company is giving consideration to the feelings of the suburbanites by having the externals of the plan as pleasing to the eye as possible. The buildings composing it will be in architectural harmony with their surroundings. The walls are to be of Old English mission brick, with cast stone trimmings. A. U. Gerber is architect.

Construction is under way on the first unit, the paint shop, which measures 200x224 feet. This is to be completed in May. Eventually all the company's shops will be consolidated here. The old shops will then be used only for inspection and minor repairs.

For Better Service.

"Consolidation of all the shops of the rapid transit lines in one convenient location is a logical step in development and expansion of our properties," said B. J. Fallon, vice president in charge of operation. "When the elevated lines were brought under one management it was necessary to continue use of the various shops scattered over the city. Present requirements, however, call for a centralized plant, where all work can be done with the greatest efficiency and dispatch.

"The new shops will greatly facilitate the work of keeping our rolling stock in perfect condition and thereby increase our ability to give the people of metropolitan Chicago the utmost in safe, fast and reliable transportation service."

PEORIA-55TH CORNER SOLD.

The eight flat building at the northwest corner of 55th and Peoria has been sold by N. T. Novotny to the Union Bank of Chicago, trustee, at a reported $45,000. Raymand W. Gear and Arthur D. Kallas, of Robert L. Gear & Co., were brokers.

PLANS $750,000 BUILDING FOR MADISON-AUSTIN

To Have Stores, Flats, and Offices.

The vacant southeast corner of Madison and Austin, where several magnificent paper picture palaces have been erected during the last few years, at last actually is going to be improved, says C. W. Lampe, architect and a member of the firm of C. W. Lampe & Co. It's to be a four story fireproof structure involving an expenditure of approximately $750,000, according to Mr. Lampe.

It will be owned by Koclanes Brothers, who bought the site some time ago. The building will contain fourteen stores, fourteen offices and seventy-five apartments of two and three rooms.

Work is expected to start in about two weeks with the expectation of having the building ready for tenants Oct. 1st. The building will occupy the entire lot, which fronts 176 feet on West Madison street and 150 feet on Austin boulevard.

MARYLAND AVENUE FLAT SALE.

Mary E. Watson, of Robert L. Gear & Co., has sold the six flats at 6442 Maryland for Patrick Mahoney to Benjamin Schneider for a reported $45,000.

WORK STARTS ON FOUR GOOD SIZED FLAT BUILDINGS

More apartments for Chicago cliff dwellers is the news from the office of Jacob Lewis, architect, who has designed four buildings on which construction has started. Cyril Cook, builder, is having two twelve apartment buildings erected on the west side of North Lawler avenue, between Thomas and Division. Both will be L shaped buildings on sites 64x125 feet and both will cost $65,000.

Mr. Cook also is having erected a twelve apartment building at the northwest corner of Lavergne and Quincy. The site is 52x125 feet. The builder has already sold it to Glenn Eden for a reported $97,000.

Another structure is under construction for Russell and Swartz, real estate men and builders, at the southwest corner of 74th place and East End avenue. The cost will be $115,600, it is stated, and there will be twenty-four apartments of three, four and five rooms.

Andy's Rents Candy Shop in Burnham Building

Andy's Chocolate Shops, Inc., has leased a store at 172 W. Randolph street, in the Burnham building. This makes the firm's second loop candy shop. Robert White & Co. represented the lessor and George A. Singer the lessee.

McILVAINE OIL BURNER

Scientifically Designed for Reliability and Efficiency

For real comfort and health you need an even supply of heat. In the McIlvaine the flame burns constantly—moderately. It is not turned on and off. Your house does not alternately heat and cool and heat again. It automatically keeps an even temperature in your living rooms at all times.

The only flame in the McIlvaine is the oil flame. There is no pilot light—no electric ignition—no intricate starting and stopping devices to get out of order.

Its absolute dependability has been thoroughly demonstrated in all types of heating plants in large and small homes of various constructions.

A noiseless, motor-driven unit supplies a positive feed of air and oil, regulated by the McIlvaine Air Shutter and Oil Control Valve.

Air and oil, in correct proportions, are thoroughly mixed and burned in the McIlvaine combustion chamber without the formation of smoke or carbon deposit throughout a 1 to 12 operating range from low to high.

These exclusive McIlvaine features are not found on any other oil burner.

Tests at Armour Institute Prove Its Superiority

The McIlvaine Oil Burner proved its superiority by the most rigid tests at the Armour Institute of Technology in point of simplicity of construction, ease of operation, over-all boiler and furnace efficiency and fuel economy. Operating as it would on a normal winter day, the continuous flame delivered 11.1% more heat per gallon of oil, than the intermittent flame.

FLORIDA PLANS NEW STATE OF SOUTHERN PART

May Mean Two G. O. P. Senators from Dixie.

BY PUTNEY HAIGHT.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

TALLAHASSEE, Fla.—[Special.]—Creation of the new state of South Florida is to be attempted seriously at the biennial session of the Florida legislature which convenes early in April. If the move is successful it may result in two Republican national senators from the "solid south." Details of the program by which action is to be sought in the legislature and later in congress are now being prepared by a committee of seven recently named by the Dade county Republican executive committee.

State senators and representatives from counties making up South Florida have been taken into the councils of action, and a canvass has shown that sentiment for a division is practically unanimous south of a line drawn across the peninsula at Orlando. For years the leading Tampa newspapers were opposed to such a movement, but it is now stated that the papers, on the contrary, will be inclined to support a separation.

Was Agitated for Years.

The question of a division has been agitated for some years and more particularly in the last four years, since the rapid growth in population of south Florida has created a peculiar political situation, especially to a very large proportion of the body politic, which is made up of northerners, who have not hitherto been subjected to exactly the brand of government existing in Florida.

Two years ago a constitutional amendment provided for a new apportionment of representation in the legislature based on population, though with limitations. As a result, at the coming session the county in which Miami is situated will now have a state senator and three representatives. With the other new and additional senators and representatives from south Florida territory, various organizations in the southern part of the state now believe it will be possible to get the matter of the creation of a new political division up to the legislature and perhaps passed at this session.

North Section May Object.

Objections to the measure are expected in a solid front from the representation in the legislature coming from the northern portion of the state, and it is reported on good authority that Jacksonville territory will object unless a way can be arranged to include the Atlantic coast strip and including Jacksonville, in the proposed new state. It is possible that this inclusion will be the hinge upon which the measure will swing. So far as sentiment here is concerned, Jacksonville is welcome to a place in the sun of south Florida, although its presence would cause a defect in the nomenclature already decided upon.

There are two outstanding reasons why the south of Florida craves a separation. One is that south Florida is paying nearly the whole bill of expense for the state and has not satisfactory representation in the state administration. The other is that the populace of the north and of the south are distinctly opposed in political, business and moral sentiment.

Newcomers in Southeast.

At the southeastern tip of the nation the bulk of the population consists of comparative newcomers, who declare they entertain liberal ideas as to the pursuit of happiness by any who may be within their precincts, and are of tolerant disposition in all ways, while they claim that the "cracker" element long implanted in north Florida is of narrow convictions, intolerant and also lacks progressive impulses and a desire to improve. This incompatibility has led, it is claimed, to much injustice and hindrance upon south Florida.

H. C. Costello Plans 2 South Shore Co-ops

BY PHILIP HAMPSON.

Two especially attractive cooperative apartment buildings have been announced for the south side by Harold C. Costello, a building contractor. One is an eight story structure that will be erected at 6922 Jeffery avenue. The other will be three stories and English basement high and will rise at the northeast corner of 70th place and Paxton avenue.

Paul Frederick Olsen designed the Jeffery avenue apartment, work on which is already under way, so that it can be completed for fall occupancy. The architecture is Gothic and especially pleasing to the eye is the front elevation.

Sun parlor extensions, oriel windows and an uneven roof line relieve the monotony of the ordinary boxlike exterior. Cut stone will be used for the lower floors, while the upper will be of face brick with a liberal use of cut stone ornamentation.

No Penthouse Pest.

Interesting to note is the treatment of the roof penthouses, which are about as obnoxious in a city beautiful as mosquitoes at a summer resort. In this building they will be in architectural harmony with the main structure and will not extend their ugly selves upward for the world to criticize. Interesting also is the chimney which, as in a number of similar buildings recently erected, is to be of attractive appearance. It won't be just a smoke stack.

There are to be twelve apartments of six rooms each in the building. And each apartment is to have three bathrooms, which should go a long way toward eliminating friction in the morning when father and son each wants to operate his razor first. Maids' rooms on the first floor may be had if the purchaser desires.

McKey and Poague Inc. are to handle the sale of the apartments. S. W. Straus & Co. will underwrite a $275,000 bond issue on the project.

Of English Design.

The other building is to add a bit of picturesque architecture to the city. Designed by Roy France & Co., it's to be of English suburban effect. Half-timber work, mansard roofs and dormer windows produce a whisper of quaint old England. Here, too, there are to be chimneys that will add to the appearance of the building instead of detracting from it.

The buildings will make Mr. Costello's eighth co-op in the south shore district. This one is to have thirty apartments of four, five and six rooms. The apartment on the upper floor will have thirteen foot ceilings, of the type known at studio flats. Imported wrought iron gates will separate the living and dining rooms; there will be mechanical refrigeration and the innovations of this day.

Mr. Costello recently purchased the site, which measures 252 feet on 70th place and 128 feet on Paxton, from the Chicago Title & Trust Co. as trustee, paying a reported $115,000. Hamilton Brothers were brokers for the purchaser and Henry Hedberg represented the seller. McKey & Poague Inc. will handle the sale of the appartments in the building, which will be completed by fall.

Hardwood Flooring Must Not Be Delivered in Wet

It is well to remember that hardwood flooring should not be delivered or unloaded in wet weather without protection. To do this, cover it thoroughly with canvas tarpaulins. For the same reason, it should never be laid or stored in a new building while the walls are damp.

GOOD PLUMBING LESSENS WORRY OF HOUSE OWNER

Advisable to Employ Best Materials.

The selection of the plumbing materials for a house should not be left entirely to the plumber but should be made personally, together with the assistance of the plumber and of the architect or builder.

This should be done out of fairness to the plumber. Too often a certain stipulated sum is set aside for the plumbing materials and the plumber told to go ahead and do the best job he can at the mentioned price. Then when he proceeds on this basis and the work is done, there is dissatisfaction because one's faucets or tub or brass fittings are not as good looking as those, perhaps, in a house across the street.

This decidedly was not the plumber's fault because he was concerned chiefly with getting the job done at the sum stipulated. And likely enough that sum was too small, for by the time a home builder reaches the plumbing, he has often spent more than he expected to in the first place and feels he has to economize there.

Get Architect's Advice.

Indeed one very good way of selecting your plumbing materials is to proceed first with your choice. Decide on what you want. Take the advice of a good architect or builder on what you should have to insure best results from your plumbing equipment. Then find out what the price will be and consider.

Plumbing fixtures, especially those in evidence, though the same principle applies to those not in evidence, if one does not wish high repair bills from inferior grades, must be chosen with consideration for their quality and design first of all. It goes without saying that the purchase of your tub and your lavatories is vitally important for they are permanent fixtures.

Regarding the Pipes.

In regard to the pipes used, if one of them is to be subject to dampness from outside, galvanized piping should be purchased or else brass. A wrought iron pipe will conduct the water just as well, but rust takes place much more rapidly.

Qualities of plumbing, the brass fittings, the vitreous ware, the enameled iron fixtures, are determined largely by the manufacturer's stamp. One can trust the stamp of a good manufacturer whose wares are recognized for their worth.

Where enameled ware fixtures are employed the quality and thickness of the enamel should be inspected. If it is a good quality it will reveal a smooth surface. Good quality materials often cost little more than poor quality fixtures and this difference, whatever it is, should not be begrudged. For no work is more important in the house than the plumbing.

NEW FIXTURES ADD EFFICIENCY TO CLOSET ROOMS

The garment capacity of the small closet is being ingeniously increased these days in various ways.

Now we have offered an extension garment carrier or clothes closet fixture, which is sturdily built, nickeled, and is fastened to the underside of a shelf. An inner rod slides noiselessly forward and backward on roller bearings and clothes hangers are suspended on this rod.

Any home owner can install these after the house has been built. Besides increasing the capacity of a closet these fixtures eliminate the old time hook which is likely to create considerable confusion in an average closet.

Beautiful!

MORTON "Venetian" Bathroom Cabinet

The MORTON "Venetian" bathroom cabinet—the most beautiful on the market—serves a dual purpose, for it adds both beauty and utility to the bathroom.

It appeals especially to women because the large, graceful and beautifully etched mirror serves as a dressing glass. This mirror completely conceals the cabinet. Four deep, roomy shelves provide ample space for medicines, cosmetics, etc.

The "Venetian" offers the home builder a splendid opportunity to beautify the bathroom at very little expense. Once installed, it lasts a lifetime, costs nothing for upkeep and adds greater value to the home.

MORTON Cabinets—made right in Chicago—are available in seven distinctive models and in a variety of sizes. Besides the "Venetian," are cabinets to recess or hang on the wall, all with a high gloss white enamel permanently baked on. A damp cloth cleans them instantly.

Installed in thousands of homes, apartments, apartment hotels and hotels. See our attractive booth at the Home Show. Other exhibits at the Builders' Building and Main Factory. Visitors welcome. Illustrated booklet sent on request.

HOUSE SUCCESS IS SECURED BY SMALL DETAILS

Consider Floors, Walls, Ceilings as Unit.

In building a house it is well to remember that with the exterior, so with the interior, its success depends largely on whether the detail, architecturally and otherwise, is good.

The living room, dining room and hall are the three rooms which have the most detail. The architectural elements consist of the fireplace, wainscoting, cornices, ceilings, beamed or otherwise; the built-in furniture and the door and window trim.

The floors, walls and ceilings are the three main elements and if one wishes to create an impression of height the floors should be darker than the walls and the walls darker than the ceiling.

You will find a parallel to this in an out of doors setting. If you first notice the ground with its bushes and shrubbery, these are stronger in hue than the distant fields or hills, and these fields and hills are stronger than the sky higher up.

Impression of Space.

In a room, an oak floor with dark rugs, the walls hued some soft pastel shade and the ceiling treated with white or a faintest tinge of color, creates not only an impression of cheerfulness but also of space. Reverse this, have your floors light, your walls darker and your ceiling darker still and you will have a gloomy interior.

Formerly floors were concealed with heavy carpets, often gaudy of coloring. Then came floors of brightly colored wood—parquetry floors they were called. These parquetry floors, now made of uniform blocks of wood, inconspicuously colored, are still very good. A floor of brick or tile is also good. The floor to be avoided is the conspicuous floor which fairly jumps at you when you come in the room.

Drop Picture Rail.

If you have a ceiling which is too high, you can lower its effect by dropping the picture rail four or five feet and treating the wall space above as part of the ceiling.

Or again you can have a wainscoting three or four feet deep, painted or stained to match the rest of the woodwork, and a smaller space between picture rail and ceiling. Wainscotings are used in a high ceilinged room that has cream or white woodwork, but a wainscoting of dark wood is too formal for any room excepting a hall or library or a living room with dark tinted walls.

Plain whitewashed ceilings are safe, but a cream wash is better, just as cream wood work is preferable to dead white.

Trim Should Be Simple.

As for window and door trim there is an expression that interior detail cannot be kept too small in scale. Of course this is an exaggeration, but still it has an element of truth. Trim should be kept small and simple.

Your woodwork may be painted the conventional cream, white or French gray, or it may be painted yellow, dull green blue, gray green, yellow green, or other similarly subdued combination tones, if the rest of the color work in the room is skillfully carried out.

Ventilating Exhaust in Kitchen Eliminates Odors

Cooking fumes and heat from gas ranges and stoves no longer need make the kitchen an uncomfortable place for the mistress of the house, nor need these fumes enter other rooms. The introduction of the ventilating exhaust fan in the kitchen window removes all odors and keeps the air fresh and cool. This fan, which is not conspicuous, also serves the purpose of preventing walls from smudging, owing to grease and dirt.

ON SHORE OF LAKE

E. H. Klaber and E. A. Grunsfeld Jr. are the architects who designed this residence, owned by Frederic Greenebaum. It is in Sheridan road, Highland Park, and overlooks the lake. The exterior is of whitewashed brick and shingle. There are fourteen rooms and a two car garage is contained in the building. Architecture is English.

LOOKING BACKWARD

To April 3, 1917; 10 Years Ago Today

Preliminary work will soon begin on the theater and office building to be erected by A. H. Woods and associates at the northwest corner of Randolph and Dearborn streets. The office building will occupy the present site of the Borden block and will be ten stories high. The theater will be in the rear on Dearborn street, on the site of the old Athenæum block. Marshall & Fox are the architects, and the cost will be about $600,000.

A. H. WOODS. [Photo by White.]

A transaction of unusual interest in Hyde Park boulevard frontage property was closed during the week, a notable feature of which is that it means the removal of the old weatherbeaten board fence which was erected more than forty years ago by the late John H. Dunham on the north side of the boulevard, between Dorchester and Woodlawn avenues.

The announcement is made in connection with the purchase by John A. Carroll, the Hyde Park real estate operator, of 600 feet of frontage of the property.

To April 3, 1907; 20 Years Ago Today

Chauncey Keep bought from Caroline Morgan the property at 333-35 State street for $165,000. The property is 120 feet south of Congress street, on the east side of the street, and is just north of the old Park, and now the Folly, theater. It is 40x133½ feet, with a three story and basement building, and the sale, which was negotiated by E. C. Waller Jr., was at the rate of $4,125 a front foot.

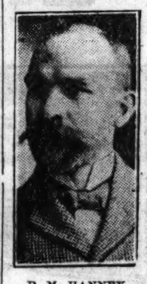
CHAUNCEY KEEP.

John Cudahy sold to John Jeffrey, the builder, 75x125 feet of vacant at the southeast corner of Stratford place and Evanston avenue [now Broadway] for $13,125. The purchaser will improve with a high grade, fifteen flat building. H. G. Wells & Co. negotiated the sale.

The Chicago Post Graduate school sold to Frank A. Eckhart the property at the southeast corner of Armour avenue and 24th street for a reported consideration of $25,000. This transaction places in Mr. Eckhart the title to the entire frontage along this street from 219 feet south of 22d street to 25th street.

To April 3, 1897; 30 Years Ago Today

Siegel, Cooper & Co. have several sites under consideration for the location of a new factory for the Hazel Pure Food company, of which they are the largest stockholders. Frank H. Cooper, P. M. Hanney, president of the Hazel Pure Food company, and a number of real estate men visited West Chicago and Waukegan last week to look for a site.



P. M. HANNEY.

George A. Fuller, president of the Fuller Construction company, has acquired from G. A. Armour the residence at the northwest corner of Prairie avenue and 30th street. The ground has a frontage of 52 feet on Prairie avenue and is 196 feet deep. H. S. Black, vice president of the Fuller company, probably will occupy the house.

A. E. Kent has plans for improving the property at the northwest corner of Calumet avenue and 54th street, 130 x83 feet. The building to be erected will be two stories high and will have stores on the first floor and an amusement hall on the second. It will cost $20,000.

OIL, GAS HEATING CUTS DRUDGERY OF HOME OWNER

Cost of Operation Is No Longer Excessive.

There are now two modern methods of heating a house which eliminate the task of firing and shoveling coal during the winter months. These methods are oil and gas. They provide a solution of the heating problem which, probably more than any other, has kept many families in apartments.

Neither of these methods is any longer prohibitive from a cost standpoint.

A vast number of home owners are now burning oil in their furnaces where they formerly used coal. Thermostatic control regulates the majority of these oil heaters and provides not only even heat whatever the weather outside may be, but keeps down the cost of fueling by oil through a regulating of the amount of heat sent through the rooms.

Differ as to Cost.

It is impossible to say how oil heat compares in cost with coal heat in every case, for the experiences of home owners on this point differ. Some people claim they heat their house for less by burning oil. Others say the cost is about the same, while still others claim it is more expensive.

When one takes into consideration, however, that there is no furnace to fire, ashes to clean out, ashes to dump, and that one can be gone all day and come back and find the house the same warmth as when one left, even though a northwest zero blizzard is raging, the small additional, if there is an additional, cost is not begrudged in the opinion of many home owners.

The number of people who are installing gas furnaces in their homes is also increasing each year. A gas furnace fits in with any kind of heating plant, as does an oil furnace, whether the plant is steam, vapor, hot water, or hot air. Thorough insulation, always advisable in any house, is especially urged by gas companies installing gas furnaces.

Insulation Lowers Cost.

An insulated house protects the rooms against the ravages of cold winds and drafts and less gas needs to be consumed in heating it adequately. There is thermostatic control with these gas furnaces, which regulates the heat in all rooms during the day, lowers it at night, and starts it automatically in the morning.

No longer need the woman in an apartment say: "I'd be glad enough to live in my own home if it weren't for the furnace problem. My husband is gone so much—and I have enough to do without shoveling coal in addition to my other work."

Oil heat and gas heat have done much to lighten home upkeep and, from all indications, will continue to do far more in the future than they have in the past.

BUYS MILWAUKEE AVENUE STORES.

Ralph O. H. Klotz has bought the one story stores at 3933 Milwaukee avenue, lot 96x125, from Stanley Woxny for an undisclosed price. Whiteside & Wentworth were brokers.

NEW LINOLEUMS ON MARKET HARMONIZE IN ANY HOME SCHEME

Linoleum may be purchased now to harmonize with any type of room. No matter what period your house belongs to, or in what style you carry out its interior decorations, you can choose a linoleum to fit in with your general scheme.

The floor is the foundation of any color scheme and the new linoleums are all color and spirit. Vivid, if you desire to express your room in lively tones, or softly subdued if that is the idea you wish to express.

There are marble tile designs in linoleum which carry out the Spanish or Italian spirit and which are not out of place in other types of homes. In laying this linoleum it is an excellent idea first to apply a layer of builder's deadening felt, and then the linoleum, afterwards giving it a thorough waxing and polishing.

SOME MEASURES BY WHICH FIRES MAY BE AVOIDED

Basement and Roof Need Special Attention.

Every house contains a certain definite number of fire hazards. The time is approaching when probably every house will not only be fire resistant but fireproof as well. However, until that time comes the best one can do is to build, as far as possible, with all fireproof or fire resistant materials. One should build so that fire spread may be checked and furthermore there should be portable fire extinguishers at all points which are commonly admitted to be danger points in a home.

The furnace of course, is one of the first fire hazards. Often one fires too furiously in cold weather or fills a furnace so full that sparks or live coals fly out and ignite. Rubbish is always a fire hazard. It can smolder away unseen in a basement until suddenly the walls are all aflame.

Unlighted Matches a Peril.

Broken windows should always be mended in a basement. In the occasion of a fire the draft caused by a missing window pane or damaged door is serious.

If a basement is wired for electricity it should be used here by all means. If the cellar is lighted by gas be sure that the flame is at least eight inches from the wall, and that it is never exposed.

Probably more fires have occurred from matches, lighted and unlighted, in a basement than any other one single source. A match carelessly flung aside naturally is a dangerous thing, but so is the match in the basement which has never been lighted. For one mouse or one rat, nibbling this match as a possible morsel of food, can cost the entire price of the house.

If there is an electric stove in the kitchen be sure that the voltage is heavy enough. Also in regard to all the lighting fixtures in the house, be sure the wiring is done by an expert. Take two wires and splice them together with a socket at the end and you have a light, but you may also have a short circuit and a consequent fire.

The Christmas Tree.

Scarcely any mention need be made of the Christmas tree candle now for it has been almost entirely superseded by the electrically lighted tree. Where people still cling to the candle lit tree because of its beauty and its association, correct securing of the tree so that it will not tip, choosing ornaments which are not too inflamable and doing entirely away with the cotton padding beneath it, all help to lessen the fire hazard.

No electrical apparatus, such as iron, toaster, curling iron, etc., should ever be left turned on while the user departs on some errand which supposedly will only take a minute. Many fires start in this way.

IF YOUR CHIMNEY IS LACKING KEEP WATCH FOR FIRES

Smooth Inside Wall Is Safeguard.

The new chimney for your house may be of brick, concrete blocks, hollow tile, stone, but whatever its material, it should have a fire clay lining to secure a straight flue of uniform dimensions. This smooth inner surface eliminates the possibility of a chimney fire. In case the lining is omitted, be sure there is an extra thickness of brick on the inside.

Many chimneys in old houses have no firelining, and their walls are built only one brick in thickness, the inside of the flue plastered with mortar. This kind of chimney remains tight for a time, but after a while the heat makes the mortar dry, it falls out of place, and an uneven flue results. This single brick joint between the hot flue and any surrounding woodwork is the cause of many fires.

Cause Many Fires.

Insurance companies claim that defective chimneys and sparks on the roof are responsible for nearly twenty per cent of all fires in homes. This shows that good chimney construction is as important as a good fire resistant or fireproof roof in the modern home.

One method of testing a chimney to discover its strength or its weakness is to use the "smoke" test. Build a smudge fire at the bottom of the flue, and then when the smoke begins to flow freely, close it tightly. If the smake escapes into other flues or through the chimney walls, it indicates that there are openings which must be closed before the chimney is used.

Not What It Might Seem.

Remember that with chimneys, as well as many other things in life, appearances are deceitful. On examination many a chimney is found to be an acute fire menace. It is much cheaper to rebuild a chimney, or build it correctly in the first place, than to build a new house!

Electric Radiators Find Favor in Small Houses

Electric radiators are now appearing in the moderate priced home. In appearance these are not unlike the gas steam radiator. They are more than half filled with water, which is heated by electricity. If the radiator is of average size the ordinary electric lighting current should furnish enough power. If the radiator is especially large, however, a special power circuit has to be installed. By turning on the electricity the water boils and fills the upper half of the radiator with steam. Then when a certain pressure is reached one-half of the current is turned off.

TOUCH UP HOUSE WITH WHITEWASH FOR AGED EFFECT

Spring Is Time to Clean Up Home Grounds.

Springtime is whitewashing time, and many suburban and country places with outbuildings that need a "dressing up" inside and out will find whitewash economical and practical.

In whitewashing the outside of buildings, the best results are obtained when the work is done in clear, dry weather. The surface to be treated should be cleaned of dirt, scales or other loose material by brushing well with a clean, stiff brush, or by first scraping and then brushing. The final results and the increased life of the new coating will more than compensate for the time and care required to be sure that the surface is in good condition.

Popular Everywhere.

Whitewash over common brick is becoming more popular in every part of the country, as it makes possible an early appearance of age in the newest house. Whitewash wears through under the action of the weather and produces in a year or so an appearance that ordinarily would require half a century to develop. Many persons wish their houses, especially if of colonial design, to take on quickly the appearance of age.

Special care should be taken to remove all loose material from the surfaces of old buildings that have previously been whitewashed, since if the old whitewash is scaly there will be no solid surface to which the new coating can adhere. Before applying the fresh coat the surface should be dampened so that the fresh wash will dry gradually. If whitewash is applied to a bone-dry surface it will usually chalk and rub off rather easily.

Wash Walls First.

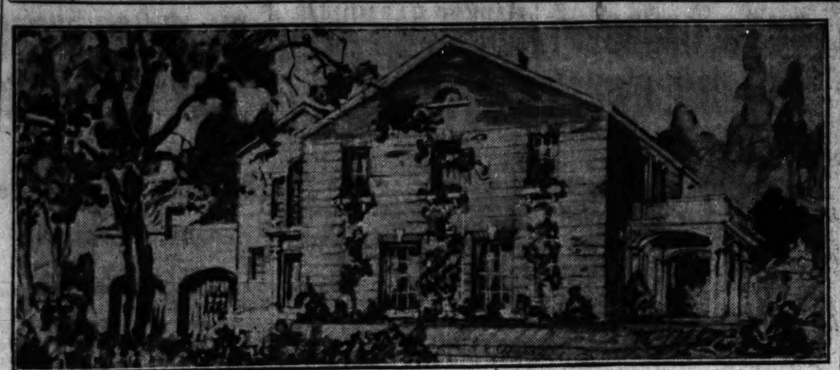
In using whitewash for interior walls and ceilings they should be washed off with a cloth or sponge and hot water if previously whitewashed or calcimined. All grease, dirt or old paper should be carefully removed, with a scraper if necessary, and the wall well washed. Nail holes and cracks should be filled with a mixture of four parts hydrated lime, or lime putty and one part of plaster of Paris, with enough water to make a thick paste. This paste should be forced well into the holes and carefully smoothed off flush with the rest of the plaster.

Whitewashes must be applied thin. The best results will be secured if the application is so thin that the surface to which it is applied may be easily seen through the film while it is wet. The coating will dry opaque, however, and the thin coat will give better results than a thick one. The whitewash should be spread on evenly and as quickly as possible.

BUYS BELMONT STORE BUILDING.

Joseph M. Simon has brought the two and three story store and apartment building at 929-35 Belmont avenue from John and Emma Schoepfle through E. B. Wolf & Co. Samuel Peterson and Isadore Brown were attorneys.

IN "THE WOODLANDS," HINSDALE



The above Colonial red brick residence was built by N. Bernard Benson in "The Woodlands," a Hinsdale subdivision, from plans by Wolf, Sexton Harper & Trueax, Inc. It has four bedrooms and a maid's room upstairs. Downstairs are living, dining, and breakfast rooms. The garage is attached.

METAL LATH PROVES BIG HELP IN HAVING BEST OF PLASTERING

There is no question that plastering can be no better than the lath on which it is placed. If the lath warps and buckles, the plaster will crack.

Metal lath is the accepted plaster base on all fine work for it prevents the cracks in the plaster which are due to a faulty lath. The tremendous strength given by this reinforcement running through the plaster in every direction prevents almost all of the cracks which otherwise might be caused by doubling or movement in the structure behind the plaster.

The first cost of plastering is about 6 per cent of the total cost of the ordinary job. This means a really fine job of plastering. Possibly you could save 2 per cent of this 6 per cent by taking the very cheapest bid offered when your plastering is let.

That difference of 2 per cent in the cost of your house means the difference between ornamental and most attractive interiors in every room or most unsatisfactory, cracked, stained and shoddy plastering.

Just think what one thing in the building makes the most difference in its appearance. Fine bath room fixtures of course affect that one room, woodwork, trim and all of the mill work about the house may warp and the paint may come off, yet the repairs are comparatively inexpensive, and repainting amounts to very little. But plastering vitally affects the beauty of every room in the house. From the time you enter the front door the plastering is about all of the interior which meets your eye.

Now this plastering may be a beautiful thing which sets off to the very best advantage every piece of furniture and every picture, all of the decorations and ornaments in the home. Or it may be the cause of a cheap, shoddy looking job, even though the house may otherwise be new.

There is no one item in plastering which affects the permanent beauty more than the metal lath. Craftsmanship is essential to artistry, a proper mix of mortar is necessary for permanence, but the plaster base or lath on which this plaster is placed is the first essential for the permanently beautiful job.

STUDY SITE WELL BEFORE CHOOSING A HOUSE DESIGN

The importance of buying a large enough lot for the home cannot be over emphasized. If one had to choose it would be preferable to purchase a large lot in a more inexpensive part of town or city than to choose a smaller lot in a more costly locality—a lot which is no wider than that required by law to hold the house.

To be sure there are some types of houses which can adapt themselves admirably to a narrow setting, while other houses equally well designed are ruined by not being given the proper background.

One fact, however, stands out above all others to be remembered in considering the question of a house and lot; that is to study the lot before one buys it in reference to the type of house one anticipates building, and once having bought the land, consider again the type of house best suited to it, before the first spadeful of ground is broken.

Convert Space Too Small to Move In Into Closets

Every inch of space is utilized by the wise home builder today. Wherever there is a space too small to move about in, convert it into a closet or cupboard! A small cupboard, five feet high, built in the butler's pantry, will hold extra table leaves. Above this, by placing shelves with glass doors, vases may be contained, and all kinds of miscellaneous house articles and ornaments.

These Renters Tell How They Bought Homes

High Rent Forced This Couple to Buy

ORLAND PARK, Ill.—The following has been our method of acquiring a home:

Of course, we rented like the majority of young married couples do. We continued doing so for five years. Then our rent was raised so high something had to be done.

We discovered, incidentally through THE TRIBUNE, a pretty piece of ground 100x100 feet for $450. We planned a $6,000 bungalow. The owner of the ground was also a builder. He agreed to build the house on that lot for $500 down, which we didn't have.

We decided we would get it. My husband secured extra work Saturday afternoons and evenings in a haberdashery. He had ample time as he left the office at 1 o'clock that day. I sold a popular ladies' magazine and worked three nights a week and Saturday afternoon in a ladies' specialty shop.

Every penny of this was saved until we had accumulated the necessary $500. This amount was paid down in March, the house started and we moved in May 1, paying $60 on contract.

We have lived here three years and have a $2,000 equity. We have worked to make the place attractive both inside and out. My husband terraced the lawn, made pretty gravel paths and driveway and did the decorating himself.

We have been well rewarded in having been offered for the place $1,500 more than we paid. So we are selling and will leave with a clear $3,500. We will then pay $1,000 down on another home and will place $2,500 out on loans at 6 per cent.

What better plan could a couple adopt to get ahead in the world?

Mrs. F. D. J.

HAWTHORNE CLUB FINANCES 600 WORKERS' HOMES

Loan Body Plays Big Part in Development of City.

Huge construction projects, stadia, and civic improvements have so engrossed the attention of Chicagoans during the past few years that the phenomenal activity in home building and the development of the suburban areas have been allowed to progress practically unnoticed.

L. E. MULAC.

Building and loan associations have been a large factor in the development of the outlaying districts and no city in the world has taken advantage of the opportunities offered by these associations as have the people of Chicago.

An outstanding example of the success of these organizations is seen in the Hawthorne Club Savings, Building and Loan association at the big local plant of the Western Electric company. Since the incorporation of the association on Nov. 10, 1920, for $1,000,000 under the statutes of the state of Illinois, nearly 600 homes have been built or financed, and more than 200 houses will be added to the number this year. On the first of April, $100,000 worth of approved applications were ready to be acted upon, and this number represents but a small proportion of those which have yet to be gone over.

The Hawthorne association was recently granted permission to increase its capitalization to $10,000,000, making it the largest industrial building and loan organization in the country. It has played a major part in the introduction of the industrial worker into the property owner class, Western Electric workers in large measure, having added to the attractiveness of all the west side suburbs, notably: Riverside, Cicero, Berwyn, River Forest, La Grange, Oak Park, Westmont, Brookfield, Downers Grove, Hinsdale, and all the communities within strategic proximity to the great Hawthorne works, where 30,000 persons are employed.

Nearly 3,200 Members.

At the present time, nearly 3,200 Western Electric employees are members of the Hawthorne association. Some idea of the extensive activity of the association may be gleaned from the fact that in the first nine months of 1926 Hawthorne workers financed new homes, representing a total valuation of more than $1,000,000. In the same period, more than 600 new members joined the association. The assets at the close of 1926 were close to $2,000,000, while outstanding loans amounted to $1,790,261. It is expected the association will better all previous records during 1927.

A popular phase of the Hawthorne association is the savings feature. For the members who are not buying homes or contemplating building, thrift by this plan has many advantages. Since December, the Hawthorne association has paid out more than $350,000 to members who are taking advantage of the opportunity for saving. With few exceptions, the recipients of these savings have returned the funds immediately, for further investment, not only putting the money they saved back to earning interest again, but also placing at the disposal of the association large sums which aid in financing aditional homes for other classes of members.

The Western Electric workers at Hawthorne now hold 58,000 shares with a matured value of $5,800,000, and the continued success of the association is seen by the fact that 500 new members subscribed more than 5,000 shares for the March issue. New series of the association open the first Saturday of every September, December, March, and June.

Approximately, one million dollars will be paid out in loans this year.

Officers of the Association.

The officers of the association are E. A. Hauser, president; F. Novak, vice president; L. E. Mulac, secretary; and J. P. Krivanek, treasurer, and T. M. Chisholm, attorney. The following constitute the supervising board of directors: E. B. Torland, D. C. Brady, E. A. Hauser, F. Novak, L. E. Mulac, J. P. Krivanek, R. R. Winklepleck, C. O. Hahn, and W. M. Johnson.

In commenting upon the marked success of the association, L. E. Mulac, an engineer in the Western Electric organization and secretary of the association, said:

"When the housing situation created by the inactivity in building operations during the period of the war began to be acute in and around Chicago about June, 1920, the matter was taken up for serious consideration by the members of the Hawthorne club, the works employee's organization.

Various Plans Considered.

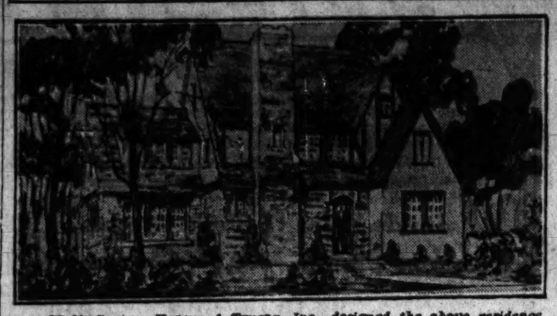
"At that time, various plans were considered, and numerous suggestions were offered to formulate some scheme of assisting employés in building or securing at reasonable prices in order to supply the demand for housing facilities, which was increasing day by day and boosting rental values accordingly.

"Of the many plans considered, the building and loan association plan fulfilled most nearly the conditions to be met in financing homes for Western Electric people. By this plan, a large number of investing employees are able to benefit through coöperating to assist their fellow workers in securing homes without excessive cost."

PRAIRIE-50TH FLAT BUILDING CHANGES HANDS

A reported $87,500 was paid by Jacob B. Shapiro to Leavina J. Meagher for the twenty-four flats at the southeast corner of Prairie and 50th. S. E. Gordon was broker and Robert Berg and Tarnopol & Flamm were attorneys.

A HINSDALE HOME



Wolf, Sexton, Harper & Trueax, Inc., designed the above residence which Cary De Butts erected for his own use in "The Woodlands" section of Hinsdale. It is of stucco and stone, with three bedrooms, sleeping porch, living room, dining room, and breakfast room. The design is English.

PLAN STORES AND FLATS AT KEDZIE-FOSTER

A building to contain five stores, five flats, and three offices is to be erected at the northwest corner of Kedzie and Foster on the 40x125 lot, title to which was recently taken by the Home Bank and Trust company at an undisclosed consideration. Peter Karshalios of Gust Patsios' office represented all parties in the site purchase.

WILSON-LEAVITT FLAT BUILDING SOLD FOR $90,000

The fifteen apartments at the northwest corner of Wilson and Leavitt were sold by Minnie Hartung to Fred W. Hensel for a reported $90,000. A. H. Hediger of the office of Oliver O. Miksch and the Logan Square Bond and Realty company were brokers. Clyde C. Fisher was attorney.

In Building Home, Be Sure to Be Right, Then Go Ahead

In the building of your house, first "be sure you are right and then go ahead." Know as much as you possibly can before you design your house or buy your materials or start in to build! Then you will be sure your floor plan is what you want, your materials the sort you desire and can afford to pay for. In every way all this will increase your joy in your home.

Garage Built in Residence Should Have Concrete Floor

A built in garage should have a floor of concrete. Nothing in the way of a substitute should be considered and it should be so laid that every portion will drain readily. This will prevent the accumulation of oil deposits which might catch fire. Walls and ceiling should be of materials which will stand the "one hour fire test."

Fifteen Flat Building Is Announced for Yale Ave.

Work will begin at once on a fifteen flat building at 6809-11 Yale avenue by the La Salle Construction company for John W. Carlson. The cost is placed at $50,000. The project was financed by the Paramount Mortgage company.

Pay $175,000 for 30 Flats on North Marshfield Ave.

The thirty flats at 3425 North Marshfield have been bought by William A. and J. R. Shirk for $175,000, according to C. C. Campbell of William D. Murdock & Co., broker.

Our Free Home Exhibit at the address below. There are large aluminated models, actual photographs and detailed blue prints of popular home designs. We would also gladly show you any of the many completed "Honor Bilt" homes in this city. Or if you prefer others under construction at the present time so that you can more readily see the many money saving features of our "Honor Bilt" system.

"Honor Bilt" homes are planned on the principle of skyscraper construction. All material is carefully cut and fitted at our mills before it is delivered on the job. In the building of skyscrapers every modern means of rigid, permanent construction is employed; every method to eliminate waste, to save time, material and labor is strictly enforced. The steel beams are ready-cut and swung into place; no confusion, cut-to-fit; the same as in our "Honor Bilt" homes. Our "Honor Bilt" system saves the cost in skilled labor.

Only the highest principles of building construction are followed, as recommended by the Bureau of Standards, Washington, D. C. "Honor Bilt" homes embrace the best points of hand cut frame construction, and, in addition, save you from $500 to $2,000. The cutting and fitting of the lumber and millwork is done in our factories, the largest of their kind in the world.

SAVE $500.00 to $2,000.00

37,500 "Honor Bilt" Homes Built

More than 37,500 "Honor Bilt" homes have been built. 25,400 have been erected by customers themselves. "Honor Bilt" homes are easy to build. Every piece of lumber is marked to correspond with numbers shown on the plans, which we furnish free; the smallest pieces are bundled and marked so as to save time in locating. With each house we furnish a booklet which explains and illustrates the simple directions. We ship you all material, for a complete house, including lumber, millwork, roofing, building paper, paint and varnish, hardware; also, plumbing, heating and lighting fixtures. One order brings it all. Material we furnish is shipped to arrive at the job when that particular material will be needed. We do not furnish masonry materials.

The Best Easy Payment Plan Low Interest Charge

All you require is a Building Lot and a little money to help pay some of the labor. You only need a building lot if you or your friends can do some of the work. Sears, Roebuck and Co. will sell you on easy payments all materials, and advance cash to pay for most of the labor, and give you a long time to pay. A small payment each month as you would pay rent makes you the owner of a good substantial modern home in a few years. Your interest becomes less each time you make a payment. Our EASY PAYMENT plan has enabled thousands of families to get out of the renter's class and own their own home in a short time.

Highest Quality Material

The lumber furnished for "Honor Bilt" homes is bright and new, fine, dry No. 1 framing, clear Cypress for outside finish, and clear siding. Expert mechanics, modern machinery and good materials insure perfectly made millwork. Oak, Birch, Fir, or Yellow Pine (as specified) for interior finish—the kind of material that will prove to be a little better than generally used in home construction.

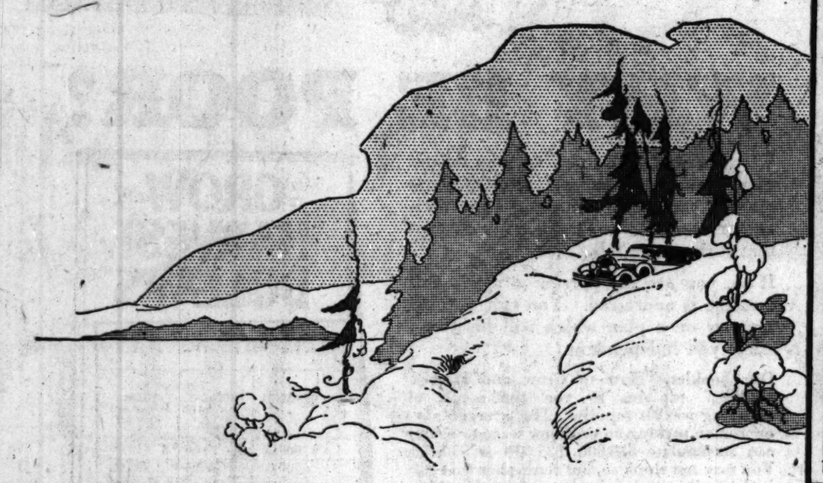
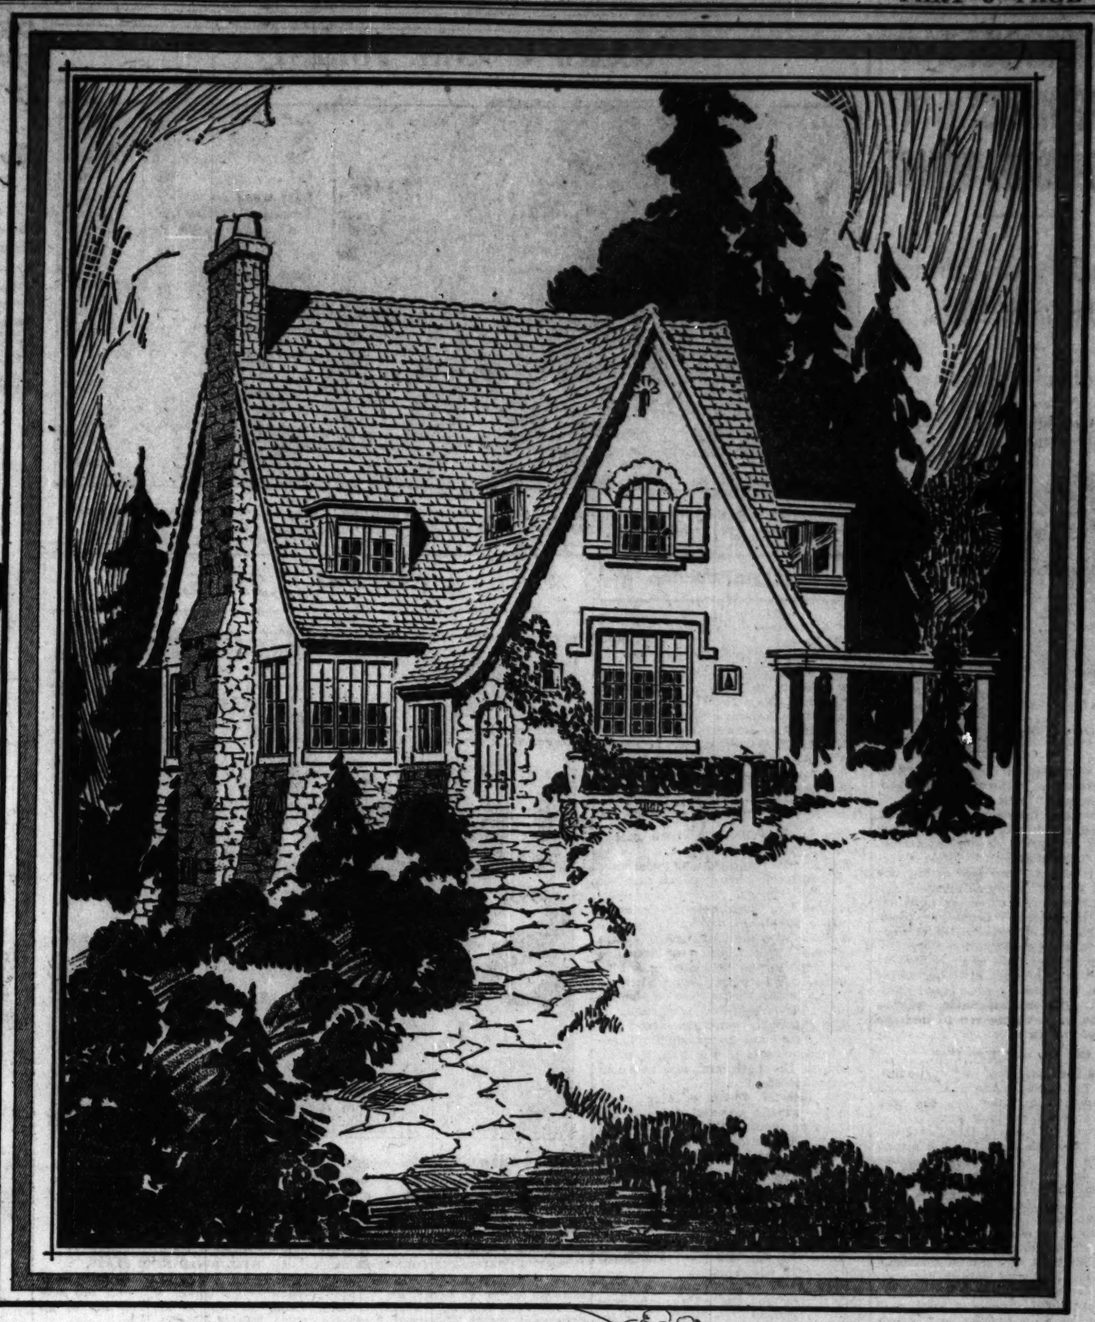
Your most important building decision is insulation ... ...with INSULITE!





Residence of H. H. Brockhausen, Madison, Wis. Architects: James R. and Edw. J. Law

IN the building of your home there are two main factors of construction to consider—its structural strength, that it may withstand wind, and weather and time—and its ability to prevent heat wastes and moisture condensation—enabling it to withstand the varying outdoor weather and give even temperature comfort within.

Structural strength is possible without insulation—many earlier built houses were solidly constructed, but were veritable sieves to the outdoor heat or cold. And some sort of insulation, too, is possible without structural strength—many homes built of late years having one sort or another of insulation, but in forms of material that add nothing to the firmness and permanency of the building.

INSULITE

Is the One Insulation Material That Combines the Highest Degree of Insulation With the Greatest Structural Strength

INSULITE—which is pure wood fibre felted into half inch boards—is so rigid and strong, that besides its superior insulating value, it takes the place of other materials used primarily for structural purposes. And considered solely as an insulating material, INSULITE, according to official tests, is the foremost insulating material now known.

By using INSULITE you not only get better insulation—saving heating money and enjoying greater comfort winter and summer—but also get greater strength. By combining these two vital features of construction in one material, you save much in construction costs.

Sheathing, Plaster Base, Wall Board

INSULITE Sheathing makes twice as strong a wall—besides affording an unusually high percentage of insulating value. It takes the place of the ordinary sheathing, and you do not need to buy building paper.

INSULITE Plaster Base gives you better looking inside walls, in addition to another half-inch of efficient insulation, and takes the place of lath.

INSULITE Wall Board is fine for finishing up rooms in the attic, basement, and other parts of the house where plastering is not required, and saves the cost of plaster, lath and wall paper.

As a building material, INSULITE costs little if any more than other materials. If there is any added cost it is largely made up in the ease and rapidity with which it is applied.

Insulite Pays Yearly Dividends

As long as you live in a house insulated with INSULITE, the dividends are constant—every winter. Your fuel bills are from a fourth to a third less. In a few years the entire cost is paid back, and then the INSULITE begins returning actual profits.

You cannot afford to build without using INSULITE—the all-wood building insulation—half an inch thick.

Line the attic of your present home with it, and see how quickly heat losses are reduced and how much healthier the house is. Line your garage with it, and prevent the car from freezing up in winter.

INSULITE is sold by good lumber dealers, specified by good architects, used by good contractors. Ask yours about it. And let us send you booklets telling about the advantages and various uses of this money-saving, money-making building insulation.

BRICK IS USED INGENIOUSLY IN 5-ROOM HOUSE

Wrought Iron Enhances Charm of Effect.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

Here the prospective owner of a five room house finds offered for his thoughtful study an ingenious adaptation of brick in the construction of a small residence of purely American domestic architecture.

LOUISE BARGELT. [Perry-Atlas Photo.]

It is the fourth prize in the five room division of THE TRIBUNE Homes Competition and has been designed by Hilliard Russel, 625 Lexington avenue, New York City.

The suggested materials for this house, according to the architect's specifications, are "brick and stone."

A limestone facing may be used at an added expense of only five or six per cent over brick, giving an artistic, smooth finished effect. If brick is preferred, it may be employed in any one of a number of different forms.

The history of brick dates from antiquity, back further even than those days when the children of Israel were driven to work in Egyptian kilns.

Today, no less than in those ancient times, it is a product of earth, water and fire, and resists with equal effectiveness the decomposition of the first, the waste of the second and the havoc of the third.

Of, By and For Fire.

It has been described as "of the fire, by the fire, and for the fire" and its fire resistant qualities are too well known to need dwelling upon.

The exterior walls of this house are of red "Flemish bond," which means that the brick is laid with alternate header and stretcher in each course. The headers are short faces and darker than the stretchers. This "Flemish bond" is a popular bond in Georgian and other good American work. If desired the exterior may be of English bond or common American bond. The roof is of slate in variegated hue, or of dark shingles.

In the construction of a brick wall it must be duly bonded and where the outer facing of the wall is different from the backing, both must be well tied together. It is here—as well as in many other points of house building—that a reliable building contractor supervising the construction job is a guarantee of economy in the long run, for a well built house is indisputably an economical house.

A Brick Path.

The path approaching the house is of brick, its paving laid herringbone or basket pattern. The brick may be laid directly on the ground, without mortar, but on a layer of tamped sand. Grass will grow up between the bricks in a year or so, creating a charming effect of rustic simplicity. For terraces and steps, however, the brick should be laid on concrete to resist frost.

In the garden, which is at the rear of the house, there may be a pergola of brick, subdued in tone, and avoiding any wide or conspicuous mortar joints. The two rear bedrooms overlook this garden and if there were a child or children in the house, a French door from this bedroom at the right, leading to steps descending to the garden, would afford a pleasure and play area both secluded and protected.

The entrance door is simple in effect, as are the porch columns. Some wrought iron should be included in all brick houses, if it is only an engaging porch bracket to light the approaching guest, an unadorned knocker attached to the door, or a foot scraper to protect the living room from the ravages of inclement weather.

Another Ham and Eggs.

Old iron and brick work have been synonymous for generations and work excellently together, since they both unite in contributing to beauty as well as to utility.

The plan of this house places all the rooms on one floor, giving to it a compact, apartmentlike convenience, and yet through its central hall affording considerable privacy to the different rooms.

The dining room and living room are in one, the kitchen is in the center of the house, and the two bedrooms occupy the rear, both rooms having cross ventilation.

The fireplace in the living room may be of red brick, checkerboard fashion. This checkerboard pattern is usually employed for decorative purposes only. A white fireplace and mantel can be substituted if desired, though this, in a suburban house where real fires are often built in the fireplace, is not so practical. Where an ivory mantel or fireplace is installed a gas or electric burning log is infinitely preferable.

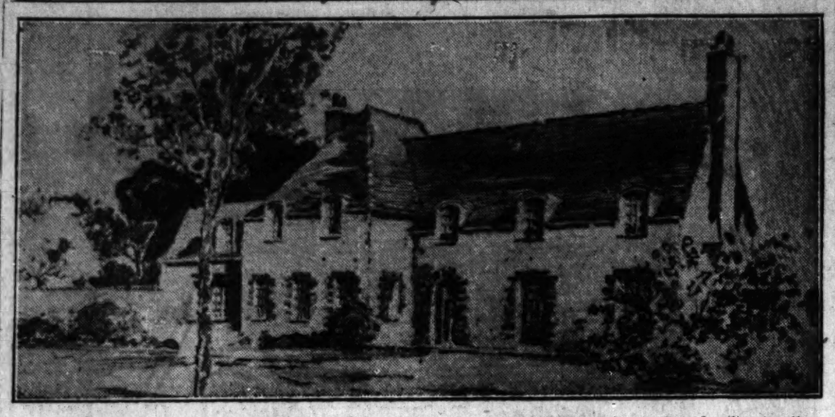
The extremely generous closet provision should not go unnoted. There are three closets in the hall, a small closet in the bath and one bedroom has two closets.

The interior finish of this home may be on the colonial order, ivory painted or enameled woodwork, with colonial papered walls. Excepting in the kitchen and bath, the floors are to be of oak.

Gas heat is installed in a hot water plant, and there is a gas fired laundry equipment, including dryer and incinerator.

The cost of a house like this, built of brick in the manner suggested above, will run between $9,000 and $10,000. Built of less expensive materials throughout, the price can be kept down to $7,500.

GRACING LAKE FOREST

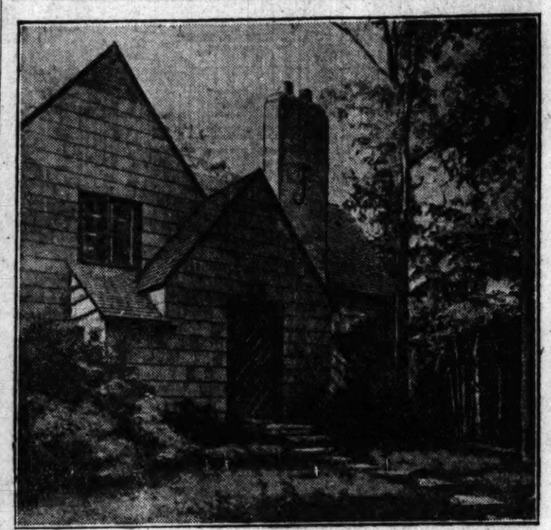


Lake Forest residence designed by Frazier, Blouke & Hubbard. The design is French. Construction is of common brick, whitewashed. The roof is shingled. Cost is estimated at about $45,000.

Beg Your Pardon

Carl Kingsbury of the office of Chandler & Montague continues to be an active tenant of the "Beg Your Pardon" department. One week an inspired compositor rechristened him "Mr. Ginsburg," which necessitated an apology. Now the bitter wail goes up that in reporting a Walgreen warehouse lease he was called "an attorney." Again we apologize. It seems also that the before mentioned lease was for ten years and THE TRIBUNE said it was for five. More apologies.

A COTTAGE SMALL



An attractive six room English cottage costing about $12,500. It was built for S. H. Foreman in Linden avenue, Highland Park, from a design by E. H. Klaber and E. A. Grunsfeld Jr. Occupying a site 75x200 feet, the cottage contains six rooms and a one car garage. There is a combination living and dining room. Exterior is of natural shingle.

FOSTER-CHRISTIANA CORNER SOLD.

The eight flats and three stores at the southeast corner of Foster and Christiana have been sold by Ralph O. H. Kloiz to David Greenspahn through Whiteside & Wentworth.

WILL BUILD NINE FLATS.

Hinkamp & Co. report that Patrick Nold, contractor and builder, will erect nine flats, costing $60,000, on the west side of Artesian, between 73d and 74th.

DEVISE NEW TYPE OF ARCHITECTURE IN THE MIDWEST

Homes Chalet-like in Effect.

A mid-western type of architecture has sprung up, which may briefly be described as the square house. It is a house of comparatively straight lines, with a roof which is sometimes steep and sometimes almost flat. The entire second floor may project a little over the first floor, and in this way the effect is not unlike a chalet.

Clapboards and shingles are both excellent materials in which to carry out such a house, and so, too, are brick and stucco.

There is an absence of all fussiness or elaborateness of detail, though abundant opportunity is given to the home owner to express himself individually as taste indicates.

Beauty and Economy.

It is a long cry from the boxlike structures built so frequently until only a few years ago; houses which had neither beauty nor charm to recommend them, but only an economy of construction.

Now it is an admitted fact that a house may be built for a small sum and at the same time satisfy the natural desire of every home owner for something besides sheer utility. The moderate priced house has taken on so many adaptations from different countries and periods that it is hard sometimes to classify it according to any type. Certainly it need not adhere strictly to any style.

Adapted to U. S. Needs.

We may say of a house, "It is in the English spirit" or the "Spanish," or the "Colonial," or the "French," or the "Italian." Which means that it possesses some of the features of one of these types, but stresses principally those elements demanded by the modern American woman; that it combines wisely and sanely, beauty with convenience, charm with comfort, and distinction with a reasonable building cost.

Sacramento and Fillmore Flats Sold for $92,000

Sixteen flats at the southeast corner of Sacramento and Fillmore were sold by Benjamin Tauf to Samuel M. Wolfberg for a reported $92,000. Charles B. Goodman and Morris Burr were attorneys.

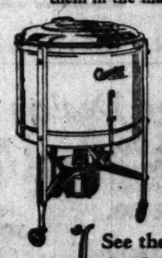
You Husbands

If you really want to be chivalrous

why not do it right?

A RECENT survey shows that 30% of the men in middle class families help their wives do the dishes. That is chivalrous indeed. But it goes only half way. It does not get rid of dishwashing for Her—360 hours a year of it, in the average family—45 days of solid work, DISHWASHING.

A Conover Dishwasher would enable her to rid the table, collect the dishes, stack them in the machine, have them washed, rinsed and dried, with from 15 to 30 minutes work a day.



Her soiled dishes from previous meals would all be stacked in the washer out of sight, ready for one quick washing after breakfast the next morning.

Think of the relief when there are guests for dinner or when you and she wish to spend an evening out.

She could rest after dinner with her family, instead of standing up to a messy pan of dishes. She could enjoy the evening meal without dread of what's to follow.

Too good to be true? Not a bit of it. The machine works fine. Hundreds of women in this community know from experience. They would not be without their Conovers if they could not get another.

You can see the Conover in any Commonwealth Edison Electric Shop

Ask them their opinion about it. Phone for a demonstration. You will be astonished how quickly and easily it works. 80% of all our demonstrations result in sales.

See the Conover exhibit at the "Own Your Home" show at the Coliseum this week—one of the most interesting there.

Lake Shore Drive, on account of its beauty, accessibility, and desirability as an investment, is Chicago's most exclusive residential street. FOURTEEN HUNDRED LAKE SHORE DRIVE, being two blocks south of Lincoln Park, on the northwest corner of Schiller street and across from the Potter Palmer homestead and Lake Michigan, is considered by many as the finest site for a residential apartment in the city.

In 1400 Lake Shore Drive every apartment provides for complete housekeeping, but a distinguishing feature of this co-operative project will be the available service in the building, which will be paid for only when it is used. It will contain a completely equipped dining room and commissary, under lease and the personal direction of Jean De Launay, formerly owner of the Meurice in Paris and Los Angeles and lately chef of the Blackstone Hotel and the Opera Club. Valet service, barber shop, manicure service, occasional maid service and housemen are available. In addition there are a number of shops on the first floor selected primarily for their usefulness to the occupants of the apartments. Many of these have already been let.

Operating expenses are guaranteed for three years, and the corporation will begin business with a cash paid-in surplus of $78,000 supplied by the builders.

A few of the apartments are still available for May 1st occupancy.

You will find Sloan Flush Valves in thousands of homes, giving the same efficient service as in the larger types of buildings.

CORRECT principles of design make delicate and troublesome regulating devices unnecessary in Sloan Flush Valves.

Constant regulation and adjustment are not necessitated by time and hard usage, as is the case with other valves, because there is nothing to regulate!

Experience has proved this feature indispensable to dependable operation. Engineers the country over, who have the responsibility and care of buildings equipped with hundreds of Sloan Flush Valves, consider it a prime requirement of satisfactory service.

In fact, the Non-Regulating feature is as essential to dependable performance, as the Non-Hold-Open feature is to efficient operation.

Combined in a single flush valve that permits no opportunity for tampering, that takes closing action entirely out of the hands of the operator, and functions with uniform efficiency at all times and under all conditions, "Sloan" offers to the architect, contractor and building owner a flush valve incorporating 100% satisfaction.

SLOAN FLUSH VALVES

A UNIFORM FLUSH

THE Automatic Closing feature found only in Sloan Flush Valves offers positive protection against insanitary or wasteful flushing.

Stop-watch precision in pressing and releasing the handle is never necessary to obtain a uniform flush at every operation. Sloan Flush Valves truly measure the flush; guarantee it, in fact, at every operation.

Imagine the savings effected during the course of a year in buildings possessing many Sloan Flush Valves. Count —if you can—the value in dollars and cents, of well-served tenants, and the satisfaction that goes with knowing precision-made equipment stands guard night and day against waste and insanitation.

FULLY GUARANTEED

SLOAN Flush Valves are unconditionally guaranteed for five years. The strength of this guarantee is far greater than its face value. Five years represent only a fraction of the uninterrupted service given by Sloan Flush Valves.

The first Sloan Flush Valve, placed in operation over twenty years ago, is still rendering faithful service.

The "Sloan" guarantee is backed by the entire resources of a great organization devoted to the manufacture of nothing else but flush valves. The efforts of hundreds of experienced craftsmen, the finest materials and the most exacting tests insure the dependable and lasting performance of every Sloan Flush Valve.

IN ECONOMIZING IT'S UNWISE TO START AT FLOOR

For Once Laid It Cannot Be Changed at Will.

The floors of a house are a poor feature on which to economize. Sometimes as a house progresses it costs more than anticipated, with the result that when it comes to the floors too great economy is practiced.

Good floors cost money, but substitutes, the just-as-good variety, are apt to cost more in repair bills, not to mention the worry and trouble which they bring in their wake.

A ceiling can be re-stained, worn walls can be refinished, but a poorly laid floor is in to stay.

Naturally the style of a floor fits in somewhat with the architectural style of the house. In the average small home the wood floor is the popular floor. Its possibilities are many and so are its virtues.

Oak Most Popular.

Oak, beech, maple and hard pine are all used. Oak is the most popular and quarter sawed oak the most desirable as figures of the grain come out which are not apparent in the straight sawed lumber.

Maple is much used, that is the hard maple, not the soft variety; beech is variedly grained and takes a high polish well, and hard pine is the least expensive. Birch and fir are usually considered too soft to be very satisfactory in the well constructed home.

When it comes to laying the floor, manufacturers should be consulted as to all details and there is a wealth of information to be had from the pamphlets issued by all good paint, floor and varnish companies.

A Spanish home or an Italian home may have tile or concrete floors. Concrete is cheaper and may be given any tint or color to match the walls. Tiles, of course, are extremely artistic and tremendously durable.

Slate and Concrete.

Slate is being used now, in sun room or living room, and may be obtained in a variety of patterns. Composition floorings are popular, especially for bathroom, kitchen and laundry. They are warm, sanitary and reasonably priced, and can also be placed in other rooms, as they come in imitations of marble rugs, brick, mosaics, and can be had in charming luster and tone.

Concrete, if poured over old wood, wears well, fills all the joints and crevices and acts as a seal to the floor. Cork tiles also make an excellent covering for old floors, the real cork, not the imitation cork, if one has in mind a material which will last and give real satisfaction.

Sound Muffling Important Consideration in House

Sound muffling has become a part of the present day standard of livability in the small home. The children will not be heard so much, nor need they be so constantly reminded "to keep still" if, in the building of the home, adequate attention is paid to this matter of sound deafening.

WEST MADISON STREET SALE.

Thomas and Mary E. Cooks have bought the three one story stores at 5920 West Madison from Paul Steinlauf at a reported $45,000. Clausen Brothers were brokers.

HIGHLAND PARK RESIDENCE

William B. Eisendrath is the fortunate possessor of this attractive residence, situated in Ravinia Terrace, Highland Park. The architecture is English. Natural shingles and whitewash brickwork form the exterior. A feature is a porch having a roof open to the sky. E. H. Klaber and E. A. Grunsfeld Jr. are the architects.

A SEMI-SPANISH TYPE

A seven room home with garage attached. It has been built in Wilmette, is of the semi-Spanish type, and can stand on a fifty foot lot. The exterior walls are of a mottled type of face brick. Designed by C. W. Lampe, architects, 155 North Clark street, Chicago.

NEW BUILT-IN TYPE WARDROBE IS SPACE SAVER

Built-in wardrobes are now on the market which serve a number of distinct purposes in the small home as well as in the large one. These are equipped with hat shelf, drawers, large and small, a sliding rod on which ten to twenty dresses and suits may be hung, and shoe drawers besides.

These are 1 foot 8 inches deep, 2 feet wide and 6 feet 8 inches high. The wood is thoroughly treated against the onslaughts of vermin. These wardrobes, it goes without saying, furnish extra storage space in one-third the space ordinarily required for an equal amount of clothing. They save the cost of a chiffonier, allow shallower closet space between bedrooms and can act as a complete substitute for a closet if desired.

It is figured that in every sixteen rooms in a hotel enough space is saved to make a seventeenth room. If this saving is accomplished in hotels, it is not negligible in a small home.

Six Apartment Building on Ingleside Avenue Sold

Henry M. Bloom and Max Blum have sold the six flat building at 5124 Ingleside to Peter Fabish for $50,000, according to Aaron Bodenweiser and associates.

Visit Plasterers' Exhibit at Own Your Home Show

Do not miss the exhibit of the plasterers at this Own Your Own Home show. Probably there is no one thing in the average building concerning which the home owner and the home buyer knows less than about plastering. The ugly cracked and stained jobs of plastering could not exist if those who are buying the buildings were fully informed as to just how to know good plastering. This is your opportunity to find out exactly what the plasterer who puts the plaster on the wall believes to be the right materials and practices.

'Houselegger' Name Given to Unscrupulous Builders

There is a newly coined term for the class of irresponsible, get rich quick building concerns, from which no city or suburb is entirely free, that fail to live up to the ethics which govern the legitimate real estate man and honest speculative builder. They are called "Houselegger" developments.

BUILT-IN CHINA CUPBOARD UNITES THE OLD AND NEW

The modern china cupboard is at once ultra-up-to-date and quaintly old-fashioned. By this one means that to be strictly in vogue it must be reminiscent of bygone days.

On the market today there are many types of the "built-in" cupboard, which, instead of presenting a tiresomely standardized appearance, have a distinct individuality. There are cupboards for the colonial dining room and the English, Spanish, Italian, or French.

Simple dresser effects emphasize the informality of an English cottage dining room, wrought guarded shelves harmonize with a continental atmosphere, and in a colonial dining room no cupboard is more attractive than the corner cupboards with leaded glass doors.

Flush With Wall.

So excellent is the workmanship of many modern cupboards that no one would think that they were "built-in" excepting for the fact that they are flush with the wall.

A certain proportion of homes today are built with double service rooms—that is, with the dining room and living room thrown into one. In a room of this sort the picturesque china cupboard becomes a practical feature as well as a decorative asset. Here one may be placed which offers drawers for the linen.

A cupboard may be as large or as small as one desires. It may reach to the ceiling or come down to the baseboard. It may be a simple arrangement of five shelves or present an intricate wrought iron grill to accommodate itself to a Spanish interior.

Two May Be Used.

Furthermore, a room is not limited to one cupboard, but, if the mistress desires, two may be used; one perhaps to break the length of a wall side and another to occupy some niche or corner à l'Italian.

Sometimes one sees a small dining nook with all its corners converted into cozy cupboards. As long as the balance of the room is preserved the cupboard or cupboards installed will be charming points of utility and interest.

LEASES FOREST PARK WAREHOUSE.

The Flintkote company, roofing materials, has leased the one story warehouse at 7715-7725 West Van Buren, Forest Park, for a term of years, at an annual rental of $3,900. E. Orris Hart of Chandler & Montague and Robert M. Smith of F. A. Hill & Co. were brokers.

PAINTED WALLS OR WALL PAPER, TAKE YOUR PICK

Adapt Style to Type of Architecture.

The interior walls of a home may be papered, paneled, painted, or decorated with various forms of stucco. The stucco may be in sand or mottled finish and is to be applied to the inside plaster walls. These finishes may be of rough or smooth texture and even or uneven in general appearance.

The use of wall paper is always a simple, satisfactory, and not too expensive way of treating walls. The variety of wall papers now on the market is almost limitless and suitable papering for any period or style of house may be chosen. The colonial wall papers now manufactured should be mentioned especially in this connection, for they are charming and picturesque to the extreme and add greatly to the interior decoration of colonial homes.

Painted walls offer a finish which is pleasing and very durable. Wall paints may be purchased in practically every color and the light, soft colors as well as the richer, deeper ones make an excellent background for pictures and furniture.

Paneled walls in solid wood are more expensive and sometimes hard to achieve in small homes where doors and window openings interfere with the symmetrical panel. However, there is no lovelier form of wall treatment than this paneling, giving to a room a restful serenity as well as an individual distinction.

Stucco sand mottled finished walls are much in vogue now. One sees them in the Spanish home, the Italian, the French, and the American non-period dwelling. In choosing a sand finished wall one should be careful not to specify too rough a surface lest it catch dirt too easily.

Also a capable workman should be engaged to apply the coatings to the plaster underneath. With wisdom used in the selection of the finish and efficiency employed in its application these walls can be said to be effective and satisfactory.

REFRIGERATION BY ELECTRICITY IS CONVENIENCE

Electric refrigeration is one of the comparatively recent household conveniences which electricity makes possible, and its chief object is to prevent the spoiling of foods.

Refrigeration of perishable food products means control of the bacteria that can cause decay or other changes. The principal factor in the control of bacteria is uniformity of temperature, and there is no question that this uniformity of temperature, particularly in the case of small refrigerating units such as are used in the home, can be better maintained by electric refrigeration than by ice.

The convenience of the electric refrigerator and the fact that once properly installed it needs practically no service is another point in its favor. Again with electric refrigerating, the family can make its own ice from water of whose purity there is no question.

Electric refrigerators are made in all sizes, from installation suitable for the largest cold storage warehouse down to one small enough for a family of two.

Concrete Paint Used for Concrete Masonry Homes

During the last few years cement paint or whitewash has been extensively used on common brick for fine homes, and now this same treatment is being applied to homes of concrete masonry. A white painted exterior adds a note of charm and in many instances accentuates the period design.

No wonder that people everywhere have eagerly accepted Celotex . . . that more than 119,000 homes have been built in six short years with the material that adds these amazing advantages. Modern living-standards as well as building-standards demand them.

In no other way can you secure the joy of living that Celotex can build into your home. (2) Under plaster, replacing lath, Celotex builds stronger walls and ceilings . . . less apt to crack . . . free from lath marks. (3) and (4) Celotex is used as interior finish and attic lining either in its natural tan color or decorated. (5) As roof sheathing, Celotex provides insulation where it is most needed. (6) As garage lining it helps protect the car against freezing.

CONCEALED BEDS ADD EFFICIENCY TO SMALL HOUSE

Save Expense of Having an Extra Room.

Built-in beds will play their part in space saving and extra room efficiency in many a new home to be built this summer.

The problem of expense in present day home construction is a vital one. The house of four, five, or six rooms demands attention paid to every possible inch of space economy. An extra bedroom costs from $1,000 to $15,000, not to mention its furnishing and upkeep.

It is here that the built-in bed, or the closet bed, installed when the house is built, or added at a later time, is coming to be appreciated for the simple way in which it offers extra room accommodation at a moderate price. Through its service, a woman can convert her five room home into six, or even seven room efficiency.

Used Throughout West.

These built-in beds are already being used considerably in the bungalow home throughout the west. They have been used for a long time through the entire country in hotels, apartments, and apartment hotels.

It is obvious that any space saving device, so much an asset in the small apartment, would be equally an asset in the small home. Space is quite as valuable to the housewife for her comfort and convenience as to the apartment owner for the increased rental values it gives him.

A bedroom in a small house, after the large double bed is placed in it, or small twin beds, has little space left for anything except sleeping. Take an average family of four; two adults and two children. It is needless to say that every inch of floor overall is quite as valuable to the housewife as to the apartment dweller, and she could use to advantage that space employed by the beds in the daytime.

Give Extra Day Space.

One built-in bed, completely concealed in the daytime, would give much extra needed space to the master bedroom, so that at all hours of the day, as well as of the night, it could be used for different purposes.

Two built-in beds in the second room would make it large enough for a playroom for the children, if they were young, or a study room for the son or daughter if older. Or if there was only one child, they would provide extra sleeping space for occasional guests.

A COUNTRY HOUSE

A country house in the Norman style, to be erected in Highland Park this summer. Designed by Lynn C. Jones of the firm of William C. Jones, 19 South La Salle street, Chicago.

TWIN GABLES

Twin Gables is a name that might be aptly applied to the attractive English cottage type of residence pictured above. The house may be erected on a fifty foot lot. Unique construction is found in the walls which are built up of a fireproof wall unit, unified by means of concrete poured into voids. The cost is approximately $16,000. Allen E. Erickson, 7 West Madison street, is architect.

NEW TYPE OF GAS LOG GIVES CHEER WITHOUT SMELL

The home owner who wishes to burn a gas log in his grate no longer needs to fear that it will be a "smelly affair." New style log burners are odorless. Metal burners insure excellent combustion and one does not need either vent or flue in the fireplace. Each log has an individual feed, and a reservoir for water in the back keeps the air in the room moist.

One can burn electricity in the grate with equally good results; the effect of sleaping, swirling, real fire is often created, and if one desires one may have an attachment which makes these electric grate fires "for looks only" without adding any heat to a room perhaps already overheated. If warmth is desired it can be made to throw it immediately outward into the room.

The mantel, of course, may be made an integral part of the grate and the assortment of possible mantels is so great that the home owner can have one to fit any type of room. If he wishes he may buy one without any paint and finish it himself to match his woodwork precisely.

Electric Ranges May Be Had in Wall Shelf Models

New electric ranges for cooking may be had now in wall and shelf type models. They can be fitted into standard kitchen units or incorporated in built-in fixtures, and occupy no floor space at all. In small homes of the most modern and compact type they are useful. They stand about thirty-six inches high and weigh about 170 pounds. There is an even aluminum lined, equipped with two burners, the upper one a broiler.

Hot Water Heater May Be Used to Burn Garbage

With the same fire which provides the homes owner with hot water garbage may now be burned. There is a cast iron garbage chamber, and special flue construction carries smoke and gas to the rear and over the top of the garbage chamber, drying it. The dry garbage is burned by flames passing through it, and no smoke or gas escapes through the house.

MANY NEW USES ARE FOUND FOR ROMANTIC ATTIC

Junkpiles Make Way for Living Quarters.

The romantic old attic, stored with the discarded junk of a generation back, seldom exists any more. The old days are past when space did not have to be considered, and when the floor area of at least two good rooms in the attic and the same area in the basement was never regarded as important for anything excepting a place to store old junk.

Now it is recognized that a little time and money spent on the attic can convert it into usuable living quarters. And what family with one or two children, living in a six room house, cannot comfortably use an extra room or two?

Use Drop Stairway.

In studying the designs of new homes to be built, there is very often included in the architect's specifications the clause—"Two rooms and bath may be finished on second floor later on." Or, "by using a drop stairway, this attic space may be finished off and used for a library, den, playroom for the children or recreation area for the grownups."

Drop stairs are not difficult to obtain. Certain manufacturing concerns offer them for sale "ready to install" at the present time.

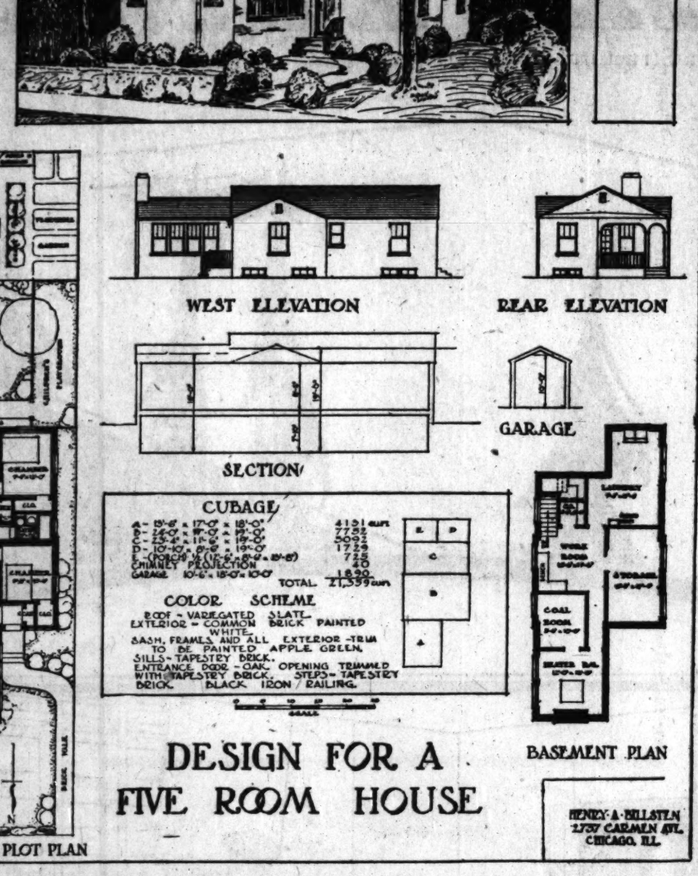
One must be sure that there is opportunity for plenty of air, light and warmth in winter, in the attic. The entire space should have a sound floor, the roof should be tight around the chimney and all flashings to prevent leakings. The roof may also be lined with a good wall board, and the windows screened. If there are small children, or even large ones, a rail around the stair hole may save a very serious accident.

Shelves for Storage.

Linoleum is in excellent covering for an attic floor, as it can be cleaned easily. One can save a part of the attic space for storage, using the low side walls on perhaps two sides for storing purposes and screening them off from view. Closets built along the low walls, with shelves at the back, are a big help in solving this problem of getting the utmost use from your attic space.

With a little study, a little work, and a little expense, this attic area may be made to offer to the entire household a place for study or for fun, and at the same time, house in its various corners, those many articles dear to a very woman's heart—the things she doesn't want to use but does want to save!

OF COMMON BRICK, PAINTED WHITE



Here is to be found an attractive design of a five room house submitted to The Tribune Homes Competition by a Chicago architect, Henry A. Billsten, 2737 Carmen avenue. The exterior is of common brick painted white, with roof of variegated slate. Observe the attractive landscaping suggestion at the rear of the house and the complete way in which every foot of space in the basement area is utilized.

WOMAN BUYS AINSLIE FLATS.

The six apartments at 854 Ainslie street were sold by Charles A. Nelson to Minnette Epstein for an undisclosed consideration. Joseph H. Edelson was attorney for buyer and Theodore Johnson for the seller. Cline & Dix were brokers.

WILL BUILD EVANSTON FLATS.

Clarence R. and Jane Parker are to erect a three flat building on Colfax street, forty-one feet west of Prairie avenue, Evanston. Stanley Piotrowics was seller. Hokanson & Jenks, Inc., represented both parties.

BUYS SIX FLAT BUILDING.

The six apartments at 227-29 South Central Park avenue, facing Garfield park, have been sold by Ida and Emanual B. Hoff to Louis A. Miller for an undisclosed consideration. George Brenner of the office of E. M. Nagle Jr. was broker.

IT'S SIMPLE NOW FOR ONE TO BUILD OWN FIREPLACE

Arranged So Every Brick Is Numbered.

It is possible today for the home owner to purchase brick fireplaces, with plans accompanying them giving detailed instructions on how to install them.

Diagrams such as these instruct one how to mould the lining that it may afford the most heat, how to place the head throat and damper that there will be no smoke, and what size to make the flue. Each brick will be marked, showing where it should be set.

Color to Suit.

The home owner can mention what color brick he wishes, and obtain with these fireplaces other articles such as head throat, damper, ash trap, fender and tiles for the front of the hearth.

There are many accessories which may be added to beautify the fireplace. A fire basket or an old fashioned grate come in iron to fit any fireplace. There are also the cradle grate types. In a colonial home a crane on which a pot hangs carries out the decorative scheme of the interior.

For the Clever Man.

These ready-to-build grates appeal to the man who is clever with tools and who can build at least part of his own house in his spare time. Fireplace screens should always be included in the fireplace equipment, that is, if one intends to use the fireplace, as it prevents sparks from flying or even chunks of small coal from leaping out across a room as they do sometimes when a grate fire of soft coal is started.

Fireplace screens are numberless in variety and they can be had in prices which match every pocketbook.

Chimney Pots Add Touch of Distinction to House

Chimney pots invariably add a decorative touch to the house. These may be had in varying designs, simple for the colonial and English cottage type of dwelling, or more elaborate for the French and the Italian. A wide choice of chimney pots in various colors is also possible.

VALUE OF HOUSE IS ENHANCED BY GOOD INSULATION

Moderate Cost Makes It Available to All.

Formerly adequate insulation was possible only in costly homes, because of its high price, but now there are so many kinds and at such reasonable cost that every home owner can afford to have his house thoroughly insulated.

Every one should know, if he buys instead of builds his home, just how thorough is the insulation so that he may be judge of the capacity of his heating plant and be assured that the house will stand firm under wind pressure and cold.

There are many kinds of insulation on the market. A prospective home builder should go over the ground himself, making comparisons between the different sorts and then consult his builder or architect regarding which types are particularly suited to the house he is putting up.

All good insulation contributes to the strength and durability of the house as well as to its heat, cold, and dampness resistance, and gives to it a proportionately higher resale value.

Lessens Fire Hazard.

Fire safety is also increased with added insulation, for there is no need of furiously forcing the heating plant in zero weather. Most zero weather fires are caused by this over-firing of furnaces by owners in a desperate attempt to keep comfortable.

As for the matter of lessened fuel costs, it stands to reason that the tighter the house is built the less warm air escapes outside and the less fuel it takes for heating. Furthermore, smaller heating plants are adequate in a well insulated house. There are those who claim that good insulation reduces fuel bills at least one-third. Whether or not this is true in all cases, it is at least a fact that thorough insulation is a material factor in fuel reduction.

While it is a difficult matter to insulate the walls of a house after it has been built, attic insulation at any time is easily possible at a comparatively small expense.

Loss at Roof.

Heat rises, and for this reason the greatest loss of heat—perhaps 60 per cent—occurs through the roof. For this reason the roof of all parts of the house should be well supplied with insulation.

People who have lived in a house a winter before attic insulation and who afterward installed insulation claim their fuel costs have been reduced 25 per cent.

Insulation protects against heat as well as cold; against dampness also, and affords protection against rain stained, unsightly walls.

In floors, too, insulation acts as a sound deadener, and on the first floor it acts as a protection from the drafty cold of the basement. Insulation on the basement walls is another way of making it simpler to heat a house and to keep it free from drafts.

Hollow Building Tile Is Excellent Insulation

Hollow building tile is excellent from a construction standpoint, for it is fire resistant and extremely durable. Furthermore, by the air spaces which are sealed up in a hollow tile wall it provides insulation against the penetration of heat, cold, and moisture. A home builder may have an exterior of face tile for his house in almost any desired color, or he may have the exterior surface of stucco or face brick veneer.

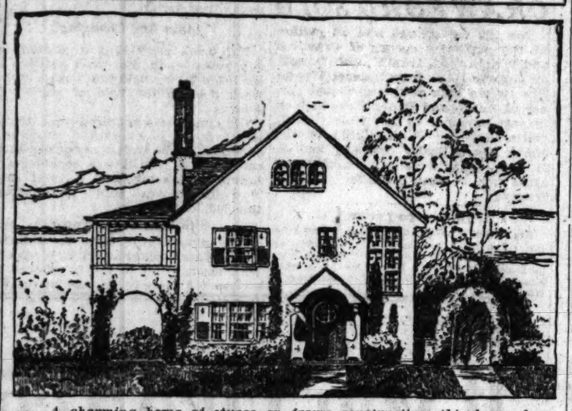
New Indoor Dryer May Be Attached to the Radiator

An indoor dryer can now be purchased which, attached to the radiator in any room, has several nickeled arms outstretched. Light things hung on these arms dry quickly when no other heat is obtainable. Afterwards, when not in use, they fold up tightly.

OVERLOOKING A RAVINE

Located on Morraine road Highland Park, and overlooking a ravine, this pretentious home was designed by E. H. Kisker and E. A. Grunsfeld Jr. for Claude Nathan. The architecture is English. Exterior construction is of brick and stucco on hollow tile. There are fifteen rooms.

STUCCO OVER FRAME



A charming home of stucco on frame construction, this house has been designed to stand on a fifty foot lot and can be built for approximately $11,000. The second floor may be so arranged as to provide staircase to the attic, with additional two rooms and bath if desired. American Homes Service Bureau, architects, 537 North Homan avenue, Chicago.

ROUGH PLASTERING OF DUTCH COLONIAL DAYS NOW IN VOGUE

It is an interesting fact that the rough surfaced plastering of walls which has always been typical of Dutch colonial houses and which ten years ago was considered "rather too rough" for an up to date home is now decidedly the vogue.

Textured walls, which make interesting effects of light and shadow and adapt themselves easily and inexpensively to wall decoration, are an integral part of the Dutch style.

These may be obtained either through an expert plastering craftsman or, if this medium is too expensive, by the use of any plastic paint now on the market. This paint produces tone and texture in one application.

Plastering of this sort fills in the ceiling space between exposed beams. In the days when the Dutch colonial type was created whitewash, paris green and oxide or vermilion were the colors chiefly used because they were the only inexpensive colorings. So, accordingly, white, or cream or pearl gray are the accepted tones for a Dutch colonial interior.

Real Dutch mantels are also easy for the home owner of moderate means to reproduce, for they are sturdy. They are built of brick, with a facing of white woodwork carried high and ending in a narrow shelf.

Built-in accessories can be used effectively in this type of house as well as in any other. Built-in book shelves, closets, cupboards of cross corner variety with glass doors—all fit in well with a home of simple proportions.

Sell Chappell Avenue Apartments for $60,000

Henning and Hjalmar Nystedt have sold the six apartment building at 7442 Chappell avenue to Richard and Mary Sinnott for a reported $60,000, subject to a first mortgage of $33,000. Draper & Kramer represented both parties.

Blackstone Apartment Building Changes Hands

The Blackstone apartments, containing ninety-seven rooms, at 5509 Blackstone avenue, were sold by Floyd Gale to Donald Wonderlich for an undisclosed consideration. Aaron Bodenweiser and associates closed the deal.

THIRTY DEGREE ANGLE ADVISED FOR MANY ROOFS

Unless a roof is covered with tile or metal it should pitch at least 30 degrees. Shingles or slate sometimes leak if they are laid on too flat a roof. The argument that the flatter a roof is the less material it takes to cover it has its weak points if carried too far.

All pitched roofs should be properly drained with leaders and gutters. A wood shingle roof may be laid directly on shingle lath and soon takes on a pleasant weathered appearance even if it has not previously been stained or treated. Slate, composition shingles, tile or metal roofs must be laid over sheathing, for their weight requires a heavier foundation than wood shingles.

Make your roof surfaces as simple and unbroken as possible. A window in a gable end will usually afford more light than a dormer and look better besides.

It is well to remember that if you want to keep the cost of your house down turrets, cupolas, towers, and the like cannot be indulged in. Furthermore, it requires a very clever architect to design an "intricate" small house and design it well.

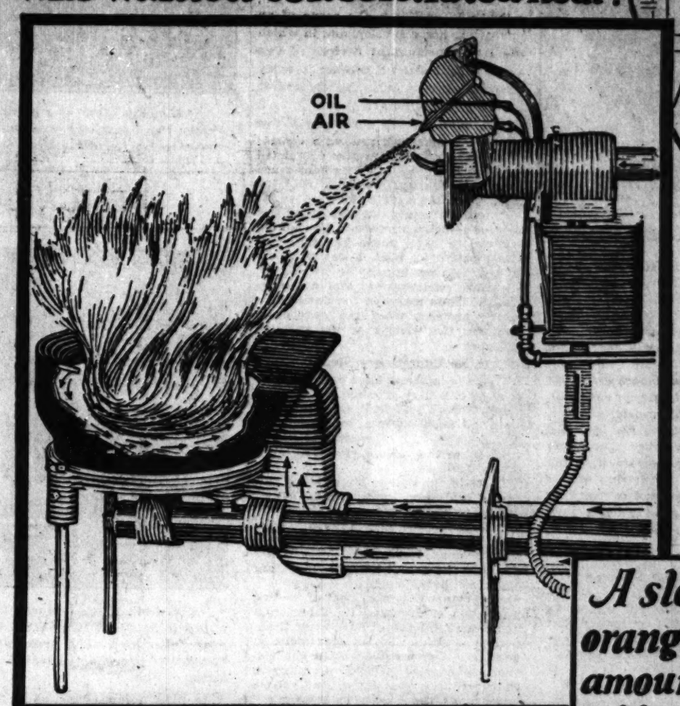
Remember When

Dealers adjusted burners so they produced a white flame to satisfy owners who wanted "concentrated heat"?



A slow flame of deep orange color gives greatest amount of heat per gallon of oil burned in the efficient/

Sundstrand
Oil Heat Generator

THE "slow" flame, produced by the Sundstrand, permits DIRECT DISTRIBUTION of intense heat over the entire heating surface of the fire box in the furnace. This enables the Sundstrand to produce more "applied" heat per gallon of oil burned than any other type of burner. The flame can be regulated easily to fit the size of the fire box.

Quiet Sundstrand "Progressive" Combustion assures Quiet Operation. The noise of burning oil is eliminated in the Sundstrand through low pressure atomizing—partial ignition and gradual development of the flame all the way down to the fire bowl where final combustion takes place in a "slow" flame which never touches the fire pot and is cushioned on slowly swirling air.

Safe The Sundstrand's full automatic operation and complete control of oil, ignition and flame assures complete safety to the home. The Sundstrand giant ignition assembly safeguards against failure of ignition. The oil safety switch quickly stops the burner if even a small amount of oil collects in the fire bowl.

Economical Because it is equipped with a motor-driven pump that forces the flow of oil which is atomized under pressure the Sundstrand successfully burns a wider range of oils than other burners not so equipped. You are never at the mercy of the oil market if you own a Sundstrand and you are not forced to rely on one or two high priced grades of oil.

Reliable By reducing, by nearly half, the number of parts formerly thought necessary in an oil burner the Sundstrand engineers have avoided the trouble-inviting complications of former types of burners and thus produced a quiet, ecomomical and thoroughly safe oil heat generator. The Sundstrand is built by the same well-known organization of exacting engineers who build the Sundstrand Adding Machine—known the world over.

[Service and Repair Costs Less than $5.00 Per Year.]

The SUNDSTRAND has been perfected to the point where the average cost per burner was only $4.82 for the last twelve months. This means that Sundstrand Oil Heat Generator owners are not bothered with the "troubles" common to oil burners of the past, and dealers make and are able to KEEP their profits on each installation.

FARM and GARDEN BY FRANK RIDGWAY

Surveying Year's Record for Pure Milk in Chicago

Campaign for Disease Free Cows Is a Success.

ONE year ago Chicago closed its doors against milk coming from unhealthy cattle, particularly animals that were infected with tuberculosis. Since the revolutionary step was taken, in the form of an ordinance April 1, 1926, the city has received its daily supply of 1,500,000 quarts of milk from herds found free from tuberculosis by veterinarians testing and retesting under the co-operative state-federal plan.

It is a significant record for dairymen, milk distributors, and consumers to review. The pure milk campaign, started several years ago, has stood the test for twelve months, and shows evidence of continuing indefinitely so long as the city has a health commissioner who will enforce the regulations. It is significant in many ways because the whole program is working to the advantage of every person interested, and that means about every single man, woman, and child living within two or three hundred miles of Chicago. The record has been made despite the prediction of many men familiar with the Chicago dairy territory who said it would take at least three years, and some were pessimistic enough to say it would take ten years.

What the Records Show.

In addition to laying a rock foundation for dairying for hundreds of miles in every direction, it has a health angle that can never be accurately appraised. To date the value of the pure milk campaign can best be estimated by the records of the health department. These records show the following facts, briefly summarized by health department officials:

1. An ample supply of wholesome milk has been available to consumers in Chicago during the last twelve months, despite predictions that the city would go through a milk famine, resulting in heavy losses of infant life.

2. The price of milk to the consumer has not increased as predicted, but remains at 14 cents a quart.

3. Many farmers report that they are now securing more milk per cow from their healthy herds than before from diseased cows and are fully convinced that the elimination of diseased cattle was necessary and beneficial to the dairy industry from a financial standpoint alone.

4. A thirty-five per cent improvement in the quality of milk is definitely shown where thousands of samples of whole milk and cream were examined for their bacterial content in 1926 and compared with the previous year's bacterial counts.

5. The improvement in Chicago's milk supply has contributed to a marked reduction in deaths of infants under the age of one year. There were actually 532 fewer baby deaths during the year ending March 28, 1927, than in the preceding year, amounting to a decrease of 11.5 per cent.

Setting a Precedent.

Chicago has set a precedent which is being followed by many other cities throughout the United States, including such places as Cleveland, Detroit, Milwaukee, and Baltimore. Many of Chicago's suburban towns such as Evanston, Cicero, Waukegan and Winnetka, whose milk supply was largely that rejected by Chicago, have adopted the same regulations, requiring that all milk sold in these suburbs come from healthy cows.

The work in Chicago attracted so much attention that the officials of the United States Public Health service had their pasteurization equipment testing stations established here and their work is being done in cooperation with the health department.

When the pure milk campaign was first started by Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, commissioner of health, a relatively small percentage of the cattle supplying milk to Chicago was known to be free from tuberculosis.

The effectiveness of the campaign is indicated by the results of a series of tests made during the last twelve months on milk from tested and retested cattle which showed the complete absence of tuberculosis germs.

Chicagoans are proud of this accomplishment, particularly because Dr. Bundesen and his co-workers corrected what was once considered a hopeless situation in the face of opposition that came from pettifoggers, politicians, selfish agricultural leaders, unscrupulous cattle dealers, and ill advised dairymen who set out to help prove the pessimist's contention that it would take years to clean up Chicago's dairy territory and make milk safe for the city.

Ranking with the Best.

The record, as it stands today, was made possible by the fact that the whole city, Mayor William E. Dever, 511 milk distributors, hundreds of dairymen, the Pure Milk association, federal government officials, and Chicago newspapers backed the health commissioner in his stand.

Farmers who supply Chicago with milk today have a right to their claim that they are producing the most healthful supply of milk furnished to any large city in the world. That claim can be made by all dairymen with tested herds in the Chicago territory, even those who live in the old district of northern Illinois which was once known throughout the country as the "black dairy belt of America." Eighty cows out of every one hundred were infected in one locality, while today in the same locality the testing, elimination of diseased cows, and the restocking of herds with healthy animals ranks these farmers with the best dairymen in the country.

The health department is also carrying on a continuous campaign to see that the milk is kept clean from the time it is produced by healthy cows until it reaches the consumer. The city now has forty inspectors instead of the inadquate force of eight men employed at the beginning of the pure milk drive. The inspectors work with the dairymen and point out ways of improving their equipment and methods. If improvements are not made within a reasonable time the careless dairyman is barred from selling milk to Chicago distributors. In serious cases no time limit is given and the farm's herd is excluded from the Chicago market upon the initial inspection.

Raw milk samples are collected at the receiving stations by the country inspectors. The samples are subjected to one or more of the following tests: sediment, taste, odor and appearance, temperature and bacterial count.

Seven New Plants Built.

Another great improvement has been made in the pasteurization equipment used in handling Chicago's milk. A survey made a year ago showed that all the pasteurization plants had serious defects, which made it impossible properly to pasteurize milk in them. But the defects were rapidly corrected.

Seven new plants have been built; nine are under construction, and plans have been received at the health department for nine others. Twenty plants have been remodeled or enlarged, and twenty-nine plants have either consolidated or discontinued business during the drive to correct defective pasteurization equipment.

Horned Rooster.

HOOKING BIRD—This cock crows right in the faces of rams, billy goats, and bulls to let them know they are not the only things in the barn yard with horns. He is said to be the only one of his kind known, having two well shaped horns two inches long over his eyes. The horns, experts say, are actually the rooster's spurs. He has no spurs on his legs like other 2 year old birds. The horns are hard, but not attached to the skull and are growing an inch a year. This rare fowl is "cock of the walk" in John Tilley's barn yard at Arthur, Neb.

AUTOMATIC AGE TYPIFIED IN FIVE WINNETKA HOMES

Comforts of Apartment in the Country.

South Winnetka is the scene of an interesting home development in which the latest mechanical devices of this advanced age make it possible to enjoy the comforts of a flat in the city amidst suburban surroundings.

The development consists of five residences, arranged around a central court, which were recently completed for Miss Leah White. The homes are located in Sheridan road, near Fuller lane, across the street from the lake.

Automatic homes they are called and this designation appears to be well deserved, for each house has automatically controlled heat, a device to insure a regular supply of hot water, electrical refrigeration, and an incinerator. Thus many of the duties of a janitor are eliminated and there is no need for the iceman or the garbage collector.

No Unnecessary Steps.

Then the interiors have been planned so as to eliminate all unnecessary footsteps. There are built in cupboards, dish and book shelves, broom closets, and the like, and, of course, provision is made for the various electrical labor saving devices.

Three of the houses are of stone and two of brick and there is a variety of design, two being in the Spanish style, two French, and one American colonial. In size they are of seven and eight rooms. Incidentally Miss White designed the homes herself. In telling about her development, she says:

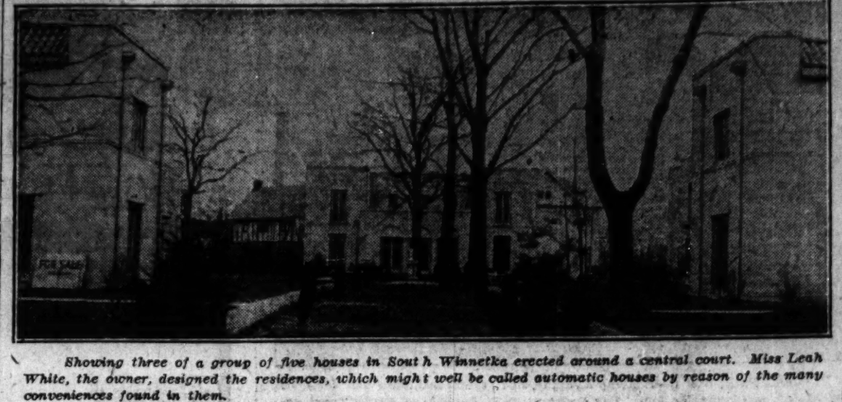
"Carrying out my idea of a few years ago of reducing the labor in a home to a minimum, I have made these houses as nearly like an apartment as possible. But we still retain the privacy, space, and isolation so much to be desired in a real home. And yet we have made the cost very moderate."

A Central Garden.

The central court on which the houses face measures 200x60 feet and this plot, for the use of all five, will be made into an attractive garden. In addition each home is to have a quarter acre plot for itself.

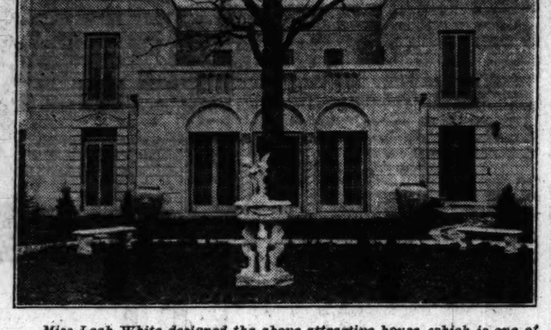
Garages are placed at the rear of each home. A driveway will extend around the rear of the dwellings, connecting the garages and permitting delivery men to bring their wares.

GROUP OF HOMES IN WINNETKA



Showing three of a group of five houses in South Winnetka erected around a central court. Miss Leah White, the owner, designed the residences, which might well be called automatic houses by reason of the many conveniences found in them.

DESIGNED BY WOMAN



Miss Leah White designed the above attractive house, which is one of a group in South Winnetka, built around a court in Sheridan road, near Fuller lane. This group of moderate priced homes was erected with the idea of providing as many conveniences as are found in a city apartment.

SKINTLING GIVES PLEASING EFFECT TO BRICK HOUSES

Saving Considerable Both in Time and Money.

Skintled brickwork is a comparatively new development in the common brick field and there is no doubt that it adds greatly to that relief from any accusation of sameness which has sometimes been offered as an objection to the common brick house.

In all brick laying two essentials are important; one is that there should be a pleasing blend of colors, either in bright sunlight or in growing dusk and shadow. Another is irregularity in shape and thickness. Even if this is slight it relieves any tiresome geometric regularity.

Ideas Are Changing.

The brick work that is skintled today holds much the same position in the brick laying field that rubble stonework does in the field of stone masonry.

Old time ideas required an extreme nicety in the evenness and plumbness of walls. If the wall was not perfectly smooth and even it was considered a failure and sometimes a total loss. Now the general trend is far from this old idea.

Skintling Gains Favor.

The mason who lays up skintled brick work concerns himself chiefly with seeing that in the roughness he strives for there is no regularity. He plumbs the inside of the wall, and lays his brick on that face only.

The skintled brick home is certainly fast leaping into favor. Wherever it is seen it is liked. It is economical in material price and in labor cost, for skintled brick may be laid with less painstaking care on the outer surface of the wall than where the mason is constantly on the alert for the least departure from accurate alignment. Skintled brickwork is also an extremely inexpensive solid wall to lay.

If you "take a chance" when you buy seeds you "take a chance" with your harvest

SOME gardeners will risk a whole summer's work on seeds that they know nothing about, except that "they were cheaper." Knowledge gained through disappointment is costly.

Ferry's purebred Seeds at ten cents per packet are the cheapest seeds you can buy and your harvest will prove their economy. For Ferry's Seeds have a national reputation for producing an abundance of flowers and vegetables that are ideal in size, shape and color.

The purebred quality of Ferry's Seeds is determined at our 850-acre proving grounds. More extensive seed tests are made there than anywhere else in the United States. For generations we have been carrying on this exacting work to protect everyone who buys Ferry's purebred Seeds.

Don't let a handful of nickels saved by buying ordinary seeds prevent you from having a garden such as only Ferry's purebred Seeds can produce. A Rainbow Garden of Gladiolus Flowers for $1.00

RARELY are flowers of the highest merit the most easily grown and surest of success. But such is the case with the gladiolus. If there is room for but a single flower in the garden, it should be this.

As a cut flower it is supreme. Its spikes, frequently bearing twenty buds, if cut as the lowest opens and placed in water, will keep fresh until all open. A planting of bulbs, dug each fall and carefully stored, will constantly increase.

Vaughan's Michigan grown bulbs come to you containing a flower which with any opportunity will grow for you. Our Rainbow Collection includes 30 flowering size bulbs, not less than five varieties, of wonderful coloring. A dollar never bought more of beauty.

IF DEPRECIATION IS TO BE EASED WATCH REPAIRS

One of the chief dangers against which the home owner must guard after he has built his home or bought one already built is the process of depreciation, which inevitably begins shortly after occupancy.

This requires care, caution, and common sense, and every small repair in the beginning spells large economy in the end.

The depreciation on a house is estimated at about 2 per cent of its value. That is, if a man owns a house valued at $8,000, its depreciation each year amounts to about $160. Like a car which costs to keep in good condition, so a house requires a certain outlay to keep in good shape. The encouraging thing about a house is that it can be kept so excellently that the depreciation becomes almost negligible.

May Remedy Cracks.

Doors and windows should be carefully watched. The snow should be swept away before it gets into the cracks. The sills and crevices should be free of dust, which can stain in time.

Cracks appearing in the foundation walls may be remedied by applying a cement, sand, and gravel mixture. The crack, moistened before this mixture is applied, will hold it.

Porch and steps may be preserved by a yearly coat of linseed oil to the wood.

Gutters cleaned each fall and guarded at the top of each down spout by wire kept free of leaves and other rubbish. Gutters painted on the inside and the joints waterproofed stay sound and in good condition.

In the spring it is a wise precaution to take down the furnace pipes and clean them thoroughly. The chimney needs to be kept in good repair.

Inspect the Radiators.

In the fall, when the screens are taken off, they require a dry place for storage. Storm windows last longer if the paint on them is fresh. In the spring paint the screen anew. If they are of wire, both the iron and frames may be painted. Thin the paint with turpentine for the wire, however. If the screens are of bronze or copper they should not be painted on the wire part. Wash it, and, if copper, give it a coat of oil. If the wire is bronze, lacquer it with bronze lacquer.

Drains should always be well flushed and in good condition. Radiators need frequent inspection to see that they are not leaking. A little leak is not expensive to mend, but a big leak is much more serious.

Answers to Questions on Home Owning

Why a Fireplace Smokes.

Dear Mrs. Bargelt: What makes a fireplace smoke? Ours has not done much else since we bought our house. We have not really been able to enjoy it a single night this last winter.
W. S.

Ans.—Anyone of several things may be wrong. You may have a poorly constructed smoke chamler, or none at all; your damper may be the wrong size; your flue too small; your chimney too low in relation to the roof ridge; there may be no damper or a badly formed throat. Sometimes chimneys with trees too close to their tops will smoke. Consult a local builder or furnace expert and have it thoroughly looked over.

How to Make a Frame House Safe.

Dear Mrs. Bargelt: Is there any way in which one can really make a frame house fire safe? We want to build a frame house, but are told it is a big fire risk.
C. G.

Answer—Engineers have devised a fire safe and insulated wood house at the present time. In this case the wood frame is erected in the usual manner but instead of a combustible wood sheathing which was formerly used, a sheathing of incombustible mineral is applied. This acts as a fire stop, eliminates the need of building paper and the interlocking tongue and groove joints seal the wall against wind and the escape of furnace heat. The insulating properties of this sheathing help to keep the house cool in summer and warm in winter. This sheathing also provides a perfect backing for any type of exterior finish. Protect the inside with incombustible rock and lath instead of wood lath, fill in the walls with incombustible insulating material, under the roof, between attic joists and floorings. Also have a fire resistive roof covering.

Your new home can be free from heating troubles

There is no good reason for letting cold, uncomfortable rooms mar the enjoyment of your new home. The Weil-McLain Boiler not only helps eliminate heating worries, but actually makes heating your home a pleasure, even on zero days. It safeguards the health and happiness of your family—adds to resale value—is truly a good investment.

Long back-and-forth fire travel

Fuel-saving corrugations in every section

The surface directly above the fire is most efficient. To prove this, first hold your hand at the side of a flame—then directly over it. You will find the hottest point directly over the flame.

The two great wastes

Heating men everywhere know that the common cause of cold rooms and the chief cause of high fuel bills are two great boiler wastes—waste down into the ash pit and waste up the chimney. And Weil-McLain has always contended that the most desirable boiler for the home is the one which most nearly overcomes these costly wastes.

We bring out this point for only one reason. Because we emphatically believe that we have taken a long step forward in overcoming these wastes.

Waste into the ash pit is ended

Weil-McLain engineers have achieved truly scientific combustion.

Due to a scientific design the fuel in the Weil-McLain boilers is thoroughly burned. The fire burns bright and clean. It lasts a long time, requires only infrequent attention and most clinkers are prevented. Costly waste down into the ash pit is practically a thing of the past.

Chimney waste is also ended

But Weil-McLain has gone still farther, by determining also to overcome waste up the chimney.

And Weil-McLain has succeeded. The corrugated crown sheet section, the corrugation of all other vital heating surfaces, and long back-and-forth fire travel combine to end waste up the chimney.

The heating surfaces in Weil-McLain Boilers are corrugated like this ∿∿∿ instead of flat like this ———.

The candle test shows that the surface directly above the fire is the most valuable heating surface in any boiler.

More heating surface in the same space

Increase the amount of heating surface in a boiler and you increase the boiler's efficiency. That is what Weil-McLain has done—without increasing the size of the boiler and without adding to its cost.

It's a simple matter, but an extremely important one. The heating surfaces are corrugated, as shown above, instead of flat.

Weil-McLain users save real money on their fuel bills because of this and other revolutionary improvements.

In the crown sheet section, directly above the fire, the corrugated design has added 40 per cent to the area of heating surface. In addition, similar fuel-saving corrugations have increased the area of heating surface in all other sections.

Back-and-forth fire travel

Finally, there are no short cuts to the chimney in this modern-type boiler. The illustration shows how the hot gases are baffled backward and forward until every available heat unit has been extracted and sent to your radiators.

These practical, fuel-saving features mean warm rooms on zero days and a real saving on your fuel bills.

And these added features

The Weil-McLain Boiler, from top to bottom, merits your detailed inspection. Everywhere you will find careful engineering and quality construction. Among these additional features are:

—Triangular grates which easily and quickly crush out stubborn clinkers

—Lower one-third of firepot smooth to avoid clogging and to permit clean shaking down of fire

—Large fire door for convenience

—Handy front clean-out doors in each section

—And more heat absorbed and utilized from oil, or any other kind of fuel or method of firing

See your heating contractor

Your heating contractor will gladly show you the many fuel-saving Weil-McLain features. He will also help you select the Weil-McLain Boiler best suited to your needs and quote you a price for installing it complete.

Write us, or our wholesale distributor in your territory, for a copy of our booklet, listing all sizes and describing every detail of these unusual boilers.

Unexcelled for use with Oil Burners

Weil-McLain Boilers are unexcelled for use with oil burners, because their corrugated heating surfaces, large water spaces and long back-and-forth fire travel supply the great amount of concentrated heating surface and fire travel required to absorb the quick, intense heat produced by modern oil burners.

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

Woman Can Gratify Her Desire for the Picturesque This Spring, for Paris Is Sponsoring Costumes with Motifs from Any and All Epochs of History.

By Bettina Bedwell.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—Paul Poiret said to me recently, "Every woman loves the picturesque and decorative in dress." It has been a secret love of late years, for picturesqueness has been the ingredient missing from the mixture of women's styles these last few seasons. We have borne our bereavement with astonishing fortitude, wearing our simple, nonromantic, straight styles as if we had no other desires in the clothes line.

However, I think Poiret is right and that we do like a certain touch of the picturesque in our clothes when it can be had without sacrificing chic. There are few women who are indifferent enough or have sufficient effrontery to affect such clothes when they are contrary to current styles. But given a chance to get herself up for a fancy dress party or carnival, any woman will have the time of her life rigging out a costume. So the introduction of this element into our regular clothes by Paris this spring is bound to have a lot of feminine supporters.

Fashions have been gradually veering around to the picturesque for some time. This movement has been given the caption of "the return to femininity." Not that we have actually been absent from it, but we have been rather meek and manlike lately in our slavishness to standardized clothes, which were often as unbecoming to us individually as men's clothes are to them at times. With bows, laces, scarfs, and sashes returned as part of more feminine fashions, it is a simple step to introduce the genuine character of the picturesque into the mode. This, Paris is doing in her own special way.

There are no radical alterations, as I have said before, of silhouette lines, but there are details that recall more romantic periods and fashions, and it is these that give the greatest charm to our new spring fashions. Paris hasn't gotten a complex on some particular period of history, such as Second Empire, or Directoire, or other, using it throughout the spring mode. Each house will show bits of perhaps a dozen different periods, so you can choose the one, two, or three having the greatest appeal to you. In fact, so broad is the scope of the spring mode, you could add something out of your own pet period and, if you were clever enough, get away with it beautifully, even if Paris never thought of doing it.

There is an epoch in American history that has a special lure for the French, and they never tire of it, and that is the vanishing epoch of the cowboy and the big cattle ranches. So it is inevitable, in this revival of the picturesque, that they should seize upon something from the cowboy for their spring fashions. They took the handkerchief and put it on the Parisian sports costume. Parisiennes love to wear these big soft handkerchiefs around their necks, and no cowboy dolling up in his bandanna for a community shindig can tie one more expertly than these ladies of France. I suspect this handkerchief revival is going to be one of the greatest die-hards that fashions ever saw.

The cowboy bandanna comes back into the Paris mode, worn with a jumper of green reptile and skirt of green mouslikasha.

Stiff gold satin, lined with lame and trimmed with green fox fur, makes this unusual Drecoll evening coat, worn over a dress of yellow georgette embroidered with green and gold beads.

The romantic sixties are recalled in this dance dress of pink crepe georgette with overskirt of ruffled black dotted net.

A distinctive afternoon dress from Drecoll is made of green-blue crepe, with straight waist, wide sleeves, and a skirt plaited in front and tiered in back.

Our first model, a sports dress from Drécoll, shows one way of using the handkerchief. It has a side buttoning jumper waist of some kind of reptile, marked like an alligator and green like a lizard, with a belt of black patent and a gold buckle. The buttons are of green bone. The skirt buttons at the side front to the hips, from which point a deep double plait is inserted. It is of green mouslikasha, a kasha with a mousseline finish. The handkerchief is of green foulard, striped with darker green, and can be draped in any fashion desired.

At the opposite side of our sketch is another Drécoll model that shows another kind of picturesqueness, taken from the colonial costume. This is an afternoon frock of heavy silk crêpe that is a cross between crêpe de chine and marocain. It is the new color that Drécoll calls "bleu d'orage," or storm blue, that pale greenish blue that appears in the sky just before a hailstorm.

The straight waist, with its row of enamel buttons, and its sleeves, which flare markedly from the elbow to the fitted cuff, are distinctive notes in the Drécoll collection. No less original is the skirt, which is plaited in front and composed of two tiers in back. These tiers flare slightly at the sides. Drécoll puts the waistline very near normal, but just enough below to give a great deal more charm than the real normal line has. This line is marked by a black belt that has a jeweled buckle.

The evening dress next this model takes its cue from still another of the romantic periods—the good old days when grandma was a girl. It also revives a fabric that has not been seen for more years than you can remember, and that is black dotted net. The waist of this dance frock is made of pink georgette, and the round neck and armholes are piped with self material. From a diagonal waist line that is marked by a crushed girdle of pink georgette, one end of which hangs beneath the skirt to below the hemline, the full skirt, made of scalloped ruffles of black dotted net, follows a diagonal line. There is a big butterfly of black net at the waistline, and the lifted hemline reveals a pink georgette petticoat, finely plaited, which replaces the pantalets that grandma wore. Model from Drécoll.

Our second model shows the evening ensemble for spring, with a coat of stiff gold colored satin, the kind of satin they used to wear in the romantic days, with big sleeves, tucked at the top and banded above deep cuffs by fox fur dyed a pistache green. The full collar is also banded with this green fur. An important detail of this coat, which hangs rather full from the shoulders, is its cutaway front and its extra length in back.

To go with the coat and make its inside as decorative as its outside is a lamé lining in green and gold. The dress is made of yellow crêpe georgette, cut into a simple bloused waist and a long tunic split at the center front to show a satin slip beneath. The bands are made of green and gold beads embroidered on to the georgette with gold thread. Gold thread embroidery is placed on the sides of the waist and the skirt.

In these ways Paris shows us how to indulge our natural love of the picturesque without disturbing too greatly the strict modernism of styles.

718—Woman's and misses' dress. Sizes 16, 18, and 20 years, and 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3⅞ yards of 36 or 40 inch material.

720—Girl's dress. Sizes 6, 8, 10, and 12 years. Size 8 requires 2¾ yards of 36 or 40 inch material.

717—Woman's and misses' dress. Sizes, 16, 18, and 20 years, and 34, 36, 38, and 40 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3½ yards of figured material and ¾ yards of plain 40 or 44 inch material.

HOW TO USE THE PATTERNS

A FLAT crêpe in beige was used in making the one piece dress, pattern No. 718. There is no dress more satisfactory than the one piece ones, and this design is smart and the pattern easy to follow. Back and front are each cut in one piece, and French seams used to finish. A slightly rounded shawl collar finishes the neck, and the opening is filled in with a vest, making a square outline across the front. The collar should be cut double and seamed together on the outside edge. Then it is turned to the right side, the seam basted so the edge is clearly defined, and pressed. Then it is basted to the neck of the dress, first pinning it to the dress at each end, and then in the center back. Baste a bias silk binding in place and stitch from one end to the other. Then turn the opposite edge of the binding over the seam and hem down by hand.

In cutting the vest, fold the material so the top comes on the fold. Seam down each side, turn right side out and finish across the bottom. Then tack the right side to the dress, and fasten to the left side of the dress with tiny snaps.

The one piece sleeves are gathered at the wrists into narrow bands. The narrow belt may be of the material or a leather one may be used, and the patch pockets finish the dress prettily. Embroidering the lower part of each sleeve in bright, contrasting colors would add much to the beauty of the dress, or if you didn't care to take the time necessary for that, why not embroider a monogram either on the vest, or the left front of the dress?

Bolero dresses are smart for little girls and grown ones. Pattern No. 20 will be pretty made in two materials, and is suitable for any of the crepe or light weight woolens. The little skirt is cut in two pieces and is slightly circular. This is joined to a long waisted sleeveless upper part. This is slashed at the neck in the center front, and the edges bound. A pretty round collar finishes the neck, and this collar lies over the bolero.

The bolero is cut in one piece—having no under arm seams—just those on the shoulders. To this the one piece sleeves are attached. One of the pin checks was used for the skirt and waist, and a solid color for the jacket. The sleeves are finished with turned back cuffs that match the general outline of the collar, and two inserted pockets are set in the bolero at the bottom

Pattern No. 717 is for an attractive afternoon frock. Crêpe Elizabeth or georgette would be suitable materials for it, and so would crêpe de chine or taffeta. Figured and plain materials are used in the making, and the pattern pieces are clearly marked so there won't be any difficulty in putting them together. The waist and skirt are cut separately and joined, a soft, wide band of the plain material being used for the sash which effectually covers the joining. The dress is to be slipped on over the head, the opening at the neck making this possible.

An outside facing of the plain material finishes the bottom of the skirt, and this plain material is used for the collar and lower parts of the sleeves. Many of the dress materials are shown both in solid colors and beautifully printed designs, and this particular design seems unusually well suited to a combination of materials.

An Even Keel in Money Matters

By DORIS BLAKE

To Be Neither a Midas Nor a Prodigal, but a Happy Medium, Is the Goal to Aim For When Making a Budget

FROM the financial angle, the ideal situation in a household is that the wife be competently thrifty in all matters over which she has control but that she does not "watch the pot" so closely that her sense of saving becomes miserly. For his part, the man should be endowed with that sense of responsibility that urges him to keep up insurance protection, to save what he can reasonably save after the usual expenses are disposed of, but to avoid the danger of niggardliness in money matters. There should be money for amusement, for the old adage about all work and no play will make matrimony just as dull as the boy, Jack, you've heard about.

Generally speaking, the great American fault is not the too saving one. But in the couse of my work here I learn first hand of hundreds of cases where the Midas spirit is encountered in man and wife. Usually it is the man who, once possessed of the saving urge, becomes cruelly mean about his wife's allowance. As one woman confided but yesterday, her husband has $200,000 and in her sixteen years of married life he has never taken her any place, never thought a vacation necessary for her, and her household allowance is meted out so meagerly she cannot get enough ahead to buy decent dresses for her young high school daughter. He never goes to places of amusement, nor takes a vacation because it costs money. The chase of the dollar has him gripped so that he cannot see the hate that engulfs his household.

Such revelations are not uncommon. And although this sort of home may be classed as the most unhappy, harboring as it does the seeds of hatred and often the hope of death for the tyrant who holds the purse strings taut, there is another kind of household where misery is known a considerable part of the time, although love may preserve it against complete disintegration. It is the home where financial responsibility is felt by the wife but where she is given no cooperation by the husband.

The irresponsible man and the thrifty wife-ambitious mother provide a problem that is intensely difficult to cope with. The difficulty is equally great where the wife is the fool in money matters and the husband's life is one long succession of coping with her money follies. Yet there is something more tragically moving about a woman eager to give her children a good education, a decent neighborhood to bring them up in, willing to make a thousand personal sacrifices in her effort to keep all her loved ones' heads raised in the community. And by some strange law of nature which draws opposites together you frequently find this sort of woman tied to a weak man whose weakness seems to reach its high peak on money matters.

The Story of the Browns.

There are the Browns, we will call them. Ella, a thrifty wife and mother is married to Ed, a good natured, lackadaisical and perfectly worthless husband. They live in a small town. Ed was a clerk in one of those chain stores that dot the country and he was one of the best liked men in his town. He never had a bad word to say about anybody. He could tell a story that would shake his audience with laughter. He spent a lot of time thinking them up, so much that he didn't like work to interfere—and seldom let it. Ella, as different from Ed as she could be, had energy, a sense of responsibility and an ambition which made her fight when life or the worthlessness of her thriftless husband sent her to the floor for the count.

The Browns had three children, Mary, Jim, and a toddler, known to his adoring parents and the rest of their world as "Larry." Ella dreamed dreams for these youngsters, as mothers have had the habit of doing since the world began. Mary was to be married to some nice young fellow when she grew old enough. Jim was to be something big in the business world, and Larry was to draw and paint because even at this tender age he smeared the house with colors from a paint box and Ella believed she could see likeness to human forms in them.

Ella talked her ambitions over with Ed and Ed agreed with her that the kids should get the best out of the world. As a matter of fact, he agreed with her in everything. He was one of those likeable, agreeable men.

Ella tried to put the house on a budget. Ed was drawing $30 a week and she figured out so much for this and so much for that. She had learned in her childhood that leaking pennies result in rivers of dollars leaving their owners and rendering them poor.

Would Have Worked, but . . .

It was a good idea and would have worked out to perfection except for Ed. He seemed to run under very heavy expenses. There were cigarets and a poker game now and then, and little knickknacks for the kids, and snappy things like patent lighters, and puzzles, and trick roses that squirted water on the unwary, for himself. You see, Ed was a mixer and had a certain reputation to uphold.

Week after week, all the years of their married life, Ella found her household allowance a little short. Five, six, seven dollars would fail to arrive. Ed always explained it. He was a wonderful explainer. And Ella would sigh a little, cry a little and pick up the fight again and struggle along. She loved Ed, with that strange perversity of strong women who hold to their weak men.

She would talk to him about getting a little money in the bank. In a few years they could have a home. Then he could go into business for himself. Being liked so much, he could draw trade from all over the country. Then they could all be something in the community and the children could have advantages.

Ed agreed that money in the bank was a great thing—told Ella he had just been telling the boys he had the thriftiest wife in the country. He wound up by touching her for a couple of dollars to see him through until pay day.

Sad Ending.

So things went along until little Mary was 9, Jim 7 and Larry, the toddler, a man of 2. Ella never gave up fighting, for she was built that way. The children had illnesses and Ed had the flu, which set them back a bit further. But she went on dreaming her dreams of having a home and being somebody.

Ed's reputation grew as a story teller, but waned as a clerk. And one day he was fired. He was away below par in his sales. Competitive houses didn't want him and his air of bravado and his threat that they'd be sending for him to come back soon didn't hold water.

Life struck swiftly as it has a way of doing, and Ed came back from Marty's one evening where he'd been down telling the boys a couple of new ones. Ella met him at the door, her face drawn and white. Larry was ill. The doctor should be called. Ed said it was just some kid ailment he'd be over in a day or two. There was a lot of money owing the doctor already. But fear struck him when he looked again at the flushed face and heard the labored breathing. He believed the doctor ought to be called. He'd get some money together and bring him.

But he'd borrowed from everybody and he was turned down cold. He came back and told Ella. Larry would be all right in the morning. His hope wasn't justified. Larry was dead in the morning. It was simple pneumonia that medical attention could have checked.

There isn't much else to the story. They buried their baby and Ella went to work. Ed gets an occasional job and they manage to live. They do better than that—at least Ella does. She puts a few dollars in the bank each week. Ed isn't so good on stories any more. He even manages to give Ella a dollar or two now and then to put in the bank.

He's Too Proud.

"Dear Miss Blake: The boy I love is a student and lives on the campus. He writes to me once and sometimes twice a week. Now, although this boy professes he loves me, he seldom takes me out. I know he has no money, but he never comes to see me on Sundays. Shall I stop caring for him?

Don't you think he hesitates taking up your time when he hasn't the money to make returns, Betty? His pride won't let him. Perhaps if you'd invite him to your home he'd accept.

Wanted the Change.

A woman, a neighbor of ours was putting on a party and she asked my father if she could borrow his brand new mandolin, for which he had paid forty dollars, as a young man who was to attend her party could play one very well. My father told her she could borrow it.

Two days later she returned the mandolin in a damaged condition, and with it she handed Dad fifty cents and said, "I don't suppose it will cost that much to get it fixed so you can send the change over with one of the boys."

Her Only Thanks.

The woman living next door to us had not been feeling well for a good while. One day she came over to our house, worried sick because she had lost her laundress and she did not know what she would do about the week's wash. We have fair equipment in the laundry, so I offered to oblige her by doing her things on my own wash-day. I use an electric washer and finished it all early, so I decided to surprise her by doing the ironing also. It was rather late in the night when I had finished, but I was happy thinking how surprised she would be. Early the next morning I sent them over by my little boy.

When I saw her again, she seemed peeved about something, and finally asked me if I cared to return the buttons that I washed off of her house dress. And after a while, she inquired how I made starch, adding that she didn't know when she had put their clothes away in as flimsy and half-done condition.

That represents her thanks to me.

Making Use of the Trunk.

Mother purchased a fine new trunk to make an extended trip. Upon her return an acquaintance, knowing of the trunk, asked to borrow it as she was going to spend a week with her daughter.

Mother wondered why a week's visit to a daughter should require a wardrobe to fill a trunk and although not eager she let her have the trunk. It looked anything but new when it was returned, but no wonder. In it were packed canned goods and goodness knows what not to name to the daughter and on the return trip wash wringer, kitchen utensils, etc.

To a friend she said: "I ... all these things without a ... Mrs. G.'s trunk did the trick."

"I never dreamed that any one soap could do all the things Rinso does until I tried it myself. It certainly is THE soap for our water. At first I used it only for the laundry because it's so safe and because it made the clothes so white and pretty without any hard rubbing. But I soon found out that it was just as good for dishwashing and other cleaning. Now you'll always find a large size package on my kitchen shelf. And I keep one in the bathroom, too, for cleaning the tiles, bathtub and basins.

Grace M. Skelton,
511 Park Ave., Wilmette, Ill.

Millions use Rinso. Thousands write us letters like this.

"It's THE soap," Wilmette woman says:

Look at this wash —whiter than ever

In machine or tub, clothes get cleaner this gentle way. Even in hardest water!

YOU, too, will be astonished—to see how much whiter and brighter clothes become, when washed this new way!

No other soap gets clothes so sweet and fresh. No other soap gets the week's wash spotless so quickly, so easily. And so safely!

In washing machine or tub, Rinso loosens the dirt and stains so that scrubbing is unnecessary. Boiling, too—for Rinso whitens without boiling—sterilizes, too!

Rich, creamy suds

Rinso is the amazing granulated soap which gives thick suds even in hardest water. Not frothy soap bubbles, but rich suds. Makes the water soapy all through. Best of all, Rinso is completely safe; contains no acids, bleaches or harmful chemicals. So economical, too! It's all you need on washday. No bar soaps, chips or water softeners.

Whether you use a washing machine or not, clothes come out of Rinso suds whiter than you've ever seen them.

If the wash is very soiled, just soak it an hour or two in creamy Rinso suds before using the washer—and you won't have to do a bit of hard rubbing. The grimiest hems and edges will come snowy with just a touch. Clothes last longer—and hands stay youthful—this gentle way!

No wonder the makers of 30 leading washing machines recommend Rinso!

Best for tub washing, too

Millions who do their wash by hand will accept no soap but Rinso. It soaks clothes whiter than they could be scrubbed. Try it your very next washday, and say "Goodbye Blue Monday."

For economy and best results, follow easy directions on package.

Strange Weddings

Have you ever seen a wedding so outlandish that it upset all your ideas of the traditional ceremony? Some marriages are foreign and quaint in their adherence to ancient customs; others are ultra modern in their haphazard speed and unconventionality. The Tribune would like to know the story of the strangest wedding you've ever seen. We will pay $1 for every letter published. Address: Strange Weddings, Chicago Tribune.

Real, After All.

We were giving a benefit performance for one of the local clubs and in one of the scenes was a wedding. A popular young couple were to be the ones matrimonially inclined in the play. An out of town friend of one of the boys played the part of the minister.

Imagine our surprise when we found that we had witnessed a real wedding, the out of town friend being a minister from a nearby city.

F. G. W.

Two Ministers.

The strangest wedding I ever witnessed occurred some time ago when the two participants were deaf and dumb.

The wedding was much like others with its witnesses, flower girls and guests, except that there were two ministers.

One was a minister who spoke the sign language and had come from a distant large city to officiate. The other was the local minister of the church where the bride attended. As the deaf and dumb minister read the ceremony to the bride and groom the local minister repeated it for the benefit of the guests. MRS. C. E. H.

Many Symbols.

The most interesting wedding I have ever seen occurred at a Chinese home. The bride came in an automobile with a big vari-colored lantern hanging on each side. The lanterns bore in red the surname of the family the bride married into, and they were lighted inside with candles. The bride was dressed in splendor, and she had a red veil covering her face. The red veil was to drive away evil spirits.

A small pyre of sticks and paper stood before the doorway, and the bride walked right over the pyre, to certify her allegiance to the family. Before she entered the door, some one tapped her head with a little stick. This indicated she would be expected to obey. And if she took the tapping easily, she would prove to be docile and easy; if she crouched or spurned the tapping, she would turn out to be unruly. After she entered the house the wedding began. I. L.

Mother Weds Girl's Beau.

The strangest wedding I ever witnessed was when my mother married the man I loved and had been going with for four years. We had a quarrel and I said I was going to marry some one else. For spite he started going with mother (a charming widow), and the best part of it was I was the bridesmaid and mother was married in my wedding dress. E. B.

Worth Fifty Cents to Him.

My father, who was a minister, married many couples. One day a pair rode up to our hourse and hollered, "Hello!" When my father went out, the man told him they wanted to get married. Father told them to get down and come in the house. The man replied that they wanted to be married sitting on their mules.

After the ceremony the groom asked father what he charged for performing the ceremony. Father told him he made no charge, and in a joking manner told him he could pay what he thought his bride was worth. The fellow looked at his bride a moment and then he handed father a dollar and asked him if he had a half dollar in change. Father put the dollar in his pocket and told the groom he thought his bride was worth a dollar at least.

The man kicked his mule in the side and the couple rode off without saying another word. McK. T.

In the Ocean.

The strangest wedding I ever witnessed took place at Palm Beach some fifteen years ago.

One of the life guards and a maid from Whitehall, having decided to get married, thought it would be great fun to have the ceremony performed in the ocean. So at 4 o'clock in the afternoon the bride and groom and their attendants donned bathing suits and waded out a short distance into the sea.

As the minister had refused to wear a bathing suit, a boat was procured and he stood up in the boat and performed the ceremony. The entire population was on hand and a good time was had by all. V. G.

A White Wing Wedding.

The strangest wedding I ever witnessed was one recently held in our city. The bridegroom was a member of the street cleaning crew. His fellow workmen drove to the church in the large city trucks used for hauling ashes and rubbish. They were dressed in overalls and work jackets.

After the ceremony the men lined up and formed an archway with their shovels, through which the couple marched midst the cheers of spectators. R. V.

SPRING FEVER AND ITS CURE

That Weary Feeling, Which Appears About Crocus Time, Can Be Driven Away Without the Aid of Sulphur and Molasses

by Antoinette Donnelly

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Beginning already to feel some of the symptoms commonly described as spring fever? It is just about this time they begin to appear, increasing rapidly with every new crocus head lifted to the April breeze. If you are missing the fresh buoyancy, that feeling of hopefulness the spring season heralds, you're probably in need of some advice on the nature of the disease lightly termed "fever," and also on how to avoid or get rid of that tired feeling.

There are two kinds of fever, so believe. One is that curious and unpreventable phenomenon which, consciously or unconsciously, affects most people in the springtime and is recognized as a sort of restlessness, a feeling of recklessness and adventure. One is more inclined to babble of sunny climes and unexplored corners of the globe than hew to the line of work.

This form of annual disturbance may be traced to its origin by a comparison with other forms of life besides man's. It is all bound up with the compelling instinct of migration that comes over almost every form of life at this season of the year.

But one does not go back uncounted ages to find the reason for that other form of spring fever—the one that lays spirits low. Memories of last season will suffice to explain why the magic carpet may be flung, a feathered orchestra be caroling its invitation to the dance—and your heels be too leaden to gambol on the green.

"That tired feeling," in fact, is nothing to tell your neighbor about. It is a reflection on your knowledge of the principles of hygienic living.

Ancestors Excused.

It was excusable for our forebears, who invented "spring fever," to talk about it as though it followed winter as naturally as harvest follows planting. They had not our advantages in hygienic training. Had they known spring fever was nothing more nor less than an individual weltering in his own uneliminated poisons, they would not have exhibited so proudly their sulphur and molasses jars.

At that, we must credit them with knowing there was something about their blood that needed purifying after a winter of smoked bacon, closed windows, and red flannel chest protectors.

We know now that that weary feeling, the lagging gait, the dull brain are due to nothing more elegant than autointoxication. A high falutin' word for what really ails the victim. It is a condition where poison arises from inactivity of cells or organs whereby substances are released into the circulation in harmful quantities. It appears at all seasons, it is true, but in more virulent form in blossom time than any other.

There are a number of reasons why the body accumulates more toxins, or fails to eliminate as much poison in the winter as during the other seasons. Skin elimination, for one thing, is not so free in winter as in summer. The skin depends upon the blood circulation for the disposal of organic poison in the system. The amount of exercise indulged in by the average individual in the cold season is not sufficient to stimulate the circulation and provide for this elimination.

Reasons for Spring Fever.

Another reason advanced by physicians in explanation of this poisoning of the system is that most people drink less water in cold weather. The eliminating organs, consequently, are unaided in throwing off the toxic matter.

Again, the cold weather diet is at fault. It is more concentrated and richer in protein and fat. It contains a smaller proportion of cellulose or woody fiber, and consequently is less favorable to intestinal activity. Too large a proportion of meat, bread, and starchy food is contained in the winter diet.

So, it isn't spring, beautiful spring, that is to blame for that tired feeling—but the hearty diet customary in winter months, an inadequate supply of drinking water to float off the poisons, and the lack of outdoor exercises.

It isn't the hard working person who gets spring fever. It is not the woodchopper, or the coal heaver, or the lumberjack. It is the sedentary worker, who feeds too well and coddles himself too much during the cold season.

However, the latter is undoubtedly more interested in how to get over his fatigue than in how he acquired it.

Green Vegetables Recommended.

Better than any bottled spring tonics are the green vegetables that contain large amounts of cellulose materials, such as spinach and the various greens—beet tops, dandelions, lettuce, string beans, celery, asparagus, onions, radishes, and so on.

The tired persons should substitute these, and fruits wherever possible for the nitrogenous articles that have been appearing on the menu. Meat should be eaten sparingly. The easily digested foods, such as eggs and milk, white bread and butter, provide too little exercise for the intestines.

Exercise should be as strenuous as the individual can stand. The prescription advanced as the best yet discovered by Dr. William A. Brady, noted physician, is recommended: "Two miles of oxygen three times a day. You may take it any way you choose, so long as you take it walking."

O. R. C.: TO REDUCE THE WAISTline try the following exercises: Stand with feet about eighteen inches apart. Raise the arms overhead; bend the trunk forward and swing the arms downward between the legs; raise the trunk and bend backward, swinging the arms up over the head. Repeat five times quickly. Next, assume correct standing position, arms out at sides. Twist the waist to the right and touch the finger tips of the right hand to the toes of the left foot. Reverse. Repeat five times, gradually increasing the number of times. Send stamped addressed envelope for additional exercises.

A FRIEND IN NEED

by Sally Joy Brown

I want to be the medium through which the friends in deed and the friends in need may be brought together. It may be you have some discarded article which has not outgrown its usefulness that will make some less fortunate one happy and you would gladly give it if you knew how to go about it. Write to me and I shall be happy to be of service to you. Please write on one side of the paper.

When information is wanted by mail, a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send articles to The Tribune but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

OPPORTUNITIES TO HELP AT EASTER TIME.

"DEAR MISS BROWN: I have two little girls; one is 7 and the other is 5. I would like to get them some clothing, as they keep asking me if I am going to get them new coats and dresses for Easter. I just can't buy them anything, as my husband has been out of work for three months. I expect another baby soon and I haven't bought anything for the little one, either. MRS. R."

When we think of the pride we all take in new spring clothes, what could be more natural than the request of these little girls when they hear conversations about new clothes for Easter? They wonder if they are going to have new "spring outfits." And there's genuine need, as well. We have numberless requests right now from mothers who are confronted with the problem of spring clothes for their little ones and who simply cannot afford to buy them. Right along with this need goes the remedy, if we'll only use it. Most of us who have children are planning to get some new spring clothes for them. We have to, if for no other reason than that they've grown too big to wear last year's apparel. So those clothes will be just the thing to make all these needy little girls and boys wonderfully happy.

If your little son or daughter is outgrowing a coat, suit, or dress, what else could you do with the discarded garments? Really, there isn't much to do with them, is there? Why not, then, let me put them into service and make Easter a happy day for all these needy little folk?

A Needlework Query.

"I want to know the formula or the preparation which was formerly used in tracing patterns, in needlework, whereby a perforated pattern could be transferred by means of a powder of semi-liquid preparation. Can you help me? M. T. M."

Have you the knowledge this correspondent so earnestly seeks? And would you tell her how it is done?

"I am writing for a needy and worthy family, consisting of a mother and three children. The mother was obliged to leave her husband on account of drunkenness and nonsupport. This woman was recently operated on and has not fully recovered, so she cannot work. They are badly in need of clothing and I thought your readers might be able to help. The 17 year old boy, who attends school and works, also, wears a size 38 suit. The other children are a boy, 12, and a girl, 8. The mother wears size 38. "MRS. P."

Can you help these people out of the straitened condition in which a delinquent parent has left them? The clothing you are about to discard would do it.

Family Has Hard Times.

"Would you please help us with some clothing? We have had a lot of sickness and all kinds of trouble and it seems so hard for us to get along. I have five children—the boys are 13 and 7 and the girls 16, 14, and 12. My big boy is out every day trying to get work. My daughter is out of work also. My husband is not working steadily and everything is going wrong. MRS. N."

This family seems to be having more than its share of misfortune, and perhaps a little assistance from us would give them the start they need. Have you any clothing they might have?

Use for Picture Frames.

"I wonder if there are some who have old picture frames of any size they no longer want. I want to retouch them and fix them over to fit some pictures I have. I will be so thankful for any you may get me. "MRS. A. M."

Those old faded pictures, the frames of which are still good, may again be put to use. Mrs. A. M. probably can make them quite presentable.

Persian Kittens to Give.

"I have nine lovely kittens I would like to give to your readers if they will give them good homes. Two of them are Persian and the others are part Persian. I would prefer giving them to people who live in the country or in the suburbs. K. F."

These are really beautiful kittens and I know they'll make delightful pets. If you'd like to have one of them you had better write to us immediately.

To Give Children Fun.

"My baby is a girl, 5 years old, and would like to have a tricycle. The two older children want a coaster wagon. I wonder if any of your readers would have these to give away. "MRS. A. B."

Boys and girls who have outgrown their toys can bring a great deal of happiness into the lives of less fortunate youngsters with them. Have you either of the things these poor children want?

Ballet Slippers Needed.

"I would like to know if any of your readers have two pairs of toe dancing slippers, size 1 and 3½. Some one has promised to teach my sister and me dancing and we can't afford to buy the slippers and dresses we will need. We are 9 and 12. I. C."

If your ballet slippers and costumes are a little worn, these girls could make good use of them and would be most happy to have them.

BEAUTY ANSWERS

by Antoinette Donnelly

What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Sky on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet, or a set of exercises for what ails you, and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply, send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, The Tribune, Chicago.

MRS. A. S.: THE PEROXIDE AND ammonia used to bleach superfluous hair keeps the hair light and dry, and tends to diminish the growth rather than increase it. Cutting these hairs close to the skin with manicure scissors does not stimulate their growth, as believed by many people. It is well to avoid the use of depilatories on the face that contain barium sulphide.

J. N.: THE DANDRUFF REMEDY is: Sixty grains of sulphur mixed with one ounce of vaseline, and applied every other night to the scalp with massage. If there is much dandruff you should shampoo the hair twice a week, gradually increasing the length of time between shampoos. For further suggestions on the care of the hair send a stamped, addressed envelope.

BROWN EYES: YEAST MAY BE taken at any time—either with the meals or between meals. If you don't like it when dissolved in water or fruit juice you may spread it on bread or a cracker. It makes no difference how it is taken. Stop eating candy entirely until you overcome your present trouble. When you feel tempted, think of your complexion ills and you'll have the courage to refuse.

M. G. T.: ALL SKINS WILL NOT permit the use of the same amount of soap and water, but one washing a day with soap and water is required for the sake of cleanliness. Where the skin is dry, all other cleansings may be done with a cleansing cream, and a good cold cream should be massaged into the skin at night and as much as possible left on during the night. Other hints for dry skins are contained in my booklet, "Care of the Skin," which may be had for a stamped addressed envelope.

Y. D.: WHERE THE BACK OF the neck is fat, place finger tips on the shoulders and twist arms and shoulders in a circular motion. Twisting exercises do away with unnecessary fat and strengthen the muscles.

R. W.: SNOWY WHITE NAIL tips may be had if you will insert nail white under the fingernails. If your nails break easily, soak them for ten minutes each night in olive oil or sweet almond oil, which has been slightly warmed. Use just enough oil to cover the finger tips.

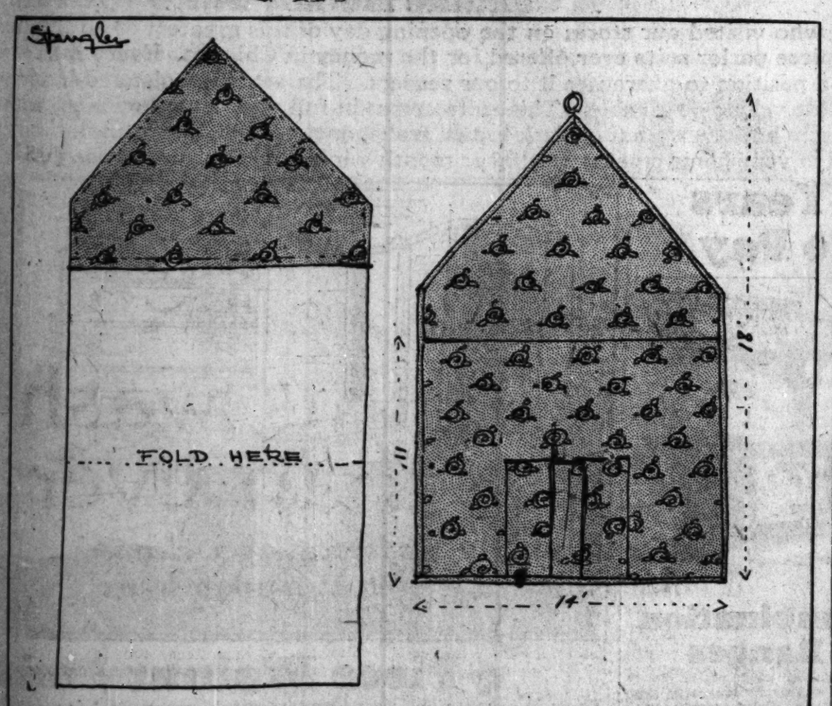
B. F. T.: THE USE OF AN EYEbrow pencil for darkening the eyebrows is the simplest method. They may be darkened just as the hair is darkened by the use of a dye, but such work must be done by a skilled operator or it is easily detected.

GENE H.: THE DEEP LINES UNder your eyes are due to lack of sleep. Six hours isn't sufficient sleep for a young girl. You should have eight or nine hours sleep in a well ventilated room. If possible, spend an hour in the open air every day.

EDDA G.: CAMOMILE TEA MAY be applied to the hair with a brush after shampooing, or it may be added to the last rinse water. It is quite harmless. Steep a little of the tea in boiling water and allow it to cool. Directions for shampooing the hair may be had for a stamped, addressed envelope.

Practical and Fancy Needle Work

By Clotilde



The Bag Shown Today May Be Made of Bright Colored Cretonne and is Convenient for Holding Fancy Work or Knitting.

What is your sewing problem? Do you have trouble in following a pattern? Do you find difficulty in making a skirt hang evenly or making a sleeve that doesn't twist? If there is anything you would like to know about these or other problems of needlework write to Clotilde, The Tribune, Chicago, enclosing a stamped addressed envelope, if a personal reply is desired.

A BRILLIANTLY colored glazed cretonne was used to make the bag pictured today. And it is one of the prettiest the New York shops are showing. This bag is really made to hold pieces of brown paper and string, but it would be an attractive bag to hold fancy work, knitting, crocheting, etc., and it would make a lovely porch bag, hanging in some convenient place on the porch with your work inside, ready to pick up at a moment's notice.

Naturally, a bag of this kind can be made any size you wish; but maybe you would like the dimensions of this particular one. Finished, it measures from the bottom to the point, eighteen inches; and the width is fourteen and one-half inches finished. The large pocket is eleven inches deep, and the measures of the small twine pocket are four and one-half by six inches. This width measure doesn't include the box plait.

There is an inch wide inverted plait down each side of the bag, and this of course makes for more room inside.

After the bag has been cut out, lay a piece of the cretonne on it and cut a second piece at the pointed end long enough to come one inch below the top of the folded over part. Turn in this bottom edge and stitch across first basting the two pieces of cretonne together around the edge. And of course the right side of this piece of cretonne is on top. Then make the little pocket, if you care to have it, and stitch it in place on the bag. Then baste bias binding [illegible] around the raw edges and stitch on the machine, close to the edge. Sew a white bone ring to the point of the bag and your work is finished.

THE TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

Tea and Teas Constitute a Whole Round World of Facts.

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

By Jane Eddington.

ON the pleasure side—and surely tea drinking is largely a social and pleasurable affair—the first contribution tea makes to humanity is its gift of fragrance of aroma. No matter what the approach is we make to tea, that is, to drinking it, we ought to look for and expect an aromatic savor, for when tea is well made and of good quality it emits a bouquet which those who know have called a fragrance that can scarcely be surpassed. It is a bouquet that flatters the palate, through both the smell and the taste. There could not be the wonderful aesthetics of tea that there is but for this, and when special blends or grades are extolled, the idea is that they surpass others in flavor and bouquet.

But tea takes odors from many things, if it is not protected, and through various sorts of deterioration becomes something that cannot give pleasure on the aesthetic side, but mainly on the temperature side, being something either gratefully hot or gratefully cold. In 1923, it could be said that our tea act was the only existing law which regulated the palatability of a food.

Tea in bulk always tends to lose its flavor. It should be kept in airtight containers. The old fashioned chests of tea were lined with a heavy lead foil. Caravan tea is something we in the United States cannot have, because it is tea carried overland in caravans to Europe, making it most expensive. The tea voyage undoubtedly affects the flavor of teas.

Mrs. James T. Fields once wrote this: "Longfellow came to town to see Jamie, in one of his loveliest moods. The day was so warm and fine, such a day of dreams, that we proposed to him every kind of excursion. 'Come,' he said, 'let us go to the tea stores and smell the tea; the warm atmosphere will bring out all the odors!'"

It was not so good for the tea in the stores that it could be smelled. We do things better, in general, today, yet those who want the best, or the most aromatic teas do not buy them in bulk, but in sealed packages.

Choice of Teas.

As to tea absorbing odors, in one of the early numbers of the Good Housekeeping magazine [in 1888] there is this item: "The extraordinary sensitiveness of tea to odors was shown in New York the other day. A ship brought a cargo of tea—and nothing else—from China, and, upon testing the tea, it was found to be sweet. The ship had brought a cargo of sugar from Manila on the previous voyage, and though not a bit of it was left in the vessel, yet the odor was sufficient to impregnate the tea. A case somewhat similar to this occurred twelve years ago, when tea was packed in the same hold with camphor." Those who have a sensitive knowledge of tea look for exquisite flavor or taste and aroma, and especially note its appearance in the cup.

When people had a narrower choice of teas than today they were more expert in their knowledge of each one. The English tea drinkers for many years seem to have been devoted to Bohea, a China or black tea called by the name of the hills where it was grown. There are people who think that China teas have the most delicate flavor and like the light color of them in the cup. Of course, there have been many grades of these and we pay a high price for the best—if we can get it. As I understand it, Chinese merchants control who shall and shall not have it. It is said that the Chinese use the coarser leaves of the tea tree for the preparation of leather, because of the tannin in them. It is the tannin in even the finer leaves that makes boiled tea so undesirable as a beverage.

The fragrance of oolong tea has been considered rank by some people, but this has made it popular among a class without supposedly aesthetic instincts. One condemnation of it declares that it puckers and "coppers" the stomach, but this was by an Englishman who preferred English breakfast tea as most wholesome and tasty.

In England, tea blends are so universal that the poor outsider has to depend upon brands, but we seem not to have been expert in blends. Plain long green Japan, as well as many others, has had its friends, and we know we must go to the Japanese for the perfection of the tea ceremony.

For years ago, when Ceylon teas seem to have been introduced to the United States, it was claimed that those teas were cleaner than were those of China and Japan—some teas are vacuum cleaned today—and that the latter were adulterated. The new coming Ceylon tea to our America was extolled for its strength and flavor, and it was said that two pounds of it would go farther than three of Chinese or Japanese tea, which statement probably needed to be proven. At any rate, some of the romancers of the world have loved to describe the tea growing parts of China, and to tell how the delicate buds of middle April were picked and spread, dried in bamboo trays, dropped into red hot pans in small quantities, etc., until it was finally packed in lead foil ready for commerce.

It seems to be more or less English to like China tea, although India teas seem to get the most attention from Englishmen today. For those who want exotic things there are expensive Moorish teas, and not long ago we clipped a news item concerning the most expensive tea one ever heard of, which was being sold, when made, for one dollar per cup. However, the sentiment that you can tell people of intellect from the fact that they drink China tea, and generally without sugar, has worked for economy.

Substitutes for the Tea Plant Leaves.

In the course of a hundred years there have been many sorts of dried leaves put forward for favor as against those of the tea plant, but judging from the fate of several sorts which we can trace their popularity has quickly waned. One, in particular, received much attention in 1866 because of its fragrance, and because prominent people commended it for some of the same things that China tea has been praised for, its fragrance, its tonic qualities, and its qualities as a promoter of digestion, and for being without the quality that in China tea presumably produces sleeplessness.

The Flavoring of Teas.

Because of its own true fragrance when it is good tea, it does seem unreasonable to make a sort of weak and hot lemonade of it, since the lemon odor drowns that of the tea—kills its bouquet—or to add jasmine or any other flower to it. Orange Pekoe tea is considered best with lemon. The correct Russian tea is not a cup of tea, since a deep glass is the correct container for it. Some people think that equal parts of orange and lemon juice in tea produce a satisfactory or most justifiable drink. Another of the many ways that have been devised for flavoring tea has been to shut cubes of sugar with dried orange peel and use them for flavoring as well as sweetening the tea.

On Making Teas.

There is one point in the making of teas on which there seems to be universal agreement—the water poured over the leaves should be boiling, furiously boiling, but the tea itself should not be boiled. As to the amount of tea to use, the prevailing idea of one teaspoon per person and one for the pot is anything but exact, since much less of one kind of tea or much more may be required than for another.

And as to the time for the brewing of the tea, one expert says that the oolongs and green teas require more drawing, and the Indias and Ceylons the shorter time. We might guess the latter. A recipe of 1669 gives as the time for steeping tea "no longer than while you can say the Miserere," which would not be a good universal rule, since some of us do not know it!.

There are many and curious directions almost as old as this, which more or less agree with one way used in England today or "wetting the tea." Cold water is put on it and it is easier to make tea for iced tea than you would believe, if you had not tried it. One old recipe for pouring boiling water on tea says that the tea is ready as soon as the leaves sink in it, and that is not a bad rule. Many of these old recipes may seem like mere curiosities, but there is some good in all, probably, although we can hardly believe that eggs in tea are worth while.

Making Russian Tea.

Russian tea, old style, was made by putting a freshly cut slice of lemon in the bottom of a cup, sprinkling it with sugar, and allowing it to stand a few minutes before pouring hot tea over it. The lemon should be peeled because there is a bitter flavor in the white part of the peel and yet another in the "zest." But it is most correct to call this a lemon tea. The Russians are also given the credit of giving to certain people the idea of putting a spoonful of fruit jam in their tea, and some think they get a delicious flavor if they put in a slice of fresh apple, but much depends upon the tea, in the latter case, and it should certainly be weak.

Tea Pots.

The little red pottery pot, which has sometimes been called a "Brown Betty," has been beloved and in general there is a sentiment against metal utensils in tea drawing, even silver. If the latter is used, the tea is often made in the unglazed pot, heated first, and then poured into the silver one. In any case, it is always a good plan to pour the tea off the leaves if it is to stand for longer than the brief time of drawing. Rather extravagant people use a great deal of tea, let the water barely "kiss" it, and pour it off at once. In other words, their direction is: "Be a profligate with the amount of tea used."

Social Tea.

This is an enormous subject by itself. Around it has grown up a system of etiquette, manuals of cookery, and a great commerce.

A single slim strap and high Spanish heel make the patent leather slipper, upper right, exceptionally admirable for dress occasions. The lower heeled pump, lower left, would wear a buckle most becomingly.

Here are two models to further the compose idea:

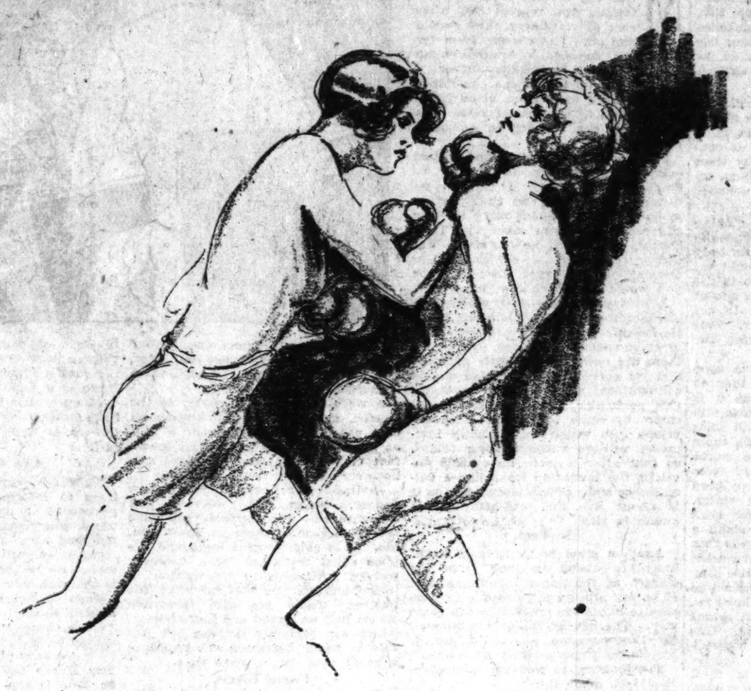
MAIDEN MEDITATIONS

by SARA MOORE



BELIEVE ME.

[Suddenly, somewhere, some time, a woman conceived the idea of black shoes and champagne colored stockings. The idea spread. Variations followed quickly. Where 480 styles of stockings were carried in 1920, the company now has to carry 6,006.—President of a woman's hosiery company.]

The chart of woman's preference
Shows changes sharply jagged;
If men WILL follow every whim,
We'll run Big Business ragged.

HA! HA! ME, TOO!

[The nonpoisonous blows are liable to sound like a brick going through a plate glass window, while apparently soft, sly soaks are the ones apt to pack venom. . . . The worst for me and the best for him (Gene) seemed to arrive from nowhere and get there suddenly, although they didn't come very far.—From an article by Fighter Tom Gibbons on "Punches I have Taken," in Liberty.]

Pugs work in a roped arena,
A-slinging their fists for tools;
I move in a set serener,
Where, Thomas, they don't have rules;

Your customers rise in the grandstands
And yell till your punch draws blood;
No tears and—no jeers—are the portion
Of a lone little battling bud.

Both games are the same, believe me;
Though staged in the ring or Ritz—
Sometimes I long for a technique
Permitting knockouts and mitts;

I'm tired of "leading" with dinners
And "countering" cars with a hat;
Instead of finessing her aces
I'd like to jolt Geraldine flat.

It isn't—you're right, Thomas Gibbons—
A blow that seems smashingly big
That knocks either one of us goofy—
We both dread the mean little dig.

A HUNDRED TO ONE.

There's something the matter with me
I fear;
I'm not what I ought to be
(O dear!);
I don't care much for new rouge—too bright;
And I wear dark hose where the rest wear light;
I seldom grieve, though my hat's a fright—
Who'll marry a girl so queer?

'Tis little things count with the men,
They say;
I'll be but a spinsterish hen
(I may!);
I'm brim full of faults and the worst's this one:
I don't give a d—— that the thing's "not done";
When every one else wears pearls—I've none;
Boys won't even look my way.

Alas:
The modern knight on his knightly quest
Insists that his lady be like the rest;
Where stand pat parties are in ascendant—
Who wastes a vote on an independent?

ZIP COON STORIES

BY KEMBLE

Judge Bear Gets Hunk with Crafty Fox

GEE WHIZ, but there were some doings around here last week. Crafty Fox got it again. He thought he'd play a good joke on old Judge Bear and—— But I'll tell you all about it.

I saw Zip Coon shin up a tree, and when he got on the end of an old dead limb he began to scream.

Down in the valley a pack of hounds were yelping their heads off. They were after Crafty Fox, and the old sinner was just legging it over the landscape. Over stone walls and into the creek he went. Then out again. Soon he was lost to view. Then the noise stopped.

Zip Coon slid down the tree.

"It beats the Dutch how that boy can wiggle out of trouble," says he. "I do wish they would chase him out of these diggings, then Benny Bunny and I could live in peace."

While he was talking old Crafty himself hobbles up, his tongue hanging out of his mouth. My, O my! but he was tired.

"I've had one awful time, Zip," says he, "an awful time. Those hounds were after me. Just think of it! After me! But I fooled them. Yessir! I took them around by Judge Bear's cabin and lost them."

Just then the yelping commenced again. Crafty began to grin.

"Hear that? I'll bet those ki-yis are saying a few kind words to somebody. I wonder who it is?"

"THAT'S all right," squeaks Zip Coon, who has shinned up the tree as soon as Crafty appeared, "but they may come chasing up here any minute, and you're too tired to run any more."

"But where can I hide, Zip?" wailed Crafty. "Please help me! Where can I hide?"

"Scoot into my shack and get under the bed," says Zip, and he looked wicked when he said it.

As Crafty crawled out of sight he called back to Zip:

"Old Judge Bear in his old high hat,
I'll bet this very minute he is feeling quite flat."

Zip Coon's eyes almost popped out of his head as he slid down the tree, for who should come crashing through the brushes but Judge Bear himself. Zip knew he would come.

When he got on the end of an old dead limb.

"Have you seen anything of that old sinner Crafty Fox?" he growled. "If I can lay my mitts on that chap I'll teach him a lesson he'll never forget. Look what he did to me. Look at my clothes! He led those dogs right up to my door, with his miserable scent, then he skipped around the other way, and when I came out to see what all the fuss was about they tackled me. Rassled me all over the place. Just look at my clothes! Torn to bits! When the pups finally recognized me they apologized and said they thought I was Crafty Fox. Woof! Woof! but I'm mad!"

ZIP COON winked his eye, and, pulling Judge Bear's ear down, whispered in it:

"Sneak softly into my cabin and lie down on my little bed as hard as you can, Judge, AS HARD AS YOU CAN."

Blam! Down it went!

Judge Bear did just as he was told, and when he hit that bed, BLAM! Down it went.

Zip Coon looked through the window and giggled as he chirped:

"Old Crafty Fox, in his old felt hat,
I'll bet this very minute he is feeling quite flat."

The day that baby sister arrived grandpa took my five year old cousin Bobby to his club for lunch.

On being introduced to Bobby, one of grandpa's friends inquired, "Are you an only child?"

"O, no," answered Bobby, "I have four brothers and one sister."

"What!" exclaimed the old gentleman, "five boys and only one girl?"

"Well," replied Bobby defensively, "we've only just begun on girls."

G. W. C.

I heard the boys on the street calling my new neighbor boy "Hank." A few days later I called on his mother, and, as he answered the doorbell, I said, "Hello, Hank."

"Hush," he said, looking around furtively, "I'm Hank to the boys on the street, but at home I'm Harry James."

Bring Out the Hidden Beauty

Do you know that just beneath that soiled, discolored, faded or wrinkled complexion is one fair to look upon? Mercolized Wax will gradually and gently peel off the devitalized surface skin, revealing a new, fresh, white, beautiful skin underneath. The new complexion is a perfectly natural one, therefore in no way to be compared with a make-up. The wax leaves no trace but that of increased loveliness, exquisite complexion of robust girlhood—and every one will tell you.

A New Skin—Your Own!—at small expense and effort. Simply apply Mercolized Wax at bedtime as you apply cold cream; wash it off in the morning. Fine, almost invisible, skin particles are flicked off with the wax. No harm possible. No detention indoors. The lively, young, healthy underskin is brought gradually to view—you have the

Mercolized Wax

ISN'T IT ODD

by William Morton DuPuy

ISN'T it odd that the tiny chickadee should be able to stay in the north through all the snows of winter and seems to get along quite well, thank you!

If you notice this brave little bird out in the snow you will see that it does not even take the trouble to keep its nose turned toward the wintry blasts as do most creatures of its kind. Let them try to ruffle its feathers and get through to its skin if they can. It dares them.

Examining the coat of the chickadee one would find that the rough feathers on top are but the trimmings of its protection from the cold. Beneath that is a thick layer of down that defies the cold. Then the chickadee puts a layer of fat just under the skin, just as whales and seals do, as an extraefficient protection against the cold.

Inside this covering the chickadee burns one of the busiest little stoves any animal possesses. It keeps up a piping temperature. Its body is constantly some ten degrees hotter than is that of man. Man would burn up with fever at 105, but the chickadee is 108 to 110 all the time.

It keeps this temperature by stoking its furnace steadily. The chickadee is a huge eater for its size. If its body were stripped of feathers it would not be bigger than a man's thumb to the first joint. Yet by actual tests one of these birds has been shown to eat 20 sunflower seeds in an hour. This fuel goes into the fire to keep the heat up.

Most of the other birds have gone south for the winter because they do not like the cold and because it is hard to get food. The chickadee still manages to get along. It still finds insects in its own way although there seem to be none left in the world. It prowls along the trunks of trees and digs out grubs that have been hidden in the crevices for the winter. It eats insect eggs no bigger than pin-points, but they help so small a creature. The grasses and weeds that stick above the snow still have seeds hidden in their tassels and these tiny birds know how to shake them and cause them to rattle down on the snow. Then there are friendly human beings who put suet out for the birds. This is a kindly thing to do and is appreciated, but the chickadees are not dependent on charity. Many of them live along the edge of the woods, sleeping by night in dense pines and cedars, quite away from the haunts of man.

Bright Sayings of Husbands and Wives

The snappy comeback of the better half when cornered has often been a source of wonder to husbands and wives! The husband or the wife has come across with a bright saying that will never be forgotten by the other half of the matrimonial sketch. What was that bright saying, Mr.? Mrs.? Send it to us and we'll pay you $1 for it if we print it. Address Bright Sayings of Husbands and Wives, The Chicago Tribune, Chicago.

Might Displease Him.

Wife (in back seat)—Henry, dear! You mustn't drive so fast!!

Hubby—Why not?

Wife—The motor cop who has been following us won't like it.

MRS. A. S.

It's Different Now.

I had been giving my husband a lengthy scolding about scattering his belongings all over the house, among other things saying: "I have to be continually running around after you!"

He wearily retorted: "You didn't seem to mind that before we were married."

MRS. C. E. H.

Let Him Hunt.

Hubby broke the news that he was going hunting the next morning at three o'clock and would like breakfast before going out.

I replied: "If you can go hunting at that hour of the morning, you can 'hunt' some breakfast, too!"

MRS. J. N. K.

In Her Own Words.

Rastus was old, but he had a young wife whose labors over the washboard kept them both. At last Mirandy rebelled and they went before the judge to get a divorce.

Said the judge: "This is too bad—a case of June married to December."

"Whats' dat, judge?" said Mirandy. "Seems to me a heap mo' like Labor day married to de day ob rest."

MRS. G. A. W.

Great Pains.

Wife: "I have taken great pains in making those cookies, by my own recipe, for you."

Husband: "Yes, and I'm going through great pains in eating them, too. They'd make good wedges."

R. F. H.

O, No!

We were discussing a woman who nagged her husband. So I ended by saying: "I never nag you, do I, dear?"

He answered: "No, darling. You just persist."

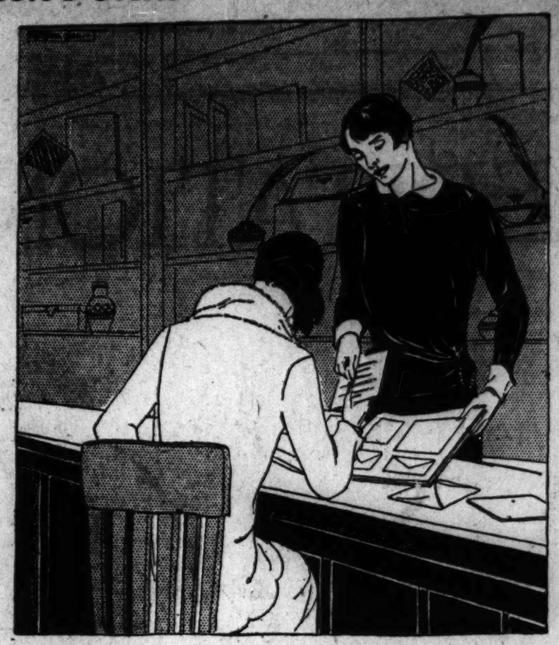
Correct Invitation Forms - - - - - By Persis Standish.

Many Innovations in Social Stationery Have Appeared During Last Two Years.

Persis Standish will answer questions of all kinds on etiquette, manners, and politeness. Self-addressed, stamped envelopes must accompany each request for information. Send your letters to Persis Standish, Sunday Room, Chicago Tribune.



MANY correspondents write to ask the correct form of invitations and regrets and what sort of stationery they should be written on. The correct form for invitations depends, of course, upon the occasion. Nowadays unless a party is formal invitations can either be telephoned or written in as informal fashion as a personal note. Tea invitations can be written on one's visiting card.

For wedding invitations and formal engraved forms for invitations to luncheon and dinner I can do no better than recommend that you go to one of the best stationers in your city and order them made up. They should, of course, be engraved, but there are permissible differences in wording and in type that perhaps you would like to choose yourself.

A lot depends, too, on how elaborate the wedding is to be and what cards to breakfast and other celebrations must be enclosed. Besides, every year there are new styles slightly different and yet correct, even for this simple conventional matter. For instance, this particular year it is considered smart by some to have a large envelope into which the wedding invitation will go without being folded, so that after it is in its outside envelope the invitation looks like a valentine or some official document, as it is about five and one-half by six inches in size.

Answers.

Another style is to have a slight indenture about an inch from the margin of the paper forming a sort of border around the script. The enclosure cards are treated in the same way. The newest thing in stationery for this occasion has a vellum or parchment finish slightly off white.

The answers to wedding invitations should be made thus:

If the invitation is to the church only, no answer is required.

If there is a card enclosed to breakfast or reception, the answer should follow the invitation form as closely as possible and should be sent within a week at latest of receiving the invitation.

Wedding invitations should be sent out not earlier than three weeks, and not later than a fortnight before the wedding. No wedding invitation should be sent out bearing the legend, "And family." Each member of a family should be honored by a separate card, if he or she is to be a guest at the wedding.

Wedding Announcements.

Wedding announcements look very much like wedding invitations. The enclosure card should bear the new address of the bride and groom and a date on and after which they will be "at home"—in other words, settled enough to receive visitors. Wedding announcements should be sent out immediately after the wedding, or at least within the next twenty-four hours. Sometimes they are sent later, but the usual thing is to send them immediately.

A wedding invitation merely to the church, or a wedding announcement, does not obligate one to send a gift, as an invitation to a wedding breakfast or reception does. It does not, however bar one from doing so.

Invitations to very formal balls, dances, dinners and receptions can be engraved. The stationer will have several styles of these to show you, too. It is equally good taste and implies equal formality for a formally worded invitation to be written in long hand on the stationery of the hostess. There are also invitation forms half engraved and half written, which are perfectly correct, but less formal, which hostesses who entertain a great deal use to save time.

Forms Given.

The answers to all these invitations should be written in long hand on one's personal stationery (not that of a club or hotel), and should follow the wording of the invitation as nearly as possible. For instance, if the invitation reads thus:

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Harcourt Jones request the pleasure of your company at dinner on Wednesday evening, April the tenth, nineteen hundred and twenty-five.
Eight o'clock. 1225 Park place.

The answer should read:

Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Ainsworth Smith accept with much pleasure the kind invitation of
Mr. and Mrs. Roy Harcourt Jones
for dinner on Wednesday evening, April the tenth, nineteen hundred and twenty-five.
Eight o'clock. 1225 Park place.

This year there are some variations in style of calling cards also. The vellum finish is being much used and the card is sometimes made up so that there is a flap the same size as the card on which the owner may write little messages to send to hospitals with flowers, or to put in the box with any gift.

Use Full Name.

They also can be used for invitations to informal teas, but for this purpose it is much more correct to use a single card. Visiting cards are indented also, giving a slight border from an eighth to a quarter of an inch. As to the type of lettering, it is optional, but conspicuous types are always in bad taste. Old English is always good.

The name on the visiting card should be in full. No initials are ever used for this purpose. For instance, Mrs. Harry James Smith would never be Mrs. Harry J. Smith, and people with elaborate middle names either put them all on, or drop several entirely. Your stationer will help you with all these things, but be warned that even the best stationers carry in stock some articles that are only good for commercial purposes and purposes of organizations such as clubs and societies.

For instance, it is perfectly proper for a business organization to send out cards thanking people who have written the organization about the death of one of its officials, but it is never correct for a family to do this. All letters of thanks and consolation should be written in long hand—the smart stationers to the contrary notwithstanding.

Many Innovations.

To return to the subject of invitations, there are many innovations within the last couple of years. An invitation to a luncheon at a very smart club, the luncheon given by several hostesses, came on pale yellow paper lately, and the luncheon followed the same color scheme even to the damask. Things like this, however, are a bit risky for the ordinary hostess who is having a few friends to luncheon.

It is much better for her either to write the invitations in long hand or to have the conventional plate made without the date and the hour, so that she may use them for a long time. If a conservative plate is chosen, it may be used a number of years, selecting the stationery each year from the best style of that season.

The same invitations cannot, unfortunately, be used for luncheon and dinner because dinner invitations are always issued in the name of host and hostess.

Results of Jealousy

We're all acquainted with jealousy, the monster that smashes love affairs, wrecks homes, causes business quarrels, and generally plays havoc with us mortals. We'd like to know your most notable experience with a jealous person or persons. If you have encountered a situation where jealousy led to a tragic or ridiculous climax, tell us about it. The Tribune will pay $1 for every story published. Address Jealous Editor, Chicago Tribune.

Jealous of Her Job.

Amy was jealous of her job, which was welfare work in a department store. She would go into tantrums and tears in the manager's office whenever any one else did a bit of work that she considered belonged to her department.

And above all things she was anxious to "sit in" at the executive meeting, but the management did not so decree. Finally, the manager's private secretary, who was being trained to become assistant manager, was invited to "sit in" at the executive meeting.

Amy found it out and raised such a hubbub that the manager rescinded the order and excluded the secretary from the meeting rather than admit Amy, so both lost out by Amy's jealousy.

L. G. W.

A Confession.

I disclaimed the trait of jealousy, but when my husband's sister came to call on us, and he displayed a new suit he had just purchased to her before he did to me, and asked her approval before I had given mine, I was so filled with jealousy that although it was a beautiful suit and looked well on my husband, I angrily told him it made him look old, that I did not like it, and that I absolutely refused to go out with him when he wore it.

MRS. H. G.

Jealous of Her Brother.

The most jealous person I know is a young woman who is married, and is supported by a fond husband.

She has an unmarried brother of whom she is extremely jealous. When she goes home to visit, she puts her parents to unnecessary trouble and expense, borrows money from them, does not pay it back; says if she pays it back this brother will have more, and is continually saying catty things about him.

This brother is still in his 'teens and is entitled to some support. R. V. N.

Dog Acts Like Human.

We have recently acquired an American Pit Bull terrier. When friend husband kisses me good-bye on leaving in the morning and greets me on returning, Tiger Boy jumps up from his blanket, rushes to where we happen to be standing, leaps upon us, whining and growling. Hubby pets him, kisses me again, and goes about his business.

The dog sulks and pouts for a half hour. Food, or his chain shaken alluringly as a promise for a run, does not appeal to him just then. If the telephone rings and some one greets Tiger Boy through the receiver, or the crystal radio set is working and he can listen through the head phones he forgets his peeve.

Corns Lift Off

You'll laugh, really! It is so easy and doesn't hurt one bit!

Drop "Freezone" on that old, bothersome corn. Instantly it stops aching; then shortly you lift that sore, touchy corn right off with your fingers. It works like a charm, every time.

A tiny bottle of "Freezone" costs only a few cents at any drug store, sufficient to remove every hard corn, soft corn, corn between the toes and calluses—Try it!

Freshen That Drawn, Sallow Complexion

How can faces look clear and fresh and youthful when pores are laden with days-old dust and dry oil and powder? They can't.

How can they glow with natural health and color when nature's life-giving blood never floods them? They can't.

Creams and soaps and costly treatments can not refresh and awaken tired complexions. They need a better cleansing and a gentle stimulus. They need Calonite—a pure, white powder that you apply with a damp wash cloth.

Instantly you feel the burdened pores relax as grime you didn't know was there, bubbles and dissolves; as warm, reviving blood comes tingling to the surface. Blackheads, embedded oil and powder, dissolve. Sallow, oily, lifeless skin glows, clean and clear. Drawn, tired pores relax and breathe naturally. Instantly!

No waiting for Calonite's benefits. You see and feel them—instantly. How fresh and young and new your skin! How it responds to night-cream and rest. How you enjoy this gentle, stimulating, facial cleanliness. You look and feel a different person.

Ask your druggist for Calonite. Try it this very night. Your money back if not delighted.

Long life to your corsets!

Quality of elastic is the determining factor in the performance of the corset. And Kenlastic, the supreme standard of service-quality in knitted elastic, is your assurance of performance. When you buy a corset, look inside for the wavy blue line that now identifies genuine Kenlastic.

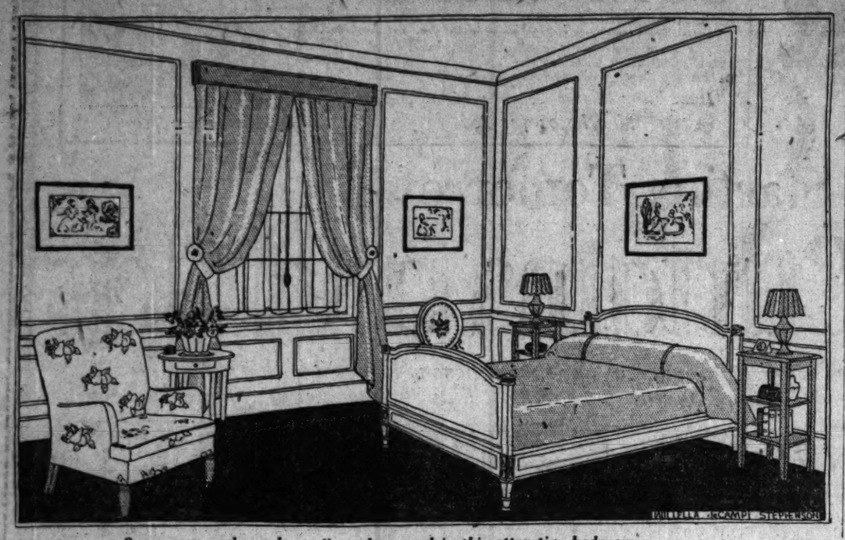
The HOME HARMONIOUS

By WillElla De Campi Stephenson.



Sage green and peach are the colors used in this attractive bedroom.

The "Trimmings" of a Room: The Draperies, Upholstery and Rugs Express the Personality of the Owner.

WillElla de Campi Stephenson will be glad to assist the homemaker in any problems pertaining to home building and home furnishing. Address your letter to Anita de Campi, The Tribune, Chicago, inclose stamped, addressed envelope for personal reply.

SELECTING furniture for the bedroom is no difficult problem. There are always the same requisite pieces, with an occasional added piece or two But in the "trimmings" great varieties may be shown. Draperies, rugs, lamps, and especially bed covers, are of utmost importance in the decorative qualities of the rooms in which they are used. In looking for beautiful bed spreads, nowadays, we look almost anywhere other than in the bedding department. Most exquisite bed coverings may be bought in the upholstery sections. They are selected, frequently, to match the draperies used in bedrooms.

One charming bed cover which I have seen, was bought in a linen store, supposedly to be used as a tablecloth. It is made of pineapple linen, with beautiful medallions of drawn work, and elaborate embroidery, all in a soft cream color. The ingenious bride, to whom it was given as a wedding present, lived in a small apartment where the dining table was not large enough to do justice to the lovely thing, so she immediately decided to use it as a bed cover. It is spread out in full glory, over an undercover of intense turquoise blue sateen, so that the pattern is advantageously displayed. Walls in the room are pale lemon yellow. At the windows are draperies of flowered glazed chintz, on a turquoise ground. Cream colored gauze makes the glass curtains. The rugs are of deep, plum colored chenille.

In the room shown in today's illustration, the bed cover and draperies are of heavy, lustrous sage green satin. [Sateen could be used instead]. These are simply made and beautifully effective, blending nicely, in their mellow tone, with the antique ivory furniture, which is touched with gold.

Paneled walls are painted peach color, with fine lines of gold in the moldings. On top of a small table beside the bed is a sage green and gold tole lamp, with a plaited ivory shade. Shelves in the lower part of the table hold a few convenient accessories and books.

The small arm chair and a chaise longue are upholstered in glazed chintz, with fruit decorations, on a pale green ground. Glass curtains are of sheer peach colored voile, making a soft glow of light. A collection of French prints, in narrow gold frames, lends interest to the plain walls.

Another bedroom has cream colored walls and woodwork. Window draperies and covers on the twin beds are made of chintz, with fruit decorations, on a cream ground. They are finished at the edges with ruffles of the same. Ruffled cream colored net with large dots is used for glass curtains. Between the beds is a set of narrow, standing shelves. A majolica bird lamp is placed on top. It has a shade of rose colored taffeta, edged with leaf green. On the next shelf below are a water bottle and glass, and beneath these a selection of books.

As blue is the dominant color in the nosegays, a pair of Wedgwood blue pottery lamps is used on the dressing table. These are fitted with square shades of stretched pink georgette over ivory silk. They are banded at the edges with shaded rose ribbon. Old blue wool chenille rugs are used on the floor.

A reverse of bed covers and draperies is used in another bedroom. The covers are made of mauve taffeta, finished with deep, full ruffles of pale green. At the windows are mauve gauze glass curtains, beneath pale green taffeta draperies and lambrequins. These are edged with mauve ruffles. A mauve and gold lamp on a stand between the beds is fitted with a shade of finely plaited, pale green georgette. The walls are covered with a light gray paper, sprinkled with field flowers in soft tones. All of the furniture is painted a soft, dull green, decorated in the Venetian manner with floral medallions and trims of gold.

Unusually attractive is a room with draperies of linen, showing a pattern of large flowers in tones of amber and orange on a white ground, finished with wide, scalloped bands of jade green linen. They hang straight to the floor, from beneath scalloped wooden cornices painted jade green with fine borders of amber. Covers on the twin beds are of the flowered linen, boxed to fit, and piped with jade. The pillows are covered with a strip of jade green linen, piped with amber. Narrow hanging shelves between the beds are made of walnut, to match the rest of the furniture. The walls are light pistachio green. Moss green rugs, with borders of deeper green, are used on the floor.

Strikingly different and effective is a room done in black and white. The furniture is enameled glossy black, with fine lines of jade green at the edges to relieve the severity. At the windows are draperies of an amusingly patterned black and white material, lined with white sateen. They hang straight to the floor, and are topped by wooden cornices, painted to match the furniture. These cornices hide the mechanism of pulley cords by which the draperies may be drawn together. No glass curtains are used.

On the three-quarters width bed, which stands lengthwise against the wall, a black fur cover is used, and against the wall are placed several cushions of bright colors. In lieu of the black fur cover, a cover of black rep, piped with jade, might be used.

The walls are done in a white paper, with black polka dots. Woodwork is painted black, with jade green sinkages. Mottled white parchment, bound with black, and decorated with a fine line of jade, makes lamp shades and shields for the side lights. The floor is rugged with black chenille.

Dressings for old colonial beds are always interesting. In an early American room the large four post bed has a tester valance and deep flounced cover of white dotted Swiss, trimmed with ball tassel fringe. Across the foot of the bed, a lovely old pieced quilt is folded. At the windows are ruffled glass curtains of the dotted swiss. Draperies are made of plain strawberry pink glazed chintz, edged with ball tassel fringe.

The walls are done in a white paper, with pencil lines of strawberry pink. On a stand beside the bed is a white glass lamp with a parchment shade decorated with rosebuds. A wing chair, near one of the windows, is upholstered in quilted blue and white calico. The same material covers a small sofa which stands against the foot of the bed.

In the space between two windows a maple highboy is placed. A maple desk, with a ladder back, rush bottom chair, stands in one corner. It is lighted by a polished steel reading lamp, with a pink accordion plaited paper shade. Completing the furnishings is a maple bureau, above which a characteristically colonial mirror is hung. Colorful hooked rugs enliven the floor

Amused a Storeful.

I had just come home for the Christmas holidays after having been away at school since September and I was helping my dad in our grocery store during the holiday rush. I had not yet come out of the school atmosphere and was going rather absent mindedly about my work.

The store was full of people and I was waiting on a little old lady. I had given her some eggs, some sugar, and then she asked me, "How do you sell sweet potatoes?"

I understood her to say, "How do you spell," etc. And immediately I started out, s-w-e-e-t p-o——"

I got just so far when I realized what I was doing. Everybody was smiling and some big fellow broke out into a "haw, haw, haw."

That was the signal and soon everybody was laughing loudly. I left the store, almost crying. I never hope to be in such a position again.

C. M. N.

Guessed Wrong.

One bright day last summer I went to the photographer to have my picture taken, and I took a little four year old girl with me.

After having my picture taken, and when we were ready to leave, the photographer said, "Mrs. G. you have such a nice little daughter and she is the image of her mother."

Was I embarrassed? Well, I certainly was! I had to explain that I was not married and that the little girl was not mine. P. G.

Hard to Endure.

My most embarrasing moment took place when I was initiated into a well known club. In order to gain membership a group of girls had to don old clothes and walk up and down Michigan avenue dusting the shoes of passers-by.

Further embarrasment was added when my fiancé and his boss passed by and noticed me. O, if the earth could have swallowed me then!

L. H.

Left Handed.

I was invited out to dinner at a friend's and took my 2 year old daughter with me. As dinner was served and we began to eat my daughter began to use her left hand, as she had a habit of doing at home. So of course I made her use her right hand.

My friend's husband asked if she was left handed. I replied "She always like to use it, but I don't like it, as I think it looks so awkward."

And imagine my embarrassment when I looked at him and saw he was left handed. Mrs. F. E. B.

Telling Why.

I was entertaining the ladies' aid in our downstairs apartment. The woman upstairs was not at home, but had kindly offered me the use of her front room. I didn't use it because her ideas of cleanliness were not the best.

Imagine my embarrassment when friend neighbor returned and asked why I hadn't used her room and my daughter piped up with, "My mama says she couldn't take the ladies up there—it's too dirty." C. H. S.

An Unguarded Moment.

One day I was marcelling a woman's hair in my beauty parlor, which is one large room, divided only by a screen. Every one can hear what is being said.

Mrs. S——, who has a beauty parlor across the street, came in to have her hair curled. I was busy, so she sat down in the waiting room to wait her turn.

Not knowing who had come in, I asked the woman whom I was working on where she had her work done before coming to my shop, and she said: "Why, I have been going to Mrs. S——'s shop across the street, but I don't like her, and she can't marcel at all. Why, my hair always looked awful when she curled it."

Needless to say, it was an embarrassing moment for both of us when we discovered Mrs. S—— was in the same room. Mrs. G. A. H.

London Doctor Finds Real Cause of Stomach Gas

AS A RESULT of special studies made at one of London's leading hospitals, a famous English specialist asserts that most stomach and bowel trouble is due to just one cause—Intestinal Stasis. This disease which, it is said, afflicts three out of every four people, is directly caused by improper food, lack of correct exercise and other faults of modern life.

Intestinal Stasis

INTESTINAL STASIS, in everyday language, means the too slow movement of waste food matter through the intestines. This matter, from which the body has taken all the nourishment, is not promptly passed out of the bowels, but due to intestinal weakness, it remains many hours or even days longer than it should. This waste matter then ferments, forms gas and poisons, and is the cause of sour stomach, gas bloating and indigestion.

A person may have Intestinal Stasis and yet not be noticeably constipated. The bowels may move once or even twice a day, but the movements are only partial. Enough old matter is left to form gas, hinder digestion and poison the system.

Action Needed on Both Bowels

ORDINARY laxatives or physics seldom overcome Intestinal Stasis. Nor do soda or magnesia give more than temporary relief from stomach gas. Intestinal Stasis, and the other diseases of which it is the cause, can be relieved permanently only by continued, REAL intestinal cleansing.

Dr. Carl Weschcke, in his private practice, first perfected the bowel cleanser and intestinal prophylactic now known as Adlerika. It is a compound of the best saline intestinal evacuant with vegetable buckthorn and cascara, together with glycerine and other ingredients which expel gas and have detergent action. Adlerika, unlike other medicines, acts upon BOTH upper and lower bowel.

Gas Relieved System Cleansed

ONE of Adlerika's first effects is to relieve gas on the stomach and gas bloating. Even the FIRST spoonful usually brings out a surprising amount of old poisonous waste matter which you never guessed was in your system and which may have been the hidden cause of indigestion, nervous dyspepsia, headache, sleeplessness or other trouble. Even if your bowels move daily, Adlerika frequently brings out a surprising amount of additional matter which might otherwise be poisoning your system.

Many physicians recognize Adlerika as the one dependable remedy for Gas and Intestinal Stasis or whenever REAL bowel cleansing is necessary. No matter what you have tried for your stomach and bowels, Adlerika will surprise you.

What Doctors Say about Adlerika

"I prescribe Adlerika with highly satisfactory results."—Dr. A. C. Curl.

"In my 50 years' practice I have found nothing to excel Adlerika."—Dr. James Weaver.

Ancient gateway to Guy's Hospital, London, where important discoveries about Intestinal Stasis have been made.

"I have to congratulate you on the good effects I had from Adlerika since I prescribed it."—Dr. L. Langlois.

"I have found Adlerika to be far superior in bowel and stomach trouble to my fondest anticipations."—Dr. G. Eggers.

"Adlerika very markedly reduces the number of bacteria and colon bacilli. This feature increases the therapeutic value of Adlerika because, in addition to its intestinal cleansing action, it checks and inhibits the growth of these intestinal bacteria and bacilli."—Dr. H. L. Shoub, New York.

THE B. AND C. AND THE DUKE

By Duke Bakrak

The Wife's Vacation Takes 'Em to Her Old Home Town.

WHOEVER that poet was what said "There's no place like home," must of had our house in mind when he thought of it. Now that we are all settled (except tha bills) and ready to sit down to enjoy tha fruits of our labor, with nothing to do but watch tha rubber plant grow, tha B. and C. decides that on acct. she's all tired out the thing fer her to do is to take a trip down home fer a week with tha baby. Outside of the R. R. fare I woudn' complain about her going fer a year and if she ever bought a one way ticket I wouldn' complain at all. Right now the bank roll is so aneemick that the least little shock might prove fatal.

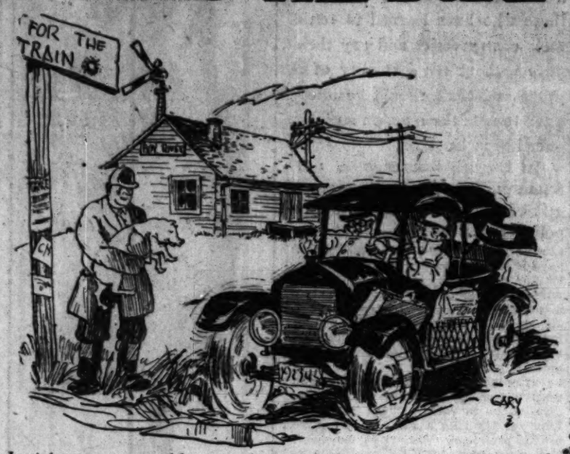
What we need more as rail-road tickets right now is curtains an drapes. When we went over to our furniture company last night to purchase some, tha clerk said we could get immediate delivery but he was evidently missinformed as tha credit man said we would have to wait three months. It now looks like tha naybors will keep on gettin a birds eye view of books an plates landing on a certain bird's eye.

HER NERVES SHOT

After getting home I inquired as to just why it was necessary for her to go on this cruise and she informs me her nerves are on edge an she is just shot to pieces, in the 1st place, with her species of nerve I can't figure out why they should be run down as they certainly get plenty of exercise and as far as her being all shot to pieces, I am heartily in favor of it. In a way it's very economical for her to go alone as that is a cheap way for the two of us to get a vacation for the price of one.

Tha big hitch in tha program is that she insists on my getting Saturday morning off so's I could come down Friday night and bring her home Sunday. I firmly refused to do this act and of course me being tha last word, I will take the 7:52 P. M. train Friday. Also I was forced to tell her that it was impossible to be at tha train Monday, when she left. I paced tha depot for a ½ hour and one minute before train time she blows in.

One Saturday and Sunday I spent three months down in that Cemetery an I sure dread the day I gotta go again.



I wish you guys coulda seen tha wreck they came to tha depot with.

CLOTHES TA BUY

The idea of her bracing me for 10 bucks spending money is a joke. You coudn' spend a dollar a day in that tomb unless you bought all the ice cream that Sweete-Shoppe had, and it's a cinch ya can't lose a helova lot gambling, cause last time we was visiting they played dominoes for raisins.

What gets my goat is no matter where a woman goes (if it's only out of the city limits) it seams there's always some clothes to buy while all us birds ever do is to get a hair cut. If I follow all her instructions such as making tha bed, keeping tha windows closed, marking up tha milk card, and twenty other things I will hafta purchase a season ticket in a rest cure.

Well, she left last Monday and I certainly fixed me up a swell feed when I got home. There's been a can of asparagas tips in tha pantry for a cupple weeks which I was tole not to touch cause you couldn' tell but what maybe unexpected company might drop in some time an she would open it then. They was very good on acct. I melted a ½ pound of butter to go on them. It's a damn good thing she didn' have 2 cans.

LIMBURGER!

Tuesday night I brought home some swell eats and included a brick of limburger which I figgered on makin 3 or 4 sandwiches fer a midnight lunch to kind of take away the after taste of my little batch which I guess I tole you turned out a little smelly. I mus'n't ferget to ditch any of this cheese what's left over Friday morning on acct. tha B. and C. has always said she would never allow any Limburger to come into our house. I remember that time I tried to explain to her that it was considered healthy and that some people didn' know what was good for them to which she says, "Anything with that smell would be considered sickly," and as far as people not knowing what was good for them was concerned, if I knew what was good for me I'd never try and drag any home.

Wednesday night I made bacon an eggs and Thursday night eggs an bacon. After I got finished I did the weekly dishes and Friday morning I made the damn bed. I wish some of you guys coulda seen tha wreck they came to tha depot with Saturday morning when I hopped offen that train, tha fenders flapped like a trained Seal before you throw him a fish. Tha Pa-in-law tries ta tell me it's 3 years old, if that relic is on it's 3rd birthday my grandfather is 12 yrs. old.

A BUSY DAY

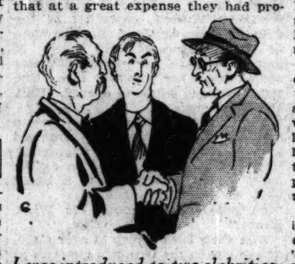
Enryway on acct. they eat breakfast at 5:30 all I get is cold pancakes and some warmed over coffee, from the taste of it I think it was warmed over from last month. Saturday, up to noon time tha ole man takes me all over the farm an if I woulda listened to 1-10th of what he was xplainin I possibly could run for Sec. of Agriculture. What tha hell do I care about as how, "His favorite heffer had a bad spell of heaves but waren't quite as sick as war a week come nex' Choosday." I suggested maybe he should have her tonsils and adnoids removed. Guess I musta been talkin in his bum ear cause he answers my suggestion by saying, "Buddy ya didn' maybe bring a little likker up with ya from Sheecawgo did ya?" Well, I did borrow a pint but if that spendthrift had an idea I was gonna swap him a shot for a cup of 2nd hand coffee he's got a lot more guesses comin.

Saturday afternoon the big brother who is in charge of "The Busy Bee" which happens to be tha town department store asks me, did I wanta see tha emporium? After knowing I had learned everything about farming, I figgered I'd better learn that store bizzness on acct. maybe some time I'd have a poor crop of Wheat and I could make up that difference by puttin in 12 or 13 hrs. a day at that store after I finished tha daily chores.

This bazaar sells anything from a piece of liver sausage to a tomb-stone. If they ever wanted to sell me one of their departments I would take tha "Hair Tonic" an "Bitters" counter, it's tha busiest part of the place. How those guys can hit that stuff and live is beyond me. While I was in that place I was introduced to two celebrities, Ephriam Heimerdinger who is the town's "Champeen horse shoe pitcher" and Frank Sanborn who has won all tha "Hog Calling Contests."

THA WEEKLY MOVIE

Saturday night was my treat an I took the whole damn bunch to the school house where tha weekly movie show is put on. I enjoyed that feature picture very much as I hadn' see it in three years. Tha comedy must of been funny cause I noticed a lotta yaps laughing. That News reel was very interesting, it showed the boys embarking for France, Mayor Walker of New York handing that Prince of Wales that key to tha city and other late events. As a special treat a announcer got on tha platform and informed us that at a great expense they had procured a added feature, the 19th episode of the "Perils of Pauline." After Miss. Aileen Ryan sang "Kiss me again" with colored slides and jestures I treated tha gang to ice cream and then we went home and hit tha hay.



I was introduced to two clebrities.

Sunday after church that Pa-in-law drove "Decrepit" over to that river to show me tha dam sight, I'da damn sight rather of walked. Ennyway after we eat and get a treat in that way of looking at "Niagara Falls" and "Yellowstone Park" through a new invention called a "Photoscope" we get to packing and at half four we was on the train on the way back home.

If anybody ever willed me a home in that town I would trade it off fer a litter of kittens and then drowned 'em.

LADIES IN CRIME

"Grandma" Nusbaum, the Amazing Grandmother

By Genevieve Forbes Herrick.

ELIZA NUSBAUM, that meager, colorless grandmother who capped 59 years of obscurity with a sensational flare-up of publicity when she confessed to a membership in a bewildering murder syndicate of five, whose plots made away with grandma's husband, Albert, beguiled herself that she was helping kill grandpa all for love of John Walton Winn, whose 40 or so years were youth to her.

But once the confession was made, then repudiated, the faded old housekeeper was jolted into cynicisms when she learned that she didn't even have the comfort of a love affair to prop her up.

For Winn, with his prison record, with his everlasting sucking of his gold bridge work, with his cheaply resplendent haberdashery, didn't play the gallant the way they do in story books.

WINN KNOCKED NUSBAUM TO THE FLOOR and, with Goff, stamped out the old man's life.

"GRANDMA" ELIZA NUSNUSBAUM as she appeared during her trial.

JOHN WINN, the actual slayer of Nusbaum.

ALBERT NUSBAUM, the victim.

MARION STRINGHAM, an accomplice; MRS. DELILAH MARTIN, in whose home Nusbaum was killed; EDWARD GOFF, who confessed, naming Winn as chief actor in the killing.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

PUTS BLAME ON GRANDMA

Winn sat in one room of the state's attorney's office; grandma in another. She was all concern over the younger man, whom she called "Baby." Winn was all concern about John Walton Winn. And when things got pretty warm for him as the questioning went along, he summed up his regard for the woman in the next room in one curt sentence:

"Grandma's framed me."

Just about then Eliza Nusbaum was stumbling down the corridor, supported by the police matron. Grandma's hair was ruffled; her near-seal coat, with the lining frayed, had slipped awkwardly down over her shoulders; her near silk stocking were twisted awry, and the run down heels of her worn satin slippers wabbled over at her every uncertain step.

Through the half open door grandma spied the more or less well dressed Winn. His shoes were shined; his clothing was pressed. His manner was complacent. She looked in; he looked out.

Then she heard this man, to whom, she had admitted, she had been giving $250 a month, insist that "the old gal" was nothing to him.

EIGHTEEN IN FAMILY

She whimpered something to the matron about not wanting to see him; that he had already brought her too much trouble. But as soon as she got back into her room she collapsed. For ten wild, hysterical minutes she screamed and babbled about God and punishment and grandpa and Winn. Always she came coming back to her plea:

"Don't let anybody kill me; promise that you won't let anybody kill me."

After her fit of hysteria, the first the busy housewife had indulged in in all her life, Mrs. Nusbaum became calm, wistful, practical.

"I've worked hard all my life," she said. "I was born in Elkhart, Ind. That's a real nice town, ain't it? My ma had eighteen children; nine died. I was the baby. When I was 16 I married Grandpa Nusbaum. His pa was a farmer. I worked so hard then; lots of boarders. And I cooked and sewed and washed."

Then this curious old lady who was about to stand trial, along with four others, for the brutal murder of her husband, fell, inevitably, into the familiar tricks of virtually every woman who ever gets her name scribbled across a police blotter. Grandma, just like Tillie Klimek or Belva Gaertner; like Mrs. Lillian Rowland or scores of others I could name, grandma fell back on the old nine o'clock lady alibi.

9 O'CLOCK ALIBI

She remembered, and in her case it was true, that she never chased around; that she was a home body, that she cooked a mean dinner, sewed a fine seam and was general utility man of the household.

And so, with a pride that, for the moment, shoved aside the shadow of the Criminal court, grandma sat up straight and said:

"In all their lives, my men folks h'ain't never paid out ten dollars for laundry. They h'ain't never gone to the bureau and not found clean clothes, with the buttons all sewed on. No sir."

Then, still in the mood of retrospection, the old lady who had thought she was having a love affair with Winn, went on:

"Grandpa, he was that stingy. He h'ain't never given me but one present; that was a picture album, about twenty years ago. For his picture, I 'spect."

Sometimes, as she talked, she twisted her hands, with their snub finger nails, all ingrained with soil, and put forth this not unusual philosophy:

"You can't never tell when trouble's gonna come."

NEVER SUSPECT GRANDMA

Certainly, had you passed through that section of South Chicago where the Nusbaums had their home (a pretty substantial one, for grandpa was a carpenter and contractor), you would never have picked out grandma as the possible member of a murder syndicate which did a chilly job in a chilly way.

The Nusbaums lived in their tidy home at 9238 Baltimore avenue. John Walton Winn, a former employe of grandpa's and an itinerant philander who traded a few vague caresses for some real money which grandma got from Nusbaum's rentals, spent much of his time in a confused, casual household at 2947 East 96th street. It was Mrs. Delilah Martin's flat, and Delilah wasn't a bad name for her. In that flat, on easy terms, lived Marion Stringham and Edward Goff. To that flat came Winn. When he came grandma found her way there.

In that flat was hatched the murder plot to get rid of the old carpenter. He was ill, anyway, and stingy, and grandma thought he was in the way of what it pleased her to regard as her love affair. Winn knew the carpenter was in the way of more money for Winn.

KILLED WITH HAMMER

It was the evening of Dec. 29, 1925, that grandma, "making supper" in the kitchen of her home, talked pleasantly enough with her 5 year old grandson, even though she knew that Nusbaum had been wooed over, on some flimsy excuse, to Delilah's flat.

What was happening over in the flat was told later, with all the horrible and stark details of a page of Russian realism, by Goff, on the stand in Judge Emanuel Eller's court.

Vividly, perhaps too vividly for the courtroom fans, he described how "the old man," as he called Albert Nusbaum, lay on his back on the floor of the flat. His head was half caved in with a hammer blow, struck by Winn.

Then, according to Goff's story, Winn hit the pitiable old fellow one more blow with that hammer. He tossed a blanket over the mangled face and the courtroom was very still as Goff tells this—he planted his right foot down hard on the face.

The carpenter's head jerked sharply to the right. The next groan is longer and lower. Winn ordered Goff, the latter said, to take his turn at stamping down the blanket and he did as he was told.

GRANDSON ARRESTED

There was a newly dug grave waiting in the yard. But for some reason that burial plan was abandoned and the stiff, distorted corpse was found the next day in a prairie near 94th street and Brandon avenue. It had been lugged there in the tonneau of grandpa's car. The morning it was found, young Floyd Nusbaum, the dead man's grandson, was driving the same car. Police officers halted him to look into the tonneau and, startled, he let them look.

Then he nearly fainted when the officer hauled from a crack in the floor board a piece of Albert Nusbaum's skull. The boy, protesting and bewildered, was taken into custody. His father, Roscoe Nusbaum, more to save his son than to involve his mother, told the police of this pseudo love affair of Eliza Nusbaum and John Walton Winn. Police rushed to a hotel in Crown Point. They pulled Winn out of bed. They pinned back his arms in time to save him from destroying a letter. This was the note:

"Just got that, you know. Ransack the house; tear up the stuff in the drawers. I hate to do it, but it's you or me or him.

"I'll get the money on the ring or watch and you'll hear from me soon. Do you love me?"

PLOT IS DISCOVERED

There was no signature. The letter closed: "From mother to my baby."

And it was thus that the plot was discovered.

The path led to the flat; the three were taken into custody by Capt. Patrick Collins. Then the trial led to grandma's neat house. The night before, Goff, according to his story, had gone over to the house and said to the old lady getting supper:

"Well, you're old man is out of the way. You are free; the job is done."

At that time the old lady reeled, almost fainting, and is reported to have whispered, "O God, is it true."

Arrested, taken to Capt. Collins' office, then to the state's attorney's office, then back to South Chicago police station, grandma began, at 59, to learn something about men, at least about John Walton Winn. Repudiated by him, even taunted and laughed at, she swung away from him in as great a fury as a miss of 18 might work up over a beau who tarried with another.

For a few days her affections, if such they were, were flung back to the man who was dead with her connivance, if not actually by her hand. She pleaded that she might attend his funeral.

GOES TO FUNERAL

They took her back to her flat. The front room was filled with neighbors and they were none too friendly. But grandma, leaning on the police matron's arm, stumbled into her bed room. Then, for the first time in her whole life, Eliza Nusbaum bethought herself of make-up. This strange woman, part peasant housekeeper, part flaming adventuress, walked over to the dresser. She daubed a swathe of chalky white powder over her nose; she drew a wobbly red line about her drooping lips; she draped a flimsy black veil over her tear-stained face.

Then she went back into the front room to brave the smacking lips and muted comments of two score women folk of the community.

As they led her to the automobile to go to the cemetery the widow murmured, "See, how many cars there are; such a crowd of folks." And she seemed to find solace in this.

Then, suddenly, she decided to go to the cemetery on another day "when there h'ain't no crowds" and returned to her cell at the station, muttering, "I want to be buried next to pa."

She fell asleep, exhausted. It had been a busy day for a home-body like grandma.

LOYAL TO WINN AGAIN

When she awoke, the emphasis of her fumbling loyalty swung once more back to Winn. Anything and everything to save him from the gallows.

She never wavered from that desire through the long days at the county jail, awaiting trial. She, and the others went to trial about St. Valentine's day, 1926. Grandma was the last of the defendants to take the stand. For five hours her tired, colorless, and sometimes soundless voice insisted that she was not guilty of aiding in grandpa's murder.

A variation from the run of women defendants in a murder trial, was grandma. Worn and pale and drab. Perhaps the best index of the impression she made on the jury can be given in one concrete picture. Instead of carrying an orchid to the defendant's chair, grandma hugged to her side a round, red apple, the gift of some friend. She didn't even have the good fortune to stage a real, dramatic faint.

DOESN'T QUITE FAINT

After the five hours of testimony, when Assistant State's Attorney Louis Geiman asked her something about what she meant when she said she regarded Winn as her son and couldn't refuse him money "or anything else," she sputtered around with a lot of syllables, then she quietly slipped into semi-consciousness. They brought her a glass of water, but the glass teetered sidewise as the elderly woman bumped into the wall in back of the witness stand. The water trickled down her worn, black plush coat.

But she didn't quite faint. She moaned and cried and became silent. Judge Eller adjourned court. Attorney Elmer J. Schnackenberg, her counsel, went to her as soon as the jury had filed out. By this time she was coming to, and she clung desperately to his hand.

"I h'ain't never had no thoughts of Winn only like a friend and like a mother," she sobbed, miserably, as she went back to jail, still hugging that ironically bright colored apple.

Next day she finished her testimony and the next after that the case went to the jury. The twelve men were out three hours and twenty minutes.

They directed that Winn be sent to the gallows, that grandma spend the rest of her natural life in the state penitentiary.

STILL THINKS OF WINN

The perfect housekeeper curved her fingers more tightly about the red apple as she heard the news. Just as everybody was remarking how quietly she took the verdict, her body softened into a collapse, then grew rigid. The big red apple tumbled down the folds of the black dress, hit the stout black shoes, and frisked its giddy way toward the jury box. Grandma's body flopped down, down, in her chair, and, would have followed the apple with a thud, if the bailiffs had not caught her.

"Dad" Watson, custodian of the Criminal court building, shoved a piece of cotton saturated with spirits of amonia beneath her nostrils. Water spilled down her wrinkled face. The judge had the windows opened. Still, she didn't come to.

They carried her into an anteroom and for ten minutes she slumped across the end of the table, frightened, inarticulate, piteous. As soon as she could sit up, she motioned a bailiff close to her and whispered,

"I must do something for Winn, please."

And she's been trying to ever since, as she sits in the woman's quarters at the penitentiary and he fights the death sentence.

Six Months for Bribing Police

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON.—Chicagoans who think nothing of stopping the speed cop's pencil by laying a bill on the summons book and those who have learned to settle their controversies and pay their fines without the formality of a judge and clerk should be interested to note the reaction such an offer has in England.

An English laborer who was found guilty of making a corrupt gift of a few silver coins to two police constables at the Goodwood races was sentenced to six months of hard labor and the two policemen drew similar sentences. Justice Horridge, who tried the case, professed amazement that such a condition could exist.

Soon after this incident a young Stepney shopkeeper was sentenced at the Thames Police court to three months of hard labor and fined when he attempted to bribe two constables with a ten shilling note each to induce them to refrain from reporting him for allowing a gambling machine on his premises. This time, however, the constables, in righteous indignation, reported him, it is said, and undoubtedly strengthened their positions with the force.

Parisian Beaux Given Severe Test

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS.—Parisian society women of marriageable age and with financial as well as physical and mental attractiveness have started something that should give the average young beau more action and thrills than he could hope for in a dozen courtships.

Certain of these young ladies have formed an association to test the sincerity of their fiances. Any man who becomes engaged to one of the members immediately is put through a series of tests that would try a St. Anthony in order to prove that he is immune to the charms of any but the girl he has asked to become his wife.

The would-be Benedick is taken over by the remaining members of the organization, who exert all their wiles to steal away his affections. If, after a round of dinners, parties, automobile rides, and the other props of a courtship the young man succumbs to the charms of the plotters the fiancée is notified and he is checked out.

Several Don Juans, it is said, whose chief object was the money of the prospective brides, were exposed. It is reported that the girls all have played fairly with their fellow members, but the skeptical male wonders what percentage of honest intentioned young men come through the ordeal with the same devotion to their intended, or even with the same intended.

Yank Popcorn Delights Czechs

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PRAGUE.—Natives of this Czecho-Slovakian capital are marveling at the new "magic food of the Americans." They stand about the American exhibit at the fair grounds wide eyed with wonder as the attendant lays kernels of corn over glowing wood coals, and gaze fascinated as the yellow corn blossoms forth into snow white clusters that are drenched with melted butter and passed to their eager, outstretched hands. Popcorn has never before been known in this country, and the Czechs are delighted with the new confection. The American consul here presided at the first popping bee and showed the natives how to prepare the corn.

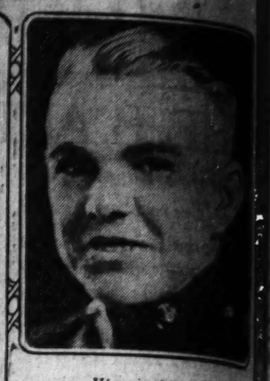
Plan Shorter Route to Paris

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON.—American tourists coming to France next year will find new accommodations and a shorter ride to their ultimate destination—Paris. It is practically certain that Havre will replace Cherbourg as the French port of the White Star steamers with the development of an ocean quay in an ideally sheltered situation at the entrance of the port. Its geographical position as the nearest and most convenient port for Paris will probably popularize it among many tourists who dread the stuffy, tiresome train ride from Cherbourg to the French capital.

A REUNION

Miss Florence Forman



Vincent Murray

A BROTHER and sister, separated in babyhood, will meet again when Harry Carroll's revue comes to the Palace theater this week, according to a veracious press agent. In the Carroll chorus is Florence Forman, specialty dancer. Out at Great Lakes naval training school is Private Vincent Lloyd Murray of the aviation corps. They are brother and sister but the two have not seen each other since they were kids together in Canada, 5 and 6 years old, respectively. The family was broken up, young Murray being brought up by an older brother living in Seattle, while Miss Forman went to live with an older sister in New York where she acquired a stage name as well as the reputation of being a champion high kicker.

HOT PAGES FRUM MY DIARY

By Snowshoe Ed

Trading Troubles With a Wailing Pill Merchant

YESTERDAY morning I wakes up an' discovers that I am 135 pounds uv assorted aches an' pains, so I got kinda scared, in fact I imagined I kood hear harps playing. For instance, I had a sharp pain in the back uv my head wich led me to believe that one uv my ideas must have collided with a dream an' got busted. Inasmuch as sum uv my ideas are none too clean I figured that maybe an infection had set in, so I decided to beat it for a doctor's office.

It wuz a rotten morning. The clouds must have bet on the wrong horse because they wuz shedding tears wildly. I never saw so much water before, unless it wuz the time I went down an' visited a milk bottling plant. Well, the rain didn't make me feel no better, in fact I immediately located eight more different pains, so I hails a taxi an' starts for the office uv the nearest Prescription Peddler.

"Hurry," sez I to the chauffeur; "I think I'm gonna die!"

THE GUY KICKED OFF

"That reminds me," sez the Gasoline Bandit, laffing heartily; "let me tell yuh about the last guy wot died in this cab. This is really funny! Wen he got in the car he told me he wuz full uv aches an' pains, an' he sed that he—"

"Lay off that stuff!" I squawks. "Yew sure are the original little ray uv golden sunshine."

"But this wuz really a scream," sez he, howling with mirth, at the same time turning a corner on one wheel; "the joke wuz on me! Yew see, this bird kicked off before I kood collect my—"

"Never mind!" sez I, gittin' real huffed up. "In yer spare time yew otta write a 2 reel comedy for the movies! Call it 'The Undertaker's Victory,' an' be sure to put in a couple uv side-splitting situations, such as the widow being left with eight starving childurn, er sum other stuff uv a like nature wich wood make the audience fall out uv their seats."

Jist then we turned another corner, an' one uv the rear wheels came off. For the next 2 minutes the cab offered its own conception uv an elephant on ice skates. We bumped into everything in sight with the exception uv the roofs uv the buildings. Then we kissed a lamp post an' stopped. I got out an' decided that I better walk the remaining short distance to the doctor's office.

A FAT BOZO

"Well," sez I to the chauffeur, as I paid him, "I think I kin guess the rest uv that story about the last bimbo wot died in this hearse uv yers. Good-by, acrobat."

By the time I reached the doc's plase I had discovered several more pains, so I began to wonder who wuz gonna act as pallbearers for me. I breezes into his joint an' the girl in the outer office told me to sit down till she found out if he wuz bizzy. I told her to hurry up because I wuz passing away pritty fast. About fifteen minutes later she came out an' told me he wusn't bizzy an' that I kood go right in.

The doc wuz a fat bozo with lots uv whiskers. I'll tell both hemispheres he wuzn't bizzy! He wuz sittin' in a chair lookin' out the window, an' he sure had a sad expression on his mug.

"Doc," sez I, "I'm all in! I think I'm all set for a boat-ride over the river Jordan! I have a terrible pain—"

"Yuh know," sez he, turning frum the window with a sigh, "a man is a fool to buy a second hand auto unless he gits it frum a responsible party! Kum here—look out the window. See that car down there? Well, that's mine. Two weeks ago I paid nine hundred smacks for that Gasoline Broncho because I thought it wuz a good car. The egg wot sold it to me has left town. If that's an automobile I am a Pullman porter. Every time I slam the brakes on, a gallon uv ground cork flops out uv the differential! I have to put mustard plasters on the radiator to keep it frum freezing on hot days. The only way I kin keep that engine frum coughing is to paint it with iodine, feed it cod liver oil, an' wrap it up in red flannel! Yessir, I paid out nine hundred frog-skins for that galloping coffee grinder, an' all I got to show for it is a peach uv a windshield surrounded by a hell uv a wreck!"

"Doc," sez I, "pardon me for interrupting yew, but I have a terrible pain in the back uv my head, an' my side hurts an' my legs ache an' my neck is sore an'—"

ARE YOU ANEMIC?

"Yup," sez he, shaking his head sadly, "I sure got a sweet trimming wen I bot that hunk uv junk. Wot gits me so mad is, I kood have added a couple more hundred bucks an' got myself a brand new Blimpus Six! Then I wood have had sumthing for my money. But no, I hadda go an' shoot nine hundred coupons on this low-down, crippled sneeze-wagon. I tell yuh, it makes a guy sore!"

"Lissen," sez I, "wood it interest yew to know that I have an awful pain in the back uv my head, an' I—"

"O, sit down," sez he; "now, wot seems to be yer trouble?" So I went over all the details again for him. By this time I had also accumulated a nasty head-ache.

"Are yew anemic?" sez he.

"I didn't giteha," sez I. "Am I a WHO?"

"Are yew anemic?" he repeats.

"That's too deep for me," sez I; "I don't know wot I am. Yuh see, my mother wuz born in Scotland, an' the old man came frum London, but I wuz born in this country, so figure it out yerself."

Then he explains that he wants to know wether er not my blood lacks white corporals, so he takes a needle an' jabs me in the lobe uv my right ear, after wich he put a drop uv blood on a piece uv cotton an' placed it in a funny looking, flat little instrument.

"Wot's that thing, doc?" sez I.

"O," sez he, "this little instrument will tell wether er not yew are anemic."

"Aha!" sez I, "an ouija board! Ask the little instrument if Charley Dawes will run for President."

OW-W! MY BACK!

"Ain't that hell!" sez the doc, gazing at the cute little toy, an' frowning.

"Wot's the matter?" sez I, holding my head wich wuz still hurting.

"It didn't work," sez he; "sumthing is wrong with the mechanism, doggone it! That's enuff to git a man's goat. Yuh see, this machine is manufactured in New York, an' they certainly charge plenty for 'em. But the hell uv it is, if anything goes wrong with it yew mite jist as well buy a new one, because they charge so darn much to fix one that it is absolutely absurd! Well, I suppose I kin bounce this one out the window an' put in an order for a new one for all they care!" He came an' sat down again.

"Doc," sez I, "this head uv mine feels like it wuz going to bust—"

"Beleeve me," sez the Pill Merchant, as he lit a cigar, "if I ever meet the bozo wot sold me that automobile I'm gonna sock him on the head so hard that his shoe laces will break. The more I think uv it, the madder I git. He wuz supposed to be a friend uv mine, so I—"

"Ow-w! My back!" I squawks.

"That reminds me," sez the doc; "yew shood take a look at the back uv that car! It has so many dints in it that it looks like a country road. Go down an' take a look at the permanent waves in them fenders! Crawl underneeth that boat an' take a slant at the condition uv the—"

"Ow-ww-ww!! My head!" I howls.

"O, say," sez Whiskers, "wood yew like to have yer blood pressure tested?"

"I don't care wot yew do!" sez I, gittin' mad.

"Good!" sez he; "we will test yer blood pressure." So he dragged out a goofy lookin' machine in a black case, after wich he wrapped eight feet uv garden hose around my arm an' started squeezing on a small rubber bulb. Then he looked at the machine, muttered sumthing under his breath, an' unwrapped the garden hose.

"Well?" sez I.

"Are you married?" sez he.

"No," sez I.

IMITATION RABBIT

"Yew're lucky," sez he; "don't ever git married! I have the most extravagant wife wot ever dragged a poor simp down a church aisle. If she wuz married to John D. Rockafeller he wood have to run an elevator in the evening in order to help pay the charge accounts wich that baby kin roll up. Now she wants a fur coat! Yuh know, a couple years back, the fur dealers used to disguise the lowly rabbit's fur an' make swell coats with fancy names. Now it costs yew five hundred bucks to git a good imitation rabbit! Well sir, yesterday morning at breakfast, the Hindrance announced that she wood like to have one uv them new style pony coats. 'But, my dear,' sez I, 'do yew realize that yew weigh 275 pounds & is Ziegfeld's Chorus, an' considerably more wen yew are dressed?' 'Teh, wot about it?' sez she. 'Well,' sez I, 'where the hell did yew git the idea that a pony is as large as five horses?' Right away she gits peeved, so she picks up the sugar bowl an' slams—"

"Lissen," sez I, "how about that blood pressure test? Wot wuz the answer?"

"O," sez the Prescription Peddler, "I thought I told yew!"

"Yew ain't told me nothing," sez I; "wot wuz the answer?"

"There wuzn't any answer," sez he; "the machine didn't register, so I suppose the darn thing is busted. That's the third time this month it has went flooey. Well, as I wuz saying, the wife picks up the sugar bowl an' slams me with it. I grabbed my hat—"

"Have yew the slightest idea as to wot is the matter with me?" sez I.

"Sure," sez he, "I thought I told yew—yew've got neuritis. As I wuz saying, I grabs my hat—"

"That ain't such a bad idea," sez I. "So long, doc; send me a bill."

"Home made quality you cannot beat—a real treat for people to eat."

THE SAY-SO OF HOLLERAN YELL

by Westbrook Pegler

He Can't Believe League Would Close the Beer Stores.

Under the law he was supposed to inspect all goods.

A GENTLEMAN has been telling me that the Anti-Saloon league is going to pass some kind of a law to close up all the beer stores, but I think the gentleman must be mistaken, because the Anti-Saloon company is doing a big business at present and it would be very bad for the prohibition business to shut up the stores.

"I think you must be nuts, my dear sir," I said to the gentleman, "as the people in the Anti-Saloon league strike me as very smart people and I do not think their mothers ever raised any feeble minded children who would do a thing like that.

"The prohibition people have built up their trade from almost nothing to a national concern in the last few years, and if you will look into the matter you will notice that all this prosperity has come since the country went dry and the beer stores were established.

SOME REAL SERVICE

The gentleman assured me that he was not nuts and said he got his information from a gentleman named Brown who runs a store in the building where he lives.

In our town it is customary for the landlord to make arrangements for a beer store as an accommodation to the tenants and the privilege of running the store is called a concession. Nobody else in the building is supposed to run a store unless it is a very big building, in which case the landlord, after asking for bids among the tenants, may sell a second concession.

I hear a great many people complaining about the Anti-Saloon company, but I must say that I think we are getting a very efficient administration in our building, as the gentleman who runs the concession keeps a good grade of material and makes prompt deliveries and it is much more convenient to send the dough down to the beer store by the dumb waiter and get your order delivered the same way without going out of the house.

POOR SERVICE

I understand that most of these stores are government inspected, because I see the prohibition gentlemen calling around every so often, and if you hear of a store operating on the quiet you are supposed to report it to the Anti-Saloon company, because a place that is not run under the supervision of the prohibition department is likely to sell an inferior grade of goods.

However, this gentleman explained to me that several times lately when he wanted a bag of beer or his old lady wished some cooking gin the material was not delivered. So he investigated and discovered that the gentleman on the next floor below was employed in the prohibition business and he would grab the bag of beer or the tumbler of cooking gin off the dumb waiter as it went by.

So this gentleman went down to complain to his neighbor and the neighbor was very courteous but explained to him that under the law he was supposed to inspect all goods.

"So nowadays," the gentleman said to me, "I do not do any business by dumb waiter but go down to the store myself, and last night Mr. Brown told me about this law."

FOR THE BEER STORES!

Of course, anybody in the beer business is likely to be in close touch with the prohibition people, so it seems to me that it is about time for the people who patronize the beer industry to get together and elect representatives in the Anti-Saloon league. It has been suggested to me that I would make a popular candidate for President, as I am very well informed about beer and such goods. I have given the matter much thought and I have decided that I will give my fellow citizens the benefit of my talents.

I don't know when the Anti-Saloon league holds its primaries or its elections, but I feel sure that it does hold primaries and elections, because it makes quite a number of laws, and anybody who makes laws has to be elected, because this is a democracy.

As a platform I have decided that the beer store is the workingman's club and I will not let the Anti-Saloon company pass any law to close the stores. Although I am not an active workingman because of delicate health, I am what you would call an honorary workingman because my old lady usually has some kind of a job and she tells me a great deal about work.

But still I cannot believe that the Anti-Saloon league would be chump enough to pass this law to close the beer stores just when it is doing the greatest business in its history. It would be too much like the American league passing a law to keep the customers out of the ball yards.

ABOUT BROADWAY

Gay Jesters and Their Pranks

HARPO MARX of the Four Marx Brothers, whose favorite practical joke is to leave a friend for a miserable quarter of an hour in an old warehouse after a fake liquor raid.

NEW YORK.—(Special Correspondence.)—As long as the ha ha is on the other fellow your average Broadwayite can laugh louder and longer than any other class of people in the world. The big alley is fairly infested with what is commonly known as practical jokers. And these gentlemen can always be counted upon to make life as miserable as they can for you.

If you travel in the Broadway set you are certain to hear of some new prank each and every day. The best of friends will sometimes go to any extremes to make each other uncomfortable. Just why this should be we have never been able to figure out. And who would care if we did?

Sometimes the jokes are simple and speedily effective. A fake telegram, a disguised phone call, an anonymous letter—and the laugh is over. But sometimes the jests are lengthy and involved. They go on for weeks and weeks before the denouement. But the laughs—so called—are worth the wait.

BEER FOR BAIT

Some are mild. Some are good. Some are cruel. Take a look at a few of them.

Of recent years, with the liquor situation in such a deplorable condition, the good old bottle has naturally been the bait in a number of practical jokes. One of the best known of the lot is the Coney island stunt. And it has rarely failed to work. Three or four men will drive along Broadway in a car and pick up a prospective victim. He is asked if he would care to come along for a glass of good beer. Nine times out of ten the victim asks how far he will have to go. Upon being told that the spot is just across the bridge—a ten minute drive—the victim hops in the car. He is, of course, a friend of the men in the car.

The machine is driven to Brooklyn. But it fails to stop. The minutes fly by and so do the miles. Every five minutes or so the victim will invariably pull out his watch and inquire as to where the deyil he is being hauled to. And he is always told that it is just another five minutes away.

Finally, after an hour's drive, the car pulls into a certain spot in Coney island. The victim gets out of the car and usually states that no beer in the world is worth that long ride. But, as long as he's there, he'll have some just the same. He is taken through a long, dark hallway. The leader, whom the victim is always made to follow, raps at a door. The door opens. The leader steps back. And the victim is given a sudden push into the blackness beyond.

Howling with terror, the victim finds himself falling down and down and down. He doesn't know it, of course, but he is sliding down one of Coney island's longest shoot-the-chutes. After a minute of this—and it must seem like an eternity—the victim slides into the light in front of his friends. He is generally bruised and terrified. And his friends laugh hysterically. Then, the gag over, they take him out and get him his beer. By that time, it's ten to one the victim can't drink it.

Just another Broadway prank.

A WAREHOUSE PRANK

Along similar lines is the joke that was frequently perpetrated by the four Marx brothers during their recent run in New York in "The Cocoanuts." It was played on practically every literary celebrity in town, and it is safe to state that none of them has ever forgotten it. The basis of this gag was more than a glass of beer. It was a whole case of liquor. And the liquor was painted in such rosy colors by Mr. Harpo Marx that prospective victims never failed to nibble at the bait.

The liquor was supposed to be government stuff that was secreted in a large warehouse on the lower east side. A car, generally driven by Harpo, called for the victim and guided him to the warehouse. Guided him is hardly the proper word—for the car was taken in and out of various streets until the poor victim had but a hazy idea of where he was.

After many rappings and tappings, a small door is finally swung open. There is a sudden blowing of a police whistle, a sharp crying of, "police," and the victim is pushed into the gloomy spaces of the warehouse. He is, it goes without saying, alone. For his friends have gone through another entrance to watch the fun.

The victim, unused to the weird darkness, is afraid to cry out for assistance. His first thought is that the police are on the outside and that his friends—including Harpo—are fleeing rapidly. He is deliberating on the best course to follow when he sees a startling figure approaching him. The figure is a man, some six feet tall and one of the homliest individuals that ever trod the earth. He is a combination of Bull Montana and Lon Chaney at their worst. In his eyes is the gleam of the maniac. And he carries a huge baseball bat on his shoulder.

From then on, the sport depends on the victim. If he tries to talk, he is silenced at once. If he tries to run, he trips within three seconds. If he tries to stand still, he is prodded with the bat. No matter what he does, he is wrong. The sport is kept up for some ten or twelve minutes. Then the warehouse door is suddenly opened and the victim runs out and away in nothing flat.

He rarely reports for work on the following day.

A JOKE THAT FAILED

Professional practical jokesters are few and far between. In order to at all costs. Most men with this talent play poker for a living.

Frank Libuse, a discovery of Vincent Lopez, is unquestionably the most successful worker of this kind in New York today. His specialty is annoying people who are assembled at banquets.

He is not a speechmaker. Dressed as a waiter, he bumps into diners, be successful at this business, a man must be able to keep a straight face pushes them this way and that, seats them at wrong tables, falls into women's laps, put down celery and yanks it away just as some diner is reaching for it—and so on and so forth. During these operations, he never fails to keep up the noble standard of a perfectly dumb expression. He is successful—because he succeeds in getting people angry while others laugh.

Libuse had a forerunner in this field, but his name escapes us at the present writing. We want to tell a little story about him. So, for the sake of clarity, we'll call him Mike. Mike was not quite as rough as Libuse. He spoke to people, which is something that Libuse does not go in for. It was Mike's specialty to dress himself as a head waiter and then annoy diners by whispering to them. Picking his target, he would slide next to him.

"That's the wrong fork," Mike would whisper. And the diner, mortified beyond words, would quickly put down the fork he was using and pick up another.

Only once did Mike's fork trick fail to have the slightest effect. That episode came to pass during a huge Hebrew banquet at the Hotel Pennsylvania some five years ago. Mike had been engaged for the occasion and was told to pick particularly upon a well known cloak and suiter. As soon as possible, he walked behind the Hebrew and told him he was using the wrong fork. The cloak and suiter paid no attention. He kept right on eating.

"That's the wrong fork," said Mike, a bit louder.

The cloak and suiter speared a piece of butter with the same fork. He looked up at Mike.

"Nu," he cried, "do me sometink!"

THE FALSE ARREST

False arrest often furnishes the climax for a practical joke. One of the best illustrations of this type of jest occurred some five months back and was played upon one of the city's foremost ear, eye and throat specialists.

The doctor in question sat in his home one night and entered into a discussion of night life. With him at the time were Kathryn Ray, Jack Osterman, Milton Shubert and several others. The doctor asserted that night life held no thrills for a man of his knowledge. "What's the use of going to these places?" he remarked in an excellent professional manner. "I have seen all there is to be seen. There is nothing in any of these night clubs that can give me any sort of a kick."

Unseen by the doctor, winks and nods were exchanged. He was finally prevailed upon to accompany the crowd to a certain spot in Harlem. And fifteen minutes later found the whole party in a colored cabaret.

The good doctor's first shock arrived when a pretty colored damsel sat herself beside him and began gently to pat his hand. He looked about him foolishly, but lacked the courage to tell the little lady to leave him alone. His second shock arrived soon after. An extremely tough looking Negro came leaping through the door and pulled the doctor's chair out from under him.

"Ah knows yo'," cried the Negro to the doctor. "Yo' de man dats been chasin' mah wife. Ah comes in heah an' finds yo' sitting wif her. Ah'm gonna punch yo' right in de nose."

Some one blew a police whistle. Two burly policemen rushed into the place. And they forthwith arrested the good doctor who, by this time, was no good at all. White and stammering, he protested his innocence. But to no avail. Prodding him with their nightsticks, the policemen led the physician up the stairs and into the street.

A few minutes later the doctor was released. It was, of course, a frame-up from the beginning. The doctor went home, took several pills and went to bed.

He hasn't discussed night life since.

A PARTNER'S TRICK

We might go on like this for years and years. But we'll try your patience with just one more and then call it a go. This one is right off the griddle and was related to us last week by Walter J. Kingsley, who knows almost everything.

Joe is a theatrical man who produces failures on a shoestring. So, too, is Frank, who occupies a small office with Joe. That, then, is the setting. Frank overhears Joe phoning in an add to a paper. It is the usual thing and states that "the right man, with a little cash, can have half interest in a new theatrical production that blah blah blah blah." Frank goes to all the trouble of sending a reply to Joe's advertisement. And he puts into his letter the sort of stuff that made Joe almost fall from his chair.

"I am interested in your advertisement," read that phony letter, "and I would like you to get in touch with me at once. I have just come in from the west with a fairly comfortable income and would like to invest anywhere from $50,000 to $250,000 in the theatrical business. Everything, of course, must be arranged to my satisfaction. Call me as soon as possible at Bryant 0000."

Reading this letter, Joe almost leaped into a telephone. But he could not reach Mr. William Smyth, by whom the letter was signed. The telephone number, of course, was a prop. But it was a private number—so that Joe was unable to trace the address. For two or three days, until he was literally beside himself, Joe tried to reach Mr. Smyth on the telephone. But he always just seemed to miss him. And then, to make matters worse, Frank would always tell Joe that Mr. Smyth had called up as soon as Joe had stepped out of the office.

A meeting was finally arranged between the two. Frank had let a number of Broadwayites in on the secret and they had all gathered to watch the fun. An actor, dressed to perfection, as a western spender, walked into Joe's office and introduced himself as Smyth.

FITFUL ENDING

Joe commenced to sell himself without further ado. Broadwayites of all descriptions doubled up with laughter as they listened through thin walls and doors and heard Joe telling Mr. Smyth, from the west, what fortunes might be made in the business. After twenty minutes, Smyth finally nodded.

"I feel," he said quietly, "that we can do well together. Have you a pen for me? We'll start our concern off with $50,000."

His hand trembling, Joe handed Mr. Smyth a peh. Smyth got as far as the signature and Joe heard the angels singing. Suddenly, for no obvious reason, Mr. Smyth began to froth at the mouth. He threw one of the finest fits ever seen on Broadway. How was poor Joe to know that the froth was soap and the fit was fake?

He howled for a doctor.

"My God," he screamed, "somebody do something! Hey! I don't care what happens to this guy if he'll only get well enough to sign this check. Hey! Get a doctor!"

This was too much for the listeners. Screaming with laughter, they piled into the room. The joke was over.

Yes, Roscoe, you'll find plenty of practical jokers along the big alley. Plenty of laughs. Plenty of jokes. Plenty of funny twists.

That's one way of looking at it, Roscoe. We have our own opinion. They can jest and laugh from now until doomsday. To us, it's still the saddest street in the world.

Cocktail Contest On in Vienna.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

VIENNA.—The "old timers" of this capital, who were in the habit of sitting at the coffee houses, sipping their drinks and amusedly watching the attractive American girls hurry along the walk and into American bars, have been roused from their lethargic state by those same Yankees they treated with an indifferent air. Some enterprising Yank started a competition to discover new cocktails, one for men and one for women, and offering to the winner the immortal glory of having the drink named after him. Bars have become as laboratories. The spotless kitchens of the staid old homes reek with pungent odors and are littered with bottles and essences. Here is one assignment in which the Viennese will not be outdone. Meanwhile, if the judges last, some one will be declared the winner. Since every one wants to be a judge, the supply ought to weather the worst mistakes.

HELLO, CENTRAL!

Two girls were talking over the wire. Both were discussing what they would wear at the coming party. In the midst of this important conversation a masculine voice interrupted, asking humbly for a number. One of the girls became indignant and scornfully asked:

"What line do you think you are on, anyhow?"

"Well," said the man, "I am not sure, but, judging from what I have heard, I should say that I was on the clothesline."—Phonograms.

AFRAID TO LOVE

Little Tales of Big Heads

What's your pet little tale of a Big Head? Send it to Big Heads, Sunday Tribune, and we'll pay you $1 if we print it.

Pretty High Hat.

We were living in a small town. A neighbor's daughter went east to study landscape gardening. One evening after her return home my daughter and I, while out walking, passed along where she was busy transplanting a flower that was new to me.

I stopped and asked for the name of it. The young woman looked at me and said, "I know it by its botanical name. If I tell you you will not understand." She stopped, evidently to impress me, then added, "I do not recall the common name." J. T. T.

Tables Turned.

I belong to a club of girls, none of whom seemed to find the one man of was able to hold him, so when one of the girls finally came along with a diamond, even though it was a very small stone, we couldn't help envying her. But she sure got the big head about it. She was always flashing the ring before us, talking nothing but her fiancé, and lost no chance to let us know how easy it was for her to get somebody.

But we turned the tables on her, all right. In a short time several girls were engaged and now, through some unfortunate circumstances, which she fails to relate, her marriage has been postponed indefinitely and I would not be surprised to find her the last one on the list to step off. E. F. D.

The Critic.

A student in our English class, who distinguished by her poor composition, lack of originality, and unpleasing diction. She did not lack, however, in egotism. We were told to write a review on de Maupassant's "The Necklace."

After reading the short story masterpiece, my classmate with the exaggerated ego remarked, disgustedly, "What is there to write about that? I don't think much of the thing. I could write a better story than that myself." F. P. F.

SAM 'N' HENRY

By Correll & Gosden

A Doctor Cures Sam's Bad Burn

(While on their way to the stockyards to get work the car in which Sam and Henry were being driven suddenly stopped. Being eager to assist in finding the mechanical trouble, Sam took hold of a hot spark plug and caused a bad burn on his hand. They are now on their way to the doctor's office.)

Wi—wi—will yo' tell us where de postoffice is?

SAM—Henry, I ain't nevah had nothin' hurt me like dis heah han' hurts.

Henry—I don' see why yo' wanted to mess wid de man's car fo' anyway.

Sam—Henry, why didn't yo' tell me de thing was hot under dere? I didn't see nothin' red hot down dere.

Henry—How yo' think de engine works if it don' git hot?

Sam—When things git as hot as dat thing was dat I took hol' of, dey usu'lly turn red, don' it?

Henry—Well—yo' see dat red sort o' fools yo'. When de sun is shinin' on it, it don' look red in de light but it feels red.

Sam—Where did de man say dis doctah's office was?

Henry—It's jus' down heah one mo' block—right on de cornah'—upstairs.

Sam—Henry, yo' knows how I hates to go to see a doctah, too, don' yo'? I'se scared to death o' doctahs.

Henry—Ain't no use to be scared of 'em. Dey don' nevah come aftah yo'—ev'vybody goes aftah dem.

Sam—Dat sho' is de truth. If dey was aftah yo', dey'd chase yo', wouldn't dey.

Henry—Not only chase yo'—but dey'd git yo'.

Sam—Dis heah han' sho' do hurt. An' by grabbin' hol' o' dat hot spark plug, dat done keep me from gittin' a job.

Henry—Well—dat's a'right. Dis heah doctah'll fix yo' up down heah.

Sam—When de doctah fix my han', an' de han' gits well, we gotta go back down to de stockyards an' git dat job. Dat certainly is a clean place down dere. I thought dey was goin' have animals layin' all 'round de place.

Henry—We was down dere when it was quiet. Dey don' staht fightin' de animals 'til latah in de day. Why don' yo' tell de man when yo' go back down dere dat yo' wanna be a bull figtah?

Sam—I don' wanna fight no bull. I don' wanna mess 'round wid none. I don' even wanna eat off'n a red tablecloth while I'm down dere. I don' wan' no bulls messin' 'round me.

Henry (approaching the doctor's office)—Heah's de doctah's office up heah. Whut is de doctah's name?

Sam—Doctah Johnson.

Henry—Heah 'tis—right heah—Doctah Johnson. He's a M. D. an' a sturgeon.

Sam—What do dat mean, Henry?

Henry—Dis ain't no time fo' arguments.

Sam—Well, I wanna know whut kin' o' doctah I'se goin' to.

Henry—You'll fin' out aftah he finish messin' wid yo' han'. (Sam hesitates about going on.) Come on—whut yo' stoppin' 'bout?

Sam—I don't like whut yo' jus' said 'bout him bein' a M. D. an' a sturgeon.

Henry (as they reach the entrance of the building)—Well—come on—let's go up de stairs heah.

Sam—Henry, I'se scared to go up de stairs dere. Read de sign again.

Henry (looking up at the doctor's sign)—I done read de sign once. It say "M. D. and a sturgeon—office hours from three to five"—yo' jus' in time. De clock up de street say half pas' three.

Sam (standing in front of building)—Henry, yo' gotta lot o' sense, ain't yo'? Heah's one time I goin' to ask yo' to lemme do de talkin'?

Henry—Whut yo' mean, yo' goin' ask me to let yo' do de talkin'?

Sam—Well, it's like dis, Henry. Whenevah we gits mixed up in a biz'ness deal, yo' us'ally doos de talkin' an I don' say much. But dis time de biz'ness is 'bout me so I goin' ask yo' to lemme do de talkin'.

Henry—Don' make no diff'ence to me how much yo' talk. I ain't goin' say a thing to de doctah. Go on—tell him wuhtevah yo' wanna tell him.

Sam—A'right, Henry, I go up dere den. When it come to talk to de doctah now, lemme do de talkin'.

Henry—Dat's a'right wid me. I ain't gonna say nothin'. (As he starts up the stairs.) Come on, let's git up heah—let's git in out o' de cold heah.

Sam—Well, dat's a'right, Henry. Don' yo' say nothin'. Come on—let's git up de steps heah. Dis heah han' hurts an' I don' want de doctah's messin' wid it if he's gonna hurt me.

Henry—I don' wanna sit in dis doctah's office all day now. Tell de man whut's de mattah wid yo' when we git up dere so he kin fix yo' up.

Sam (stopping in front of doctor's office)—Is dis de place heah?

Henry—Dis is de doctah's office a'right. It say on de door—"walk in."

Sam—Well, come on—let's go in heah den.

Henry (entering the doctor's office)—Take off yo' hat!

Sam (to man sitting in the doctor's waiting room)—Is de doctah in, mistah?

Man—Yes, he's busy right now. I'm waiting for him myself.

Sam (to Henry)—I guess we bettah sit down, Henry.

Henry—Take a seat ovah dere den by dat stove.

Sam—Henry, come on—sit down heah. Don' fo'git now, Henry, lemme do de talkin' when de doctah come out.

Henry—Dat's a'right wid me. Yo' go 'head—do all de talkin' yo' want.

Sam—Henry, whut do dat "M. D." stan' fo'? Dat's de firs' thing I wanna know.

Henry (in his know-it-all way)—Well—some doctahs is M. D.'s an' some doctahs is N. D.'s.

Sam—M. D.s an' N. D.'s? Whut's de diff'ence between M. D.'s an' N. D.'s, Henry?

Henry—De N's come aftah de M's. Don' yo' 'member de alphabet? J—K—O—M—N?

Sam—Whut do it stan' fo'?

Henry—Well, de M. D.'s is Mean Doctahs an' de N. D.'s is Nice Doctahs.

Sam—Whut did dis sign downstairs on de door say?

Henry—Dis one's a M. D.

Sam (getting up)—Come on, Henry, let's go. De han' is bettah.

Henry—Come on, now—sit down heah. SIT BACK DOWN IN DAT CHAIR!

Sam—Henry, yo' done got me scared o' dis heah doctah. I don' want him messin' 'roun' wid my han' if he's a mean doctah.

Henry—De doctah ain't gonna hurt yo'. De doctah kin fix yo' up widout yo' feelin' it. De only thing yo' don' wanna do is to argue wid de doctah.

Sam (sees the doctor's private office door opening)—Dere's de doctah's door openin' now. LOOKIT DERE! Dere's a man wid de doctah on crutches. (In whisper to Henry.) Listen to de doctah—let's heah whut he say.

Doctor (to patient)—Well, I think I can release you within another month. I want you to feel, Mr. Jones, it was the only thing that I could do when I cut off your leg. Human nature is a vary peculiar thing. Just think, that a little ingrown toenail caused me to amputate your leg.

Sam (getting excited)—Awa—awa—Henry, did yo' heah dat? De man's toenails stahted growin' backwards an' dey had to cut his leg off. If dat man had-a stepped on a piece o' glass, de doctah would-a had to cut his throat. (Getting up again.) Let's git out o' dis heah place.

Henry—Sit down now! Take yo' time—keep yo' seat. De thing we gotta do is to git out o' heah in a Democratic way.

Sam—Well—let's tell him we is Democrats an' leave.

Henry—Sit down now—take yo' time—de doctah ain't finished wid' dat one-legged man yet. He's liable to cut his othah leg off.

Sam—Henry, I'se 'bout to faint. I'se gittin' scared—I feel weak.

Henry—Go 'head—faint. Faint on de floor though—don' faint on me.

Sam—Henry, I IS gittin' scared now. Let's git out o' heah.

Henry—How we gonna git out o' heah now? Dere's de doctah standin' up dere.

Sam—Henry, we gotta do whut yo' said. We gotta git out o' heah in a Democratic way. I'se so scared I don' know whut to do.

Henry—Well now, you'se de one dat was so smart a while ago an' wanted to all de talkin'. I ain't goin' say a word. I'll jus' listen to whut yo' say.

Sam—Whut I gonna do, Henry? Whut I gonna do heah? I don' want de doctah cuttin' off my han.'

Henry—Don' tell me yo' troubles. I don' know whut yo' goin' to do. (As the patient starts to leave the office.) Dat one-legged man's gettin' ready to leave now.

Sam—Henry, I'se scared to death. I gotta git out o' dis mess. Dat certainly is a mean lookin' doctah—I don' like his looks.

Henry (seeing the doctor starting over toward him)—Well, heah come de doctah ovah heah now. Tell him sompin'—tell him sompin'.

Doctor (to Sam and Henry)—Well, gentlemen, something I can do for you?

Sam (very nervous and excited)—Ye-ye-yessah, mistah. Wi-wi-will yo' tell us where de postoffice is?

Doctor (very much surprised)—Do you mean the main postoffice or a substation?

Sam—Any postoffice, mistah! All I wanna do is git out o' heah an' git to de postoffice quick.

Doctor—There's a substation two blocks down the street.

Sam (jumping up and starting for the door, followed by Henry)—Thank yo', mistah—thank yo'. Come on, Henry! Let's git on out o' heah.

Henry (on their way down the steps)—Wait a minute—wait a minute—I ain't nevah seen nobody as crazy as yo' is. Whut is de mattah wid yo'? Another thing, yo' done run away an' lef' yo' hat in dere.

Sam (continuing on his way)—Let it stay dere, Henry. Let it stay dere. I'd ruther lost a hat dan a arm any day.

TOURING THE OLD TANK TOWNS - - By Joe Dorney

Tales of the Days When Road Shows Played "the Sticks"

The heroine shook off her chains and walked off-stage

THERE have been many wonderful changes in theatrical and circus life during the last two decades, but none so remarkable, perhaps, as in the smaller cities of the country, or, as show people loved to call them, the "tank towns." In the early years of the present century cities of from 3,000 to 20,000 population could seldom boast of more than one place of amusement, always referred to as the "opery house." Once a week or once in two weeks a traveling show would be booked in it. It might be a "blood and thunder" drama, a New York musical comedy success with a small town cast, or a burlesque show, but it was always a big event and the town would be waiting at the railroad station or the Commercial hotel for a "close-up" of "them show gals and actor fellars."

On nights when no traveling company was to appear the "opery house" might be used for home talent plays, church socials, or political meetings. But with the coming of moving pictures these conditions changed immediately, and far seeing business men made haste to erect substantial theaters. With their opening the old wooden "opery house," usually upstairs over the general store, became a thing of the past.

THE PRE-MOVIE DAYS

My stories of theatrical and circus life will cover the period just preceding the event of motion pictures and will be true incidents of the "big tops" and "hall" shows of those days.

The staff of a small town playhouse usually consisted of the owner or lessee, who might also be proprietor of the flour and feed store, as well as mayor and justice of the peace. He would act as stage manager when he had a show, while his wife would sell tickets. The manager of the attraction woud take tickets at the door. Advance sale of seats was at the house owner's store, if he had one, or in some prominent store until an hour or so before curtain time, when the ticket rack would be taken to the box office.

"Opery house" stage hands were always the bane of the traveling manager's life. He carried his own, anywhere from two to seven or eight, according to the size of his show and the amount of scenery used, but by the terms of the playing contract the house had to furnish enough men to load and unload the show, shift scenes, work the fly gallery, etc.

A CLEVER TRICK

When a show arrived at the theater there were usually twenty or thirty men and boys ready to act as "stage hands." They'd carry in the scenery and work between the acts. During the performance the entrances were so jammed with them that the show people had a hard time getting "on" to answer their cues. But with the final curtain how they would scatter! And by the time the traveling stage hands started to take down their drops not one of them could be found. They had seen the show without paying, and that was all they wanted.

One property man, however, of a rather heavy musical comedy had a way of getting the better of these "stage hands." He carried an extra property trunk with the show baggage, and the town boys who wanted to "work" the show had to check their coats and hats with him before they were permitted to get on the stage. He would lock these coats and hats in the property trunk and the owners could only redeem them at the door of the baggage car after the show was loaded for the next "jump."

RIVAL THEATERS

A prosperous coal mining town of Pennsylvania boasted of two theaters, one a vaudeville house and the other for "combinations," as traveling shows were called. It was a good town from a box office standpoint, and the house managers had little trouble booking good acts and shows. Melodramas were the most popular, and everything from "Alone in London" to "The Heart of Chicago" was seen there, always playing to capacity business.

One time "Shadows of a Great City," or some such production, was appearing at the melodrama house. The Burke Brothers, famous Irish and Jewish comedians of those days, were topliners at the vaudeville theater. Their Hebrew makeup consisted of well worn Prince Albert coats, "high water" trousers, big shoes, and ancient hats. They wore long, black beards and sang Jewish songs and parodies.

In the melodrama at the other playhouse was a "tank" scene wherein the villain and his dastardly hirelings chain the heroine to the floor of a dungeon near an East river, New York, dock. As they make their exit through a trap door in the roof the villain turns and hisses:

"There, my proud beauty, in three minutes the tide will rise and no power on earth can save you!"

Then through a round hole that looks like the end of a sewer water begins to flow into the dungeon. From the front of the house it seemed as though several hundred gallons a minute were pouring in on the hapless girl. The floor of the dungeon was covered with a rubber carpet with a two or three inch bank around it. Only an inch or two of water would cover the rubber carpet. By that time the hero would come diving through the hole in the wall and rescue the girl. Loud applause and curtain.

AN ANTI-CLIMAX

It was a custom among the performers at both theaters to visit back and forth in their makeups. When any one had a few minutes to spare he would drop over to the other house to watch a bit of the show. The Burke brothers, waiting for their cue in the Jewish makeup, had crossed over to the melodrama house. They arrived just as the water began pouring into the dungeon. Then, seized with a practical joke impulse, they climbed into the dungeon and walked down through the water to the front of the stage and began singing "Rachel Goldstein," a Jewish comic song.

Up to this time the audience, consisting mostly of women and children—it being a matinée—was in tears at the threatened fate of the beloved heroine. A minute later they were howling with delight at the funny song and the antics of the Burke brothers. Off stage the hero was cursing at the interruption. The heroine herself got tired of waiting to be rescued, tossed off her chains, and walked off stage. The Burke brothers, finishing their song, made their exit and hastened over to their own theater to do their act.

The audience in the melodrama house was in an uproar. Speeches by the manager and some of the actors did no good. They wanted an encore from the Burke brothers and refused to be quiet until the manager went to the other theater and begged the comedians to come over once more and pacify his patrons. This they did.

"TURKEY" SHOWS

IN the old days, before actors, managers, and advance agents learned to save their money, it was a custom for some of them to club together and take out what was known as a "turkey" show, a small company hastily put together, and book it at the summer resorts and other places. The name of the show didn't matter. Whatever billing matter a show printing concern would have in stock would do.

In the summer of 1903 two of us who had just closed with our regular company took out such a show. We were fortunate in getting "dates" of a week each in Milwaukee, Minneapolis, and St. Paul, and then played one nighters through Wisconsin and Minnesota. Our company consisted of about ten girls and three or four men. It was booked under a high class musical comedy title, the posters and lithographs of which we had purchased from a Chicago show printing house.

We had a prosperous summer season and our final week, early in August, was played at a street railway park near Marinette, Wis. All of us were signed with regular shows and we were due to leave for New York to begin rehearsals about that time. We had made arrangements to leave Marinette for Chicago the following Sunday morning. About the middle of the week the manager of the park asked us to stay and play an extra Sunday. My partner and myself put it up to the company, but they refused. They were tired of the long summer work and wanted a short rest before starting the regular show season.

WELL PLANNED

Only two persons were willing to stay over a day and play the extra Sunday night. They were a man and wife who did an acrobatic act. Neither could do much else. The woman worked in the chorus and the man had a dumb part in the show. We told the manager, but he begged us to fix up some kind of a show, as he couldn't get anything for Sunday night, which always meant capacity at the park theater. We called this one act that would stay over—it was known as "the Flying Franks"—and put the proposition up to it. The two agreed to do their best to give a show. We told the park manager we would give him a Sunday night show for $300. He agreed.

They began doing their regular act again in their street clothes.

The remainder of the company left for Chicago Sunday morning, but the park manager didn't know that. We bought railroad tickets and Pullman accommodations on the train which left Marinette Sunday evening. By eight o'clock that night a misty rain started and the large park theater was packed. By show time, 8:30 o'clock, aisles and every other part of the place was filled. We got our $300 and started for the town. The Flying Franks were instructed to go as far as they could with a show, then "beat it" to the depot and meet us behind the freight station a half block from the passenger depot.

With the opening of the "show" the Franks did their act, which was good, and stretched it out as long as they could. Then the woman came out alone and tried to sing a song. She had a terrible voice and was hissed off the stage. Then the man came out and tried to do a monologue. It was awful. He had a peculiar lisp in his voice and no one could understand what he was talking about. He didn't know himself, he was so rattled.

A GRAND FRACAS

He had instructed his wife to pack their grips and be ready for a hasty exit. She did so. By this time the audience, those who were not hissing and hooting, were starting to leave the theater. The rain had turned into a downpour and they were forced back.

As a finals to the show the "Flying Franks" in their street clothes began doing their regular act again. Missiles began coming up on the stage, and some of the audience began following. But the "Flying Franks" were athletes and reached the stage door first. They had planned their route to the depot well and despite their grips, in the rain and darkness they managed to outstrip their pursuers.

Fifteen minutes later they joined us back of the freight station where we crouched in the rain until the 10:10 flyer came along. We climbed on the back platform of the last car and didn't leave it until we were at least ten miles out.

We never took a "turkey" show to Wisconsin again.

A MONOLOGUE STAGE

SHOWS making the coast by way of St. Louis, Kansas City, and Omaha, usually played three one nighters out of Omaha and into Cheyenne, Wyo., for the last half of the week. North Platte, Neb., on the main line of the Union Pacific railroad, was a favorite stopping off place. It had one serious hadicap. The opera house seated 1,000, which was plenty large enough for the town, but the stage was so small there was room for only a monologue act. In time, managers with any kind of productions passed up North Platte, and either played some other town or laid off for the night.

The manager, one of the old school type, didn't realize that a stage big enough for the shows of 1880 would hardly do for the larger attractions of the twentieth century. After his house had remained dark for weeks at a time he decided something must be done, and that something was to build a new theater. This he did, using the space for the new house he used for the old. But instead of a large auditorium and small stage, he built an immense stage and a tiny auditorium. I believe the seating capacity was about 450. I only knew of a few stages that could compare with that North Platte "platform." Those were the Hippodrome and Metropolitan Opera House in New York and the Auditorium in Chicago. "Ben Hur" would have been lost on it.

THE OWNER'S REPLY

The first time I went to the coast after this house was completed I was business manager of "The Rose of Panama," a musical comedy carrying seventy-five people and an immense amount of scenery. We were booked at North Platte, and when I arrived I went back stage to look it over. I was thrilled. It was the first stage I had seen since we left New York on which we could set up all our scenery. I congratulated the old manager, whom I had met many times before. Then I went to the footlights and took a glance out front. I could almost have shaken hands with the doortender had there been one there at that time of day.

"You certainly have a fine stage here," I said to the manager, "but where do you put your audiences? We have to play to at least 2,000 persons at top prices to break even. You can't seat 500 out there."

"Well," he drawled, "show folks have been kicking about the size of my stage so long that I decided to build a big one, and I did."

"Yes," I said, "but where are we going to put the audience?"

"Don't worry, my boy," was his reply. "It is plenty big enough. I never filled it yet."

And that was cheerful news to the pilot of a show with a salary list of $2,200 a day.

London Hotels Are Going to the Dogs.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON.—London's leading hotels are "going to the dogs," literally, and Fido is having the time of his life. The American tourists have shown an almost universal preference for having some sort of pup with them, and the hostelries have been quick to cater to the whims of their American patrons.

At the exclusive Savoy, for instance, one finds a chic, portable treadmill, operated by electricity, which is brought to the guest's room when the master or mistress is too fatigued to exercise the animal. The pet is placed on the treadmill, the electricity is turned on, and he can run to his heart's content without leaving the room.

In Paris expensive restaurants cater to the canine trade, even to the extent of having special chairs so that the dog can be seated at the same table with his mistress. In these places the dog usually puts away anywhere from $1.50 to $3 worth of food.

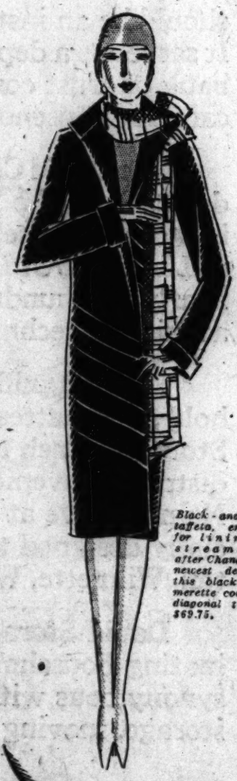
THE SHAWL COLLAR, SO SMART FOR SPRING, IS OF WHITE ERMINETTE. ITS TAILORED LINES ACHIEVE A DEFINITE SMARTNESS THAT IS PECULIAR TO THE SPRING MODE IN COATS.

The Mode for Spring Is Offered on Rosenberg's Fashion Floor

"C'EST a la Mode," proclaim the Parisian designers, and the verdict is passed. Patou has surpassed himself --- Poiret has been outstandingly brilliant --- Chanel has exceeded expectations --- Worth has scored remarkably --- and all to present this Mode for Spring. The Fashions are most impressive, the Colors delightfully new, and the Fabrics selected for longevity. And at Rosenberg's, on the Fashion Floor, the Second, have been gathered replicas of the creations inspired by these couturiers, as well as American creations that combine the finer features of several Parisian designers in a single coat, gown or tailleur. Whatever Madame or Mademoiselle desires for her Spring ensemble may be found in this, the North Shore's largest collection. The Mode for Spring is now being presented on Rosenberg's Fashion Floor, the Second.



This model of black satin fashionably combines with faille. It features the Vionnet shoulder and is distinctive with the shawl collar of soft summer Ermine, $95.

This adaptation from Worth is unusual for its imported fabric by which it achieves a youthful sportive air through checks of black, grey and green. New, too, is the throw collar, $69.75.

Black-and-white taffeta, employed for lining and streamer-bow after Chanel is the newest detail in this black Kashmerette coat with diagonal tucks, $69.75.

Interest in this Molyneux replica centers around the large bow of crepe de chine with fringed ends. It is designed of tan twill cord with collar of broadtail, $79.50.

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

Woman Can Gratify Her Desire for the Picturesque This Spring, for Paris Is Sponsoring Costumes with Motifs from Any and All Epochs of History.

By Bettina Bedwell.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—Paul Poiret said to me recently, "Every woman loves the picturesque and decorative in dress." It has been a secret love of late years, for picturesqueness has been the ingredient missing from the mixture of women's styles these last few seasons. We have borne our bereavement with astonishing fortitude, wearing our simple, nonromantic, straight styles as if we had no other desires in the clothes line.

However, I think Poiret is right and that we do like a certain touch of the picturesque in our clothes when it can be had without sacrificing chic. There are few women who are indifferent enough or have sufficient effrontery to affect such clothes when they are contrary to current styles. But given a chance to get herself up for a fancy dress party or carnival, any woman will have the time of her life rigging out a costume. So the introduction of this element into our regular clothes by Paris this spring is bound to have a lot of feminine supporters.

Fashions have been gradually veering around to the picturesque for some time. This movement has been given the caption of "the return to femininity." Not that we have actually been absent from it, but we have been rather meek and manlike lately in our slavishness to standardized clothes, which were often as unbecoming to us individually as men's clothes are to them at times. With bows, laces, scarfs, and sashes returned as part of more feminine fashions, it is a simple step to introduce the genuine character of the picturesque into the mode. This, Paris is doing in her own special way.

There are no radical alterations, as I have said before, of silhouette lines, but there are details that recall more romantic periods and fashions, and it is these that give the greatest charm to our new spring fashions. Paris hasn't gotten a complex on some particular period of history, such as Second Empire, or Directoire, or other, using it throughout the spring mode. Each house will show hits of perhaps a dozen different periods, so you can choose the one, two, or three having the greatest appeal to you. In fact, so broad is the scope of the spring mode, you could add something out of your own pet period and, if you were clever enough, get away with it beautifully, even if Paris never thought of doing it.

There is an epoch in American history that has a special lure for the French, and they never tire of it, and that is the vanishing epoch of the cowboy and the big cattle ranches. So it is inevitable, in this revival of the picturesque, that they should seize upon something from the cowboy for their spring fashions. They took the handkerchief and put it on the Parisian sports costume. Parisiennes love to wear these big soft handkerchiefs around their necks, and no cowboy dolling up in his bandanna for a community shindig can tie one more expertly than these ladies of France. I suspect this handkerchief revival is going to be one of the greatest die-hards that fashions ever saw.

The cowboy bandanna comes back into the Paris mode, worn with a jumper of green reptile and skirt of green mouslikasha.

Stiff gold satin, lined with lame and trimmed with green fox fur, makes this unusual Drecoll evening coat, worn over a dress of yellow georgette embroidered with green and gold beads.

The romantic sixties are recalled in this dance dress of pink crepe georgette with overskirt of ruffled black dotted net.

A distinctive afternoon dress from Drecoll is made of green-blue crepe, with straight waist, wide sleeves, and a skirt plaited in front and tiered in back.

Our first model, a sports dress from Drecoll, shows one way of using the handkerchief. It has a side buttoning jumper waist of some kind of reptile, marked like an alligator and green like a lizard, with a belt of black patent and a gold buckle. The buttons are of green bone. The skirt buttons at the side front to the hips, from which point a deep double plait is inserted. It is of green mouskasha, a kasha with a mousseline finish. The handkerchief is of green foulard, striped with darker green, and can be draped in any fashion desired.

At the opposite side of our sketch is another Drécoll model that shows another kind of picturesqueness, taken from the colonial costume. This is an afternoon frock of heavy silk crêpe that is a cross between crêpe dê chine and marocain. It is the new color that Drécoll calls "bleu d'orage," or storm blue, that pale greenish blue that appears in the sky just before a hailstorm.

The straight waist, with its row of enamel buttons, and its sleeves, which flare markedly from the elbow to the fitted cuff, are distinctive notes in the Drécoll collection. No less original is the skirt, which is plaited in front and composed of two tiers in back. These tiers flare slightly at the sides. Drécoll puts the waistline very near normal, but just enough below to give a great deal more charm than the real normal line has. This line is marked by a black belt that has a jeweled buckle.

The evening dress next this model takes its cue from still another of the romantic periods—the good old days when grandma was a girl. It also revives a fabric that has not been seen for more years than you can remember, and that is black dotted net. The waist of this dance frock is made of pink georgette and the round neck and armholes are piped with self material. From a diagonal waist line that is marked by a crushed girdle of pink georgette, one end of which hangs beneath the skirt to below the hemline, the full skirt, made of scalloped ruffles of black dotted net, follows a diagonal line. There is a big butterfly of black net at the waistline, and the lifted hemline reveals a pink georgette petticoat, finely plaited, which replaces the pantalets that grandma wore. Model from Drécoll.

Our second model shows the evening ensemble for spring, with a coat of stiff gold colored satin, the kind of satin they used to wear in the romantic days, with big sleeves, tucked at the top and banded above deep cuffs by fox fur dyed a pistache green. The full collar is also banded with this green fur. An important detail of this coat, which hangs rather full from the shoulders, is its outaway front and its extra length in back.

To go with the coat and make its inside as decorative as its outside is a lamé lining in green and gold. The dress is made of yellow crêpe georgette, cut into a simple bloused waist and a long tunic split at the center front to show a satin slip beneath. The bands are made of green and gold beads embroidered on to the georgette with gold thread. Gold thread embroidery is placed on the sides of the waist and the skirt.

In these ways Paris shows us how to indulge our natural love of the picturesque without disturbing too greatly the strict modernism of styles.

718—Woman's and misses' dress. Sizes 16, 18, and 20 years, and 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3⅞ yards of 36 or 40 inch material.

720—Girl's dress. Sizes 6, 8, 10, and 12 years. Size 8 requires 2¾ yards of 36 or 40 inch material.

717—Woman's and misses' dress. Sizes, 16, 18, and 20 years, and 34, 36, 38, and 40 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3½ yards of figured material and ¾ yards of plain 40 or 44 inch material.

HOW TO USE THE PATTERNS

A FLAT crêpe in beige was used in making the one piece dress, pattern No. 718. There is no dress more satisfactory than the one piece ones, and this design is smart and the pattern easy to follow. Back and front are each cut in one piece, and French seams used to finish. A slightly rounded shawl collar finishes the neck, and the opening is filled in with a vest, making a square outline across the front. The collar should be cut double and seamed together on the outside edge. Then it is turned to the right side, the seam basted so the edge is clearly defined, and pressed. Then it is basted to the neck of the dress, first pinning it to the dress at each end, and then in the center back. Baste a bias silk binding in place and stitch from one end to the other. Then turn the opposite edge of the binding over the seam and hem down by hand.

In cutting the vest, fold the material so the top comes on the fold. Seam down each side, turn right side out and finish across the bottom. Then tack the right side to the dress, and fasten to the left side of the dress with tiny snaps.

The one piece sleeves are gathered at the wrists into narrow bands. The narrow belt may be of the material or a leather one may be used, and the patch pockets finish the dress prettily. Embroidering the lower part of each sleeve in bright, contrasting colors would add much to the beauty of the dress, or if you didn't care to take the time necessary for that, why not embroider a monogram either on the vest, or the left front of the dress?

Bolero dresses are smart for little girls and grown ones. Pattern No. 20 will be pretty made in two materials, and is suitable for any of the crepe or light weight woolens. The little skirt is cut in two pieces and is slightly circular. This is joined to a long waisted sleeveless upper part. This is slashed at the neck in the center front, and the edges bound. A pretty round collar finishes the neck, and this collar lies over the bolero.

The bolero is cut in one piece—having no under arm seams—just those on the shoulders. To this the one piece sleeves are attached. One of the pin checks was used for the skirt and waist, and a solid color for the jacket. The sleeves are finished with turned back cuffs that match the general outline of the collar, and two inserted pockets are set in the bolero at the bottom.

Pattern No. 717 is for an attractive afternoon frock. Crêpe Elizabeth or georgette would be suitable materials for it, and so would crêpe de chine or taffeta. Figured and plain materials are used in the making, and the pattern pieces are clearly marked so there won't be any difficulty in putting them together. The waist and skirt are cut separately and joined, a soft, wide band of the plain material being used for the sash which effectually covers the joining. The dress is to be slipped on over the head, the opening at the neck making this possible.

An outside facing of the plain material finishes the bottom of the skirt, and this plain material is used for the collar and lower parts of the sleeves. Many of the dress materials are shown both in solid colors and beautifully printed designs, and this particular design seems unusually well suited to a combination of materials.

An Even Keel in Money Matters

By DORIS BLAKE

To Be Neither a Midas Nor a Prodigal, but a Happy Medium, Is the Goal to Aim For When Making a Budget

FROM the financial angle, the ideal situation in a household is that the wife be competently thrifty in all matters over which she has control but that she does not "watch the pot" so closely that her sense of saving becomes miserly. For his part, the man should be endowed with that sense of responsibility that urges him to keep up insurance protection, to save what he can reasonably save after the usual expenses are disposed of, but to avoid the danger of niggardliness in money matters. There should be money for amusement, for the old adage about all work and no play will make matrimony just as dull as the boy, Jack, you've heard about.

Generally speaking, the great American fault is not the too saving one. But in the couse of my work here I learn first hand of hundreds of cases where the Midas spirit is encountered in man and wife. Usually it is the man who, once possessed of the saving urge, becomes cruelly mean about his wife's allowance. As one woman confided but yesterday, her husband has $200,000 and in her sixteen years of married life he has never taken her any place, never thought a vacation necessary for her, and her household allowance is meted out so meagerly she cannot get enough ahead to buy decent dresses for her young high school daughter. He never goes to places of amusement, nor takes a vacation because it costs money. The chase of the dollar has him gripped so that he cannot see the hate that engulfs his household.

Such revelations are not uncommon. And although this sort of home may be classed as the most unhappy, harboring as it does the seeds of hatred and often the hope of death for the tyrant who holds the purse strings taut, there is another kind of household where misery is known a considerable part of the time, although love may preserve it against complete disintegration. It is the home where financial responsibility is felt by the wife but where she is given no cooperation by the husband.

The irresponsible man and the thrifty wife-ambitious mother provide a problem that is intensely difficult to cope with. The difficulty is equally great where the wife is the fool in money matters and the husband's life is one long succession of coping with her money follies. Yet there is something more tragically moving about a woman eager to give her children a good education, a decent neighborhood to bring them up in, willing to make a thousand personal sacrifices in her effort to keep all her loved ones' heads raised in the community. And by some strange law of nature which draws opposites together you frequently find this sort of woman tied to a weak man whose weakness seems to reach its high peak on money matters.

The Story of the Browns.

There are the Browns, we will call them. Ella, a thrifty wife and mother is married to Ed, a good natured, lackadaisical and perfectly worthless husband. They live in a small town. Ed was a clerk in one of those chain stores that dot the country and he was one of the best liked men in his town. He never had a bad word to say about anybody. He could tell a story that would shake his audience with laughter. He spent a lot of time thinking them up, so much that he didn't like work to interfere—and seldom let it. Ella, as different from Ed as she could be, had energy, a sense of responsibility and an ambition which made her fight when life or the worthlessness of her thriftless husband sent her to the floor for the count.

The Browns had three children, Mary, Jim, and a toddler, known to his adoring parents and the rest of their world as "Larry." Ella dreamed dreams for these youngsters, as mothers have had the habit of doing since the world began. Mary was to be married to some nice young fellow when she grew old enough. Jim was to be something big in the business world, and Larry was to draw and paint because even at this tender age he smeared the house with colors from a paint box and Ella believed she could see likeness to human forms in them.

Ella talked her ambitions over with Ed and Ed agreed with her that the kids should get the best out of the world. As a matter of fact, he agreed with her in everything. He was one of those likeable, agreeable men.

Ella tried to put the house on a budget. Ed was drawing $30 a week and she figured out so much for this and so much for that. She had learned in her childhood that leaking pennies result in rivers of dollars leaving their owners and rendering them poor.

Would Have Worked, but . . .

It was a good idea and would have worked out to perfection except for Ed. He seemed to run under very heavy expenses. There were cigarets and a poker game now and then, and little knickknacks for the kids, and snappy things like patent lighters, and puzzles, and trick roses that squirted water on the unwary, for himself. You see, Ed was a mixer and had a certain reputation to uphold.

Week after week, all the years of their married life, Ella found her household allowance a little short. Five, six, seven dollars would fail to arrive. Ed always explained it. He was a wonderful explainer. And Ella would sigh a little, cry a little and pick up the fight again and struggle along. She loved Ed, with that strange perversity of strong women who hold to their weak men.

She would talk to him about getting a little money in the bank. In a few years they could have a home. Then he could go into business for himself. Being liked so much, he could draw trade from all over the country. Then they could all be something in the community and the children could have advantages.

Ed agreed that money in the bank was a great thing—told Ella he had just been telling the boys he had the thriftiest wife in the country. He wound up by touching her for a couple of dollars to see him through until pay day.

Sad Ending.

So things went along until little Mary was 9, Jim 7 and Larry, the toddler, a man of 2. Ella never gave up fighting, for she was built that way. The children had illnesses and Ed had the flu, which set them back a bit further. But she went on dreaming her dreams of having a home and being somebody.

Ed's reputation grew as a story teller, but waned as a clerk. And one day he was fired. He was away below par in his sales. Competitive houses didn't want him and his air of bravado and his threat that they'd be sending for him to come back soon didn't hold water.

Life struck swiftly as it has a way of doing, and Ed came back from Marty's one evening where he'd been down telling the boys a couple of new ones. Ella met him at the door, her face drawn and white. Larry was ill. The doctor should be called. Ed said it was just some kid ailment he'd be over in a day or two. There was a lot of money owing the doctor already. But fear struck him when he looked again at the flushed face and heard the labored breathing. He believed the doctor ought to be called. He'd get some money together and bring him.

But he'd borrowed from everybody and he was turned down cold. He came back and told Ella, Larry would be all right in the morning. His hope wasn't justified. Larry was dead in the morning. It was simple pneumonia that medical attention could have checked.

There isn't much else to the story. They buried their baby and Ella went to work. Ed gets an occasional job and they manage to live. They do better than that—at least Ella does. She puts a few dollars in the bank each week. Ed isn't so good on stories any more. He even manages to give Ella a dollar or two now and then to put in the bank.

THE CHEEKIEST PERSON I EVER MET

Send us a short, to the point, reminiscence of the cheekiest person you ever met, and we'll pay you $1 for it if we print it. All letters must be addressed to the Cheekiest Person Editor, The Tribune, Chicago.

Wanted the Change.

A woman, a neighbor of ours was putting on a party and she asked my father if she could borrow his brand new mandolin, for which he had paid forty dollars, as a young man who was to attend her party could play one very well. My father told her she could borrow it.

Two days later she returned the mandolin in a damaged condition, and with it she handed Dad fifty cents and said, "I don't suppose it will cost that much to get it fixed so you can send the change over with one of the boys."

S. M. P.

Her Only Thanks.

The woman living next door to us had not been feeling well for a good while. One day she came over to our house, worried sick because she had lost her laundress and she did not know what she would do about the week's wash. We have fair equipment in the laundry, so I offered to oblige her by doing her things on my own wash-day. I use an electric washer and finished it all early, so I decided to surprise her by doing the ironing also. It was rather late in the night when I had finished, but I was happy thinking how surprised she would be. Early the next morning I sent them over by my little boy.

When I saw her again, she seemed peeved about something, and finally asked me if I cared to return the buttons that I washed off of her house dress. And after a while, she inquired how I made starch, adding that she didn't know when she had put their clothes away in as flimsy and half-done condition.

That represents her thanks to me.

MRS. N. B.

Making Use of the Trunk.

Mother purchased a fine new trunk to make an extended trip. Upon her return an acquaintance, knowing of the trunk, asked to borrow it as she was going to spend a week with her daughter.

Mother wondered why a week's visit to a daughter should require a wardrobe to fill a trunk and although not eager she let her have the trunk. It looked anything but new when it was returned, but no wonder. In it were packed canned goods and goodness knows what not to take to the daughter and on the return trip a wash wringer, kitchen utensils, etc.

To a friend she said: "I called all these things without a court's aid. Mrs. C.'s trunk did the trick."

MRS. I. I. I.

Mercenary.

The cheekiest person I ever met was a neighbor. She came in one day, and before she left I gave her some vegetables out of my garden which she did not have in her own—enough to last her a couple of days.

Next day she came over with a paper sack which contained a dozen and a half small okras. She wanted to know if I didn't want them for a dime. I gave her the dime and she left the okra.

MRS. I. I. I.

Refused to Return It.

The cheekiest person I ever met was my next door neighbor in the city. I had many chickens. One day I was going to have company so I took one of the fattest ones to kill. I was just cutting their heads off. When I got to the last one it flew over the fence. As my neighbor was out I said, "Mrs. Manden, would you please hand me my chicken?"

To my surprise she said, "What ever comes on my side of the fence belongs to me."

Well, I was careful the next time I killed my chickens, for I never got that one back.

MRS. I. I.

Calculating.

Cheek! My neighbor came over early one morning to borrow some coffee. I had only a limited quantity myself, but gave her a cupful.

When she returned it she said, "Here is the coffee I borrowed. It brought only a half cupful because this is a stronger blend and more expensive than that you had and you don't have to use as much of it."

MRS. C. E. I.

Pretty Queer Friend.

A friend of mine, was to be in a school play. Knowing I had a dress which would suit her part, she asked if she might borrow it. Of course I let her.

When she returned the dress I noticed the sleeves, which had been long were cut short above the elbow. When I questioned her as to what had happened, she said, "Oh, the sleeves were so tight I couldn't bend my elbow so I cut them short and made a bolero to match the dress."

She didn't offer to pay for the damages or give me the bag.

Strange Weddings

Have you ever seen a wedding so outlandish that it upset all your ideas of the traditional ceremony? Some marriages are foreign and quaint in their adherence to ancient customs; others are ultra modern in their haphazard speed and unconventionality. The Tribune would like to know the story of the strangest wedding you've ever seen. We will pay $1 for every letter published. Address: Strange Weddings, Chicago Tribune.

Real, After All.

We were giving a benefit performance for one of the local clubs and in one of the scenes was a wedding. A popular young couple were to be the ones matrimonially inclined in the play. An out of town friend of one of the boys played the part of the minister.

Imagine our surprise when we found that we had witnessed a real wedding, the out of town friend being a minister from a nearby city.

F. G. W.

Two Ministers.

The strangest wedding I ever witnessed occurred some time ago when the two participants were deaf and dumb.

The wedding was much like others with its witnesses, flower girls and guests, except that there were two ministers.

One was a minister who spoke the sign language and had come from a distant large city to officiate. The other was the local minister of the church where the bride attended. As the deaf and dumb minister read the ceremony to the bride and groom the local minister repeated it for the benefit of the guests. MRS. C. E. H.

Many Symbols.

The most interesting wedding I have ever seen occurred at a Chinese home. The bride came in an automobile with a big vari-colored lantern hanging on each side. The lanterns bore in red the surname of the family the bride married into, and they were lighted inside with handles. The bride was dressed in splendor, and she had a red veil covering her face. The red veil was to drive away evil spirits.

A small pyre of sticks and paper stood before the doorway, and the bride walked right over the pyre, to certify her allegiance to the family. Before she entered the door, some one tapped her head with a little stick. This indicated she would be expected to obey. And if she took the tapping easily, she would prove to be docile and easy; if she crouched or spurned the tapping, she would turn out to be unruly. After she entered the house the wedding began. I. L.

Mother Weds Girl's Beau.

The strangest wedding I ever witnessed was when my mother married the man I loved and had been going with for four years. We had a quarrel and I said I was going to marry some one else. For spite he started going with mother (a charming widow), and the best part of it was I was the bridesmaid and mother was married in my wedding dress. E. B.

Worth Fifty Cents to Him.

My father, who was a minister, married many couples. One day a pair rode up to our hourse and hollered, "Hello!" When my father went out, the man told him they wanted to get married. Father told them to get down and come in the house. The man replied that they wanted to be married sitting on their mules.

After the ceremony the groom asked father what he charged for performing the ceremony. Father told him he made no charge, and in a joking manner told him he could pay what he thought his bride was worth. The fellow looked at his bride a moment and then he handed father a dollar and asked him if he had a half dollar in change. Father put the dollar in his pocket and told the groom he thought his bride was worth a dollar at least.

The man kicked his mule in the side and the couple rode off without saying another word. McK. T.

In the Ocean.

The strangest wedding I ever witnessed took place at Palm Beach some fifteen years ago.

One of the life guards and a maid from Whitehall, having decided to get married, thought it would be great fun to have the ceremony performed in the ocean. So at 4 o'clock in the afternoon the bride and groom and their attendants donned bathing suits and waded out a short distance into the sea.

As the minister had refused to wear a bathing suit, a boat was procured and he stood up in the boat and performed the ceremony. The entire population was on hand and a good time was had by all. V. G.

A White Wing Wedding.

The strangest wedding I ever witnessed was one recently held in our city. The bridegroom was a member of the street cleaning crew. His fellow workmen drove to the church in the large city trucks used for hauling ashes and rubbish. They were dressed in overalls and work jackets.

After the ceremony the men lined up and formed an archway with their shovels, through which the couple marched midst the cheers of spectators. R. V.

"I never dreamed that any one soap could do all the things Rinso does until I tried it myself. It certainly is THE soap for our water. At first I used it only for the laundry because it's so safe and because it made the clothes so white and pretty without any hard rubbing. But I soon found out that it was just as good for dishwashing and other cleaning. Now you'll always find a large size package on my kitchen shelf. And I keep one in the bathroom, too, for cleaning the tiles, bathtub and basins.

Grace M. Shelton,
511 Park Ave., Wilmette, Ill.

Millions use Rinso. Thousands write us letters like this.

"It's THE soap," Wilmette woman says:

SPRING FEVER AND ITS CURE

That Weary Feeling, Which Appears About Crocus Time, Can Be Driven Away Without the Aid of Sulphur and Molasses

by Antoinette Donnelly

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Beginning already to feel some of the symptoms commonly described as spring fever? It is just about this time they begin to appear, increasing rapidly with every new crocus head lifted to the April breeze. If you are missing the fresh buoyancy, that feeling of hopefulness the spring season heralds, you're probably in need of some advice on the nature of the disease lightly termed "fever," and also on how to avoid or get rid of that tired feeling.

There are two kinds of fever, so to speak. One is that curious and unpreventable phenomenon which, consciously or unconsciously, affects most people in the springtime and is recognized as a sort of restlessness, a feeling of recklessness and adventure. One is more inclined to babble of sunny climes and unexplored corners of the globe than hew to the line of work.

This form of annual disturbance may be traced to its origin by a comparison with other forms of life beside man's. It is all bound up with the compelling instinct of migration that comes over almost every form of life at this season of the year.

But one does not go back uncounted ages to find the reason for that other form of spring fever—the one that lays spirits low. Memories of last season will suffice to explain why the magic carpet may be flung, a feathered orchestra be caroling its invitation to the dance—and your heels be too leaden to gambol on the green.

"That tired feeling," in fact, is nothing to tell your neighbor about. It is a reflection on your knowledge of the principles of hygienic living.

Ancestors Excused.

It was excusable for our forebears, who invented "spring fever," to talk about it as though it followed winter as naturally as harvest follows planting. They had not our advantages in hygienic training. Had they known spring fever was nothing more nor less than an individual weltering in his own uneliminated poisons, they would not have exhibited so proudly their sulphur and molasses jars.

At that, we must credit them with knowing there was something about their blood that needed purifying after a winter of smoked bacon, closed windows, and red flannel chest protectors.

We know now that that weary feeling, the lagging gait, the dull brain are due to nothing more elegant than autointoxication. A high falutin' word for what really ails the victim. It is a condition where poison arises from inactivity of cells or organs whereby substances are released into the circulation in harmful quantities. It appears at all seasons, it is true, but in more virulent form in blossom time than any other.

There are a number of reasons why the body accumulates more toxins, or fails to eliminate as much poison in the winter as during the other seasons. Skin elimination, for one thing, is not so free in winter as in summer. The skin depends upon the blood circulation for the disposal of organic poison in the system. The amount of exercise indulged in by the average individual in the cold season is not sufficient to stimulate the circulation and provide for this elimination.

Reasons for Spring Fever.

Another reason advanced by physicians in explanation of this poisoning of the system is that most people drink less water in cold weather. The eliminating organs, consequently, are unaided in throwing off the toxic matter.

Again, the cold weather diet is at fault. It is more concentrated and richer in protein and fat. It contains a smaller proportion of cellulose or woody fiber, and consequently is less favorable to intestinal activity. Too large a proportion of meat, bread, and starchy food is contained in the winter diet.

So, it isn't spring, beautiful spring, that is to blame for that tired feeling—but the hearty diet customary in winter months, an inadequate supply of drinking water to float off the poisons, and the lack of outdoor exercises.

It isn't the hard working person who gets spring fever. It is not the woodchopper, or the coal heaver, or the lumberjack. It is the sedentary worker, who feeds too well and coddles himself too much during the cold season.

However, the latter is undoubtedly more interested in how to get over his fatigue than in how he acquired it.

Green Vegetables Recommended.

Better than any bottled spring tonics are the green vegetables that contain large amounts of cellulose materials, such as spinach and the various greens—beet tops, dandelions, lettuce, string beans, celery, asparagus, onions, radishes, and so on.

The tired persons should substitute these, and fruits wherever possible for the nitrogenous articles that have been appearing on the menu. Meat should be eaten sparingly. The easily digested foods, such as eggs and milk, white bread and butter, provide too little exercise for the intestines.

Exercise should be as strenuous as the individual can stand. The prescription advanced as the best yet discovered by Dr. William A. Brady, noted physician, is recommended: "Two miles of oxygen three times a day. You may take it any way you choose, so long as you take it walking."

O. R. C.: TO REDUCE THE WAISTline try the following exercises: Stand with feet about eighteen inches apart. Raise the arms overhead; bend the trunk forward and swing the arms downward between the legs; raise the trunk and bend backward, swinging the arms up over the head. Repeat five times quickly. Next, assume correct standing position, arms out at sides. Twist the waist to the right and touch the finger tips of the right hand to the toes of the left foot. Reverse. Repeat five times, gradually increasing the number of times. Send stamped addressed envelope for additional exercises.

A FRIEND IN NEED

by Sally Joy Brown

I want to be the medium through which the friends in need and the friends in need may be brought together. It may be you have some discarded article which has not outgrown its usefulness that will make some less fortunate one happy and you would gladly give it if you knew how to go about it. Write to me and I shall be happy to be of service to you. Please write on one side of the paper.

When information is wanted by mail, a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send article to The Tribune but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

OPPORTUNITIES TO HELP AT EASTER TIME.

"DEAR MISS BROWN: I have two little girls; one is 7 and the other is 5. I would like to get them some clothing, as they keep asking me if I am going to get them new coats and dresses for Easter. I just can't buy them anything, as my husband has been out of work for three months. I expect another baby soon and I haven't bought anything for the little one, either. MRS. R."

When we think of the pride we all take in new spring clothes, what could be more natural than the request of these little girls when they hear conversations about new clothes for Easter? They wonder if they are going to have new "spring outfits." And there's genuine need, as well. We have numberless requests right now from mothers who are confronted with the problem of spring clothes for their little ones and who simply cannot afford to buy them. Right along with this need goes the remedy, if we'll only use it. Most of us who have children are planning to get some new spring clothes for them. We have to, if for no other reason than that they've grown too big to wear last year's apparel. So those clothes will be just the thing to make all these needy little girls and boys wonderfully happy.

If your little son or daughter is outgrowing a coat, suit, or dress, what else could you do with the discarded garments? Really, there isn't much to do with them, is there? Why not, then, let me put them into service and make Easter a happy day for all these needy little folk?

A Needlework Query.

"I want to know the formula or the preparation which was formerly used in tracing patterns, in needlework, whereby a perforated pattern could be transferred by means of a powder of semi-liquid preparation. Can you help me? M. T. M."

Have you the knowledge this correspondent so earnestly seeks? And would you tell her how it is done?

Left in Need.

"I am writing for a needy and worthy family, consisting of a mother and three children. The mother was obliged to leave her husband on account of drunkenness and nonsupport. This woman was recently operated on and has not fully recovered, so she cannot work. They are badly in need of clothing and I thought your readers might be able to help. The 17 year old boy, who attends school and works, also, wears a size 38 suit. The other children are a boy, 12, and a girl, 8. The mother wears size 38. "MRS. P."

Can you help these people out of the straitened condition in which a delinquent parent has left them? The clothing you are about to discard would do it.

Family Has Hard Times.

"Would you please help us with some clothing? We have had a lot of sickness and all kinds of trouble and it seems so hard for us to get along. I have five children—the boys are 15 and 7 and the girls 16, 14, and 12. My big boy is out every day trying to get work. My daughter is out of work also. My husband is not working steadily and everything is going wrong. MRS. N."

This family seems to be having more than its share of misfortune, and perhaps a little assistance from us would give them the start they need. Have you any clothing they might have?

Use for Picture Frames.

"I wonder if there are some who have old picture frames of any size they no longer want. I want to retouch them and fix them over to fit some pictures I have. I will be so thankful for any you may get me. "MRS. A. M."

Those old faded pictures, the frames of which are still good, may again be put to use. Mrs. A. M. probably can make them quite presentable.

Persian Kittens to Give.

"I have nine lovely kittens I would like to give to your readers if they will give them good homes. Two of them are Persian and the others are part Persian. I would prefer giving them to people who live in the country or in the suburbs. K. F."

These are really beautiful kittens and I know they'll make delightful pets. If you'd like to have one of them you had better write to us immediately.

To Give Children Fun.

"My baby is a girl, 5 years old, and would like to have a tricycle. The two older children want a coaster wagon. I wonder if any of your readers would have these to give away. "MRS. A. B."

Boys and girls who have outgrown their toys can bring a great deal of happiness into the lives of less fortunate youngsters with them. Have you either of the things these poor children want?

Ballet Slippers Needed.

"I would like to know if any of your readers have two pairs of toe dancing slippers, size 1 and 3½. Some one has promised to teach my sister and me dancing and we can't afford to buy the slippers and dresses we will need. We are 9 and 12. I. C."

If your ballet slippers and costumes are a little worn, these girls could make good use of them and would be most happy to have them.

BEAUTY ANSWERS

by Antoinette Donnelly

What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Sky on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet, or a set of exercises for what ails you, and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply, send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, The Tribune, Chicago.

MRS. A. S.: THE PEROXIDE AND ammonia used to bleach superfluous hair keeps the hair light and dry, and tends to diminish the growth rather than increase it. Cutting these hairs close to the skin with manicure scissors does not stimulate their growth, as believed by many people. It is well to avoid the use of depilatories on the face that contain barium sulphide.

J. N.: THE DANDRUFF REMEDY is: Sixty grains of sulphur mixed with one ounce of vaseline, and applied every other night to the scalp with massage. If there is much dandruff you should shampoo the hair twice a week, gradually increasing the length of time between shampoos. For further suggestions on the care of the hair, send a stamped, addressed envelope.

BROWN EYES: YEAST MAY BE taken at any time—either with the meals or between meals. If you don't like it when dissolved in water or fruit juice you may spread it on bread or a cracker. It makes no difference how it is taken. Stop eating candy entirely until you overcome your present trouble. When you feel tempted, think of your complexion ills and you'll have the courage to refuse.

M. G. T.: ALL SKINS WILL NOT permit the use of the same amount of soap and water, but one washing a day with soap and water is required for the sake of cleanliness. Where the skin is dry, all other cleansings may be done with a cleansing cream, and a good cold cream should be massaged into the skin at night and as much as possible left on during the night. Other hints for dry skins are contained in my booklet, "Care of the Skin," which may be had for a stamped addressed envelope.

Y. D.: WHERE THE BACK OF the neck is fat, place finger tips on the shoulders and twist arms and shoulders in a circular motion. Twisting exercises do away with unnecessary fat and strengthen the muscles.

R. W.: SNOWY WHITE NAIL tips may be had if you will insert nail white under the fingernails. If your nails break easily, soak them for ten minutes each night in olive oil or sweet almond oil, which has been slightly warmed. Use just enough oil to cover the finger tips.

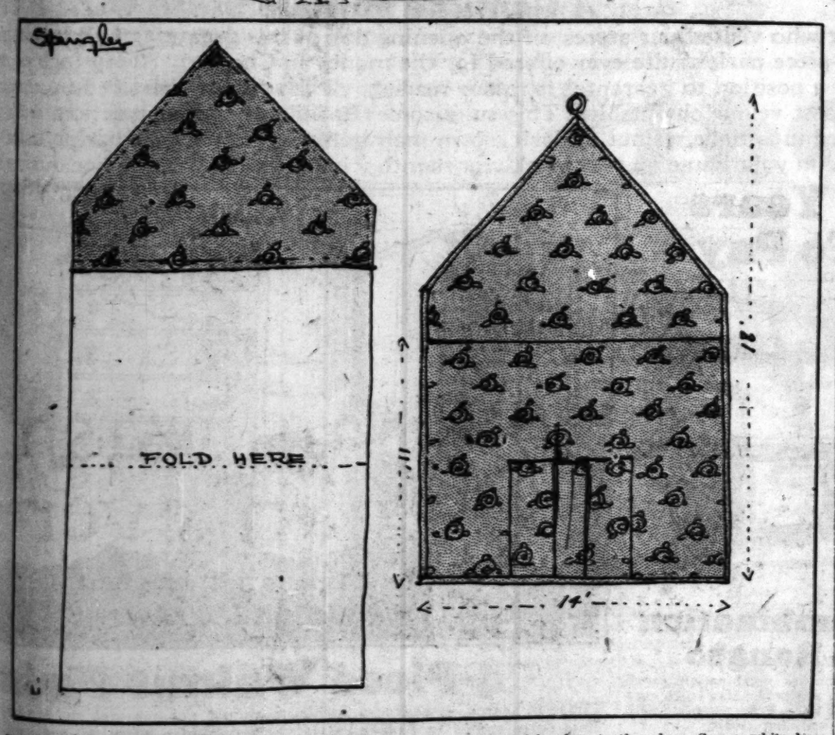
B. F. T.: THE USE OF AN EYEbrow pencil for darkening the eyebrows is the simplest method. They may be darkened just as the hair is darkened by the use of a dye, but such work must be done by a skilled operator or it is easily detected.

GENE H.: THE DEEP LINES UNder your eyes are due to lack of sleep. Six hours isn't sufficient sleep for a young girl. You should have eight or nine hours sleep in a well ventilated room. If possible, spend an hour in the open air every day.

EDDA G.: CAMOMILE TEA MAY be applied to the hair with a brush after shampooing, or it may be added to the last rinse water. It is quite harmless. Steep a little of the tea in boiling water and allow it to cool. Directions for shampooing the hair may be had for a stamped, addressed envelope.

Practical and Fancy Needle Work

By Clotilde



The Bag Shown Today May Be Made of Bright Colored Cretonne and Is Convenient for Holding Fancy Work or Knitting.

What is your sewing problem? Do you have trouble in following a pattern? Do you find difficulty in making a shirt waist evenly or making a sleeve that doesn't twist? If there is anything you would like to know about these or other problems of needlework write to Clotilde, The Tribune, Chicago, enclosing a stamped addressed envelope. If a personal reply is desired.

A BRILLIANTLY colored glazed cretonne was used to make the bag pictured today. And it is one of the prettiest the New York shops are showing. This bag is easily made to hold pieces of brown paper and string, but it would be an attractive bag to hold fancy work, knitting, crocheting, etc., and it would make a lovely porch bag, hanging in some convenient place on the porch with your work inside, ready to pick up at a moment's notice.

Naturally, a bag of this kind can be made any size you wish; but maybe you would like the dimensions of this particular one. Finished, it measures from the bottom to the point, eighteen inches; and the width is fourteen and one-half inches finished. The large pocket is eleven inches deep, and the measures of the small twine pocket are four and one-half by six inches. This width measure doesn't include the box plait.

There is an inch wide inverted plait down each side of the bag, and this of course makes for more room inside.

After the bag has been cut out, lay a piece of the cretonne on it and cut a second piece at the pointed end long enough to come one inch below the top of the folded over part. Turn in this bottom edge and stitch across first basting the two pieces of cretonne together around the edge. And of course the right side of this piece of cretonne is on top. Then make the little pocket, if you care to have it, and stitch it in place on the bag. Then baste bias binding (and you can buy this in any desired color) around the raw edges and stitch on the machine, close to the edge. Sew a white bone ring to the point of the bag and your work is finished.

THE TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

Tea and Teas Constitute a Whole Round World of Facts.

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington whh current market materials and are indorsed by her.

By Jane Eddington.

ON the pleasure side—and surely tea drinking is largely a social and pleasurable affair—the first contribution tea makes to humanity is its gift of fragrance of aroma. No matter what the approach is we make to tea, that is, to drinking it, we ought to look for and expect an aromatic savor, for when tea is well made and of good quality it emits a bouquet which those who know have called a fragrance that can scarcely be surpassed. It is a bouquet that flatters the palate, through both the smell and the taste. There could not be the wonderful aesthetics of tea that there is but for this, and when special blends or grades are extolled, the idea is that they surpass others in flavor and bouquet.

But tea takes odors from many things, if it is not protected, and through various sorts of deterioration becomes something that cannot give pleasure on the aesthetic side, but mainly on the temperature side, being something either gratefully hot or gratefully cold. In 1923, it could be said that our tea act was the only existing law which regulated the palatability of a food.

Tea in bulk always tends to lose its flavor. It should be kept in airtight containers. The old fashioned chests of tea were lined with a heavy lead foil. Caravan tea is something we in the United States cannot have, because it is tea carried overland in caravans to Europe, making it most expensive. The tea voyage undoubtedly affects the flavor of teas.

Mrs. James T. Fields once wrote this: "Longfellow came to town to see Jamie, in one of his loveliest moods. The day was so warm and fine, such a day of dreams, that we proposed to him every kind of excursion. 'Come,' he said, 'let us go to the tea stores and smell the tea; the warm atmosphere will bring out all the odors!'"

It was not so good for the tea in the stores that it could be smelled. We do things better, in general, today, yet those who want the best or the most aromatic teas do not buy them in bulk, but in sealed packages.

Choice of Teas.

As to tea absorbing odors, in one of the early numbers of the Good Housekeeping magazine [in 1888] there is this item: "The extraordinary sensitiveness of tea to odors was shown in New York the other day. A ship brought a cargo of tea—and nothing else—from China, and, upon testing the tea, it was found to be sweet. The ship had brought a cargo of sugar from Manila on the previous voyage, and though not a bit of it was left in the vessel, yet the odor was sufficient to impregnate the tea. A case somewhat similar to this occurred twelve years ago, when tea was packed in the same hold with camphor." Those who have a sensitive knowledge of tea look for exquisite flavor or taste and aroma, and especially note its appearance in the cup.

When people had a narrower choice of teas than today they were more expert in their knowledge of each one. The English tea drinkers for many years seem to have been devoted to Bohea, a China or black tea called by the name of the hills where it was grown. There are people who think that China teas have the most delicate flavor and like the light color of them in the cup. Of course, there have been many grades of these and we pay a high price for the best—if we can get it. As I understand it, Chinese merchants control who shall and shall not have it. It is said that the Chinese use the coarser leaves of the tea tree for the preparation of leather, because of the tannin in them. It is the tannin in even the finer leaves that makes boiled tea so undesirable as a beverage.

The fragrance of oolong tea has been considered rank by some people, but this has made it popular among a class without supposedly aesthetic instincts. One condemnation of it declares that it puckers and "coppers" the stomach, but this was by an Englishman who preferred English breakfast tea as most wholesome and tasty.

In England, tea blends are so universal that the poor outsider has to depend upon brands, but we seem not to have been expert in blends. Plain long green Japan, as well as many others, has had its friends, and we know we must go to the Japanese for the perfection of the tea ceremony.

For years ago, when Ceylon teas seem to have been introduced to the United States, it was claimed that those teas were cleaner than were those of China and Japan—some teas are vacuum cleaned today—and that the latter were adulterated. The new coming Ceylon tea to our America was extolled for its strength and flavor, and it was said that two pounds of it would go farther than three of Chinese or Japanese tea, which statement probably needed to be proven. At any rate, some of the romancers of the world have loved to describe the tea growing parts of China, and to tell how the delicate buds of middle April were picked and spread, dried in bamboo trays, dropped into red hot pans in small quantities, etc., until it was finally packed in lead foil ready for commerce.

It seems to be more or less English to like China tea, although India teas seem to get the most attention from Englishmen today. For those who want exotic things there are expensive Meorish teas, and not long ago we clipped a news item concerning the most expensive tea one ever heard of, which was being sold, when made, for one dollar per cup. However, the sentiment that you can tell people of intellect from the fact that they drink China tea, and generally without sugar, has worked for economy.

Substitutes for the Tea Plant Leaves.

In the course of a hundred years there have been many sorts of dried leaves put forward fonfavor as against those of the tea plant, but judging from the fate of several sorts which we can trace their popularity has quickly waned. One, in particular, received much attention in 1866 because of its fragrance, and because prominent people commended it for some of the same things that China tea has been praised for, its fragrance, its tonic qualities, and its qualities as a promoter of digestion, and for being without the quality that in China tea presumably produces sleeplessness.

The Flavoring of Teas.

Because of its own true fragrance when it is good tea, it does seem unreasonable to make a sort of weak and hot lemonade of it, since the lemon odor drowns that of the tea—kills its bouquet—or to add jasmine or any other flower to it. Orange Pekoe tea is considered best with lemon. The correct Russian tea is not a cup of tea, since a deep glass is the correct container for it. Some people think that equal parts of orange and lemon juice in tea produce a satisfactory or most justifiable drink. Another of the many ways that have been devised for flavoring tea has been to shut cubes of sugar with dried orange peel and use them for flavoring as well as sweetening the tea.

On Making Teas.

There is one point in the making of teas on which there seems to be universal agreement—the water poured over the leaves should be boling, furiously boiling, but the tea itself should not be boiled. As to the amount of tea to use, the prevailing idea of one teaspoon per person and one for the pot is anything but exact, since much less of one kind of tea or much more may be required than for another.

And as to the time for the brewing of the tea, one expert says that the oolongs and green teas require more drawing, and the Indias and Ceylons the shorter time. We might guess the latter. A recipe of 1669 gives as the time for steeping tea "no longer than while you can say the Miserere," which would not be a good universal rule, since some of us do not know it!

There are many and curious directions almost as old as this, which more or less agree with one way used in England today or "wetting the tea." Cold water is put on it and it is easier to make tea for iced tea than you would believe, if you had not tried it. One old recipe for pouring boiling water on tea says that the tea is ready as soon as the leaves sink in it, and that is not a bad rule. Many of these old recipes may seem like mere curiosities, but there is some good in all, probably, although we can hardly believe that eggs in tea are worth while.

Making Russian Tea.

Russian tea, old style, was made by putting a freshly cut slice of lemon in the bottom of a cup, sprinkling it with sugar, and allowing it to stand a few minutes before pouring hot tea over it. The lemon should be peeled because there is a bitter flavor in the white part of the peel and yet another in the "zest." But it is most correct to call this a lemon tea. The Russians are also given the credit of giving to certain people the idea of putting a spoonful of fruit jam in their tea, and some think they get a delicious flavor if they put in a slice of fresh apple, but much depends upon the tea, in the latter case, and it should certainly be weak.

Tea Pots.

The little red pottery pot, which has sometimes been called a "Brown Betty," has been beloved and in general there is a sentiment against metal utensils in tea drawing, even silver. If the latter is used, the tea is often made in the unglazed pot, heated first, and then poured into the silver one. In any case, it is always a good plan to pour the tea off the leaves if it is to stand for longer than the brief time of drawing. Rather extravagant people use a great deal of tea, let the water barely "kiss" it, and pour it off at once. In other words, their direction is: "Be a profligate with the amount of tea used."

Social Teas

This is an enormous subject by itself. Around it has grown up a system of etiquette, manuals of cookery, and a great commerce.

Activities of Women

Dean Inge of England is in favor of the female bishop, claiming that many of them are better qualified than men.

Though she has only one arm, Mrs. George Lyddon of Pearl River, N. Y., recently won first prize in a cooking contest.

There is a shortage of dressmaking apprentices in France, owing to the fact that the midinettes all want to become stenographers.

At the age of 70 years Miss Gertrude Rickards of London has challenged the pedestrian record of Edward Payson Weston. Recently she completed a walking tour of 1,644 miles through Scotland and England.

MAIDEN MEDITATIONS

by SARA MOORE

BELIEVE ME.

[Suddenly, somewhere, some time, a woman conceived the idea of black shoes and champagne colored stockings. The idea spread. Variations followed quickly. Where 480 styles of stockings were carried in 1920, the company now has to carry 6,006.—President of a woman's hosiery company.]

The chart of woman's preference
Shows changes sharply jagged;
If men WILL follow every whim,
We'll run Big Business ragged.

HA! HA! ME, TOO!

[The nonpoisonous blows are liable to sound like a brick going through a plate glass window, while apparently soft, sly soaks are the ones apt to pack venom. . . . The worst for me and the best for him (Gene) seemed to arrive from nowhere and get there suddenly, although they didn't come very far.—From an article by Fighter Tom Gibbons on "Punches I have Taken," in Liberty.]

Pugs work in a roped arena,
A-slinging their fists for tools;
I move in a set serener,
Where, Thomas, they don't have rules;

Your customers rise in the grandstands
And yell till your punch draws blood;
No tears and—no jeers—are the portion
Of a lone little battling bud.

Both games are the same, believe me;
Though staged in the ring or Ritz—
Sometimes I long for a technique
Permitting knockouts and mitts;

I'm tired of "leading" with dinners
And "countering" cars with a hat;
Instead of finessing her aces
I'd like to jolt Geraldine flat.

It isn't—you're right, Thomas Gibbons—
A blow that seems smashingly big
That knocks either one of us goofy—
We both dread the mean little dig.

A HUNDRED TO ONE.

There's something the matter with me
I fear;
I'm not what I ought to be
(O dear!);
I don't care much for new rouge—too bright;
And I wear dark hose where the rest wear light;
I seldom grieve, though my hat's a fright—
Who'll marry a girl so queer?

'Tis little things count with the men,
They say;
I'll be but a spinsterish hen
(I may!);
I'm brim full of faults and the worst's this one:
I don't give a d—— that the thing's "not done";
When every one else wears pearls—I've none;
Boys won't even look my way.

Alas:
The modern knight on his knightly quest
Insists that his lady be like the rest;
Where stand pat parties are in ascendant—
Who wastes a vote on an independent?

ZIP COON STORIES

BY KEMBLE

Judge Bear Gets Hunk with Crafty Fox

GEE WHIZ, but there were some doings around here last week. Crafty Fox got it again. He thought he'd play a good joke on old Judge Bear and—— But I'll tell you all about it.

I saw Zip Coon shin up a tree, and when he got on the end of an old dead limb he began to scream.

Down in the valley a pack of hounds were yelping their heads off. They were after Crafty Fox, and the old sinner was just legging it over the landscape. Over stone walls and into the creek he went. Then out again. Soon he was lost to view. Then the noise stopped.

They thought I was Crafty Fox.

Zip Coon slid down the tree.

"It beats the Dutch how that boy can wiggle out of trouble," says he. "I do wish they would chase him out of these diggings, then Benny Bunny and I could live in peace."

While he was talking old Crafty himself hobbles up, his tongue hanging out of his mouth. My, O my! but he was tired.

"I've had one awful time, Zip," says he, "an awful time. Those hounds were after me. Just think of it! After me! But I fooled them. Yessir! I took them around by Judge Bear's cabin and lost them."

Just then the yelping commenced again. Crafty began to grin.

"Hear that? I'll bet those ki-yis are saying a few kind words to somebody. I wonder who it is?"

"THAT'S all right," squeaks Zip Coon, who has shinned up the tree as soon as Crafty appeared, "but they may come chasing up here any minute, and you're too tired to run any more."

"But where can I hide, Zip?" wailed Crafty. "Please help me! Where can I hide?"

"Scoot into my shack and get under the bed," says Zip, and he looked wicked when he said it.

When he got on the end of an old dead limb.

As Crafty crawled out of sight he called back to Zip:

"Old Judge Bear in his old high hat,
I'll bet this very minute he is feeling quite flat."

Zip Coon's eyes almost popped out of his head as he slid down the tree, for who should come crashing through the brushes but Judge Bear himself. Zip knew he would come.

"Have you seen anything of that old sinner Crafty Fox?" he growled. "If I can lay my mitts on that chap I'll teach him a lesson he'll never forget. Look what he did to me. Look at my clothes! He led those dogs right up to my door, with his miserable scent, then he skipped around the other way, and when I came out to see what all the fuss was about they tackled me. Rassled me all over the place. Just look at my clothes! Torn to bits! When the pups finally recognized me they apologized and said they thought I was Crafty Fox. Woof! Woof! but I'm mad!"

ZIP COON winked his eye, and, pulling Judge Bear's ear down, whispered in it:

"Sneak softly into my cabin and lie down on my little bed as hard as you can, Judge, AS HARD AS YOU CAN."

Blam! Down it went!

Judge Bear did just as he was told, and when he hit that bed, BLAM! Down it went.

Zip Coon looked through the window and giggled as he chirped:

"Old Crafty Fox, in his old felt hat,
I'll bet this very minute he is feeling quite flat."

The day that baby sister arrived grandpa took my five year old cousin Bobby to his club for lunch.

On being introduced to Bobby, one of grandpa's friends inquired, "Are you an only child?"

"O, no," answered Bobby. "I have four brothers and one sister."

"What!" exclaimed the old gentleman, "five boys and only one girl?"

"Well," replied Bobby defensively, "we've only just begun on girls."

G. W. C.

I heard the boys on the street calling my new neighbor boy "Hank." A few days later I called on his mother, and, as he answered the doorbell, I said, "Hello, Hank."

"Hush," he said, looking around furtively, "I'm Hank to the boys on the street, but at home I'm Harry James."

Bring Out the Hidden Beauty

Do you know that just beneath that soiled, discolored, faded or wrinkled complexion is one fair to look upon? Mercolized Wax will gradually and gently peel off the devitalized surface skin, revealing a new, fresh, white, beautiful skin underneath. The new complexion is a perfectly natural one, therefore in no way to be compared with a make-up. The wax leaves no trace but that of increased loveliness.

A New Skin—Your Own!—at small expense and effort. Simply apply Mercolized Wax at bedtime as you apply cold cream; wash it off in the morning. Fine, almost invisible, skin particles are flicked off with the wax. No harm possible. No detention indoors. The lively, young, healthy underskin is brought gradually to view—you have the exquisite complexion of robust girlhood—and every one will tell you,

You Look Years Younger—Assist Nature if she needs your help. Obtain an ounce of Mercolized Wax from your druggist or department store, use as directed—and you will bless the day that you made the acquaintance of this wonder working product.

Mercolized Wax

ISN'T IT ODD

By William Atherton DuPuy

ISN'T it odd that the tiny chickadee should be able to stay in the north through all the snows of winter and seems to get along quite well, thank you!

If you notice this brave little bird out in the snow you will see that it does not even take the trouble to keep its nose turned toward the wintry blasts as do most creatures of its kind. Let them try to ruffle its feathers and get through to its skin if they can. It dares them.

Examining the coat of the chickadee one would find that the rough feathers on top are but the trimmings of its protection from the cold. Beneath that is a thick layer of down that defies the cold. Then the chickadee puts a layer of fat just under the skin, just as whales and seals do, as an extra-efficient protection against the cold.

Inside this covering the chickadee burns one of the busiest little stoves any animal possesses. It keeps up a piping temperature. Its body is constantly some ten degrees hotter than is that of man. Man would burn up with fever at 105, but the chickadee is 108 to 110 all the time.

It keeps this temperature by stoking its furnace steadily. The chickadee is a huge eater for its size. If its body were stripped of feathers it would not be bigger than a man's thumb to the first joint. Yet by actual tests one of these birds has been shown to eat 20 sunflower seeds in an hour. This fuel goes into the fire to keep the heat up.

Most of the other birds have gone south for the winter because they do not like the cold and because it is hard to get food. The chickadee still manages to get along. It still finds insects in its own way although there seem to be none left in the world. It prowls along the trunks of trees and digs out grubs that have been hidden in the crevices for the winter. It eats insect eggs no bigger than pin-points, but they help so small a creature. The grasses and weeds that stick above the snow still have seeds hidden in their tassels and these tiny birds know how to shake them and cause them to rattle down on the snow. Then there are friendly human beings who put suet out for the birds. This is a kindly thing to do and is appreciated, but the chickadees are not dependent on charity. Many of them live along the edge of the woods, sleeping by night in dense pines and cedars, quite away from the haunts of man.

Bright Sayings of Husbands and Wives

The snappy comeback of the better half when cornered has often been a source of wonder to husbands and wives! The husband or the wife has come across with a bright saying that will never be forgotten by the other half of the matrimonial sketch. What was that bright saying, Mr.? Mrs.? Send it to us and we'll pay you $1 for it if we print it. Address Bright Sayings of Husbands and Wives, The Chicago Tribune, Chicago.

Might Displease Him.

Wife (in back seat)—Henry, dear! You mustn't drive so fast!!

Hubby—Why not?

Wife—The motor cop who has been following us won't like it.

MRS. A. S.

It's Different Now.

I had been giving my husband a lengthy scolding about scattering his belongings all over the house, among other things saying: "I have to be continually running around after you!"

He wearily retorted: "You didn't seem to mind that before we were married."

MRS. C. E. H.

Let Him Hunt.

Hubby broke the news that he was going hunting the next morning at three o'clock and would like breakfast before going out.

I replied: "If you can go hunting at that hour of the morning, you can 'hunt' some breakfast, too!"

MRS. J. N. K.

In Her Own Words.

Rastus was old, but he had a young wife whose labors over the washboard kept them both. At last Mirandy rebelled and they went before the judge to get a divorce.

Said the judge: "This is too bad—a case of June married to December."

"Whats' dat, judge?" said Mirandy. "Seems to me a heap mo' like Labor day married to de day ob rest."

MRS. G. A. W.

Great Pains.

Wife: "I have taken great pains in making those cookies, by my own recipe, for you."

Husband: "Yes, and I'm going through great pains in eating them, too. They'd make good wedges."

E. F. H.

O, No!

We were discussing a woman who nagged her husband. So I ended by saying: "I never nag you, do I, dear?"

He answered: "No, darling. You just persist."

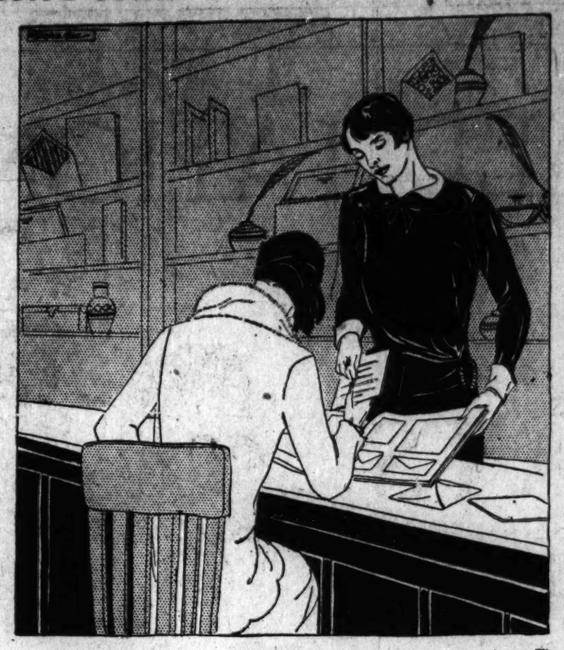
Correct Invitation Forms - - - - - -

By Persis Standish.

Many Innovations in Social Stationery Have Appeared During Last Two Years.

Persis Standish will answer questions of all kinds on etiquette, manners, and politeness. Self-addressed, stamped envelopes must accompany each request for information. Send your letters to Persis Standish, Sunday Room, Chicago Tribune.



MANY correspondents write to ask the correct form of invitations and regrets and what sort of stationery they should be written on. The correct form for invitations depends, of course, upon the occasion. Nowadays unless a party is formal invitations can either be telephoned or written in as informal fashion as a personal note. Tea invitations can be written on one's visiting card.

For wedding invitations and formal engraved forms for invitations to luncheon and dinner I can do no better than recommend that you go to one of the best stationers in your city and order them made up. They should, of course, be engraved, but there are permissible differences in wording and in type that perhaps you would like to choose yourself.

A lot depends, too, on how elaborate the wedding is to be and what cards to breakfast and other celebrations must be enclosed. Besides, every year there are new styles slightly different and yet correct, even for this simple conventional matter. For instance, this particular year it is considered smart by some to have a large envelope into which the wedding invitation will go without being folded, so that after it is in its outside envelope the invitation looks like a valentine or some official document, as it is about five and one-half by six inches in size.

Answers.

Another style is to have a slight indenture about an inch from the margin of the paper forming a sort of border around the script. The enclosure cards are treated in the same way. The newest thing in stationery for this occasion has a vellum or parchment finish slightly off white.

The answers to wedding invitations should be made thus:

If the invitation is to the church only, no answer is required.

If there is a card enclosed to breakfast or reception, the answer should follow the invitation form as closely as possible and should be sent within a week at latest of receiving the invitation.

Wedding invitations should be sent out not earlier than three weeks, and not later than a fortnight before the wedding. No wedding invitation should be sent out bearing the legend, "And family." Each member of a family should be honored by a separate card, if he or she is to be a guest at the wedding.

Wedding Announcements.

Wedding announcements look very much like wedding invitations. The enclosure card should bear the new address of the bride and groom and a date on and after which they will be "at home"—in other words, settled enough to receive visitors. Wedding announcements should be sent out immediately after the wedding, or at least within the next twenty-four hours. Sometimes they are sent later, but the usual thing is to send them immediately.

A wedding invitation merely to the church, or a wedding announcement, does not obligate one to send a gift, as an invitation to a wedding breakfast or reception does. It does not, however bar one from doing so.

Invitations to very formal balls, dances, dinners and receptions can be engraved The stationer will have several styles of these to show you, too. It is equally good taste and implies equal formality for a formally worded invitation to be written in long hand on the stationery of the hostess. There are also invitation forms half engraved and half written, which are perfectly correct, but less formal, which hostesses who entertain a great deal use to save time.

Forms Given.

The answers to all these invitations should be written in long hand on one's personal stationery (not that of a club or hotel), and should follow the wording of the invitation as nearly as possible. For instance, if the invitation reads thus:

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Harcourt Jones request the pleasure of your company at dinner on Wednesday evening, April the tenth, nineteen hundred and twenty-five. Eight o'clock. 1225 Park place.

The answer should read:

Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Ainsworth Smith accept with much pleasure the kind invitation of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Harcourt Jones for dinner on Wednesday evening, April the tenth, nineteen hundred and twenty-five. Eight o'clock. 1225 Park place.

This year there are some variations in style of calling cards also. The vellum finish is being much used and the card is sometimes made up so that there is a flap the same size as the card on which the owner may write little messages to send to hospitals with flowers, or to put in the box with any gift.

Use Full Name.

They also can be used for invitations to informal teas, but for this purpose it is much more correct to use a single card. Visiting cards are indented also, giving a slight border from an eighth to a quarter of an inch. As to the type of lettering, it is optional, but conspicuous types are always in bad taste. Old English is always good.

The name on the visiting card should be in full. No initials are ever used for this purpose. For instance, Mrs. Harry James Smith would never be Mrs. Harry J. Smith, and people with elaborate middle names either put them all on, or drop several entirely. Your stationer will help you with all these things, but be warned that even the best stationers carry in stock some articles that are only good for commercial purposes and purposes of organizations such as clubs and societies.

For instance, it is perfectly proper for a business organization to send out cards thanking people who have written the organization about the death of one of its officials, but it is never correct for a family to do this. All letters of thanks and consolation should be written in long hand—the smart stationers to the contrary notwithstanding.

Many Innovations.

To return to the subject of invitations, there are many innovations within the last couple of years. An invitation to a luncheon at a very smart club, the luncheon given by several hostesses, came on pale yellow paper lately, and the luncheon followed the same color scheme even to the damask. Things like this, however, are a bit risky for the ordinary hostess who is having a few friends to luncheon.

It is much better for her either to write the invitations in long hand or to have the conventional plate made without the date and the hour, so that she may use them for a long time. If a conservative plate is chosen, it may be used a number of years, selecting the stationery each year from the best style of that season.

The same invitations cannot, unfortunately, be used for luncheon and dinner because dinner invitations are always issued in the name of host and hostess.

Results of Jealousy

We're all acquainted with jealousy, the monster that smashes love affairs, wrecks homes, causes business quarrels, and generally plays havoc with us mortals. We'd like to know your most notable experience with a jealous person or persons. If you have encountered a situation where jealousy led to a tragic or ridiculous climax, tell us about it. The Tribune will pay $1 for every story published. Address Jealous Editor, Chicago Tribune.

Jealous of Her Job.

Amy was jealous of Her job, which was welfare work in a department store. She would go into tantrums and tears in the manager's office whenever any one else did a bit of work that she considered belonged to her department.

And above all things she was anxious to "sit in" at the executive meeting, but the management did not so decree. Finally, the manager's private secretary, who was being trained to become assistant manager, was invited to "sit in" at the executive meeting.

Amy found it out and raised such a hubbub that the manager rescinded the order and excluded the secretary from the meeting rather than admit Amy, so both lost out by Amy's jealousy.

L. G. W.

A Confession.

I disclaimed the trait of jealousy, but when my husband's sister came to call on us, and he displayed a new suit he had just purchased to her before he did to me, and asked her approval before I had given mine, I was so filled with jealousy that although it was a beautiful suit and looked well on my husband, I angrily told him it made him look old, that I did not like it, and that I absolutely refused to go out with him when he wore it.

MRS. H. G.

Jealous of Her Brother.

The most jealous person I know is a young woman who is married, and is supported by a fond husband.

She has an unmarried brother of whom she is extremely jealous. When she goes home to visit, she puts her parents to unnecessary trouble and expense, borrows money from them, does not pay it back; says if she pays it back this brother will have more, and is continually saying catty things about him.

This brother is still in his 'teens and is entitled to some support. R. V. N.

Dog Acts Like Human.

We have recently acquired an American Pit Bull terrier. When friend husband kisses me good-bye on leaving in the morning and greets me on returning, Tiger Boy jumps up from his blanket, rushes to where we happen to be standing, leaps upon us, whining and growling. Hubby pets him, kisses me again, and goes about his business.

The dog sulks and pouts for a half hour. Food, or his chain shaken alluringly as a promise for a run, does not appeal to him just then. If the telephone rings and some one greets Tiger Boy through the receiver, or the crystal radio set is working and he can listen through the head phones he forgets his peeve.

Freshen That Drawn, Sallow Complexion

How can faces look clear and fresh and youthful when pores are laden with days-old dust and dry oil and powder? They can't.

How can they glow with natural health and color when nature's life-giving blood never floods them? They can't.

Creams and soaps and costly treatments can not refresh and awaken tired complexions. They need a better cleansing and a gentle stimulus. They need Calonite—a pure, white powder that you apply with a damp wash cloth.

Instantly you feel the burdened pores relax as grime you didn't know was there, bubbles and dissolves; as warm, reviving blood comes tingling to the surface. Blackheads, embedded oil and powder, dissolve. Sallow, oily, lifeless skin glows, clean and clear. Drawn, tired pores relax and breathe naturally. Instantly!

No waiting for Calonite's benefits. You see and feel them—instantly. How fresh and young and new your skin! How it responds to night-cream and rest. How you enjoy this gentle, stimulating, facial cleanliness. You look and feel a different person.

Ask your druggist for Calonite. Try it, this very night. Your money back if not delighted.

Long life to your corsets!

Quality of elastic is the determining factor in the performance of the corset. And Kenlastic, the supreme standard of service-quality in knitted elastic, is your assurance of performance. When you buy a corset, look inside for the wavy blue line that now identifies genuine Kenlastic.

Corns Lift Off

You'll laugh, really! It is so easy and doesn't hurt one bit!

Drop "Freezone" on that old, bothersome corn. Instantly it stops aching; then shortly you lift that sore, touchy corn right off with your fingers. It works like a charm, every time.

A tiny bottle of "Freezone" costs only a few cents at any drug store, sufficient to remove every hard corn, soft corn, corn between the toes and calluses—Try it!

The HOME HARMONIOUS

By WillElla De Campi Stephenson.

Sage green and peach are the colors used in this attractive bedroom.

The "Trimmings" of a Room: The Draperies, Upholstery and Rugs Express the Personality of the Owner.

WillElla de Campi Stephenson will be glad to assist the homemaker in any problems pertaining to home building and home furnishing. Address your letter to Anita de Campi, The Tribune, Chicago. Inclose stamped, addressed envelope for personal reply.

SELECTING furniture for the bedroom is no difficult problem. There are always the same requisite pieces, with an occasional added piece or two. But in the "trimmings" great varieties may be shown. Draperies, rugs, lamps, and especially bed covers, are of utmost importance in the decorative qualities of the rooms in which they are used. In looking for beautiful bed spreads, nowadays, we look almost anywhere other than in the bedding department. Most exquisite bed coverings may be bought in the upholstery sections. They are selected, frequently, to match the draperies used in bedrooms.

One charming bed cover which I have seen, was bought in a linen store, supposedly to be used as a tablecloth. It is made of pineapple linen, with beautiful medallions of drawn work, and elaborate embroidery, all in a soft cream color. The ingenious bride, to whom it was given as a wedding present, lived in a small apartment where the dining table was not large enough to do justice to the lovely thing, so she immediately decided to use it as a bed cover. It is spread out in full glory, over an undercover of intense turquoise blue sateen, so that the pattern is advantageously displayed. Walls in the room are pale lemon yellow. At the windows are draperies of flowered glazed chintz, on a turquoise ground. Cream colored gauze makes the glass curtains. The rugs are of deep, plum colored chenille.

In the room shown in today's illustration, the bed cover and draperies are of heavy, lustrous sage green satin. [Sateen could be used instead]. These are simply made and beautifully effective, blending nicely, in their mellow tone, with the antique ivory furniture, which is touched with gold.

Paneled walls are painted peach color, with fine lines of gold in the moldings. On top of a small table beside the bed is a sage green and gold tôle lamp, with a plaited ivory shade. Shelves in the lower part of the table hold a few convenient accessories and books.

The small arm chair and a chaise longue are upholstered in glazed chintz, with fruit decorations, on a pale green ground. Glass curtains are of sheer peach colored voile, making a soft glow of light. A collection of French prints, in narrow gold frames, lends interest to the plain walls.

Another bedroom has cream colored walls and woodwork. Window draperies and covers on the twin beds are made of chintz, with fruit decorations, on a cream ground. They are finished at the edges with ruffles of the same. Ruffled cream colored net with large dots is used for glass curtains. Between the beds is a set of narrow, standing shelves. A majolica bird lamp is placed on top. It has a shade of rose colored taffeta, edged with leaf green. On the next shelf below are a water bottle and glass, and beneath these a selection of books.

As blue is the dominant color in the nosegays, a pair of Wedgwood blue pottery lamps is used on the dressing table. These are fitted with square shades of stretched pink georgette over ivory silk. They are banded at the edges with shaded rose ribbon. Old blue wool chenille rugs are used on the floor.

A reverse of bed covers and draperies is used in another bedroom. The covers are made of mauve taffeta, finished with deep, full ruffles of pale green. At the windows are mauve gauze glass curtains, beneath pale green taffeta draperies and lambrequins. These are edged with mauve ruffles. A mauve and gold lamp on a stand between the beds is fitted with a shade of finely plaited, pale green georgette. The walls are covered with a light gray paper, sprinkled with field flowers in soft tones. All of the furniture is painted a soft, dull green, decorated in the Venetian manner with floral medallions and trims of gold.

Unusually attractive is a room with draperies of linen, showing a pattern of large flowers in tones of amber and orange on a white ground, finished with wide, scalloped bands of jade green linen. They hang straight to the floor, from beneath scalloped wooden cornices painted jade green with fine borders of amber. Covers on the twin beds are of the flowered linen, boxed to fit, and piped with jade. The pillows are covered with a strip of jade green linen, piped with amber. Narrow hanging shelves between the beds are made of walnut, to match the rest of the furniture. The walls are light pistachio green. Moss green rugs, with borders of deeper green, are used on the floor.

Strikingly different and effective is a room done in black and white. The furniture is enameled glossy black, with fine lines of jade green at the edges to relieve the severity. At the windows are draperies of an amusingly patterned black and white material, lined with white sateen. They hang straight to the floor, and are topped by wooden cornices, painted to match the furniture. These cornices hide the mechanism of pulley cords by which the draperies may be drawn together. No glass curtains are used.

On the three-quarters width bed, which stands lengthwise against the wall, a black fur cover is used, and against the wall are placed several cushions of bright colors. In lieu of the black fur cover, a cover of black rep, piped with jade, might be used.

The walls are done in a white paper, with black polka dots. Woodwork is painted black, with jade green sinkages. Mottled white parchment, bound with black, and decorated with a fine line of jade, makes lamp shades and shields for the side lights. The floor is rugged with black chenille.

Dressings for old colonial beds are always interesting. In an early American room the large four post bed has a tester valance and deep flounced cover of white dotted Swiss, trimmed with ball tassel fringe. Across the foot of the bed, a lovely old pieced quilt is folded. At the windows are ruffled glass curtains of the dotted Swiss. Draperies are made of plain strawberry pink glazed chintz, edged with ball tassel fringe.

The walls are done in a white paper, with pencil lines of strawberry pink. On a stand beside the bed is a white glass llamp with a parchment shade decorated with rosebuds. A wing chair, near one of the windows, is upholstered in quilted blue and white calico. The same material covers a small sofa which stands against the foot of the bed.

In the space between two windows a maple highboy is placed. A maple desk, with a ladder back, rush bottom chair, stands in one corner. It is lighted by a polished steel reading lamp, with a pink accordion plaited paper shade. Completing the furnishings is a maple bureau, above which a characteristically colonial mirror is hung. Colorful hooked rugs enliven the floor.

Amused a Storeful.

I had just come home for the Christmas holidays after having been away at school since September and I was helping my dad in our grocery store during the holiday rush. I had not yet come out of the school atmosphere and was going rather absent mindedly about my work.

The store was full of people and I was waiting on a little old lady. I had given her some eggs, some sugar, and then she asked me, "How do you sell sweet potatoes?"

I understood her to say, "How do you spell," etc. And immediately I started out, s-w-e-e-t p-o——"

I got just so far when I realized what I was doing. Everybody was smiling and some big fellow broke out into a "haw, haw, haw."

That was the signal and soon everybody was laughing loudly. I left the store, almost crying. I never hope to be in such a position again.

C. M. N.

Guessed Wrong.

One bright day last summer I went to the photographer to have my picture taken, and I took a little four year old girl with me.

After having my picture taken, and when we were ready to leave, the photographer said, "Mrs. G. you have such a nice little daughter and she is the image of her mother."

Was I embarrassed? Well, I certainly was! I had to explain that I was not married and that the little girl was not mine. P. G.

Hard to Endure.

My most embarrasing moment took place when I was initiated into a well known club. In order to gain membership a group of girls had to don old clothes and walk up and down Michigan avenue dusting the shoes of passers-by.

Further embarrasment was added when my fiancé and his boss passed by and noticed me. O, if the earth could have swallowed me then!

L. H.

Left Handed.

I was invited out to dinner at a friend's and took my 2 year old daughter with me. As dinner was served and we began to eat my daughter began to use her left hand, as she had a habit of doing at home. So of course I made her use her right hand.

My friend's husband asked if she was left handed. I replied "She always like to use it, but I don't like it, as I think it looks so awkward."

And imagine my embarrassment when I looked at him and saw he was left handed. Mrs. F. E. B.

Telling Why.

I was entertaining the ladies' aid in our downstairs apartment. The woman upstairs was not at home, but had kindly offered me the use of her front room. I didn't use it because her ideas of cleanliness were not the best.

Imagine my embarrassment when friend neighbor returned and asked why I hadn't used her room and my daughter piped up with, "My mama says she couldn't take the ladies up there—it's too dirty." C. H. S.

An Unguarded Moment.

One day I was marcelling a woman's hair in my beauty parlor, which is one large room, divided only by a screen. Every one can hear what is being said.

Mrs. S——, who has a beauty parlor across the street, came in to have her hair curled. I was busy, so she sat down in the waiting room to wait her turn.

Not knowing who had come in, I asked the woman whom I was working on where she had her work done before coming to my shop, and she said: "Why, I have been going to Mrs. S——'s shop across the street, but I don't like her, and she can't marcel at all. Why, my hair always looked awful when she curled it."

Needless to say, it was an embarrassing moment for both of us when we discovered Mrs. S—— was in the same room. Mrs. G. A. H.

London Doctor Finds Real Cause of Stomach Gas

AS A RESULT of special studies made at one of London's leading hospitals, a famous English specialist asserts that most stomach and bowel trouble is due to just one cause—Intestinal Stasis. This disease which, it is said, afflicts three out of every four people, is directly caused by improper food, lack of correct exercise and other faults of modern life.

Intestinal Stasis

INTESTINAL STASIS, in everyday language, means the too slow movement of waste food matter through the intestines. This matter, from which the body has taken all the nourishment, is not promptly passed out of the bowels, but due to intestinal weakness, it remains many hours or even days longer than it should. This waste matter then ferments, forms gas and poisons, and is the cause of sour stomach, gas bloating and indigestion.

A person may have Intestinal Stasis and yet not be noticeably constipated. The bowels may move once or even twice a day, but the movements are only partial. Enough old matter is left to form gas, hinder digestion and poison the system.

Action Needed on Both Bowels

ORDINARY laxatives or physics seldom overcome Intestinal Stasis. Nor do soda or magnesia give more than temporary relief from stomach gas. Intestinal Stasis, and the other diseases of which it is the cause, can be relieved permanently only by continued, REAL intestinal cleansing.

Dr. Carl Weschcke, in his private practice, first perfected the bowel cleanser and intestinal prophylactic now known as Adlerika. It is a compound of the best saline intestinal evacuant with vegetable buckthorn and cascara, together with glycerine and other ingredients which expel gas and have detergent action. Adlerika, unlike other medicines, acts upon BOTH upper and lower bowel.

Gas Relieved System Cleansed

ONE of Adlerika's first effects is to relieve gas on the stomach and gas bloating. Even the FIRST spoonful usually brings out a surprising amount of old poisonous waste matter which you never guessed was in your system and which may have been the hidden cause of indigestion, nervous dyspepsia, headache, sleeplessness or other trouble. Even if your bowels move daily, Adlerika frequently brings out a surprising amount of additional matter which might otherwise be poisoning your system.

Many physicians recognize Adlerika as the one dependable remedy for Gas and Intestinal Stasis or whenever REAL bowel cleansing is necessary. No matter what you have tried for your stomach and bowels, Adlerika will surprise you.

What Doctors Say about Adlerika

"I prescribe Adlerika with highly satisfactory results."—Dr. A. C. Curl.

"In my 50 years' practice I have found nothing to excel Adlerika."—Dr. James Weaver.

Ancient gateway to Guy's Hospital, London, where important discoveries about Intestinal Stasis have been made.

"I have to congratulate you on the good effects I had from Adlerika since I prescribed it."—Dr. L. Langlois.

"I have found Adlerika to be far superior in bowel and stomach trouble to my fondest anticipations."—Dr. G. Eggers.

"Adlerika very markedly reduces the number of bacteria and colon bacilli. This feature increases the therapeutic value of Adlerika because, in addition to its intestinal cleansing action, it checks and inhibits the growth of these intestinal bacteria and bacilli."—Dr. H. L. Shoub, New York.

THE B. AND C. AND THE DUKE

By Duke Bakrak

The Wife's Vacation Takes 'Em to Her Old Home Town.

WHOEVER that poet was what said "There's no place like home," must of had our house in mind when he thought of it. Now that we are all settled (except tha bills) and ready to sit down to enjoy tha fruits of our labor, with nothing to do but watch tha rubber plant grow, tha B. and C. decides that on acct. she's all tired out the thing fer her to do is to take a trip down home fer a week with tha baby. Outside of the R. R. fare I woudn' complain about her going fer a year and if she ever bought a one way ticket I wouldn' complain at all. Right now the bank roll is so aneemick that the least little shock might prove fatal.

What we need more as rail-road tickets right now is curtains an drapes. When we went over to our furniture company last night to purchase some, tha clerk said we could get immediate delivery but he was evidently missinformed as tha credit man said we would have to wait three months. It now looks like tha naybors will keep on gettin a birds eye view of looks an plates landing on a certain bird's eye.

HER NERVES SHOT

After getting home I inquired as to just why it was necessary for her to go on this cruise and she informs me her nerves are on edge an she is just shot to pieces, in the 1st place, with her species of nerve I can't figure out why they should be run down as they certainly get plenty of exercise and as far as her being all shot to pieces, I am heartily in favor of it. In a way it's very economical for her to go alone as that is a cheap way for the two of us to get a vacation for the price of one.

Tha big hitch in tha program is that she insists on my getting Saturday morning off so's I could come down Friday night and bring her home Sunday. I firmly refused to do this act and of course me being tha last word, I will take the 7:52 P. M. train Friday. Also I was forced to tell her that it was impossible to be at tha train Monday, when she left. I paced tha depot for a ½ hour and one minute before train time she blows in.

One Saturday and Sunday I spent three months down in that Cemetery an I sure dread the day I gotta go again.

I wish you guys coulda seen tha wreck they came to tha depot with.

CLOTHES TA BUY

The idea of her bracing me for 10 bucks spending money is a joke. You coudn' spend a dollar a day in that tomb unless you bought all the ice cream that Sweete-Shoppe had, and it's a cinch ya can't lose a helova lot gambling, cause last time we was visitink they played dominoes for raisins.

What gets my goat is no matter where a woman goes (if it's only out of the city limits) it seams there's always some clothes to buy while all us birds ever do is to get a hair cut. If I follow all her instructions such as making tha bed, keeping tha windows closed, marking up tha milk card, and twenty other things I will hafta purchase a season ticket in a rest cure.

Well, she left last Monday and I certainly fixed me up a swell feed when I got home. There's been a can of asparagas tips in tha pantry for a cupple weeks which I was tole not to touch cause you couldn' tell but what maybe unexpected company might drop in some time an she would open it then. They was very good on acct. I melted a ½ pound of butter to go on them. It's a damn good thing she didn' have 2 cans.

LIMBURGER!

Tuesday night I brought home some swell eats and included a brick of limburger which I figgered on makin 3 or 4 sandwiches fer a midnight lunch to kind of take away the after taste of my little batch which I guess I tole you turned out a little smelly. I mus'n't ferget to ditch any of this cheese what's left over Friday morning on acct. tha B. and C. has always said she would never allow any Limburger to come into our house. I remember that time I tried to explain to her that it was considered healthy and that some people didn' know what was good for them to which she says, "Anything with that smell would be considered sickly," and as far as people not knowing what was good for them was concerned, if I knew what was good for me I'd never try and drag any home.

Wednesday night I made bacon an eggs and Thursday night eggs an bacon. After I got finished I did the weekly dishes and Friday morning I made the damn bed. I wish some of you guys coulda seen tha wreck they came to tha depot with Saturday morning when I hopped offen that train, tha fenders flapped like a trained Seal before you throw him a fish. Tha Pain-law tries ta tell me it's 3 years old, if that relic is on it's 3rd birthday my grandfather is 12 yrs. old.

A BUSY DAY

Ennyway on acct. they eat breakfast at 5:30 all I get is cold pancakes and some warmed over coffee, from the taste of it I think it was warmed over from last month. Saturday, up to noon time tha ole man takes me all over the farm an if I woulda listened to 1-10th of what he was explainin I possibly could run for Sec. of Agriculture. What tha hell do I care about as how, "His favorite heffer had a bad spell of heaves but waren't quite as sick as war a week come nex' Choosday." I suggested maybe he should have her tonsils and adnoids removed. Guess I musta been talkin in his bum ear cause he answers my suggestion by saying, "Buddy ya didn' maybe bring a little likker up with ya from Sheecawgo did ya?" Well, I did borrow a pint but if that spendthrift had an idea I was gonna swap him a shot for a cup of 2nd hand coffee he's got a lot more guesses comin.

Saturday afternoon the big brother who is in charge of "The Busy Bee" which happens to be tha town department store asks me, did I wanta see tha emporium? After knowing I had learned everything about farming, I figgered I'd better learn that store bizzness on acct. maybe some time I'd have a poor crop of Wheat and I could make up that difference by puttin in 12 or 13 hrs. a day af that store after I finished tha daily chores.

This bazaar sells anything from a piece of liver sausage to a tomb-stone. If they ever wanted to sell me one of their departments I would take tha "Hair Tonic" an "Bitters" counter, it's tha busiest part of the place. How those guys can hit that stuff and live is beyond me. While I was in that place I was introduced to two celebrities, Ephriam Heimerdinger who is the town's "Champeen horse shoe pitcher" and Frank Sanborn who has won all tha "Hog Calling Contests."

THA WEEKLY MOVIE

Saturday night was my treat an I took the whole damn bunch to the school house where tha weekly movie show is put on. I enjoyed that feature picture very much as I hadn' see it in three years. Tha comedy must of been funny cause I noticed a lotta yaps laughing. That News reel was very interesting, it showed the boys embarking for France, Mayor Walker of New York handing that Prince of Wales that key to tha city and other late events. As a special treat a announcer got on tha platform and informed us that at a great expense they had procured a added feature, the 19th episode of the "Perils of Pauline." After Miss. Aileen Ryan sang "Kiss me again" with colored slides and jestures I treated tha gang to ice cream and then we went home and hit tha hay.

Sunday after church that Pa-in-law drove "Decrepit" over to that river to show me tha dam sight, I'da damn sight rather of walked. Ennyway after we eat and get a treat fir that way of looking at "Niagara Falls" and "Yellowstone Park" through a new invention called a "Photoscope" we get to packing and at half four we was on the train on the way back home.

If anybody ever willed me a home in that town I would trade it off fer a litter of kittens and then drowned 'em.

I was introduced to two clebrities.

LADIES IN CRIME

"Grandma" Nusbaum, the Amazing Grandmother

By Genevieve Forbes Herrick.

ELIZA NUSBAUM, that meager, colorless grandmother who capped 59 years of obscurity with a sensational flare-up of publicity when she confessed to a membership in a bewildering murder syndicate of five, whose plots made away with grandma's husband, Albert, beguiled herself that she was helping kill grandpa all for love of John Walton Winn, whose 40 or so years were youth to her.

But once the confession was made, then repudiated, the faded old housekeeper was jolted into cynicisms when she learned that she didn't even have the comfort of a love affair to prop her up.

For Winn, with his prison record, with his everlasting sucking of his gold bridge work, with his cheaply resplendent haberdashery, didn't play the gallant the way they do in story books.

WINN KNOCKED NUSBAUM TO THE FLOOR and, with Goff, stamped out the old man's life.

"GRANDMA" NUSBAUM as she appeared during her trial.

JOHN WINN, the actual slayer of Nusbaum.
(TRIBUNE Photo.)

PUTS BLAME ON GRANDMA

Winn sat in one room of the state's attorney's office; grandma in another. She was all concern over the younger man, whom she called "Baby." Winn was all concern about John Walton Winn. And when things got pretty warm for him as the questioning went along, he summed up his regard for the woman in the next room in one curt sentence:

"Grandma's framed me."

Just about then Eliza Nusbaum was stumbling down the corridor, supported by the police matron. Grandma's hair was ruffled; her near-seal coat, with the lining frayed, had slipped awkwardly down over her shoulders; her near silk stocking were twisted awry, and the run down heels of her worn satin slippers wabbled over at her every uncertain step.

Through the half open door grandma spied the more or less well dressed Winn. His shoes were shined; his clothing was pressed. His manner was complacent. She looked in; he looked out.

Then she heard this man, to whom, she had admitted, she had been giving $250 a month, insist that "the old gal" was nothing to him.

EIGHTEEN IN FAMILY

She whimpered something to the matron about not wanting to see him; that he had already brought her too much trouble. But as soon as she got back into her room she collapsed. For ten wild, hysterical minutes she screamed and babbled about God and punishment and grandpa and Winn. Always she came coming back to her plea:

"Don't let anybody kill me; promise that you won't let anybody kill me."

After her fit of hysteria, the first the busy housewife had indulged in in all her life, Mrs. Nusbaum became calm, wistful, practical.

"I've worked hard all my life," she said. "I was born in Elkhart, Ind. That's a real nice town, ain't it? My ma had eighteen children; nine died. I was the baby. When I was 16 I married Grandpa Nusbaum. His pa was a farmer. I worked so hard then; lots of boarders. And I cooked and sewed and washed."

9 O'CLOCK ALIBI

Then this curious old lady who was about to stand trial, along with four others, for the brutal murder of her husband, fell, inevitably, into the familiar tricks of virtually every woman who ever gets her name scribbled across a police blotter. Grandma, just like Tillie Klimek or Belva Gaertner; like Mrs. Lillian Rowland or scores of others I could name, grandma fell back on the old nine o'clock lady alibi.

She remembered, and in her case it was true, that she never chased around; that she was a home body, that she cooked a mean dinner, sewed a fine seam and was general utility man of the household.

And so, with a pride that, for the moment, shoved aside the shadow of the Criminal court, grandma sat up straight and said:

"In all their lives, my men folks h'ain't never paid out ten dollars for laundry. They h'ain't never gone to the bureau and not found clean clothes, with the buttons all sewed on. No sir."

Then, still in the mood of retrospection, the old lady who had thought she was having a love affair with Winn, went on:

"Grandpa, he was that stingy. He h'ain't never given me but one present; that was a picture album, about twenty years ago. For his picture, I 'spect."

Sometimes, as she talked, she twisted her hands, with their snub finger nails, all ingrained with soil, and put forth this not unusual philosophy:

"You can't never tell when trouble's gonna come."

NEVER SUSPECT GRANDMA

Certainly, had you passed through that section of South Chicago where the Nusbaums had their home (a pretty substantial one, for grandpa was a carpenter and contractor), you would never have picked out grandma as the possible member of a murder syndicate which did a chilly job in a chilly way.

The Nusbaums lived in their tidy home at 9238 Baltimore avenue. John Walton Winn, a former employé of grandpa's and an itinerant philander who traded a few vague caresses for some real money which grandma got from Nusbaum's rentals, spent much of his time in a confused, casual household at 2947 East 96th street. It was Mrs. Delilah Martin's flat, and Delilah wasn't a bad name for her. In that flat, on easy terms, lived Marion Stringham and Edward Goff. To that flat came Winn. When he came grandma found her way there.

In that flat was hatched the murder plot to get rid of the old carpenter. He was ill, anyway, and stingy, and grandma thought he was in the way of what it pleased her to regard as her love affair. Winn knew the carpenter was in the way of more money for Winn.

KILLED WITH HAMMER

It was the evening of Dec. 29, 1925, that grandma "making supper" in the kitchen of her home, talked pleasantly enough with her 5 year old grandson, even though she knew that Nusbaum had been wooed over, on some flimsy excuse, to Delilah's flat.

What was happening over in the flat was told later, with all the horrible and stark details of a page of Russian realism, by Goff, on the stand in Judge Emanuel Eller's court.

Vividly, perhaps too vividly for the courtroom fans, he described how "the old man," as he called Albert Nusbaum, lay on his back on the floor of the flat. His head was half caved in with a hammer blow, struck by Winn.

Then, according to Goff's story, Winn hit the pitiable old fellow one more blow with that hammer. He tossed a blanket over the mangled face and the courtroom was very still as Goff tells this—he planted his right foot down hard on the face.

The carpenter's head jerked sharply to the right. The next groan is longer and lower. Winn ordered Goff, the latter said, to take his turn at stamping down the blanket and he did as he was told.

MARION STRINGHAM, an accomplice; MRS. DELILAH MARTIN, in whose home Nusbaum was killed; EDWARD GOFF, who confessed, naming Winn as chief actor in the killing.

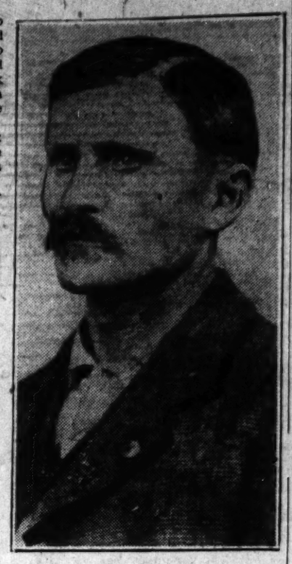
GRANDSON ARRESTED

There was a newly dug grave waiting in the yard. But for some reason that burial plan was abandoned and the stiff, distorted corpse was found the next day in a prairie near 94th street and Brandon avenue. It had been lugged there in the tonneau of grandpa's car. The morning it was found, young Floyd Nusbaum, the dead man's grandson, was driving the same car. Police officers halted him to look into the tonneau and, startled, he let them look.

Then he nearly fainted when the officer hauled from a crack in the floor board a piece of Albert Nusbaum's skull. The boy, protesting and bewildered, was taken into custody. His father, Roscoe Nusbaum, more to save his son than to involve his mother, told the police of this pseudo love affair of Eliza Nusbaum and John Walton Winn. Police rushed to a hotel in Crown Point. They pulled Winn out of bed. They pinned back his arms in time to save him from destroying a letter. This was the note:

"Just got that, you know. Ransack the house; tear up the stuff in the drawers. I hate to do it, but it's you or me or him.

"I'll get the money on the ring or watch and you'll hear from me soon. Do you love me?"



ALBERT NUSBAUM, the victim.

PLOT IS DISCOVERED

There was no signature. The letter closed: "From mother to my baby."

And it was thus that the plot was discovered.

The path led to the flat; the three were taken into custody by Capt. Patrick Collins. Then the trial led to grandma's neat house. The night before, Goff, according to his story, had gone over to the house and said to the old lady getting supper:

"Well, you're old man is out of the way. You are free; the job is done."

At that time the old lady reeled, almost fainting, and is reported to have whispered, "O God, is it true."

Arrested, taken to Capt. Collins' office, then to the state's attorney's office, then back to South Chicago police station, grandma began, at 59, to learn something about men, at least about John Walton Winn. Repudiated by him, even taunted and laughed at, she swung away from him in as great a fury as a miss of 18 might work up over a beau who tarried with another.

For a few days her affections, if such they were, were flung back to the man who was dead, with her connivance, if not actually by her hand. She pleaded that she might attend his funeral.

GOES TO FUNERAL

They took her back to her flat. The front room was filled with neighbors and they were none too friendly. But grandma, leaning on the police matron's arm, stumbled into her bed room. Then, for the first time in her whole life, Eliza Nusbaum bethought herself of make-up. This strange woman, part peasant housekeeper, part flaming adventuress, walked over to the dresser. She daubed a swathe of chalky white powder over her nose; she drew a wobbly red line about her drooping lips; she draped a flimsy black veil over her tear-stained face.

Then she went back into the front room to brave the smacking lips and muted comments of two score women folk of the community.

As they led her to the automobile to go to the cemetery the widow murmured, "See, how many cars there are; such a crowd of folks." And she seemed to find solace in this.

Then, suddenly, she decided to go to the cemetery on another day "when there h'ain't no crowds" and returned to her cell at the station, muttering, "I want to be buried next to pa."

She fell asleep, exhausted. It had been a busy day for a home-body like grandma.

LOYAL TO WINN AGAIN

When she awoke, the emphasis of her fumbling loyalty swung once more back to Winn. Anything and everything to save him from the gallows.

She never wavered from that desire through the long days at the county jail, awaiting trial. She, and the others went to trial about St. Valentine's day, 1926. Grandma was the last of the defendants to take the stand. For five hours her tired, colorless, and sometimes soundless voice insisted that she was not guilty of aiding in grandpa's murder.

A variation from the run of women defendants in a murder trial, was grandma. Worn and pale and drab. Perhaps the best index of the impression she made on the jury can be given in one concrete picture. Instead of carrying an orchid to the defendant's chair, grandma hugged to her side a round, red apple, the gift of some friend.

Next day she finished her testimony and the next after that the case went to the jury. The twelve men were out three hours and twenty minutes.

They directed that Winn be sent to the gallows, that grandma spend the rest of her natural life in the state penitentiary.

STILL THINKS OF WINN

The perfect housekeeper curved her fingers more tightly about the red apple as she heard the news. Just as everybody was remarking how quietly she took the verdict, her body softened into a collapse, then grew rigid. The big red apple tumbled down the folds of the black dress, hit the stout black shoes, and frisked its giddy way toward the jury box. Grandma's body flopped down, down, in her chair, and would have followed the apple with a thud, if the bailiffs had not caught her.

"Dad" Watson, custodian of the Criminal court building, shoved a piece of cotton saturated with spirits of amonia beneath her nostrils. Water spilled down her wrinkled face. The judge had the windows opened. Still, she didn't come to.

They carried her into an anteroom and for ten minutes she slumped across the end of the table, frightened, inarticulate, piteous. As soon as she could sit up, she motioned a bailiff close to her and whispered,

"I must do something for Winn, please."

And she's been trying to ever since, as she sits in the woman's quarters at the penitentiary and he fights the death sentence.

Little Tales of Big Heads

What's your pet little tale of a Big Head? Send it to Big Heads, Sunday Tribune, and we'll pay you $1 if we print it.

Tables Turned.

I belong to a club of girls, none of whom seemed to find the one man or was able to hold him, so when one of the girls finally came along with a diamond, even though it was a very small stone, we couldn't help envying her. But she sure got the big head about it. She was always flashing the ring before us, talking nothing but her fiancé, and lost no chance to let us know how easy it was for her to get somebody.

But we turned the tables on her, all right. In a short time several girls were engaged and now, through some unfortunate circumstances, which she fails to relate, her marriage has been postponed indefinitely and I would not be surprised to find her the last one on the list to step off. E. F. D.

Pretty High Hat.

We were living in a small town. A neighbor's daughter went east to study landscape gardening. One evening after her return home my daughter and I, while out walking, passed along where she was busy transplanting a flower that was new to me.

I stopped and asked for the name of it. The young woman looked at me and said. "I know it by its botanical name. If I tell you you will not understand." She stopped, evidently to impress me, then added, "I do not recall the common name." J. T. T.

The Braggart.

A boy in my class in school in a country town had great ideas that he was better and smarter than the rest of the class, always bragging that he would never do manual labor. He was a poet and wrote melting lines for our school paper and essays, or anything oratorical, was always assigned to him

When high school finished his folks sent him to a city school and for years we never heard of him, arthough I watched the papers carefully. I had married one of our town boys and he would say: "Well, if Harold has writen anything great it would surely be in the papers."

Nevertheless, I always held the hope that he wolud be a great writer and was sort of proud that he belonged to our town.

My husband's job changed and we moved to the city. When our furniture was being moved up from the depot I heard a big voice booming out orders on the stairs and soon a man entered with a trunk on his back. As he set it down I almost fell dead, for before me stood the braggart of our school—the poet—Harold. L. B. K.

Self-Recognized Beauty.

A young woman I knew was engaged to marry a widower.

One day I heard her say: "His wife was a wonderful woman; she had a marvelous disposition and a lovely character, but she was mortal homely. No wonder he 'fell for' such a plain looking girl as I am." J. L. B.

The Critic.

A student in our English class distinguished by her poor composition, lack of originality, and unpleasing diction. She did not lack, however, egotism. We were told to write a review on de Maupassant's "The Necklace."

After reading the short story masterpiece, my classmate with the exaggerated ego remarked, disgustedly, "What is there to write about that? I don't think much of the thing. I could write a better story than that myself." F. P. I.

Hardly a Good Sport.

To close an important deal about five lines of typing were needed prior to. All the stenographers were out to lunch except Miss W., of the manager's" office. When the department head sought her assistance Miss W. scornfully replied, "I am the department manager's private secretary. My work is always done by the girls in the outer office. Some of them should be back in about half an hour." F. A. L.

Satisfied with Himself.

My young brother has an idea that he is the best looking boy in the class. Before he goes out he stands before the mirror for about an hour, just looking at himself. One day, after standing before the mirror for some time, he said, "I wonder why I'm so that I'm the only good looking boy in the family." E. L.

MISS ELEANOR WOODRUFF has her moments in "The Dunn van Affair" when the character she acts seeks to clear herself of the suspicion that she murdered Jack Donovan while concealing the fact that she had been indiscreet in her behalf with him.

HOT PAGES FRUM MY DIARY

By Snowshoe Al

Trading Troubles With a Wailing Pill Merchant

YESTERDAY morning I wakes up an' discovers that I am 135 pounds uv assorted aches an' pains, so I got kinda scared, in fact I imagined I kood hear harps playing. For instance, I had a sharp pain in the back uv my head wich led me to believe that one uv my ideas must have collided with a dream an' got busted. Inasmuch as sum uv my ideas are none too clean I figured that maybe an infection had set in, so I decided to beat it for a doctor's office.

It wuz a rotten morning. The clouds must have bet on the wrong horse because they wuz shedding tears wildly. I never saw so much water before, unless it wuz the time I went down an' visited a milk bottling plant. Well, the rain didn't make me feel no better, in fact I immediately located eight more different pains, so I hails a taxi an' starts for the office uv the nearest Prescription Peddler.

"Hurry," sez I to the chauffeur; "I think I'm gonna die!"

THE GUY KICKED OFF

"That reminds me," sez the Gasoline Bandit, laffing heartily; "let me tell yuh about the last guy wot died in this cab. This is really funny! Wen he got in the car he told me he wuz full uv aches an' pains, an' he sed that he—"

"Lay off that stuff!" I squawks. "Yew sure are the original little ray uv golden sunshine."

"But this wuz really a scream," sez he, howling with mirth, at the same time turning a corner on one wheel; "the joke wuz on me! Yew see, this bird kicked off before I kood collect my—"

"Never mind!" sez I, gittin' real huffed up. "In yer spare time yew otta write a 2 reel comedy for the movies! Call it 'The Undertaker's Victory,' an' be sure to put in a couple uv side-splitting situations, such as the widow being left with eight starving childurn, er sum other stuff uv a like nature wich wood make the audience fall out uv their seats."

Jist then we turned another corner, an' one uv the rear wheels came off. For the next 2 minutes the cab offered its own conception uv an elephant on ice skates. We bumped into everything in sight with the exception uv the roofs uv the buildings. Then we kissed a lamp post an' stopped. I got out an' decided that I better walk the remaining short distance to the doctor's office.

A FAT BOZO

"Well," sez I to the chauffeur, as I paid him, "I think I kin guess the rest uv that story about the last bimbo wot died in this hearse uv yers. Good-by, acrobat."

By the time I reached the doc's plase I had discovered several more pains, so I began to wonder who wuz gonna act as pallbearers for me. I breezes into his joint an' the girl in the outer office told me to sit down till she found out if he wuz bizzy. I told her to hurry up because I wuz passing away pritty fast. About fifteen minutes later she came out an' told me he wuzn't bizzy an' that I kood go right in.

The doc wuz a fat bozo with lots uv whiskers. I'll tell both hemispheres he wuzn't bizzy! He wuz sittin' in a chair lookin' out the window, an' he sure had a sad expression on his mug.

"Doc," sez I, "I'm all in! I think I'm all set for a boat-ride over the river Jordan! I have a terrible pain——"

"Yuh know," sez he, turning frum the window with a sigh, "a man is a fool to buy a second hand auto unless he gits it frum a responsible party! Kum here—look out the window. See that car down there? Well, that's mine. Two weeks ago I paid nine hundred smacks for that Gasoline Broncho because I thought it wuz a good car. The egg wot sold it to me has left town. If that's an automobile I am a Pullman porter. Every time I slam the brakes on, a gallon uv ground cork flops out uv the differential! I have to put mustard plasters on the radiator to keep it frum freezing on hot days. The only way I kin keep that engine frum coughing is to paint it with iodine, feed it cod liver oil, an' wrap it up in red flannel! Yessir, I paid out nine hundred frog-skins for that galloping coffee grinder, an' all I got to show for it is a peach uv a windshield surrounded by a hell uv a wreck!"

"Doc," sez I, "pardon me for interrupting yew, but I have a terrible pain in the back uv my head, an' my side hurts an' my legs ache an' my neck is sore an'——"

ARE YOU ANEMIC?

"Yup," sez he, shaking his head sadly, "I sure got a sweet trimming wen I bot that hunk uv junk. Wot gits me so mad is, I kood have added a couple more hundred bucks an' got myself a brand new Blimpus Six! Then I wood have had sumthing for my money. But no, I hadda go an' shoot nine hundred coupons on this lowdown, crippled sneeze-wagon. I tell yuh, it makes a guy sore!"

"Lissen," sez I, "wood it interest yew to know that I have an awful pain in the back uv my head, an' I——"

"O, sit down," sez he; "now, wot seems to be yer trouble?" So I went over all the details again for him. By this time I had also accumulated a nasty head-ache.

"Are yew anemic?" sez he.

"I didn't gitcha," sez I. "Am I a WHO?"

"Are yew anemic?" he repeats.

"That's too deep for me," sez I; "I don't know wot I am. Yuh see, my mother wuz born in Scotland, an' the old man came frum London, but I wuz born in this country, so figure it out yerself."

Then he explains that he wants to know wether er not my blood lacks white corporals, so he takes a needle an' jabs me in the lobe uv my right ear, after wich he put a drop uv blood on a piece uv cotton an' placed it in a funny looking, flat little instrument.

"Wot's that thing, doc?" sez I.

"O," sez he, "this little instrument will tell wether er not yew are anemic."

"Aha!" sez I, "an ouija board! Ask the little instrument if Charley Dawes will run for President."

"Ain't that hell!" sez the doc, gazing at the cute little toy, an' frowning.

"Wot's the matter?" sez I, holding my head wich wuz still hurting.

OW-W! MY BACK!

"It didn't work," sez he; "sumthing is wrong with the mechanizm, doggone it! That's enuff to git a man's goat Yuh see, this machine is manufactured in New York, an' they certainly charge plenty for 'em. But the hell uv it is, if anything goes wrong with it yew mite jist as well buy a new one, because they charge so darn much to fix one that it is absolutely absurd! Well, I suppose I kin bounce this one out the window an' put in an order for a new one for all they care!" He came an' sat down again.

"Doc," sez I, "this head uv mine feels like it wuz going to bust——"

"Beleeve me," sez the Pill Merchant, as he lit a cigar, "if I ever meet the bozo wot sold me that automobile I'm gonna sock him on the head so hard that his shoe laces will break. The more I think uv it, the madder I git. He wuz supposed to be a friend uv mine, so I——"

"Ow-w! My back!" I squawks.

"That reminds me," sez the doc; "yew shood take a look at the back uv that car! It has so many dints in it that it looks like a country road. Go down an' take a look at the permanent waves in them fenders! Crawl underneeth that boat an' take a slant at the condition uv the——"

"Ow-ww-ww!! My head!" I howls.

"O, say," sez Whiskers, "wood yew like to have yer blood pressure tested?"

"I don't care wot yew do!," sez I, gittin' mad.

"Good!" sez he; "we will test yer blood pressure." So he dragged out a goofy lookin' machine in a black case, after wich he wrapped eight feet uv garden hose around my arm an' started squeezing on a small rubber bulb. Then he looked at the machine, muttered sumthing under his breath, an' unwrapped the garden hose.

"Well?" sez I.

"Are you married?" sez he.

"No," sez I.

IMITATION RABBIT

"Yew're lucky," sez he; "don't ever git married! I have the most extravagant wife wot ever dragged a poor simp down a church aisle. If she wuz married to John D. Rockafeller he wood have to run an elevator in the evening in order to help pay the charge accounts wich that baby kin roll up. Now she wants a fur coat! Yuh know, a couple years back, the fur dealers used to dissguise the lowly rabbit's fur an' make swell coats with fancy names. Now it costs yew five hundred bucks to git a good imitation rabbit! Well sir, yesterday morning at breakfast, the Hindrance announced that she wood like to have one uv them new style pony coats. 'But, my dear,' sez I, 'do yew realize that yew weigh 275 pounds à la Ziegfeld's Chorus, an' considerably more wen yew are dressed?' 'Yeh, wot about it?' sez she. 'Well,' sez I, 'where the hell did yew git the idea that a pony is as large as five horses?' Right away she gits peeved, so she picks up the sugar bowl an' slams——"

"Lissen," sez I, "how about that blood pressure test? Wot wuz the answer?"

"O," sez the Prescription Peddler, "I thought I told yew!"

"Yew ain't told me nothing," sez I; "wot wuz the answer?"

"There wuzn't any answer," sez he; "the machine didn't register, so I suppose the darn thing is busted. That's the third time this month it has went flooey. Well, as I wuz saying, the wife picks up the sugar bowl an' slams me with it. I grabbed my hat——"

"Have yew the slightest idea as to wot is the matter with me?" sez I.

"Sure," sez he, "I thought I told yew—yew've got neuritis. As I wuz saying, I grabs my hat——"

"That ain't such a bad idea," sez I. "So long, doc; send me a bill."

THE SAY-SO OF HOLLERAN YELL

by WESTBROOK PEGLER

He Can't Believe League Would Close the Beer Stores.

A GENTLEMAN has been telling me that the Anti-Saloon league is going to pass some kind of a law to close up all the beer stores, but I think the gentleman must be mistaken, because the Anti-Saloon company is doing a big business at present and it would be very bad for the prohibition business to shut up the stores.

"I think you must be nuts, my dear sir," I said to the gentleman, "as the people in the Anti-Saloon league strike me as very smart people and I do not think their mothers ever raised any feeble minded children who would do a thing like that.

"The prohibition people have built up their trade from almost nothing to a national concern in the last few years, and if you will look into the matter you will notice that all this prosperity has come since the country went dry and the beer stores were established.

SOME REAL SERVICE

The gentleman assured me that he was not nuts and said he got his information from a gentleman named Brown who runs a store in the building where he lives.

In our town it is customary for the landlord to make arrangements for a beer store as an accommodation to the tenants and the privilege of running the store is called a concession. Nobody else in the building is supposed to run a store unless it is a very big building, in which case the landlord, after asking for bids among the tenants, may sell a second concession.

I hear a great many people complaining about the Anti-Saloon company, but I must say that I think we are getting a very efficient administration in our building, as the gentleman who runs the concession keeps a good grade of material and makes prompt deliveries and it is much more convenient to send the dough down to the beer store by the dumb waiter and get your order delivered the same way without going out of the house.

Under the law he was supposed to inspect all goods.

POOR SERVICE

I understand that most of these stores are government inspected, because I see the prohibition gentlemen calling around every so often, and if you hear of a store operating on the quiet you are supposed to report it to the Anti-Saloon company, because a place that is not run under the supervision of the prohibition department is likely to sell an inferior grade of goods.

However, this gentleman explained to me that several times lately when he wanted a bag of beer or his old lady wished some cooking gin the material was not delivered. So he investigated and discovered that the gentleman on the next floor below was employed in the prohibition business and he would grab the bag of beer or the tumbler of cooking gin off the dumb waiter as it went by.

So this gentleman went down to complain to his neighbor and the neighbor was very courteous but explained to him that under the law he was supposed to inspect all goods.

"So nowadays," the gentleman said to me, "I do not do any business by dumb waiter but go down to the store myself, and last night Mr. Brown told me about this law."

FOR THE BEER STORES!

Of course, anybody in the beer business is likely to be in close touch with the prohibition people, so it seems to me that it is about time for the people who patronize the beer industry to get together and elect representatives in the Anti-Saloon league. It has been suggested to me that I would make a popular candidate for President, as I am very well informed about beer and such goods. I have given the matter much thought and I have decided that I will give my fellow citizens the benefit of my talents.

I don't know when the Anti-Saloon league holds its primaries or its elections, but I feel sure that it does hold primaries and elections, because it makes quite a number of laws, and anybody who makes laws has to be elected, because this is a democracy.

As a platform I have decided that the beer store is the workingman's club and I will not let the Anti-Saloon company pass any law to close the stores. Although I am not an active workingman because of delicate health, I am what you would call an honorary workingman because my old lady usually has some kind of a job and she tells me a great deal about work.

But still I cannot believe that the Anti-Saloon league would be chump enough to pass this law to close the beer stores just when it is doing the greatest business in its history. It would be too much like the American league passing a law to keep the customers out of the ball yards.

London Hotels Are Going to the Dogs.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON.—London's leading hotels are "going to the dogs," literally, and Fido is having the time of his life. The American tourists have shown an almost universal preference for having some sort of pup with them, and the hostelries have been quick to cater to the whims of their American patrons.

At the exclusive Savoy, for instance, one finds a chic, portable treadmill, operated by electricity, which is brought to the guest's room when the master or mistress is too fatigued to exercise the animal. The pet is placed on the treadmill, the electricity is turned on, and he can run to his heart's content without leaving the room.

In Paris expensive restaurants cater to the canine trade, even to the extent of having special chairs so that the dog can be seated at the same table with his mistress. In these places the dog usually puts away anywhere from $1.50 to $3 worth of food.

Plan Shorter Route to Paris

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON.—American tourists coming to France next year will find new accommodations and a shorter ride to their ultimate destination—Paris. It is practically certain that Havre will replace Cherbourg as the French port of the White Star steamers with the development of an ocean quay in an ideally sheltered situation at the entrance of the port. Its geographical position as the nearest and most convenient port for Paris will probably popularize it among many tourists who dread the stuffy, tiresome train ride from Cherbourg to the French capital.

Henry—I don' see why yo' wanted to mess wid de man's car fo' anyway.

Sam—Henry, why didn't yo' tell me de thing was hot under dere? I didn't see nothin' red hot down dere.

Henry—How yo' think de engine works if it don' git hot?

Sam—When things git as hot as dat thing was dat I took hol' of, dey usu'lly turn red, don' it?

Henry—Well—yo' see dat red sort o' fools yo'. When de sun is shinin' on it, it don' look red in de light but it feels red.

Sam—Where did de man say dis doctah's office was?

Henry—It's jus' down heah one mo' block—right on de cornah—upstairs.

Sam—Henry, yo' knows how I hates to go to see a doctah, too, don' yo'? I'se scared to death o' doctahs.

Henry—Ain't no use to be scared of 'em. Dey don' nevah come aftah yo'—ev'vybody goes aftah dem.

Sam—Dat sho' is de truth. If dey was aftah yo', dey'd chase yo', wouldn't dey.

Henry—Not only chase yo'—but dey'd git yo'.

Sam—Dis heah han' sho' do hurt. An' by grabbin' hol' o' dat hot spark plug, dat done keep me from gittin' a job.

Henry—Well—dat's a'right. Dis heah doctah'll fix yo' up down heah.

Sam—When de doctah fix my han' an' de han' gits well, we gotta go back down to de stockyards an' git dat job. Dat certainly is a clean place down dere. I thought dey was goin' have animals layin' all 'round de place.

Henry—We was down dere when it was quiet. Dey don' staht fightin' de animals 'til latah in de day. Why don' yo' tell de man when yo' go back down dere dat yo' wanna be a bull figtah?

Sam—I don' wanna fight no bull. I don' wanna mess 'round wid none. I don' even wanna eat off'n a red tablecloth while I'm down dere. I don' wan' no bulls messin' 'round me.

Henry (approaching the doctor's office)—Heah's de doctah's office up heah. Whut is de doctah's name?

Sam—Doctah Johnson.

Henry—Heah 'tis—right heah—Doctah Johnson. He's a M. D. an' a sturgeon.

Sam—What do dat mean, Henry?

Henry—Dis ain't no time fo' arguments.

Sam—Well, I wanna know whut kin' o' doctah I'se goin' to.

Henry—You'll fin' out aftah he finish messin' wid yo' han'. (Sam hesitates about going on.) Come on—whut yo' stoppin' 'bout?

Sam—I don't like whut yo' jus' said 'bout him bein' a M. D. an' a sturgeon.

Henry (as they reach the entrance of the building)—Well—come on— let's go up de stairs heah.

Sam—Henry, I'se scared to go up de stairs dere. Read de sign again.

Henry (looking up at the doctor's sign)—I done read de sign once. It say "M. D. and a sturgeon—office hours from three to five"—yo' jus' in time. De clock up de street say half pas' three.

Sam (standing in front of building)—Henry, yo' gotta lot o' sense, ain't yo'? Heah's one time I goin' to ask yo', to lemme do de talkin'?

Henry—Whut yo' mean, yo' goin' ask me to let yo' do de talkin'?

Sam—Well, it's like dis, Henry. Whenevah we gits mixed up in a biz'ness deal, yo' us'ally doos de talkin' an I don' say much. But dis time de biz'ness is 'bout me so I goin' ask yo' to lemme do de talkin'.

Henry—Don' make no diff'ence to me how much yo' talk. I ain't goin' say a thing to de doctah. Go on—tell him wuhtevah yo' wanna tell him.

Sam—A'right, Henry, I go up dere den. When it come to talk to de doctah now, lemme do de talkin'.

Henry—Dat's a'right wid me. I ain't gonna say nothin'. (As he starts up the stairs.) Come on, let's git up heah—let's git in out o' de cold heah.

Sam—Well, dat's a'right, Henry. Don' yo' say nothin'. Come on— let's git up de steps heah. Dis heah han' hurts an' I don' want de doctah's messin' wid it if he's gonna hurt me.

Henry—I don' wanna sit in dis doctah's office all day now. Tell de man whut's de mattah wid yo' when we git up dere so he kin fix yo' up.

Sam (stopping in front of doctor's office)—Is dis de place heah?

Henry—Dis is de doctah's office a'right. It say on de door—"walk in."

Sam—Well, come on—let's go in heah den.

Henry (entering the doctor's office)—Take off yo' hat!

Sam (to man sitting in the doctor's waiting room)—Is de doctah in, mistah?

Man—Yes, he's busy right now. I'm waiting for him myself.

Sam (to Henry)—I guess we bettah sit down, Henry.

Henry—Take a seat ovah dere den by dat stove.

Sam—Henry, come on—sit down heah. Don' fo'git now, Henry, lemme do de talkin' when de doctah come out.

Henry—Dat's a'right wid me. Yo' go 'head—do all de talkin' yo' want.

Sam—Henry, whut do dat "M. D." stan' fo'? Dat's de firs' thing I wanna know.

Henry (in his know-it-all way)—Well—some doctahs is M. D.'s an' some doctahs is N. D.'s.

Sam—M. D.s an' N. D.'s? Whut's de diff'ence between M. D.'s an' N. D.'s, Henry?

Henry—De N's come aftah de M's. Don' yo' 'member de alphabet? J—K—O—M—N?

Sam—Whut do it stan' fo'?

Henry—Well, de M. D.'s is Mean Doctahs an' de N. D.'s is Nice Doctahs.

Sam—Whut did dis sign downstairs on de door say?

Henry—Dis one's a M. D.

Sam (getting up)—Come on, Henry, let's go. De han' is bettah.

Henry—Come on, now—sit down heah. SIT BACK DOWN IN DAT CHAIR!

Sam—Henry, yo' done got me scared o' dis heah doctah. I don' want him messin' 'roun' wid my han' if he's a mean doctah.

Henry—De doctah ain't gonna hurt yo'. De doctah kin fix yo' up widout yo' feelin' it. De only thing yo' don' wanna do is to argue wid de doctah.

Sam (sees the doctor's private office door opening)—Dere's de doctah's door openin' now. LOOKIT DERE! Dere's a man wid de doctah on crutches. (In whisper to Henry.) Listen to de doctah—let's heah whut he say.

Doctor (to patient)—Well, I think I can release you within another month. I want you to feel, Mr. Jones, it was the only thing that I could do when I cut off your leg. Human nature is a vary peculiar thing. Just think, that a little ingrown toenail caused me to amputate your leg.

Sam (getting excited)—Awa—awa—Henry, did yo' heah dat? De man's toenails stahted growin' backwards an' dey had to cut his leg off. If dat man had-a stepped on a piece o' glass, de doctah would-a had to cut his throat. (Getting up again.) Let's git out o' dis heah place.

Henry—Sit down now! Take yo' time—keep yo' seat. De thing we gotta do is to git out o' heah in a Democratic way.

Sam—Well—let's tell him we is Democrats an' leave.

Henry—Sit down now—take yo' time—de doctah ain't finished wid' dat one-legged man yet. He's liable to cut his othah leg off.

Sam—Henry, I'se 'bout to faint. I'se gittin' scared—I feel weak.

Henry—Go 'head—faint. Faint on de floor though—don' faint on me.

Sam—Henry, I IS gittin' scared now. Let's git out o' heah

Henry—How we gonna git out o' heah now? Dere's de doctah standin' up dere.

Henry, I'se 'bout to faint.

Sam—Henry, we gotta do whut yo' said. We gotta git out o' heah in a Democratic way. I'se so scared I don' know whut to do.

Henry—Well now, you'se de one dat was so smart a while ago an' wanted to all de talkin'. I ain't goin' say a word. I'll jus' listen to whut yo' say.

Sam—Whut I gonna do, Henry? Whut I gonna do heah? I don' want de doctah cuttin' off my han.'

Henry—Don' tell me yo' troubles. I don' know whut yo' goin' to do. (As the patient starts to leave the office.) Dat one-legged man's gettin' ready to leave now.

Sam—Henry, I'se scared to death. I gotta git out o' dis mess. Dat certainly is a mean-looking sookin' doctah—I don' like his looks.

Henry (seeing the doctor over toward him)—Well, heah comes doctah ovah heah now. Tell him yo' pin'—tell him somepin'.

Doctor (to Sam and Henry)—Now, gentlemen, something I can do for you?

Sam (very nervous and excited)—Ye-ye-yessah, mistah. Wi-wi-will you tell us where de postoffice is?

Doctor (very much surprised)—Do you mean the main postoffice or the station?

Sam—Any postoffice, mistah. I jus' wanna do is git out o' heah as quick as de postoffice quick.

Doctor—There's a substation two blocks down the street.

Sam (jumping up and starting for door, followed by Henry)—Thank you, mistah—thank yo'. Come on, Henry. Let's git on out o' heah.

Henry (on their way down the steps)—Wait a minute—wait a minute. I ain't neveah seen nobody as crazy as yo' is. Whut is de mattah wid yo'? Another thing, yo' done run away an' lef' yo' hat in dere.

Sam (continuing on his way)—I'll stay dere, Henry. Let it stay dere. I'd ruther lost a hat dan a man any day.

CLEVER JUDGE.

Not all Englishmen drop their "h's." To many of them such cliches as "'ot" and "'ouse" sound as ant as they do to us. The story was so smart a while ago an' wanted ing to do with a horse was brought to all de talkin'. I ain't goin' say a before Justice Darling, and the plaintiff's attorney kept referring to the animal as a "oarse."

Justice Darling stood it as long he could, then he said: "Mr. X., the animal a large horse or a pony?"

"Oh, a little one, my lord."

"Then, Mr. X, for the remainder the case let us call it a pony."—Boston Transcript.

THEY LOOK THAT WAY.

A woman's hat was blown off in a London street and run over by a bus. On recovering it, we understand, she wore it home and was the envy of every woman she met, as they all thought she had the very latest vagabond style.—London Humorist.

A BRIDEGROOM'S PLEA.

Judge—"Although you are only just married you have beaten your young wife cruelly. Have you anything to say in your defense."

Accused—"No, your honor, except that if you send me to prison you will interrupt my honeymoon."—P'st, Constantinople.

Yank's "System" Wins at Cannes.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

CANNES.—John Cornell of Chicago has just come through with flying colors at the Casino here, as the result of playing a system that is unique in the history of methods to break the bank. Every American who visits Cannes has his own pet plan, but John's netted him $8,000 in one evening, and that ought to prove something or other.

Here is his system and how he discovered it:

Passengers on the Dover-Calais ferry are treated to an odd sight as they enter the French port. Hundreds of porters race up and down the dock, shouting wildly at the tourists and pointing to numbered badges on their shirt fronts. The tourist is supposed to choose his porter and call for him by number when the boat docks. Mr. Cornell choose two porters, Nos. 13 and 34. They took such good care of him in getting him through the customs and securing for him a choice seat on the boat train that he was favorably impressed.

Later, at the Casino, the service of the French porters came to him mind and the numbers on their badges kept recurring. Following the hunch, the American played numbers 13 and 34 exclusively through the evening and walked out of the Casino $8,000 richer than he was when he entered.

Chinese Desire Their Dinosaur Eggs

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PEKING.—In the midst of all the political troubles that have been engrossing the Chinese leaders some leading lights have paused to tell Roy Chapman Andrews, the American explorer, that he must return the eggs he brought back to America with him more than a year ago. They are quite sure Mr. Andrews hasn't eaten the eggs, and if by some quirk of nature they have hatched these earnest archaeologists want the little dinosaurs. The Chinese archaeological bodies have issued a joint protest against the carrying off of Chinese art treasures by foreign explorers and have taken particular exception to Mr. Andrews' appropriation of some choice dinosaur eggs, which now repose somewhere in America.

Yank Popcorn Delights Czechs

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PRAGUE.—Natives of this Czecho-Slovakian capital are marveling at the new "magic food of the Americans." They stand about the American exhibit at the fair grounds wide eyed with wonder as the attendant lays kernels of corn over glowing wood coals, and gaze fascinated as the yellow corn blossoms forth into snow white clusters that are drenched with melted butter and passed to their eager, outstretched hands. Popcorn has never before been known in this country, and the Czechs are delighted with the new confection. The American consul here presided at the first popping bee and showed the natives how to prepare the corn.

A REUNION

Miss Florence Forman

Vincent Murray

A BROTHER and sister, separated in babyhood, will meet again when Harry Carroll's revue comes to the Palace theater this week, according to a veracious press agent. In the Carroll company is Florence Forman, specialty dancer. Out at Great Lakes naval training school is Private Vincent Lloyd Murray of the aviation corps. They are brother and sister but the two have not seen each other since they were kids together in Canada, 5 and 6 years old, respectively. The family was broken up, young Murray being brought up by an older brother living in Seattle, while Miss Forman went to live with an older sister in New York where she acquired a stage name as well as the reputation of being a champion high kicker.

ABOUT BROADWAY

Gay Jesters and Their Pranks

By Mark Hellinger

NEW YORK.—(Special Correspondence.)—As long as the ha ha is on the other fellow your average Broadwayite can laugh louder and longer than any other class of people in the world. The big alley is fairly infested with what is commonly known as practical jokers. And these gentlemen can always be counted upon to make life as miserable as they can for you.

HARPO MARX of the Four Marx Brothers, whose favorite practical joke is to leave a friend for a miserable quarter of an hour in an old warehouse after a fake liquor raid.

If you travel in the Broadway set you are certain to hear of some new prank each and every day. The best of friends will sometimes go to any extremes to make each other uncomfortable. Just why this should be we have never been able to figure out. And who would care if we did?

Sometimes the jokes are simple and speedily effective. A fake telegram, a disguised phone call, an anonymous letter — and the laugh is over. But sometimes the jests are lengthy and involved. They go on for weeks and weeks before the denouement But the laughs—so called—are worth the wait.

BEER FOR BAIT

Some are mild. Some are good. Some are cruel. Take a look at a few of them.

Of recent years, with the liquor situation in such a deplorable condition, the good old bottle has naturally been the bait in a number of practical jokes. One of the best known of the lot is the Coney island stunt. And it has rarely failed to work. Three or four men will drive along Broadway in a car and pick up a prospective victim. He is asked if he would care to come along for a glass of good beer. Nine times out of ten the victim asks how far he will have to go. Upon being told that the spot is just across the bridge—a ten minute drive—the victim hops in the car. He is, of course, a friend of the men in the car.

The machine is driven to Brooklyn. But it fails to stop. The minutes fly by and so do the miles. Every five minutes or so the victim will invariably pull out his watch and inquire as to where the devil he is being hauled to. And he is always told that it is just another five minutes away.

Finally, after an hour's drive, the car pulls into a certain spot in Coney island. The victim gets out of the car and usually states that no beer in the world is worth that long ride. But, as long as he's there, he'll have some just the same. He is taken through a long, dark hallway. The leader, whom the victim is always made to follow, raps at a door. The door opens. The leader steps back. And the victim is given a sudden push into the blackness beyond.

Howling with terror, the victim finds himself falling down and down and down. He doesn't know it, of course, but he is sliding down one of Coney island's longest shoot-the-chutes. After a minute of this—and it must seem like an eternity—the victim slides into the light in front of his friends. He is generally bruised and terrified. And his friends laugh hysterically. Then, the gag over, they take him out and get him his beer. By that time, it's ten to one the victim can't drink it.

Just another Broadway prank.

A WAREHOUSE PRANK

Along similar lines is the joke that was frequently perpetrated by the four Marx brothers during their recent run in New York in "The Cocoanuts." It was played on practically every literary celebrity in town, and it is safe to state that none of them has ever forgotten it. The basis of this gag was more than a glass of beer. It was a whole case of liquor. And the liquor was painted in such rosy colors by Mr. Harpo Marx that prospective victims never failed to nibble at the bait.

The liquor was supposed to be government stuff that was secreted in a large warehouse on the lower east side. A car, generally driven by Harpo, called for the victim and guided him to the warehouse. Guided him is hardly the proper word—for the car was taken in and out of various streets until the poor victim had but a hazy idea of where he was.

After many rappings and tappings, a small door is finally swung open. There is a sudden blowing of a police whistle, a sharp crying of, "police," and the victim is pushed into the gloomy spaces of the warehouse. He is, it goes without saying, alone. For his friends have gone through another entrance to watch the fun.

The victim, unused to the weird darkness, is afraid to cry out for assistance. His first thought is that the police are on the outside and that his friends—including Harpo—are fleeing rapidly. He is deliberating on the best course to follow when he sees a startling figure approaching him. The figure is a man, some six feet tall and one of the homliest individuals that ever trod the earth. He is a combination of Bull Montana and Lon Chaney at their worst. In his eyes is the gleam of the maniac. And he carries a huge baseball bat on his shoulder.

From then on, the sport depends on the victim. If he tries to talk, he is silenced at once. If he tries to run, he trips within three seconds. If he tries to stand still, he is prodded with the bat. No matter what he does, he is wrong. The sport is kept up for some ten or twelve minutes. Then the warehouse door is suddenly opened and the victim runs out and away in nothing flat.

He rarely reports for work on the following day.

A JOKE THAT FAILED

Professional practical jokesters are few and far between. In order to at all coats. Most men with this talent play poker for a living.

Frank Libuse, a discovery of Vincent Lopez, is unquestionably the most successful worker of this kind in New York today. His specialty is annoying people who are assembled at banquets.

He is not a speechmaker. Dressed as a waiter, he bumps into diners, be successful at this business, a man must be able to keep a straight face pushes them this way and that, seats them at wrong tables, falls into women's laps, put down celery and yanks it away just as some diner is reaching for it—and so on and so forth. During these operations, he never fails to keep up the noble standard of a perfectly dumb expression. He is successful—because he succeeds in getting people angry while others laugh.

Libuse had a forerunner in this field, but his name escapes us at the present writing. We want to tell a little story about him. So, for the sake of clarity, we'll call him Mike. Mike was not quite as rough as Libuse. He spoke to people, which is something that Libuse does not go in for. It was Mike's specialty to dress himself as a head waiter and then annoy diners by whispering to them. Picking his target, he would slide next to him.

"That's the wrong fork," Mike would whisper. And the diner, mortified beyond words, would quickly put down the fork he was using and pick up another.

Only once did Mike's fork trick fail to have the slightest effect. That episode came to pass during a huge Hebrew banquet at the Hotel Pennsylvania some five years ago. Mike had been engaged for the occasion and was told to pick particularly upon a well known cloak and suiter. As soon as possible, he walked behind the Hebrew and told him he was using the wrong fork. The cloak and suiter paid no attention. He kept right on eating.

"That's the wrong fork," said Mike, a bit louder.

The cloak and suiter speared a piece of butter with the same fork. He looked up at Mike.

"Nu," he cried, "do me sometink!"

THE FALSE ARREST

False arrest often furnishes the climax for a practical joke. One of the best illustrations of this type of jest occurred some five months back and was played upon one of the city's foremost ear, eye and throat specialists.

The doctor in question sat in his home one night and entered into a discussion of night life. With him at the time were Kathryn Ray, Jack Osterman, Milton Shubert and several others. The doctor asserted that night life held no thrills for a man of his knowledge. "What's the use of going to these places?" he remarked in an excellent professional manner. "I have seen all there is to be seen. There is nothing in any of these night clubs that can give me any sort of a kick."

Unseen by the doctor, winks and nods were exchanged. He was finally prevailed upon to accompany the crowd to a certain spot in Harlem. And fifteen minutes later found the whole party in a colored cabaret.

The good doctor's first shock arrived when a pretty colored damsel sat herself beside him and began gently to pat his hand. He looked about him foolishly, but lacked the courage to tell the little lady to leave him alone. His second shock arrived soon after. An extremely tough looking Negro came leaping through the door and pulled the doctor's chair out from under him.

"Ah knows yo'," cried the Negro to the doctor. "Yo' de man dats been chasin' mah wife. Ah comes in heah an' finds yo' sitting wif her. Ah'm gonna punch yo' right in de nose."

Some one blew a police whistle. Two burly policemen rushed into the place. And they forthwith arrested the good doctor who, by this time, was no good at all. White and stammering, he protested his innocence. But to no avail. Prodding him with their nightsticks, the policemen led the physician up the stairs and the street.

A few minutes later the doctor was released. It was, of course, a frame up from the beginning. The doctor went home, took several pills and went to bed.

He hasn't discussed practical jokers since.

Yes, Roscoe, you'll find plenty practical jokers along the way. Plenty of laughs. Plenty of them. Plenty of funny twists.

That's one way of looking at it, Roscoe. We have our own opinion. They can jest and laugh from now until doomsday. To us, it's still the saddest street in the world.

THE FAMOUS JALOPPI SEDAN

By W. M. Schwimmer

[A vindication of Oliver Wendell Holmes' "One-Hoss Shay."]

Have you heard of the famous jaloppi sedan?
It wheezed and it sneezed ev'ry time that it ran,
It squeaked and it creaked 'till I shrieked, "What a can!"
The rasping and gasping would wreck any man!
That auto was built in so careless a way,
It went just exactly three months to a day,
When all of a sudden, it broke down, but stay,
Have you heard such a sap situation I say?

The brake was a fake and the pistons were worse,
The gears were the kind that would grind in reverse,
They clanged and just banged and then clanged—what a curse!
The car was a pain, just a drain on my purse!
She had quite a cranky pestiferous clutch,
The tires were so worn that they needed a crutch,
The fenders were bent, and the horn was in Dutch,
'Twas truly a "tin you would not love to touch!"

Disaster came faster than looked for—a crash!
The bus had a fuss with a lamppost—quite rash,
That mean hunk of junk went kerplunk with a clash,
Then just must have bust, for the car now was trash.
No crocodile tears were emitted that day,
No sad lamentations of plaintive dismay,
For here's my decision, my purpose I say
Is back to the trustworthy old one-hoss shay!

TOURING THE OLD TANK TOWNS - - - - - By Joe Dorney

Tales of the Days When Road Shows Played "the Sticks"

THERE have been many wonderful changes in theatrical and circus life during the last two decades, but none so remarkable, perhaps, as in the smaller cities of the country, or, as show people loved to call them, the "tank towns." In the early years of the present century cities of from 3,000 to 20,000 population could seldom boast of more than one place of amusement, always referred to as the "opery house." Once a week or once in two weeks a traveling show would be booked in it. It might be a "blood and thunder" drama, a New York musical comedy success with a small town cast, or a burlesque show, but it was always a big event and the town would be waiting at the railroad station or the Commercial hotel for a "close-up" of "them show gals and actor fellars."

On nights when no traveling company was to appear the "opery house" might be used for home talent plays, church socials, or political meetings. But with the coming of moving pictures these conditions changed immediately, and far seeing business men made haste to erect substantial theaters. With their opening the old wooden "opery house," usually upstairs over the general store, became a thing of the past.

THE PRE-MOVIE DAYS

My stories of theatrical and circus life will cover the period just preceding the event of motion pictures and will be true incidents of the "big tops" and "hall" shows of those days.

"Opery house" stage hands were always the bane of the traveling manager's life. He carried his own, anywhere from two to seven or eight, according to the size of his show and the amount of scenery used, but by the terms of the playing contract the house had to furnish enough men to load and unload the show, shift scenes, work the fly gallery, etc.

When a show arrived at the theater there were usually twenty or thirty men and boys ready to act as "stage hands." They'd carry in the scenery and work between the acts. During the performance the entrances were so jammed with them that the show people had a hard time getting "on" to answer their cues. But with the final curtain how they would scatter! And by the time the traveling stage hands started to take down their drops not one of them could be found. They had seen the show without paying, and that was all they wanted.

The heroine shook off her chains and walked off-stage

One property man, however, of a rather heavy musical comedy had a way of getting the better of these "stage hands." He carried an extra property trunk with the show baggage, and the town boys who wanted to "work" the show had to check their coats and hats with him before they were permitted to get on the stage. He would lock these coats and hats in the property trunk and the owners could only redeem them at the door of the baggage car after the show was loaded for the next "jump."

RIVAL THEATERS

A prosperous coal mining town of Pennsylvania boasted of two theaters, one a vaudeville house and the other for "combinations," as traveling shows were called. It was a good town from a box office standpoint, and the house managers had little trouble booking good acts and shows. Melodramas were the most popular, and everything from "Alone in London" to "The Heart of Chicago" was seen there, always playing to capacity business.

One time "Shadows of a Great City," or some such production, was appearing at the melodrama house. The Burke Brothers, famous Irish and Jewish comedians of those days, were topliners at the vaudeville theater. Their Hebrew makeup consisted of well worn Prince Albert coats, "high water" trousers, big shoes, and ancient hats. They wore long, black beards and sang Jewish songs and parodies.

In the melodrama at the other playhouse was a "tank" scene wherein the villain and his dastardly hirelings chain the heroine to the floor of a dungeon near an East river, New York, dock. As they make their exit through a trap door in the roof the villain turns and hisses:

"There, my proud beauty, in three minutes the tide will rise and no power on earth can save you!"

Then through a round hole that looks like the end of a sewer water begins to flow into the dungeon. From the front of the house it seemed as though several hundred gallons a minute were pouring in on the hapless girl. The floor of the dungeon was covered with a rubber carpet with a two or three inch bank around it. Only an inch or two of water would cover the rubber carpet. By that time the hero would come diving through the hole in the wall and rescue the girl. Loud applause and curtain.

AN ANTI-CLIMAX

It was a custom among the performers at both theaters to visit back and forth in their makeups. When any one had a few minutes to spare he would drop over to the other house to watch a bit of the show. The Burke brothers, waiting for their cue in the Jewish makeup, had crossed over to the melodrama house. They arrived just as the water began pouring into the dungeon. Then, seized with a practical joke impulse, they climbed into the dungeon and walked down through the water to the front of the stage and began singing "Rachel Goldstein," a Jewish comic song.

Up to this time the audience, consisting mostly of women and children—it being a matinée—was in tears at the threatened fate of the beloved heroine. A minute later they were howling with delight at the funny song and the antics of the Burke brothers. Off stage the hero was cursing at the interruption. The heroine herself got tired of waiting to be rescued, tossed off her chains, and walked off stage. The Burke brothers, finishing their song, made their exit and hastened over to their own theater to do their act.

The audience in the melodrama house was in an uproar. Speeches by the manager and some of the actors did no good. They wanted an encore from the Burke brothers and refused to be quiet until the manager went to the other theater and begged the comedians to come over once more and pacify his patrons. This they did.

"TURKEY" SHOWS

IN the old days, before actors, managers, and advance agents learned to save their money, it was a custom for some of them to club together and take out what was known as a "turkey" show, a small company hastily put together, and book it at the summer resorts and other places. The name of the show didn't matter. Whatever billing matter a show printing concern would have in stock would do.

In the summer of 1903 two of us who had just closed with our regular company took out such a show. We were fortunate in getting "dates" of a week each in Milwaukee, Minneapolis, and St. Paul, and then played one nighters through Wisconsin and Minnesota. Our company consisted of about ten girls and three or four men. It was booked under a high class musical comedy title, the posters and lithographs of which we had purchased from a Chicago show printing house.

We had a prosperous summer season and our final week, early in August, was played at a street railway park near Marinette, Wis. All of us were signed with regular shows and we were due to leave for New York to begin rehearsals about that time. We had made arrangements to leave Marinette for Chicago the following Sunday morning. About the middle of the week the manager of the park asked us to stay and play an extra Sunday. My partner and myself put it up to the company, but they refused. They were tired of the long summer work and wanted a short rest before starting the regular show season.

WELL PLANNED

Only two persons were willing to stay over a day and play the extra Sunday night. They were a man and wife who did an acrobatic act. Neither could do much else. The woman worked in the chorus and the man had a dumb part in the show. We told the manager, but he begged us to fix up some kind of a show, as he couldn't get anything for Sunday night, which always meant capacity at the park theater. We called this one act that would stay over—it was known as "the Flying Franks"—and put the proposition up to it. The two agreed to do their best to give a show. We told the park manager we would give him a Sunday night show for $300. He agreed.

The remainder of the company left for Chicago Sunday morning, but the park manager didn't know that. We bought railroad tickets and Pullman accommodations on the train which left Marinette Sunday evening. By eight o'clock that night a misty rain started and the large park theater was packed. By show time, 8:30 o'clock, aisles and every other part of the place was filled. We got our $300 and started for the town. The Flying Franks were instructed to go as far as they could with a show, then "beat it" to the depot and meet us behind the freight station a half block from the passenger depot.

They began doing their regular act again in their street clothes.

With the opening of the "show" the Franks did their act, which was good, and stretched it out as long as they could. Then the woman came out alone and tried to sing a song. She had a terrible voice and was hissed off the stage. Then the man came out and tried to do a monologue. It was awful. He had a peculiar lisp in his voice and no one could understand what he was talking about. He didn't know himself, he was so rattled.

A GRAND FRACAS

He had instructed his wife to pack their grips and be ready for a hasty exit. She did so. By this time the audience, those who were not hissing and hooting, were starting to leave the theater. The rain had turned into a downpour and they were forced back.

As a finals to the show the "Flying Franks" in their street clothes began doing their regular act again. Missiles began coming up on the stage, and some of the audience began following. But the "Flying Franks" were athletes and reached the stage door first. They had planned their route to the depot well and despite their grips, in the rain and darkness they managed to outstrip their pursuers.

Fifteen minutes later they joined us back of the freight station where we crouched in the rain until the 10:10 flyer came along. We climbed on the back platform of the last car and didn't leave it until we were at least ten miles out.

We never took a "turkey" show to Wisconsin again.

A MONOLOGUE STAGE

SHOWS making the coast by way of St. Louis, Kansas City, and Omaha, usually played three one nighters out of Omaha and into Cheyenne, Wyo., for the last half of the week. North Platte, Neb., on the main line of the Union Pacific railroad, was a favorite stopping off place. It had one serious hadicap. The opera house seated 1,000, which was plenty large enough for the town, but the stage was so small there was room for only a monologue act. In time, managers with any kind of productions passed up North Platte, and either played some other town or laid off for the night.

The manager, one of the old school type, didn't realize that a stage big enough for the shows of 1880 would hardly do for the larger attractions of the twentieth century. After his house had remained dark for weeks at a time he decided something must be done, and that something was to build a new theater. This he did, using the space for the new house he used for the old. But instead of a large auditorium and small stage, he built an immense stage and a tiny auditorium. I believe the seating capacity was about 450. I only knew of a few stages that could compare with that North Platte "platform." Those were the Hippodrome and Metropolitan Opera House in New York and the Auditorium in Chicago. "Ben Hur" would have been lost on it.

THE OWNER'S REPLY

The first time I went to the coast after this house was completed I was business manager of "The Rose of Panama," a musical comedy carrying seventy-five people and an immense amount of scenery. We were booked at North Platte, and when I arrived I went back stage to look it over. I was thrilled. It was the first stage I had seen since we left New York on which we could set up all our scenery. I congratulated the old manager, whom I had met many times before. Then I went to the footlights and took a glance out front. I could almost have shaken hands with the doortender had there been one there at that time of day.

"You certainly have a fine stage here," I said to the manager, "but where do you put your audiences? We have to play to at least 2,000 persons at top prices to break even. You [illegible] seat 500 out there."

"Well," he drawled, "show [illegible] have been kicking about the [illegible] my stage so long that I decided [illegible] build a big one, and I did."

"Yes," I said, "but where are [illegible] going to put the audience?"

"Don't worry, my boy," [illegible] reply. "It is plenty big enough, [illegible] never filled it yet."

And that was cheerful news to [illegible] pilot of a show with a salary list [illegible] $2,200 a day.

Six Months for Bribing Police

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON.—Chicagoans who think nothing of stopping the speed cop's pencil by laying a bill on the summons book and those who have learned to settle their controversies and pay their fines without the formality of a judge and clerk should be interested to note the reaction such an offer has in England.

An English laborer who was found guilty of making a corrupt gift of a few silver coins to two police constables at the Goodwood races was sentenced to six months of hard labor and the two policemen drew similar sentences. Justice Horridge, who tried the case, professed amazement that such a condition could exist.

Soon after this incident a young Stepney shopkeeper was sentenced at the Thames Police court to three months of hard labor and fined when he attempted to bribe two constables with a ten shilling note each to induce them to refrain from reporting him for allowing a gambling machine on his premises. This time, however, the constables, in righteous indignation, reported him, it is said, and undoubtedly strengthened their positions with the force.

UNFORTUNATE.

Bride—O, yes, indeed it did. Dian't you get my letter? It's perfectly adorable, and—er—we're taking it with us on our honeymoon.—London Punch.

Cocktail Contest On in Vienna.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

VIENNA.—The "old timers" of this capital, who were in the habit of sitting at the coffee houses, sipping their drinks and amusedly watching the attractive American girls hurry along the walk and into American bars, have been roused from their lethargic state by those same Yankees they treated with an indifferent air. Some enterprising Yank started a competition to discover new cocktails, one for men and one for women, and offering to the winner the immortal glory of having the drink named after him. Bars have become as laboratories. The spotless kitchens of the staid old homes reek with pungent odors and are littered with bottles and essences. Here is one assignment in which the Viennese will not be outdone. Meanwhile, if the judges last, some one will be declared the winner. Since every one wants to be a judge, the supply ought to weather the worst mistakes.

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

Woman Can Gratify Her Desire for the Picturesque This Spring, for Paris Is Sponsoring Costumes with Motifs from Any and All Epochs of History.

By Bettina Bedwell.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—Paul Poiret said to me recently, "Every woman loves the picturesque and decorative in dress." It has been a secret love of late years, for picturesqueness has been the ingredient missing from the mixture of women's styles these last few seasons. We have borne our bereavement with astonishing fortitude, wearing our simple, nonromantic, straight styles as if we had no other desires in the clothes line.

However, I think Poiret is right and that we do like a certain touch of the picturesque in our clothes when it can be had without sacrificing chic. There are few women who are indifferent enough or have sufficient effrontery to affect such clothes when they are contrary to current styles. But given a chance to get herself up for a fancy dress party or carnival, any woman will have the time of her life rigging out a costume. So the introduction of this element into our regular clothes by Paris this spring is bound to have a lot of feminine supporters.

Fashions have been gradually veering around to the picturesque for some time. This movement has been given the caption of "the return to femininity." Not that we have actually been absent from it, but we have been rather meek and manlike lately in our slavishness to standardized clothes, which were often as unbecoming to us individually as men's clothes are to them at times. With bows, laces, scarfs, and sashes returned as part of more feminine fashions, it is a simple step to introduce the genuine character of the picturesque into the mode. This, Paris is doing in her own special way.

There are no radical alterations, as I have said before, of silhouette lines, but there are details that recall more romantic periods and fashions, and it is these that give the greatest charm to our new spring fashions. Paris hasn't gotten a complex on some particular period of history, such as Second Empire, or Directoire, or other, using it throughout the spring mode. Each house will show bits of perhaps a dozen different periods, so you can choose the one, two, or three having the greatest appeal to you. In fact, so broad is the scope of the spring mode, you could add something out of your own pet period and, if you were clever enough, get away with it beautifully, even if Paris never thought of doing it.

There is an epoch in American history that has a special lure for the French, and they never tire of it, and that is the vanishing epoch of the cowboy and the big cattle ranches. So it is inevitable, in this revival of the picturesque, that they should seize upon something from the cowboy for their spring fashions. They took the handkerchief and put it on the Parisian sports costume. Parisiennes love to wear these big soft handkerchiefs around their necks, and no cowboy dolling up in his bandanna for a community shindig can tie one more expertly than these ladies of France. I suspect this handkerchief revival is going to be one of the greatest die-hards that fashions ever saw.

The cowboy bandanna comes back into the Paris mode, worn with a jumper of green reptile and skirt of green mouslikasha.

Stiff gold satin, lined with lame and trimmed with green fox fur, makes this unusual Drecoll evening coat, worn over a dress of yellow georgette embroidered with green and gold beads.

The romantic sixties are recalled in this dance dress of pink crepe georgette with overskirt of ruffled black dotted net.

A distinctive afternoon dress from Drecoll is made of green-blue crepe, with straight waist, wide sleeves, and a skirt plaited in front and tiered in back.

Our first model, a sports dress from Drécoll, shows one way of using the handkerchief. It has a side buttoning jumper waist of some kind of reptile, marked like an alligator and green like a lizard, with a belt of black patent and a gold buckle. The buttons are of green bone. The skirt buttons at the side front to the hips, from which point a deep double plait is inserted. It is of green mouslikasha, a kasha with a mousseline finish. The handkerchief is of green foulard, striped with darker green, and can be draped in any fashion desired.

At the opposite side of our sketch is another Drécoll model that shows another kind of picturesqueness, taken from the colonial costume. This is an afternoon frock of heavy silk crêpe that is a cross between crêpe de chine and maroeain. It is the new color that Drécoll calls "bleu d'orage," or storm blue, that pale greenish blue that appears in the sky just before a hailstorm.

The straight waist, with its row of enamel buttons, and its sleeves, which flare markedly from the elbow to the fitted cuff, are distinctive notes in the Drécoll collection. No less original is the skirt, which is plaited in front and composed of two tiers in back. These tiers flare slightly at the sides. Drécoll puts the waistline very near normal, but just enough below to give a great deal more charm than the real normal line has. This line is marked by a black belt that has a jeweled buckle.

The evening dress next this model takes its cue from still another of the romantic periods—the good old days when grandma was a girl. It also revives a fabric that has not been seen for more years than you can remember, and that is black dotted net. The waist of this dance frock is made of pink georgette, and the round neck and armholes are piped with self material. From a diagonal waist line that is marked by a crushed girdle of pink georgette, one end of which hangs beneath the skirt to below the hemline, the full skirt, made of scalloped ruffles of black dotted net, follows a diagonal line. There is a big butterfly of black net at the waistline, and the lifted hemline reveals a pink georgette petticoat, finely plaited, which replaces the pantalets that grandma wore. Model from Drécoll.

Our second model shows the evening ensemble for spring, with a coat of stiff gold colored satin, the kind of satin they used to wear in the romantic days, with big sleeves, tucked at the top and banded above deep cuffs by fox fur dyed a pistache green. The full collar is also banded with this green fur. An important detail of this coat, which hangs rather full from the shoulders, is its cutaway front and its extra length in back.

To go with the coat and make its inside as decorative as its outside is a lamé lining in green and gold. The dress is made of yellow crêpe georgette, cut into a simple bloused waist and a long tunic split at the center front to show a satin slip beneath. The bands are made of green and gold beads embroidered on to the georgette with gold thread. Gold thread embroidery is placed on the sides of the waist and the skirt.

In these ways Paris shows us how to indulge our natural love of the picturesque without disturbing too greatly the strict modernism of styles.

718—Woman's and misses' dress. Sizes 16, 18, and 20 years, and 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3⅞ yards of 36 or 40 inch material.

720—Girl's dress. Sizes 6, 8, 10, and 12 years. Size 8 requires 2¾ yards of 36 or 40 inch material.

717—Woman's and misses' dress. Sizes, 16, 18, and 20 years, and 34, 36, 38, and 40 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3½ yards of figured material and ¾ yards of plain 40 or 44 inch material.

HOW TO USE THE PATTERNS

A FLAT crêpe in beige was used in making the one piece dress, pattern No. 718. There is no dress more satisfactory than the one piece ones, and this design is smart and the pattern easy to follow. Back and front are each cut in one piece, and French seams used to finish. A slightly rounded shawl collar finishes the neck, and the opening is filled in with a vest, making a square outline across the front. The collar should be cut double and seamed together on the outside edge. Then it is turned to the right side, the seam basted so the edge is clearly defined, and pressed. Then it is basted to the neck of the dress, first pinning it to the dress at each end, and then in the center back. Baste a bias silk binding in place and stitch from one end to the other. Then turn the opposite edge of the binding over the seam and hem down by hand.

In cutting the vest, fold the material so the top comes on the fold. Seam down each side, turn right side out and finish across the bottom. Then tack the right side to the dress, and fasten to the left side of the dress with tiny snaps.

The one piece sleeves are gathered at the wrists into narrow bands. The narrow belt may be of the material or a leather one may be used, and the patch pockets finish the dress prettily. Embroidering the lower part of each sleeve in bright, contrasting colors would add much to the beauty of the dress, or if you didn't care to take the time necessary for that, why not embroider a monogram either on the vest, or the left front of the dress?

Bolero dresses are smart for little girls and grown ones. Pattern No. 20 will be pretty made in two materials, and is suitable for any of the crepe or light weight woolens. The little skirt is cut in two pieces and is slightly circular. This is joined to a long waisted sleeveless upper part. This is slashed at the neck in the center front, and the edges bound. A pretty round collar finishes the neck, and this collar lies over the bolero.

The bolero is cut in one piece—having no under arm seams—just those on the shoulders. To this the one piece sleeves are attached. One of the pin checks was used for the skirt and waist, and a solid color for the jacket. The sleeves are finished with turned back cuffs that match the general outline of the collar, and two inserted pockets are set in the bolero at the bottom.

Pattern No. 717 is for an attractive afternoon frock. Crêpe Elizabeth or georgette would be suitable materials for it, and so would crêpe de chine or taffeta. Figured and plain materials are used in the making, and the pattern pieces are clearly marked so there won't be any difficulty in putting them together. The waist and skirt are cut separately and joined, a soft, wide band of the plain material being used for the sash which effectually covers the joining. The dress is to be slipped on over the head, the opening at the neck making this possible.

An outside facing of the plain material finishes the bottom of the skirt, and this plain material is used for the collar and lower parts of the sleeves. Many of the dress materials are shown both in solid colors and beautifully printed designs, and this particular design seems unusually well suited to a combination of materials.

An Even Keel in Money Matters

By DORIS BLAKE

To Be Neither a Midas Nor a Prodigal, but a Happy Medium, Is the Goal to Aim For When Making a Budget

FROM the financial angle, the ideal situation in a household is that the wife be competently thrifty in all matters over which she has control but that she does not "watch the pot" so closely that her sense of saving becomes miserly. For his part, the man should be endowed with that sense of responsibility that urges him to keep up insurance protection, to save what he can reasonably save, after the usual expenses are disposed of, but to avoid the danger of niggardliness in money matters. There should be money for amusement, for the old adage about all work and no play will make matrimony just as dull as the boy, Jack, you've heard about.

Generally speaking, the great American fault is not the too saving one. But in the couse of my work here I learn first hand of hundreds of cases where the Midas spirit is encountered in man and wife. Usually it is the man who, once possessed of the saving urge, becomes cruelly mean about his wife's allowance. As one woman confided but yesterday, her husband has $200,000 and in her sixteen years of married life he has never taken her any place, never thought a vacation necessary for her, and her household allowance is meted out so meagerly she cannot get enough ahead to buy decent dresses for her young high school daughter. He never goes to places of amusement, nor takes a vacation because it costs money. The chase of the dollar has him gripped so that he cannot see the hate that engulfs his household.

Such revelations are not uncommon. And although this sort of home may be classed as the most unhappy, harboring as it does the seeds of hatred and often the hope of death for the tyrant who holds the purse strings taut, there is another kind of household where misery is known a considerable part of the time, although love may preserve it against complete disintegration. It is the home where financial responsibility is felt by the wife but where she is given no cooperation by the husband.

The irresponsible man and the thrifty wife-ambitious mother provide a problem that is intensely difficult to cope with. The difficulty is equally great where the wife is the fool in money matters and the husband's life is one long succession of coping with her money follies. Yet there is something more tragically moving about a woman eager to give her children a good education, a decent neighborhood to bring them up in, willing to make a thousand personal sacrifices in her effort to keep all her loved ones' heads raised in the community. And by some strange law of nature which draws opposites together you frequently find this sort of woman tied to a weak man whose weakness seems to reach its high peak on money matters.

The Story of the Browns.

There are the Browns, we will call them. Ella, a thrifty wife and mother is married to Ed, a good natured, lackadaisical and perfectly worthless husband. They live in a small town. Ed was a clerk in one of those chain stores that dot the country and he was one of the best liked men in his town. He never had a bad word to say about anybody. He could tell a story that would shake his audience with laughter. He spent a lot of time thinking them up, so much that he didn't like work to interfere—and seldom let it. Ella, as different from Ed as she could be, had energy, a sense of responsibility and an ambition which made her fight when life or the worthlessness of her thriftless husband sent her to the floor for the count.

The Browns had three children, Mary, Jim, and a toddler, known to his adoring parents and the rest of their world as "Larry." Ella dreamed dreams for these youngsters, as mothers have had the habit of doing since the world began. Mary was to be married to some nice young fellow when she grew old enough. Jim was to be something big in the business world, and Larry was to draw and paint because even at this tender age he smeared the house with colors from a paint box and Ella believed she could see likeness to human forms in them.

Ella talked her ambitions over with Ed and Ed agreed with her that the kids should get the best out of the world. As a matter of fact, he agreed with her in everything. He was one of those likeable, agreeable men.

Ella tried to put the house on a budget. Ed was drawing $30 a week and she figured out so much for this and so much for that. She had learned in her childhood that leaking pennies result in rivers of dollars leaving their owners and rendering them poor.

Would Have Worked, but . . .

It was a good idea and would have worked out to perfection except for Ed. He seemed to run under very heavy expenses. There were cigarets and a poker game now and then, and little knickknacks for the kids, and snappy things like patent lighters, and puzzles, and frick roses that squirted water on the unwary, for himself. You see, Ed was a mixer and had a certain reputation to uphold.

Week after week, all the years of their married life, Ella found her household allowance a little short. Five, six, seven dollars would fail to arrive. Ed always explained it. He was a wonderful explainer. And Ella would sigh a little, cry a little and pick up the fight again and struggle along. She loved Ed, with that strange perversity of strong women who hold to their weak men.

She would talk to him about getting a little money in the bank. In a few years they could have a home. Then he could go into business for himself. Being liked so much, he could draw trade from all over the country. Then they could all be something in the community and the children could have advantages.

Ed agreed that money in the bank was a great thing—told Ella he had just been telling the boys he had the thriftiest wife in the country. He wound up by touching her for a couple of dollars to see him through until pay day.

Sad Ending.

So things went along until little Mary was 9, Jim 7 and Larry, the toddler, a man of 2. Ella never gave up fighting, for she was built that way. The children had illnesses and Ed had the flu, which set them back a bit further. But she went on dreaming her dreams of having a home and being somebody.

Ed's reputation grew as a story teller, but waned as a clerk. And one day he was fired. He was away below par in his sales. Competitive houses didn't want him and his air of bravado and his threat that they'd be sending for him to come back soon didn't hold water.

Life struck swiftly as it has a way of doing, and Ed came back from Marty's one evening where he'd been down telling the boys a couple of new ones. Ella met him at the door, her face drawn and white. Larry was ill. The doctor should be called. Ed said it was just some kid ailment he'd be over in a day or two. There was a lot of money owing the doctor already. But fear struck him when he looked again at the flushed face and heard the labored breathing. He believed the doctor ought to be called. He'd get some money together and bring him.

But he'd borrowed from everybody and he was turned down cold. He came back and told Ella. Larry would be all right in the morning. His hope wasn't justified. Larry was dead in the morning. It was simple pneumonia that medical attention could have checked.

There isn't much else to the story. They buried their baby and Ella went to work. Ed gets an occasional job and they manage to live. They do better than that—at least Ella does. She puts a few dollars in the bank each week. Ed isn't so good on stories any more. He even manages to give Ella a dollar or two now and then to put in the bank.

He's Too Proud.

"Dear Miss Blake: The boy I love is a student and lives on the campus. He writes to me once and sometimes twice a week. Now, although this boy professes he loves me, he seldom takes me out. I know he has no money, but he never comes to see me on Sundays. Shall I stop caring for him? BETTY."

Don't you think he hesitates taking up your time when he hasn't the money to make returns, Betty? His pride won't let him. Perhaps if you'd invite him to your home he'd accept.

THE CHEEKIEST PERSON I EVER MET

Send us a short, to the point, reminiscence of the cheekiest person you ever met, and we'll pay you $1 for it if we print it. All letters must be addressed to the Cheekiest Person Editor, The Tribune, Chicago.

Wanted the Change.

A woman, a neighbor of ours was putting on a party and she asked my father if she could borrow his brand new mandolin, for which he had paid forty dollars, as a young man who was to attend her party could play one very well. My father told her she could borrow it.

Two days later she returned the mandolin in a damaged condition, and with it she handed Dad fifty cents and said, "I don't suppose it will cost that much to get it fixed so you can send the change over with one of the boys." S. M. P.

Her Only Thanks.

The woman living next door to us had not been feeling well for a good while. One day she came over to our house, worried sick because she had lost her laundress and she did not know what she would do about the week's wash. We have fair equipment in the laundry, so I offered to oblige her by doing her things on my own wash-day. I use an electric washer and finished it all early, so I decided to surprise her by doing the ironing also. It was rather late in the night when I had finished, but I was happy thinking how surprised she would be. Early the next morning I sent them over by my little boy.

When I saw her again, she seemed peeved about something, and finally asked me if I cared to return the buttons that I washed off of her house dress. And after a while, she inquired how I made starch, adding that she didn't know when she had put their clothes away in as flimsy and half-done condition.

That represents her thanks to me. MRS. N. B.

Making Use of the Trunk.

Mother purchased a fine new trunk to make an extended trip. Upon her return an acquaintance, knowing of the trunk, asked to borrow it as she was going to spend a week with her daughter.

Mother wondered why a week's visit to a daughter should require a wardrobe to fill a trunk and although not eager she let her have the trunk. It looked anything but new when it was returned, but no wonder. In it were packed canned goods and goodness knows what not to take to the daughter and on the return trip a wash wringer, kitchen utensils, etc.

To a friend she said: "I obtained all these things without a cent's cost. Mrs. G.'s trunk did the trick." MRS. L. J. V.

Mercenary.

The cheekiest person I ever met was a neighbor. She came in one day, and before she left I gave her some vegetables out of my garden which she did not have in her own—enough to do her a couple of days.

Next day she came over with a little sack which contained a dozen and a half small okras. She wanted to know if I didn't want them for a dime. I gave her the dime and she left the okra. MRS. I. B. B.

Refused to Return It.

The cheekiest person I ever met was my next door neighbor in the south. I had many chickens. One day I was going to have company so I took one of the fattest ones to kill. I was just cutting their heads off. When I got to the last one it flew over the fence. As my neighbor was out I said, "Mrs. Manden, would you please hand me my chicken?"

To my surprise she said, "Whatever comes on my side of the fence belongs to me."

Well, I was careful the next time I killed my chickens, for I never got that one back. MRS. E. S.

Calculating.

Cheek! My neighbor came over early one morning to borrow some coffee. I had only a limited supply myself, but gave her a cupful.

When she returned it she said, "Here is the coffee I borrowed. I brought only a half cupful because this is a stronger blend and more expensive than that you had and you don't have to use as much of it." MRS. C. E. H.

Pretty Queer Friend.

A friend of mine was to be in a school play. Knowing I had a dress which would suit her part, she asked if she might borrow it. Of course, I let her.

When she returned the dress I noticed the sleeves, which had been long, were cut short above the elbow. When I questioned her as to what had happened, she said, "Oh, the sleeves were so tight I couldn't bend my elbow, so I cut them short and made a bow to match the dress."

She didn't offer to pay for the damages or give me the bag. MISS B. T.

Strange Weddings

Have you ever seen a wedding so outlandish that it upset all your ideas of the traditional ceremony? Some marriages are foreign and quaint in their adherence to ancient customs; others are ultra modern in their haphazard speed and unconventionality. The Tribune would like to know the story of the strangest wedding you've ever seen. We will pay $1 for every letter published. Address: Strange Weddings, Chicago Tribune.

Real, After All.

We were giving a benefit performance for one of the local clubs and in one of the scenes was a wedding. A popular young couple were to be the ones matrimonially inclined in the play. An out of town friend of one of the boys played the part of the minister.

Imagine our surprise when we found that we had witnessed a real wedding, the out of town friend being a minister from a nearby city. F. G. W.

Two Ministers.

The strangest wedding I ever witnessed occurred some time ago when the two participants were deaf and dumb.

The wedding was much like others with its witnesses, flower girls and guests, except that there were two ministers.

One was a minister who spoke the sign language and had come from a distant large city to officiate. The other was the local minister of the church where the bride attended. As the deaf and dumb minister read the ceremony to the bride and groom the local minister repeated it for the benefit of the guests. MRS. C. E. H.

Many Symbols.

The most interesting wedding I have ever seen occurred at a Chinese home. The bride came in an automobile with a big vari-colored lantern hanging on each side. The lanterns bore in red the surname of the family the bride married into, and they were lighted inside with candles. The bride was dressed in splendor, and she had a red veil covering her face. The red veil was to drive away evil spirits.

A small pyre of sticks and paper stood before the doorway, and the bride walked right over the pyre, to certify her allegiance to the family. Before she entered the door, some one tapped her head with a little stick. This indicated she would be expected to obey. And if she took the tapping easily, she would prove to be docile and easy; if she crouched or spurned the tapping, she would turn out to be unruly. After she entered the house the wedding began. I. L.

Mother Weds Girl's Beau.

The strangest wedding I ever witnessed was when my mother married the man I loved and had been going with for four years. We had a quarrel and I said I was going to marry some one else. For spite he started going with mother (a charming widow), and the best part of it was I was the bridesmaid and mother was married in my wedding dress. E. B.

Worth Fifty Cents to Him.

My father, who was a minister, married many couples. One day a pair rode up to our hourse and hollered, "Hello!" When my father went out, the man told him they wanted to get married. Father told them to get down and come in the house. The man replied that they wanted to be married sitting on their mules.

After the ceremony the groom asked father what he charged for performing the ceremony. Father told him he made no charge, and in a joking manner told him he could pay what he thought his bride was worth. The fellow looked at his bride a moment and then he handed father a dollar and asked him if he had a half dollar in change. Father put the dollar in his pocket and told the groom he thought his bride was worth a dollar at least.

The man kicked his mule in the side and the couple rode off without saying another word. McK. T.

In the Ocean.

The strangest wedding I ever witnessed took place at Palm Beach some fifteen years ago.

One of the life guards and a maid from Whitehall, having decided to get married, thought it would be great fun to have the ceremony performed in the ocean. So at 4 o'clock in the afternoon the bride and groom and their attendants donned bathing suits and waded out a short distance into the sea.

As the minister had refused to wear a bathing suit, a boat was procured and he stood up in the boat and performed the ceremony. The entire population was on hand and a good time was had by all. V. G.

A White Wing Wedding.

The strangest wedding I ever witnessed was one recently held in our city. The bridegroom was a member of the street cleaning crew. His fellow workmen drove to the church in the large city trucks used for hauling ashes and rubbish. They were dressed in overalls and work jackets.

After the ceremony the men lined up and formed an archway with their shovels, through which the couple marched midst the cheers of spectators. R. V.

"I never dreamed that any one soap could do all the things Rinso does until I tried it myself. It certainly is THE soap for our water. At first I used it only for the laundry because it's so safe and because it made the clothes so white and pretty without any hard rubbing. But I soon found out that it was just as good for dishwashing and other cleaning. Now you'll always find a large size package on my kitchen shelf. And I keep one in the bathroom, too, for cleaning the tiles, bathtub and basins.

Grace M. Skelton,
511 Park Ave., Wilmette, Ill.

Millions use Rinso. Thousands write us letters like this.

"It's THE soap," Wilmette woman says:

SPRING FEVER AND ITS CURE

That Weary Feeling, Which Appears About Crocus Time, Can Be Driven Away Without the Aid of Sulphur and Molasses

by Antoinette Donnelly

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Beginning already to feel some of the symptoms commonly described as spring fever? It is just about this time they begin to appear, increasing rapidly with every new crocus head lifted to the April breeze. If you are missing the fresh buoyancy, that feeling of hopefulness the spring season heralds, you're probably in need of some advice on the nature of the disease lightly termed "fever," and also on how to avoid or get rid of that tired feeling.

There are two kinds of fever, so labeled. One is that curious and unpreventable phenomenon which, consciously or unconsciously, affects most people in the springtime and is recognized as a sort of restlessness, a feeling of recklessness and adventure. One is more inclined to babble of sunny climes and unexplored corners of the globe than hew to the line of work.

This form of annual disturbance may be traced to its origin by a comparison with other forms of life besides man's. It is all bound up with the compelling instinct of migration that comes over almost every form of life at this season of the year.

But one does not go back uncounted ages to find the reason for that other form of spring fever—the one that lays spirits low. Memories of last season will suffice to explain why the magic carpet may be flung, a feathered orchestra be caroling its invitation to the dance—and your heels be too leaden to gambol on the green.

"That tired feeling," in fact, is nothing to tell your neighbor about. It is a reflection on your knowledge of the principles of hygienic living.

Ancestors Excused.

It was excusable for our forebears, who invented "spring fever," to talk about it as though it followed winter as naturally as harvest follows planting. They had not our advantages in hygienic training. Had they known spring fever was nothing more nor less than an individual weltering in his own uneliminated poisons, they would not have exhibited so proudly their sulphur and molasses jars.

At that, we must credit them with knowing there was something about their blood that needed purifying after a winter of smoked bacon, closed windows, and red flannel chest protectors.

We know now that that weary feeling, the lagging gait, the dull brain are due to nothing more elegant than autointoxication. A high falutin' word for what really ails the victim. It is a condition where poison arises from inactivity of cells or organs whereby substances are released into the circulation in harmful quantities. It appears at all seasons, it is true, but in more virulent form in blossom time than any other.

There are a number of reasons why the body accumulates more toxins, or fails to eliminate as much poison in the winter as during the other seasons. Skin elimination, for one thing, is not so free in winter as in summer. The skin depends upon the blood circulation for the disposal of organic poison in the system. The amount of exercise indulged in by the average individual in the cold season is not sufficient to stimulate the circulation and provide for this elimination.

Reasons for Spring Fever.

Another reason advanced by physicians in explanation of this poisoning of the system is that most people drink less water in cold weather. The eliminating organs, consequently, are unaided in throwing off the toxic matter.

Again, the cold weather diet is at fault. It is more concentrated and richer in protein and fat. It contains a smaller proportion of cellulose or woody fiber, and consequently is less favorable to intestinal activity. Too large a proportion of meat, bread, and starchy food is contained in the winter diet.

So, it isn't spring, beautiful spring, that is to blame for that tired feeling—but the hearty diet customary in winter months, an inadequate supply of drinking water to float off the poisons, and the lack of outdoor exercises.

It isn't the hard working person who gets spring fever. It is not the woodchopper, or the coal heaver, or the lumberjack. It is the sedentary worker, who feeds too well and coddles himself too much during the cold season.

However, the latter is undoubtedly more interested in how to get over his fatigue than in how he acquired it.

Green Vegetables Recommended.

Better than any bottled spring tonics are the green vegetables that contain large amounts of cellulose materials, such as spinach and the various greens—beet tops, dandelions, lettuce, string beans, celery, asparagus, onions, radishes, and so on.

The tired persons should substitute these, and fruits wherever possible for the nitrogenous articles that have been appearing on the menu. Meat should be eaten sparingly. The easily digested foods, such as eggs and milk, white bread and butter, provide too little exercise for the intestines.

Exercise should be as strenuous as the individual can stand. The prescription advanced as the best yet discovered by Dr. William A. Brady, noted physician, is recommended: "Two miles of oxygen three times a day. You may take it any way you choose, so long as you take it walking."

O. R. C.: TO REDUCE THE WAISTline try the following exercises: Stand with feet about eighteen inches apart. Raise the arms overhead; bend the trunk forward and swing the arms downward between the legs; raise the trunk and bend backward, swinging the arms up over the head. Repeat five times quickly. Next, assume correct standing position, arms out at sides. Twist the waist to the right and touch the finger tips of the right hand to the toes of the left foot. Reverse. Repeat five times, gradually increasing the number of times. Send stamped addressed envelope for additional exercises.

A FRIEND IN NEED

by Sally Joy Brown

I want to be the medium through which the friends in deed and the friends in need may be brought together. It may be you have some discarded article which has not outgrown its usefulness that will make some less fortunate one happy and you would gladly give it if you knew how to go about it. Write to me and I shall be happy to be of service to you. Please write on one side of the paper.

When information is wanted by mail, a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send article to The Tribune but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

OPPORTUNITIES TO HELP AT EASTER TIME.

"DEAR MISS BROWN: I have two little girls; one is 7 and the other is 5. I would like to get them some clothing, as they keep asking me if I am going to get them new coats and dresses for Easter. I just can't buy them anything, as my husband has been out of work for three months. I expect another baby soon and I haven't bought anything for the little one, either. MRS. R."

When we think of the pride we all take in new spring clothes, what could be more natural than the request of these little girls when they hear conversations about new clothes for Easter? They wonder if they are going to have new "spring outfits." And there's genuine need, as well. We have numberless requests right now from mothers who are confronted with the problem of spring clothes for their little ones and who simply cannot afford to buy them. Right along with this need goes the remedy, if we'll only use it. Most of us who have children are planning to get some new spring clothes for them. We have to, if for no other reason than that they've grown too big to wear last year's apparel. So those clothes will be just the thing to make all these needy little girls and boys wonderfully happy.

If your little son or daughter is outgrowing a coat, suit, or dress, what else could you do with the discarded garments? Really, there isn't much to do with them, is there? Why not, then, let me put them into service and make Easter a happy day for all these needy little folk?

A Needlework Query.

"I want to know the formula or the preparation which was formerly used in tracing patterns, in needlework, whereby a perforated pattern could be transferred by means of a powder of semi-liquid preparation. Can you help me? M. T. M."

Have you the knowledge this correspondent so earnestly seeks? And would you tell her how it is done?

Left in Need.

"I am writing for a needy and worthy family, consisting of a mother and three children. The mother was obliged to leave her husband on account of drunkenness and nonsupport. This woman was recently operated on and has not fully recovered, so she cannot work. They are badly in need of clothing and I thought your readers might be able to help. The 17 year old boy, who attends school and works, also, wears a size 38 suit. The other children are a boy, 12, and a girl, 8. The mother wears size 38. "MRS. P."

Can you help these people out of the straitened condition in which a delinquent parent has left them? The clothing you are about to discard would do it.

Family Has Hard Times.

"Would you please help us with some clothing? We have had a lot of sickness and all kinds of trouble and it seems so hard for us to get along. I have five children—the boys are 18 and 7 and the girls 16, 14, and 12. My big boy is out every day trying to get work. My daughter is out of work also. My husband is not working steadily and everything is going wrong. MRS. N."

This family seems to be having more than its share of misfortune, and perhaps a little assistance from us would give them the start they need. Have you any clothing they might have?

Use for Picture Frames.

"I wonder if there are some who have old picture frames of any size they no longer want. I want to retouch them and fix them over to fit some pictures I have. I will be so thankful for any you may get me. "MRS. A. M."

Those old faded pictures, the frames of which are still good, may again be put to use. Mrs. A. M. probably can make them quite presentable.

Persian Kittens to Give.

"I have nine lovely kittens I would like to give to your readers if they will give them good homes. Two of them are Persian and the others are part Persian. I would prefer giving them to people who live in the country or in the suburbs. K. F."

These are really beautiful kittens and I know they'll make delightful pets. If you'd like to have one of them you had better write to us immediately.

To Give Children Fun.

"My baby is a girl, 5 years old, and would like to have a tricycle. The two older children want a coaster wagon. I wonder if any of your readers would have these to give away. "MRS. A. B."

Boys and girls who have outgrown their toys can bring a great deal of happiness into the lives of less fortunate youngsters with them. Have you either of the things these poor children want?

Ballet Slippers Needed.

"I would like to know if any of your readers have two pairs of toe dancing slippers, size 1 and 3½. Some one has promised to teach my sister and me dancing and we can't afford to buy the slippers and dresses we will need. We are 9 and 12. I. C."

If your ballet slippers and costumes are a little worn, these girls could make good use of them and would be most happy to have them.

BEAUTY ANSWERS

by Antoinette Donnelly

What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Say on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet, or a set of exercises for what ails you, and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply, send a stamped addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, The Tribune, Chicago.

MRS. A. S.: THE PEROXIDE AND ammonia used to bleach superfluous hair keeps the hair light and dry, and tends to diminish the growth rather than increase it. Cutting these hairs close to the skin with manicure scissors does not stimulate their growth, as believed by many people. It is well to avoid the use of depilatories on the face that contain barium sulphide.

J. N.: THE DANDRUFF REMEDY is: Sixty grains of sulphur mixed with one ounce of vaseline, and applied every other night to the scalp with massage. If there is much dandruff you should shampoo the hair twice a week, gradually increasing the length of time between shampoos. For further suggestions on the care of the hair send a stamped, addressed envelope.

BROWN EYES: YEAST MAY BE taken at any time—either with the meals or between meals. If you don't like it when dissolved in water or fruit juice you may spread it on bread or a cracker. It makes no difference how it is taken. Stop eating candy entirely until you overcome your present trouble. When you feel tempted, think of your complexion ills and you'll have the courage to refuse.

M. G. T.: ALL SKINS WILL NOT permit the use of the same amount of soap and water, but one washing a day with soap and water is required for the sake of cleanliness. Where the skin is dry, all other cleansings may be done with a cleansing cream, and a good cold cream should be massaged into the skin at night and as much as possible left on during the night. Other hints for dry skins are contained in my booklet, "Care of the Skin," which may be had for a stamped addressed envelope.

Y. D.: WHERE THE BACK OF the neck is fat, place finger tips on the shoulders and twist arms and shoulders in a circular motion. Twisting exercises do away with unnecessary fat and strengthen the muscles.

R. W.: SNOWY WHITE NAIL tips may be had if you will insert nail white under the fingernails. If your nails break easily, soak them for ten minutes each night in olive oil or sweet almond oil, which has been slightly warmed. Use just enough oil to cover the finger tips.

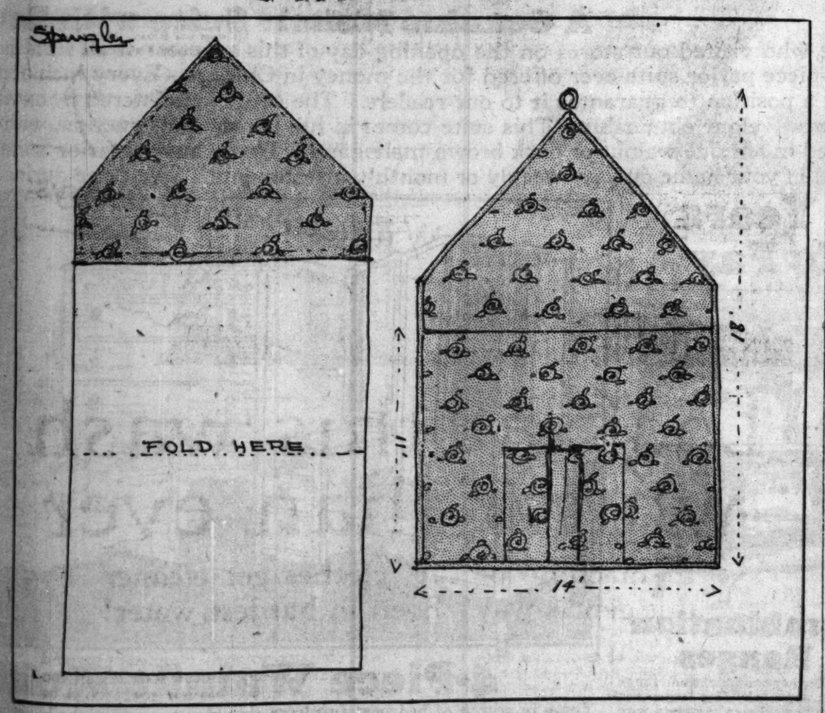
B. F. T.: THE USE OF AN EYEbrow pencil for darkening the eyebrows is the simplest method. They may be darkened just as the hair is darkened by the use of a dye, but such work must be done by a skilled operator or it is easily detected.

GENE H.: THE DEEP LINES UNder your eyes are due to lack of sleep. Six hours isn't sufficient sleep for a young girl. You should have eight or nine hours sleep in a well ventilated room. If possible, spend an hour in the open air every day.

EDDA G.: CAMOMILE TEA MAY be applied to the hair with a brush after shampooing, or it may be added to the last rinse water. It is quite harmless. Steep a little of the tea in boiling water and allow it to cool. Directions for shampooing the hair may be had for a stamped, addressed envelope.

Practical and Fancy Needle Work

By Clotilde



The Bag Shown Today May Be Made of Bright Colored Cretonne and Is Convenient for Holding Fancy Work or Knitting.

What is your sewing problem? Do you have trouble in following a pattern? Do you find difficulty in making a skirt hang evenly or making a sleeve that doesn't twist? If there is anything you would like to know about these or other problems of needlework write to Clotilde, The Tribune, Chicago, enclosing a stamped addressed envelope, if a personal reply is desired.

A BRILLIANTLY colored glazed cretonne was used to make the bag pictured today. And it is one of the prettiest the New York shops are showing. This bag is really made to hold pieces of brown paper and string, but it would be an attractive bag to hold fancy work, knitting, crocheting, etc., and it would make a lovely porch bag, hanging in a convenient place on the porch with your work inside, ready to pick up at a moment's notice.

Naturally, a bag of this kind can be made any size you wish, but maybe you would like the dimensions of this particular one. Finished, it measures from the bottom to the point, eighteen inches; and the width is fourteen and one-half inches finished. The large pocket is eleven inches deep, and the measures of the small twine pocket are four and one-half by six inches. This width measure doesn't include the box plait.

There is an inch wide inverted plait down each side of the bag, and this of course makes for more room inside.

After the bag has been cut out, lay a piece of the cretonne on it and cut a second piece at the pointed end long enough to come one inch below the top of the folded over part. Turn in this bottom edge and stitch across first basting the two pieces of cretonne together around the edge. And of course the right side of this piece of cretonne is on top. Then make the little pocket. If you care to have it, and stitch it in place on the bag. Then baste bias binding hard you can buy this in any desired color) around the raw edges and stitch on the machine, close to the edge. Sew a white bone ring to the point of the bag and your work is finished.

THE TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

Tea and Teas Constitute a Whole Round World of Facts.

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

By Jane Eddington.

ON the pleasure side—and surely tea drinking is largely a social and pleasurable affair—the first contribution tea makes to humanity is its gift of fragrance of aroma. No matter what the approach is we make to tea, that is, to drinking it, we ought to look for and expect an aromatic savor, for when tea is well made and of good quality it emits a bouquet which those who know have called a fragrance that can scarcely be surpassed. It is a bouquet that flatters the palate, through both the smell and the taste. There could not be the wonderful aesthetics of tea that there is but for this, and when special blends or grades are extolled, the idea is that they surpass others in flavor and bouquet.

But tea takes odors from many things, if it is not protected, and through various sorts of deterioration becomes something that cannot give pleasure on the aesthetic side, but mainly on the temperature side, being something either gratefully hot or gratefully cold. In 1923, it could be said that our tea act was the only existing law which regulated the palatability of a food.

Tea in bulk always tends to lose its flavor. It should be kept in airtight containers. The old fashioned chests of tea were lined with a heavy lead foil. Caravan tea is something we in the United States cannot have, because it is tea carried overland in caravans to Europe, making it most expensive. The tea voyage undoubtedly affects the flavor of teas.

Mrs. James T. Fields once wrote this: "Longfellow came to town to see Jamie, in one of his loveliest moods. The day was so warm and fine, such a day of dreams, that we proposed to him every kind of excursion. 'Come,' he said, 'let us go to the tea stores and smell the tea; the warm atmosphere will bring out all the odors!'"

It was not so good for the tea in the stores that it could be smelled. We do things better, in general, today, yet those who want the best or the most aromatic teas do not buy them in bulk, but in sealed packages.

Choice of Teas.

As to tea absorbing odors, in one of the early numbers of the Good Housekeeping magazine [in 1888] there is this item: "The extraordinary sensitiveness of tea to odors was shown in New York the other day. A ship brought a cargo of tea—and nothing else—from China, and, upon testing the tea, it was found to be sweet. The ship had brought a cargo of sugar from Manila on the previous voyage, and though not a bit of it was left in the vessel, yet the odor was sufficient to impregnate the tea. A case somewhat similar to this occurred twelve years ago, when tea was packed in the same hold with camphor." Those who have a sensitive knowledge of tea look for exquisite flavor or taste and aroma, and especially note its appearance in the cup.

When people had a narrower choice of teas than today they were more expert in their knowledge of each one. The English tea drinkers for many years seem to have been devoted to Bohea, a China or black tea called by the name of the hills where it was grown. There are people who think that China teas have the most delicate flavor and like the light color of them in the cup. Of course, there have been many grades of these and we pay a high price for the best—if we can get it. As I understand it, Chinese merchants control who shall and shall not have it. It is said that the Chinese use the coarser leaves of the tea tree for the preparation of leather, because of the tannin in them. It is the tannin in even the finer leaves that makes boiled tea so undesirable as a beverage.

The fragrance of oolong tea has been considered rank by some people, but this has made it popular among a class without supposedly aesthetic instincts. One condemnation of it declares that it puckers and "coppers" the stomach, but this was by an Englishman who preferred English breakfast tea as most wholesome and tasty.

In England, tea blends are so universal that the poor outsider has to depend upon brands, but we seem not to have been expert in blends. Plain long green Japan, as well as many others, has had its friends, and we know we must go to the Japanese for the perfection of the tea ceremony.

For years ago, when Ceylon teas seem to have been introduced to the United States, it was claimed that those teas were cleaner than were those of China and Japan—some teas are vacuum cleaned today—and that the latter were adulterated. The new coming Ceylon tea to our America was extolled for its strength and flavor, and it was said that two pounds of it would go farther than three of Chinese or Japanese tea, which statement probably needed to be proven. At any rate, some of the romancers of the world have loved to describe the tea growing parts of China, and to tell how the delicate buds of middle April were picked and spread, dried in bamboo trays, dropped into red hot pans in small quantities, etc., until it was finally packed in lead foil ready for commerce.

It seems to be more or less English to like China tea, although India teas seem to get the most attention from Englishmen today. For those who want exotic things there are expensive Moorish teas, and not long ago we clipped a news item concerning the most expensive tea one ever heard of, which was being sold, when made, for one dollar per cup. However, the sentiment that you can tell people of intellect from the fact that they drink China tea, and generally without sugar, has worked for economy.

Substitutes for the Tea Plant Leaves.

In the course of a hundred years there have been many sorts of dried leaves put forward for favor as against those of the tea plant, but judging from the fate of several sorts which we can trace their popularity has quickly waned. One, in particular, received much attention in 1866 because of its fragrance, and because prominent people commended it for some of the same things that China tea has been praised for, its fragrance, its tonic qualities, and its qualities as a promoter of digestion, and for being without the quality that in China tea presumably produces sleeplessness.

The Flavoring of Teas.

Because of its own true fragrance when it is good tea, it does seem unreasonable to make a sort of weak and hot lemonade of it, since the lemon odor drowns that of the tea—kills its bouquet—or to add jasmine or any other flower to it. Orange Pekoe tea is considered best with lemon. The correct Russian tea is not a cup of tea, since a deep glass is the correct container for it. Some people think that equal parts of orange and lemon juice in tea produce a satisfactory or most justifiable drink. Another of the many ways that have been devised for flavoring tea has been to shut cubes of sugar with dried orange peel and use them for flavoring as well as sweetening the tea.

On Making Teas.

There is one point in the making of teas on which there seems to be universal agreement—the water poured over the leaves should be boiling, furiously boiling, but the tea itself should not be boiled. As to the amount of tea to use, the prevailing idea of one teaspoon per person and one for the pot is anything but exact, since much less of one kind of tea or much more may be required than for another.

And as to the time for the brewing of the tea, one expert says that the oolongs and green teas require more drawing, and the Indias and Ceylons the shorter time. We might guess the latter. A recipe of 1669 gives as the time for steeping tea "no longer than while you can say the Miserere," which would not be a good universal rule, since some of us do not know it!

There are many and curious directions almost as old as this, which more or less agree with one way used in England today or "wetting the tea." Cold water is put on it and it is easier to make tea for iced tea than you would believe, if you had not tried it. One old recipe for pouring boiling water on tea says that the tea is ready as soon as the leaves sink in it, and that is not a bad rule. Many of these old recipes may seem like mere curiosities, but there is some good in all, probably, although we can hardly believe that eggs in tea are worth while.

Making Russian Tea.

Russian tea, old style, was made by putting a freshly cut slice of lemon in the bottom of a cup, sprinkling it with sugar, and allowing it to stand a few minutes before pouring hot tea over it. The lemon should be peeled because there is a bitter flavor in the white part of the peel and yet another in the "zest." But it is most correct to call this a lemon tea. The Russians are also given the credit of giving to certain people the idea of putting a spoonful of fruit jam in their tea, and some think they get a delicious flavor if they put in a slice of fresh apple, but much depends upon the tea, in the latter case, and it should certainly be weak.

Tea Pots.

The little red pottery pot, which has sometimes been called a "Brown Betty," has been beloved and in general there is a sentiment against metal utensils in tea drawing, even silver. If the latter is used, the tea is often made in the unglazed pot, heated first, and then poured into the silver one. In any case, it is always a good plan to pour the tea off the leaves if it is to stand for longer than the brief time of drawing. Rather extravagant people use a great deal of tea, let the water barely "kiss" it, and pour it off at once. In other words, their direction is: "Be a profligate with the amount of tea used."

Social Tea.

This is an enormous subject by itself. Around it has grown up a system of etiquette, manuals of cookery, and a great commerce.

Activities of Women

Dean Inge of England is in favor of the female bishop, claiming that many of them are better qualified than men.

Though she has only one arm, Mrs. George Lyddon of Pearl River, N. Y., recently won first prize in a cooking contest.

There is a shortage of dressmaking apprentices in France, owing to the fact that the midinettes all want to become stenographers.

At the age of 70 years Miss Gertrude Rickards of London has challenged the pedestrian record of Edward Payson Weston. Recently she completed a walking tour of 1,844 miles through Scotland and England.

SAM 'N' HENRY

A Doctor Cures Sam's Bad Burn.

By Correll & Gosden

(While on their way to the stockyards to get work the car in which Sam and Henry were being driven suddenly stopped. Being eager to assist in finding the mechanical trouble, Sam took hold of a hot spark plug and caused a bad burn on his hand. They are now on their way to the doctor's office.)

SAM—Henry, I ain't nevah had nothin' hurt me like dis heah han' hurts.

Henry—I don' see whut yo' wanted to mess wid de man's car fo' anyway.

Sam—Henry, why didn't yo' tell me de thing was hot under dere? I didn't see nothin' red hot down dere.

Henry—How yo' think de engine works if it don' git hot?

Sam—When things git as hot as dat thing was dat I took hol' of, dey usu'liy turn red, don' it?

Henry—Well—yo' see dat red sort o' fools yo'. When de sun is shinin' on it, it don' look red in de light but it feels red.

Sam—Where did de man say dis doctah's office was?

Henry—It's jus' down heah one mo' block—right on de cornah—upstairs.

Sam—Henry, yo' knows how I hates to go to see a doctah, too, don' yo'? I'se scared to death o' doctahs.

Henry—Ain't no use to be scared of 'em. Dey don' nevah come aftah yo'—ev'vybody goes aftah dem.

Sam—Dat sho' is de truth. If dey was aftah yo', dey'd chase yo', wouldn't dey?

Henry—Not only chase yo'—but dey'd git yo'.

Sam—Dis heah han' sho' do hurt. An' by grabbin' hol' o' dat hot spark plug, dat done keep me from gittin' a job.

Henry—Well—dat's a'right. Dis heah doctah'll fix yo' up down heah.

Sam—When de doctah fix my han' an' de han' gits well, we gotta go back down to de stockyards an' git dat job. Dat certainly is a clean place down dere. I thought dey was goin' have animals layin' all 'round de place.

Henry—We was down dere when it was quiet. Dey don' staht fightin' de animals 'til latah in de day. Why don' yo' tell de man when yo' go back down dere dat yo' wanna be a bull fightah?

Sam—I don' wanna fight no bull. I don' wanna mess 'round wid none. I don' even wanna eat off'n a red tablecloth while I'm down dere. I don' wan' no bulls messin' 'round me.

Henry (approaching the doctor's office)—Heah's de doctah's office up heah. Whut is de doctah's name?

Sam—Doctah Johnson.

Henry—Heah 'tis—right heah—Doctah Johnson. He's a M. D. an' a sturgeon.

Sam—Whut do dat mean, Henry?

Henry—Dis ain't no time fo' arguments.

Sam—Well, I wanna know whut kin' o' doctah I'se goin' to.

Henry—You'll fin' out aftah he finish messin' wid yo' han'. (Sam hesitates about going on). Come on—whut yo' stoppin' 'bout?

Sam—I don't like whut yo' jus' said 'bout him bein' a M. D. an' a sturgeon.

Henry (as they reach the entrance of the building)—Well—come on—let's go up de stairs heah.

SAM—Henry, I'se scared to go up de stairs dere. Read de sign again.

Henry (looking up at the doctor's sign)—I done read de sign once. It say "M. D. and a sturgeon—office hours from three to five"—yo' jus' in time. De clock up de street dere say half pas' three.

Sam (standing in front of building)—Henry, yo' gotta lot o' sense, ain't yo'? Heah's one time I goin' ask yo' to lemme do de talkin'.

Henry—Whut yo' mean, yo' goin' ask me to let yo' do de talkin'?

Sam—Well, it's like dis, Henry. Whenevah we gits mixed up in a biz'ness deal, yo' us'ally does de talkin' an' I don' say much. But dis time de biz'ness is 'bout me so I goin' ask yo' dis—to lemme do de talkin'.

Henry—Don' make no diff'ence to me how much yo' talk. I ain't goin' say a thing to de doctah. Go on—tell him whutevah yo' wanna tell him.

Wi—wi—will yo' tell us where de postoffice is?

Sam—A'right, Henry, I go up dere den. When it come to talk to de doctah now, lemme do de talkin'.

Henry—Dat's a'right wid me. I ain't gonna say nothin'. (As he starts up the stairs.) Come on, let's git up heah—let's git in out o' de cold heah.

Sam—Well, dat's a' right, Henry. Don' yo' say nothin'. Come on—let's git up de steps heah. Dis heah han' hurts an' I don' want de doctah messin' wid it if he's gonna hurt me.

Henry—I don' wanna sit in dis doctah's office all day now. Tell de man whut's de mattah wid yo' when we git up dere so he kin fix yo' up.

Sam (stopping in front of doctor's office)—Is dis de place heah?

Henry—Dis is de doctah's office a'right. It say on de door—"walk in."

Sam—Well, come on—let's go in heah den.

Henry (entering the doctor's office)—Take off yo' hat!

Sam (to man sitting in the doctor's waiting room)—Is de doctah in, mistah?

Man—Yes, he's busy right now. I'm waiting for him myself.

Sam (to Henry)—I guess we bettah sit down, Henry.

Henry—Take a seat ovah dere den by dat stove.

Sam — Henry, come on—sit down heah. Don' fo'git now, Henry, lemme do the talkin' when de doctah come out.

Henry—Dat's a'right wid me. Yo' go 'head—do all de talkin' yo' want.

Sam—Henry, whut do dat "M. D." stan' for'? Dats de firs' thing I wanna know.

Henry (in his know-it-all way)—Well—some doctahs is M. D's an' some doctahs is N. D.'s.

Sam—M. D.'s and N. D.'s? Whut's de diff'ence between M. D.'s an' N. D.'s, Henry?

Henry—De N's come aftah de M's. Don' yo' 'member de alphabet? J—K—O—M—N?

SAM—Whut do it stan' fo'?

Henry—Well, de M. D.'s is Mean Doctahs an' de N. D.'s is Nice Doctahs.

Sam—Whut did dis sign downstairs on de door say?

Henry—Dis one's a M. D.

Sam (getting up)—Come on, Henry, let's go. De han' is bettah.

Henry—Come on, now—sit down heah. SIT BACK DOWN IN DAT CHAIR!

Sam—Henry, yo' done got me scared o' dis heah doctah I don't want him messin' 'roun' wid my han' if he's a mean doctah.

Henry—De doctah ain't gonna hurt yo'. De doctah kin fix yo' up widout you' feelin' it. De only thing yo' don' wanna do is to argue wid de doctah.

Sam (sees the doctor's private office door opening)—Dere's de doctah's door openin' now. LOOKIT DERE! Dere's a man wid de doctah on crutches. (In whisper to Henry.) Listen to de doctah—let's heah whut he say.

Doctor (to patient)—Well, I think I can release you within another month, I want you to feel, Mr. Jones, it was the only thing that I could do when I cut off your leg. Human nature is a very peculiar thing. Just think that a little ingrown toenail caused me to amputate your leg.

Sam (getting excited)—Awa—awa—Henry, did yo' heah dat? De man's toenail stahted growin' backwards an' dey had to cut his leg off. If dat man had-a stepped on a piece o'glass, de doctah would-a had to cut his throat. (Getting up again.) Let's git out o' dis heah place.

Henry—Sit down now! Take yo' time—keep yo' seat. De thing we gotta do is to git out o' heah in a Democratic way.

Sam—Well—let's tell him we is Democrats an' leave.

Henry—Sit down now—take yo' time—de doctah ain't finished wid dat one-legged man yet. He's li'ble to cut his othah leg off.

Sam—Henry, I'se 'bout to faint. I'se gittin' scared—I feel weak.

Henry—Go 'head—faint. Faint on de floor though—don' faint on me.

Sam—Henry, I IS gittin' scared now. Let's git out, o' heah.

Henry—How we gonna git out o' heah now? Dere's de doctah standin' up dere.

Sam—Henry, we gotta do whut yo' said. We gotta git out o' heah in a Democratic way. I'se so scared I don' know whut to do.

Henry—Well now, you'se de one dat was so smart a while ago an' wanted to do all de talkin'. I ain't goin' say a word. I'll jus' listen to whut yo' say.

SAM—Whut I gonna do, Henry? Whut I gonna do heah? I don' want de doctah cuttin' off my han'.

Henry—Don' tell me yo' troubles. I don' know whut yo' goin' do. (As the patient starts to leave the office.) Dat one-legged man's gettin' ready to leave now.

Sam—Henry, I'se scared to death. I gotta git out o' dis mess. Dat certainly is a mean lookin' doctah—I don' like his looks.

Henry (seeing the doctor starting over toward him)—Well, heah come de doctah ovah heah now. Tell him sompin'—tell him somin'.

Doctor (to Sam and Henry)—Well, gentlemen, something I can do for you?

Sam (very nervous and excited)—Ye-ye-yeeah, mistah. Wi—wi—will yo' tell us where de postoffice is?

Doctor (very much surprised)—Do you mean the main postoffice or a substation?

Sam—Any postoffice, mistah! All I wanna do is git out o' heah an' git to de postoffice quick.

Doctor—There's a substation two blocks down the street.

Sam (jumping up and starting for the door followed by Henry)—Thank yo', mistah—thank yo'. Come on, Henry! Let's git on out o' heah.

Henry (on their way down the steps)—Wait a minute—wait a minute—I ain't nevah seen nobody as crazy as you is. Whut is de mattah wid yo'? Another thing, yo' done run away an' lef' yo' hat in dere.

Sam (continuing on his way)—Let it stay dere, Henry. Let it stay dere. I'd ruther lost a hat dan a arm any day.

Henry, I'se 'bout to faint.

Judge Bear Gets Hunk with Crafty Fox

GEE WHIZ, but there were some doings around here last week. Crafty Fox got it again. He thought he'd play a good joke on old Judge Bear and—— But I'll tell you all about it.

I saw Zip Coon shin up a tree, and when he got on the end of an old dead limb he began to scream.

Down in the valley a pack of hounds were yelping their heads off. They were after Crafty Fox, and the old sinner was just legging it over the landscape. Over stone walls and into the creek he went. Then out again. Soon he was lost to view. Then the noise stopped.

They thought I was Crafty Fox.

Zip Coon slid down the tree.

"It beats the Dutch how that boy can wiggle out of trouble," says he. "I do wish they would chase him out of these diggings, then Benny Bunny and I cculd live in peace."

While he was talking old Crafty himself hobbles up, his tongue hanging out of his mouth. My, O my! but he was tired.

"I've had one awful time, Zip," says he, "an awful time. Those hounds were after me. Just think of it! After me! But I fooled them. Yessir! I took them around by Judge Bear's cabin and lost them."

Just then the yelping commenced again. Crafty began to grin. "Hear that? I'll bet those ki-yis are saying a few kind words to somebody. I wonder who it is?"

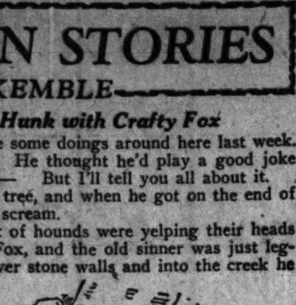
"THAT'S all right," squeaks Zip Coon, who has shinned up the tree as soon as Crafty appeared, "but they may come chasing up here any minute, and you're too tired to run any more."

"But where can I hide, Zip?" wailed Crafty. "Please help me! Where can I hide?"

"Scoot into my shack and get under the bed," says Zip, and he looked wicked when he said it.

As Crafty crawled out of sight he called back to Zip:

"Old Judge Bear in his old high hat,
I'll bet this very minute he is feeling quite flat."



When he got on the end of an old dead limb.

Zip Coon's eyes almost popped out of his head as he slid down the tree, for who should come crashing through the brushes but Judge Bear himself. Zip knew he would come.

"Have you seen anything of that old sinner Crafty Fox?" he growled. "If I can lay my mitts on that chap I'll teach him a lesson he'll never forget. Look what he did to me. Look at my clothes! He led those dogs right up to my door, with his miserable scent, then he skipped around the other way, and when I came out to see what all the fuss was about they tackled me. Rassled me all over the place. Just look at my clothes! Torn to bits! When the pups finally recognized me they apologized and said they thought I was Crafty Fox. Woof! Woof! but I'm mad!"

ZIP COON winked his eye, and, pulling Judge Bear's ear down, whispered in it:

"Sneak softly into my cabin and lie down on my little bed as hard as you can, Judge, AS HARD AS YOU CAN."

Blam! Down it went!

Judge Bear did just as he was told, and when he hit that bed, BLAM! Down it went.

Zip Coon looked through the window and giggled as he chirped:

"Old Crafty Fox, in his old felt hat,
I'll bet this very minute he is feeling quite flat."

The day that baby sister arrived grandpa took my five year old cousin Bobby to his club for lunch.

On being introduced to Bobby, one of grandpa's friends inquired, "Are you an only child?"

"O, no," answered Bobby. "I have four brothers and one sister."

"What!" exclaimed the old gentleman, "five boys and only one girl?"

"Well," replied Bobby defensively, "we've only just begun on girls."

G. W. C.

I heard the boys on the street calling my new neighbor boy "Hank." A few days later I called on his mother, and, as he answered the doorbell, I said, "Hello, Hank."

"Hush," he said, looking around furtively, "I'm Hank to the boys on the street, but at home I'm Harry James."

Bring Out the Hidden Beauty

Do you know that just beneath that soiled, discolored, faded or wrinkled complexion is one fair to look upon? Mercolized Wax will gradually and gently peel off the devitalized surface skin, revealing a new, fresh, white, beautiful skin underneath. The new complexion is a perfectly natural one, therefore in no way to be compared with a make-up. The wax leaves no trace but that of increased loveliness.

A New Skin—Your Own!—at small expense and effort. Simply apply Mercolized Wax at bedtime as you apply cold cream; wash it off in the morning. Fine, almost invisible, skin particles are flicked off with the wax. No harm possible. No detention indoors. The lively, young, healthy underskin is brought gradually to view—you have the exquisite complexion of robust girlhood—and every one will tell you.

You Look Years Younger.—Assist Nature if she needs your help. Obtain an ounce of Mercolized Wax from your druggist or department store, use as directed—and you will bless the day that you made the acquaintance of this wonder working product.

Mercolized Wax

ISN'T IT ODD

By William Alberton Du Puy

ISN'T it odd that the tiny chickadee should be able to stay in the north through all the snows of winter and seems to get along quite well, thank you?

If you notice this brave little bird out in the snow you will see that it does not even take the trouble to keep its nose turned toward the wintry blasts as do most creatures of its kind. Let them try to ruffle its feathers and get through to its skin if they can. It dares them.

Examining the coat of the chickadee one would find that the rough feathers on top are but the trimmings of its protection from the cold. Beneath that is a thick layer of down that defies the cold. Then the chickadee puts a layer of fat just under the skin, just as whales and seals do, as an extra-efficient protection against the cold.

Inside this covering the chickadee burns one of the busiests little stoves any animal possesses. It keeps up a piping temperature. Its body is constantly some ten degrees hotter than is that of man. Man would burn up with fever at 105, but the chickadee is 108 to 110 all the time.

It keeps this temperature by stoking its furnace steadily. The chickadee is a huge eater for its size. If its body were stripped of feathers it would not be bigger than a man's thumb to the first joint. Yet by actual tests one of these birds has been shown to eat 20 sunflower seeds in an hour. This fuel goes into the fire to keep the heat up.

Most of the other birds have gone south for the winter because they do not like the cold and because it is hard to get food. The chickadee still manages to get along. It still finds insects in its own way although there seem to be none left in the world. It prowls along the trunks of trees and digs out grubs that have been hidden in the crevices for the winter. It eats insect eggs no bigger than pin-points, but they help so small a creature. The grasses and weeds that stick above the snow still have seeds hidden in their tassels and these tiny birds know how to shake them and cause them to rattle down on the snow. Then there are friendly human beings who put suet out for the birds. This is a kindly thing to do and is appreciated, but the chickadees are not dependent on charity. Many of them live along the edge of the woods, sleeping by night in dense pines and cedars, quite away from the haunts of man.

Bright Sayings of Husbands and Wives

The snappy comeback of the better half when cornered has often been a source of wonder to husbands and wives! The husband or the wife has come across with a bright saying that will never be forgotten by the other half of the matrimonial sketch. What was that bright saying, Mr.? Mrs.? Send it to us and we'll pay you $1 for it if we print it. Address Bright Sayings of Husbands and Wives, The Chicago Tribune, Chicago.

Might Displease Him.

Wife (in back seat)—Henry, dear! You mustn't drive so fast!!

Hubby—Why not?

Wife—The motor cop who has been following us won't like it.

MRS. A. S.

It's Different Now.

I had been giving my husband a lengthy scolding about scattering his belongings all over the house, among other things saying: "I have to be continually running around after you!"

He wearily retorted: "You didn't seem to mind that before we were married."

MRS. C. E. H.

Let Him Hunt.

Hubby broke the news that he was going hunting the next morning at three o'clock and would like breakfast before going out.

I replied: "If you can go hunting at that hour of the morning, you can 'hunt' some breakfast, too!"

MRS. J. N. K.

In Her Own Words.

Rastus was old, but he had a young wife whose labors over the washboard kept them both. At last Mirandy rebelled and they went before the judge to get a divorce.

Said the judge: "This is too bad—a case of June married to December."

"Whats' dat, judge?" said Mirandy. "Seems to me a heap mo' like Labor day married to de day ob rest."

MRS. G. A. W.

Great Pains.

Wife: "I have taken great pains in making those cookies, by my own recipe, for you."

Husband: "Yes, and I'm going through great pains in eating them, too. They'd make good wedges."

R. F. H.

O, No!

We were discussing a woman who nagged her husband. So I ended by saying: "I never nag you, do I, dear?"

He answered: "No, darling. You just persist."

Correct Invitation Forms - - - - - By Persis Standish.

Many Innovations in Social Stationery Have Appeared During Last Two Years.

Persis Standish will answer questions of all kinds on etiquette, manners, and politeness. Self-addressed, stamped envelopes must accompany each request for information. Send your letters to Persis Standish, Sunday Room, Chicago Tribune.

MANY correspondents write to ask the correct form of invitations and regrets and what sort of stationery they should be written on. The correct form for invitations depends, of course, upon the occasion. Nowadays unless a party is formal invitations can either be telephoned or written in as informal fashion as a personal note. Tea invitations can be written on one's visiting card.

For wedding invitations and formal engraved forms for invitations to luncheon and dinner I can do no better than recommend that you go to one of the best stationers in your city and order them made up. They should, of course, be engraved, but there are permissible differences in wording and in type that perhaps you would like to choose yourself.

A lot depends, too, on how elaborate the wedding is to be and what cards to breakfast and other celebrations must be enclosed. Besides, every year there are new styles slightly different and yet correct, even for this simple conventional matter. For instance, this particular year it is considered smart by some to have a large envelope into which the wedding invitation will go without being folded, so that after it is in its outside envelope the invitation looks like a valentine or some official document, as it is about five and one-half by six inches in size.

Answers.

Another style is to have a slight indenture about an inch from the margin of the paper forming a sort of border around the script. The enclosure cards are treated in the same way. The newest thing in stationery for this occasion has a vellum or parchment finish slightly off white.

The answers to wedding invitations should be made thus:

If the invitation is to the church only, no answer is required.

If there is a card enclosed to breakfast or reception, the answer should follow the invitation form as closely as possible and should be sent within a week at latest of receiving the invitation.

Wedding invitations should be sent out not earlier than three weeks, and not later than a fortnight before the wedding. No wedding invitation should be sent out bearing the legend, "And family." Each member of a family should be honored by a separate card, if he or she is to be a guest at the wedding.

Wedding Announcements.

Wedding announcements look very much like wedding invitations. The enclosure card should bear the new address of the bride and groom and a date on and after which they will be "at home"—in other words, settled enough to receive visitors. Wedding announcements should be sent out immediately after the wedding, or at least within the next twenty-four hours. Sometimes they are sent later, but the usual thing is to send them immediately.

A wedding invitation merely to the church, or a wedding announcement, does not obligate one to send a gift, as an invitation to a wedding breakfast or reception does. It does not, however bar one from doing so.

Invitations to very formal balls, dances, dinners and receptions can be engraved. The stationer will have several styles of these to show you, too. It is equally good taste and implies equal formality for a formally worded invitation to be written in long hand on the stationery of the hostess. There are also invitation forms half engraved and half written, which are perfectly correct, but less formal, which hostesses who entertain a great deal use to save time.

Forms Given.

The answers to all these invitations should be written in long hand on one's personal stationery (not that of a club or hotel), and should follow the wording of the invitation as nearly as possible. For instance, if the invitation reads thus:

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Harcourt Jones request the pleasure of your company at dinner on Wednesday evening, April the tenth, nineteen hundred and twenty-five.
Eight o'clock. 1225 Park place.

The answer should read:

Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Ainsworth Smith accept with much pleasure the kind invitation
of
Mr. and Mrs. Roy Harcourt Jones
for dinner on Wednesday evening, April the tenth, nineteen hundred and twenty-five.
Eight o'clock. 1225 Park place.

This year there are some variations in style of calling cards also. The vellum finish is being much used and the card is sometimes made up so that there is a flap the same size as the card on which the owner may write little messages to send to hospitals with flowers, or to put in the box with any gift.

Use Full Name.

They also can be used for invitations to informal teas, but for this purpose it is much more correct to use a single card. Visiting cards are indented also, giving a slight border from an eighth to a quarter of an inch. As to the type of lettering, it is optional, but conspicuous types are always in bad taste. Old English is always good.

The name on the visiting card should be in full. No initials are ever used for this purpose. For instance, Mrs. Harry James Smith would never be Mrs. Harry J. Smith, and people with elaborate middle names either put them all on, or drop several entirely. Your stationer will help you with all these things, but be warned that even the best stationers carry in stock some articles that are only good for commercial purposes and purposes of organizations such as clubs and societies.

For instance, it is perfectly proper for a business organization to send out cards thanking people who have written the organization about the death of one of its officials, but it is never correct for a family to do this. All letters of thanks and consolation should be written in long hand—the smart stationers to the contrary notwithstanding.

Many Innovations.

To return to the subjects of invitations, there are many innovations within the last couple of years. An invitation to a luncheon at a very smart club, the luncheon given by several hostesses, came on pale yellow paper lately, and the luncheon followed the same color scheme even to the damask. Things like this, however, are a bit risky for the ordinary hostess who is having a few friends to luncheon.

It is much better for her either to write the invitations in long hand or to have the conventional plate made without the date and the hour, so that she may use them for a long time. If a conservative plate is chosen, it may be used a number of years, selecting the stationery each year from the best style of that season.

The same invitations cannot, unfortunately, be used for luncheon and dinner because dinner invitations are always issued in the name of host and hostess.

Results of Jealousy

We're all acquainted with jealousy, the monster that smashes love affairs, wrecks homes, causes business quarrels, and generally plays havoc with us mortals. We'd like to know your most notable experience with a jealous person or persons. If you have encountered a situation where jealousy led to a tragic or ridiculous climax, tell us about it. The Tribune will pay $1 for every story published. Address Jealous Editor, Chicago Tribune.

Jealous of Her Job.

Amy was jealous of her job, which was welfare work in a department store. She would go into tantrums and tears in the manager's office whenever any one else did a bit of work that she considered belonged to her department.

And above all things she was anxious to "sit in" at the executive meeting, but the management did not so decree. Finally, the manager's private secretary, who was being trained to become assistant manager, was invited to "sit in" at the executive meeting.

Amy found it out and raised such a hubbub that the manager rescinded the order and excluded the secretary from the meeting rather than admit Amy, so both lost out by Amy's jealousy.

L. G. W.

A Confession.

I disclaimed the trait of jealousy, but when my husband's sister came to call on us, and he displayed a new suit he had just purchased to her before he did to me, and asked her approval before I had given mine, I was so filled with jealousy that although it was a beautiful suit and looked well on my husband, I angrily told him it made him look old, that I did not like it, and that I absolutely refused to go out with him when he wore it.

MRS. H. G.

Jealous of Her Brother.

The most jealous person I know is a young woman who is married, and is supported by a fond husband.

She has an unmarried brother of whom she is extremely jealous. When she goes home to visit, she puts her parents to unnecessary trouble and expense, borrows money from them, does not pay it back; says if she pays it back this brother will have more, and is continually saying catty things about him.

This brother is still in his 'teens and is entitled to some support. R. V. N.

Dog Acts Like Human.

We have recently acquired an American Pit Bull terrier. When friend husband kisses me good-bye on leaving in the morning and greets me on returning, Tiger Boy jumps up from his blanket, rushes to where we happen to be standing, leaps upon us, whining and growling. Hubby pets him, kisses me again, and goes about his business.

The dog sulks and pouts for a half hour. Food, or his chain shaken alluringly as a promise for a run, does not appeal to him just then. If the telephone rings and some one greets Tiger Boy through the receiver, or the crystal radio set is working and he can listen through the head phones he forgets his peeve.

Corns Lift Off

You'll laugh, really! It is so easy and doesn't hurt one bit!

Drop "Freezone" on that old, bothersome corn. Instantly it stops aching; then shortly you lift that sore, touchy corn right off with your fingers. It works like a charm, every time.

A tiny bottle of "Freezone" costs only a few cents at any drug store, sufficient to remove every hard corn, soft corn, corn between the toes and calluses—Try it!

Freshen That Drawn, Sallow Complexion

How can faces look clear and fresh and youthful when pores are laden with days-old dust and dry oil and powder? They can't.

How can they glow with natural health and color when nature's life-giving blood never floods them? They can't.

Creams and soaps and costly treatments can not refresh and awaken tired complexions. They need a better cleansing and a gentle stimulus. They need Calonite—a pure, white powder that you apply with a damp wash cloth.

Instantly you feel the burdened pores relax as prime you didn't know was there, bubbles and dissolves; as warm, reviving blood comes tingling to the surface. Blackheads, embedded oil and powder, dissolve. Sallow, oily, lifeless skin glows, clean and clear. Drawn, tired pores relax and breathe naturally. Instantly!

No waiting for Calonite's benefits. You see and feel them—instantly. How fresh and young and new your skin! How it responds to night-cream and rest. How you enjoy this gentle, stimulating, facial cleanliness. You look and feel a different person.

Ask your druggist for Calonite. Try it, this very night. Your money back if not delighted.

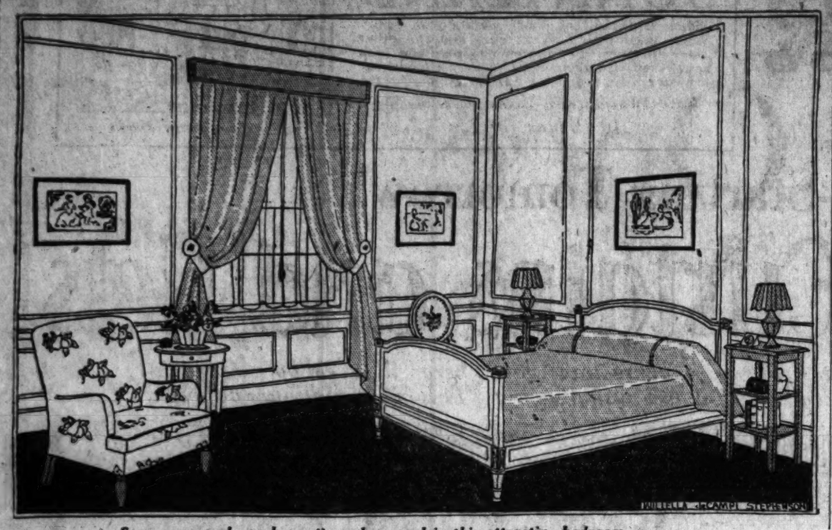
The HOME HARMONIOUS

By WillElla De Campi Stephenson.



Sage green and peach are the colors used in this attractive bedroom.

The "Trimmings" of a Room: The Draperies, Upholstery and Rugs Express the Personality of the Owner.

WillElla de Campi Stephenson will be glad to assist the homemaker in any problems pertaining to home building and home furnishing. Address your letter to Anita de Campi, The Tribune, Chicago. Inclose stamped, addressed envelope for personal reply.

SELECTING furniture for the bedroom is no difficult problem. There are always the same requisite pieces, with an occasional added piece or two. But in the "trimmings" great varieties may be shown. Draperies, rugs, lamps, and especially bed covers, are of utmost importance in the decorative qualities of the rooms in which they are used. In looking for beautiful bed spreads, nowadays, we look almost anywhere other than in the bedding department. Most exquisite bed coverings may be bought in the upholstery sections. They are selected, frequently, to match the draperies used in bedrooms.

One charming bed cover which I have seen, was bought in a linen store, supposedly to be used as a tablecloth. It is made of pineapple linen, with beautiful medallions of drawn work, and elaborate embroidery, all in a soft cream color. The ingenious bride, to whom it was given as a wedding present, lived in a small apartment where the dining table was not large enough to do justice to the lovely thing, so she immediately decided to use it as a bed cover. It is spread out in full glory, over an undercover of intense turquoise blue sateen, so that the pattern is advantageously displayed. Walls in the room are pale lemon yellow. At the windows are draperies of flowered glazed chintz, on a turquoise ground. Cream colored gauze makes the glass curtains. The rugs are of deep, plum colored chenille.

In the room shown in today's illustration, the bed cover and draperies are of heavy, lustrous sage green satin. [Sateen could be used instead]. These are simply made and beautifully effective, blending nicely, in their mellow tone, with the antique ivory furniture, which is touched with gold.

Paneled walls are painted peach color, with fine lines of gold in the moldings. On top of a small table beside the bed is a sage green and gold tôle lamp, with a plaited ivory shade. Shelves in the lower part of the table hold a few convenient accessories and books.

The small arm chair and a chaise longue are upholstered in glazed chintz, with fruit decorations, on a pale green ground. Glass curtains are of sheer peach colored voile, making a soft glow of light. A collection of French prints, in narrow gold frames, lends interest to the plain walls.

Another bedroom has cream colored walls and woodwork. Window draperies and covers on the twin beds are made of chintz, with fruit decorations, on a cream ground. They are finished at the edges with ruffles of the same. Ruffled cream colored net with large dots is used for glass curtains. Between the beds is a set of narrow, standing shelves. A majolica bird lamp is placed on top. It has a shade of rose colored taffeta, edged with leaf green. On the next shelf below are a water bottle and glass, and beneath these a selection of books.

As blue is the dominant color in the nosegays, a pair of Wedgwood blue pottery lamps is used on the dressing table. These are fitted with square shades of stretched pink georgette over ivory silk. They are banded at the edges with shaded rose ribbon. Old blue wool chenille rugs are used on the floor.

A reverse of bed covers and draperies is used in another bedroom. The covers are made of mauve taffeta, finished with deep, full ruffles of pale green. At the windows are mauve gauze glass curtains, beneath pale green taffeta draperies and lambrequins. These are edged with mauve ruffles. A mauve and gold lamp on a stand between the beds is fitted with a shade of finely plaited, pale green georgette. The walls are covered with a light gray paper, sprinkled with field flowers in soft tones. All of the furniture is painted a soft, dull green, decorated in the Venetian manner with floral medallions and trims of gold.

Unusually attractive is a room with draperies of linen, showing a pattern of large flowers in tones of amber and orange on a white ground, finished with wide, scalloped bands of jade green linen. They hang straight to the floor, from beneath scalloped wooden cornices painted jade green with fine borders of amber. Covers on the twin beds are of the flowered linen, boxed to fit, and piped with jade. The pillows are covered with a strip of jade green linen, piped with amber. Narrow hanging shelves between the beds are made of walnut, to match the rest of the furniture. The walls are light pistachio green. Moss green rugs, with borders of deeper green, are used on the floor.

Strikingly different and effective is a room done in black and white. The furniture is enameled glossy black, with fine lines of jade green at the edges to relieve the severity. At the windows are draperies of an amusingly patterned black and white material, lined with white sateen. They hang straight to the floor, and are topped by wooden cornices, painted to match the furniture. These cornices hide the mechanism of pulley cords by which the draperies may be drawn together. No glass curtains are used.

On the three-quarters width bed, which stands lengthwise against the wall, a black fur cover is used, and against the wall are placed several cushions of bright colors. In lieu of the black fur cover, a cover of black rep, piped with jade, might be used.

The walls are done in a white paper, with black polka dots. Woodwork is painted black, with jade green sinkages. Mottled white parchment, bound with black, and decorated with a fine line of jade, makes lamp shades and shields for the side lights. The floor is rugged with black chenille.

Dressings for old colonial beds are always interesting. In an early American room the large four post bed has a tester valance and deep flounced cover of white dotted Swiss, trimmed with ball tassel fringe. Across the foot of the bed, a lovely old pieced quilt is folded. At the windows are ruffled glass curtains of the dotted swiss. Draperies are made of plain strawberry pink glazed chintz, edged with ball tassel fringe.

The walls are done in a white paper, with pencil lines of strawberry pink. On a stand beside the bed is a white glass lamp with a parchment shade decorated with rosebuds. A wing chair, near one of the windows, is upholstered in quilted blue and white calico. The same material covers a small sofa which stands against the foot of the bed.

In the space between two windows a maple highboy is placed. A maple desk, with a ladder back, rush bottom chair, stands in one corner. It is lighted by a polished steel reading lamp, with a pink accordion plaited paper shade. Completing the furnishings is a maple bureau, above which a characteristically colonial mirror is hung. Colorful hooked rugs enliven the floor.

Amused a Storeful.

I had just come home for the Christmas holidays after having been away at school since September and I was helping my dad in our grocery store during the holiday rush. I had not yet come out of the school atmosphere and was going rather absent mindedly about my work.

The store was full of people and I was waiting on a little old lady. I had given her some eggs, some sugar, and then she asked me, "How do you sell sweet potatoes?"

I understood her to say, "How do you spell," etc. And immediately I started out, s-w-e-e-t p-o——"

I got just so far when I realized what I was doing. Everybody was smiling and some big fellow broke out into a "haw, haw, haw."

That was the signal and soon everybody was laughing loudly. I left the store, almost crying. I never hope to be in such a position again.

C. M. N.

Guessed Wrong.

One bright day last summer I went to the photographer to have my picture taken, and I took a little four year old girl with me.

After having my picture taken, and when we were ready to leave, the photographer said, "Mrs. G. you have such a nice little daughter and she is the image of her mother."

Was I embarrassed? Well, I certainly was! I had to explain that I was not married and that the little girl was not mine. P. G.

Hard to Endure.

My most embarrasing moment took place when I was initiated into a well known club. In order to gain membership a group of girls had to don old clothes and walk up and down Michigan avenue dusting the shoes of passers-by.

Further embarrasment was added when my fiancé and his boss passed by and noticed me. O, if the earth could have swallowed me then!

L. H.

Left Handed.

I was invited out to dinner at a friend's and took my 2 year old daughter with me. As dinner was served and we began to eat my daughter began to use her left hand, as she had a habit of doing at home. So of course I made her use her right hand.

My friend's husband asked if she was left handed. I replied "She always like to use it, but I don't like it, as I think it looks so awkward."

And imagine my embarrassment when I looked at him and saw he was left handed. Mrs. F. E. B.

Telling Why.

I was entertaining the ladies' aid in our downstairs apartment. The woman upstairs was not at home, but had kindly offered me the use of her front room. I didn't use it because her ideas of cleanliness were not the best.

Imagine my embarrassment when friend neighbor returned and asked why I hadn't used her room and my daughter piped up with, "My mama says she couldn't take the ladies up there—it's too dirty." C. H. S.

An Unguarded Moment.

One day I was marcelling a woman's hair in my beauty parlor, which is one large room, divided only by a screen. Every one can hear what is being said.

Mrs. S——, who has a beauty parlor across the street, came in to have her hair curled. I was busy, so she sat down in the waiting room to wait her turn.

Not knowing who had come in, I asked the woman whom I was working on where she had her work done before coming to my shop, and she said: "Why, I have been going to Mrs. S——'s shop across the street, but I don't like her, and she can't marcel at all. Why, my hair always looked awful when she curled it."

Needless to say, it was an embarrassing moment for both of us when we discovered Mrs. S—— was in the same room. Mrs. G. A. H.

London Doctor Finds Real Cause of Stomach Gas

AS A RESULT of special studies made at one of London's leading hospitals, a famous English specialist asserts that most stomach and bowel trouble is due to just one cause—Intestinal Stasis. This disease which, it is said, afflicts three out of every four people, is directly caused by improper food, lack of correct exercise and other faults of modern life.

Intestinal Stasis

INTESTINAL STASIS, in everyday language, means the too slow movement of waste food matter through the intestines. This matter, from which the body has taken all the nourishment, is not promptly passed out of the bowels, but due to intestinal weakness, it remains many hours or even days longer than it should. This waste matter then ferments, forms gas and poisons, and is the cause of sour stomach, gas bloating and indigestion.

A person may have Intestinal Stasis and yet not be noticeably constipated. The bowels may move once or even twice a day, but the movements are only partial. Enough old matter is left to form gas, hinder digestion and poison the system.

Action Needed on Both Bowels

ORDINARY laxatives or physics seldom overcome Intestinal Stasis. Nor do soda or magnesia give more than temporary relief from stomach gas. Intestinal Stasis, and the other diseases of which it is the cause, can be relieved permanently only by continued, REAL intestinal cleansing.

Dr. Carl Weschcke, in his private practice, first perfected the bowel cleanser and intestinal prophylactic now known as Adlerika. It is a compound of the best saline intestinal evacuant with vegetable buckthorn and cascara, together with glycerine and other ingredients which expel gas and have detergent action. Adlerika, unlike other medicines, acts upon BOTH upper and lower bowel.

Gas Relieved System Cleansed

ONE of Adlerika's first effects is to relieve gas on the stomach and gas bloating. Even the FIRST spoonful usually brings out a surprising amount of old poisonous waste matter which you never guessed was in your system and which may have been the hidden cause of indigestion, nervous dyspepsia, headache, sleeplessness or other trouble. Even if your bowels move daily, Adlerika frequently brings out a surprising amount of additional matter which might otherwise be poisoning your system.

Many physicians recognize Adlerika as the one dependable remedy for Gas and Intestinal Stasis or whenever REAL bowel cleansing is necessary. No matter what you have tried for your stomach and bowels, Adlerika will surprise you.

What Doctors Say about Adlerika

"I prescribe Adlerika with highly satisfactory results."—Dr. A. C. Curl.

"In my 50 years' practice I have found nothing to excel Adlerika."—Dr. James Weaver.

Ancient gateway to Guy's Hospital, London, where important discoveries about Intestinal Stasis have been made.

"I have to congratulate you on the good effects I had from Adlerika since I prescribed it."—Dr. L. Langlois.

"I have found Adlerika to be far superior in bowel and stomach trouble to my fondest anticipations."—Dr. G. Eggers.

"Adlerika very markedly reduces the number of bacteria and colon bacilli. This feature increases the therapeutic value of Adlerika because, in addition to its intestinal cleansing action, it checks and inhibits the growth of these intestinal bacteria and bacilli."—Dr. H. L. Shoub, New York.

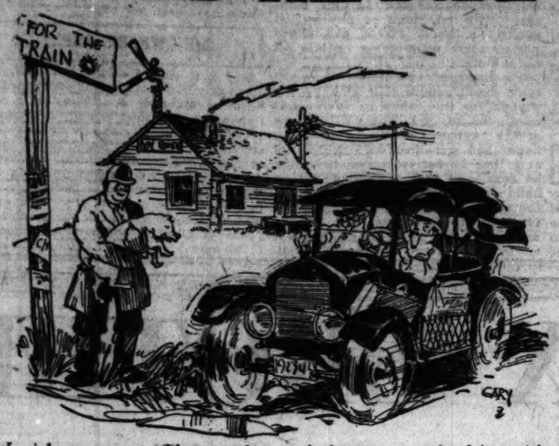
THE B. AND C. AND THE DUKE

By Duke Bakrak

The Wife's Vacation Takes 'Em to Her Old Home Town.



I wish you guys coulda seen tha wreck they came to tha depot with.

WHOEVER that poet was what said "There's no place like home," must of had our house in mind when he thought of it. Now that we are all settled (except tha bills) and ready to sit down to enjoy tha fruits of our labor, with nothing to do but watch tha rubber plant grow, tha B. and C. decides that on acct. she's all tired out the thing fer her to do is to take a trip down home fer a week with tha baby. Outside of the R. R. fare I wouldn' complain about her going fer a year and if she ever bought a one way ticket I wouldn' complain at all. Right now the bank roll is so aneemick that the least little shock might prove fatal.

What we need more as rail-road tickets right now is curtains an drapes. When we went over to our furniture company last night to purchase some, tha clerk said we could get immediate delivery but he was evidently missinformed as tha credit man said we would have to wait three months. It now looks like tha naybors will keep on gettin a birds eye view of books an plates landing on a certain bird's eye.

HER NERVES SHOT

After getting home I inquired as to just why it was necessary for her to go on this cruise and she informs me her nerves are on edge an she is just shot to pieces, in the 1st place, with her species of nerve I can't figure out why they should be run down as they certainly get plenty of exercise and as far as her being all shot to pieces, I am heartily in favor of it. In a way it's very economical for her to go alone as that is a cheap way for the two of us to get a vacation for the price of one.

Tha big hitch in tha program is that she insists on my getting Saturday morning off so's I could come down Friday night and bring her home Sunday. I firmly refused to do this act and of course me being tha last word, I will take the 7:52 P. M. train Friday. Also I was forced to tell her that it was impossible to be at tha train Monday, when she left. I paced tha depot for a ½ hour and one minute before train time she blows in.

One Saturday and Sunday I spent three months down in that Cemetery an I sure dread the day I gotta go again.

CLOTHES TA BUY

The idea of her bracing me for 10 bucks spending money is a joke. You coudn' spend a dollar a day in that tomb unless you bought all the ice cream that Sweete-Shoppe had, and it's a cinch ya can't lose a helova lot gambling, cause last time we was visiting they played dominoes for raisins.

What gets my goat is no matter where a woman goes (if it's only out of the city limits) it seams there's always some clothes to buy while all us birds ever do is to get a hair cut. If I follow all her instructions such as making tha bed, keeping tha windows closed, marking up tha milk card, and twenty other things I will hafta purchase a season ticket in a rest cure.

Well, she left last Monday and I certainly fixed me up a swell feed when I got home. There's been a can of asparagas tips in tha pantry for a cupple weeks which I was tole not to touch cause you couldn' tell but what maybe unexpected company might drop in some time an she would open it then. They was very good on acct. I melted a ½ pound of butter to go on them. It's a damn good thing she didn' have 2 cans.

LIMBURGER!

Tuesday night I brought home some swell eats and included a brick of limburger which I figgered on makin 3 or 4 sandwiches fer a midnight lunch to kind of take away the after taste of my little batch which I guess I tole you turned out a little smelly. I mus'n't ferget to ditch any of this cheese what's left over Friday morning on acct. tha B. and C. has always said she would never allow any Limburger to come into our house. I remember that time I tried to explain to her that it was considered healthy and that some people didn' know what was good for them to which she says, "Anything with that smell would be considered sickly," and as far as people not knowing what was good for them was concerned, if I knew what was good for me I'd never try and drag any home.

Wednesday night I made bacon an eggs and Thursday night eggs an bacon. After I got finished I did the weekly dishes and Friday morning I made the damn bed. I wish some of you guys coulda seen tha wreck they came to tha depot with Saturday morning when I hopped offen that train, tha fenders flapped like a trained Seal before you throw him a fish. Tha Pa-in-law tries ta tell me it's 3 years old, if that relic is on it's 3rd birthday, my grandfather is 12 yrs. old.

A BUSY DAY

Ennyway on acct. they eat breakfast at 5:30 all I get is cold pancakes and some warmed over coffee, from the taste of it I think it was warmed over from last month. Saturday, up to noon time tha ole man takes me all over the farm an if I woulda listened to 1-10th of what he was xplainin I possibly could run for Sec. of Agriculture. What tha hell do I care about as how, "His favorite heffer had a bad spell of heaves but warsn't quite as sick as war a week come nex' Choosday." I suggested maybe he should have her tonsils and adnoids removed. Guess I musta been talkin in his bum ear cause he answers my suggestion by saying, "Buddy ya didn' maybe bring a little likker up with ya from Sheecawgo did ya?" Well, I did borrow a pint but if that spendthrift had an idea I was gonna swap him a shot for a cup of 2nd hand coffee he's got a lot more guesses comin.

Saturday afternoon the big brother who is in charge of "The Busy Bee" which happens to be tha town department store asks me, did I wanta see tha emporium? After knowing I had learned everything about farming, I figgered I'd better learn that store bizzness on acct. maybe some time I'd have a poor crop of Wheat and I could make up that difference by puttin in 12 or 13 hrs. a day at that store after I finished tha daily chores.

This bazaar sells anything from a piece of liver sausage to a tomb-stone. If they ever wanted to sell me one of their departments I would take tha "Hair Tonic" an "Bitters" counter, it's tha busiest part of the place. How those guys can hit that stuff and live is beyond me. While I was in that place I was introduced to two celebrities, Ephriam Heimerdinger who is the town's "Champeen horse shoe pitcher" and Frank Sanborn who has won all tha "Hog Calling Contests."

THA WEEKLY MOVIE

Saturday night was my treat an I took the whole damn bunch to the school house where tha weekly movie show is put on. I enjoyed that feature picture very much as I hadn' see it in three years. Tha comedy must of been funny cause I noticed a lotta yaps laughing. That News reel was very interesting, it showed the boys embarking for France, Mayor Walker of New York handing that Prince of Wales that key to tha city and other late events. As a special treat a announcer got on tha platform and informed us that at a great expense they had procured a added feature, the 19th episode of the "Perils of Pauline." After Miss. Aileen Ryan sang "Kiss me again" with colored slides and jestures I treated tha gang to ice cream and then we went home and hit tha hay.

I was introduced to two clebrities.

Sunday after church that Pa-in-law drove "Decrepit" over to that river to show me tha dam sight, I'da damn sight rather of walked. Ennyway after we eat and get a treat in that way of looking at "Niagara Falls" and "Yellowstone Park" through a new invention called a "Photoscope" we get to packing and at half four we was on the train on the way back home.

If anybody ever willed me a home in that town I would trade it off fer a litter of kittens and then drowned 'em.

TOURING THE OLD TANK TOWNS

By Joe Dorn

Tales of the Days When Road Shows Played "the Sticks"

THERE have been many wonderful changes in theatrical and circus life during the last two decades, but none so remarkable, perhaps, as in the smaller cities of the country, or, as show people loved to call them, the "tank towns." In the early years of the present century cities of from 3,000 to 20,000 population could seldom boast of more than one place of amusement, always referred to as the "opery house." Once a week or once in two weeks a traveling show would be booked in it. It might be a "blood and thunder" drama, a New York musical comedy success with a small town cast, or a burlesque show, but it was always a big event and the town would be waiting at the railroad station or the Commercial hotel for a "close-up" of "them show gals and actor fellars."

On nights when no traveling company was to appear the "opery house" might be used for home talent plays, church socials, or political meetings. But with the coming of moving pictures these conditions changed immediately, and far seeing business men made haste to erect substantial theaters. With their opening the old wooden "opery house," usually upstairs over the general store, became a thing of the past.

The heroine shook off her chains and walked off-stage

THE PRE-MOVIE DAYS

My stories of theatrical and circus life will cover the period just preceding the event of motion pictures and will be true incidents of the "big tops" and "hall" shows of those days.

The staff of a small town playhouse usually consisted of the owner or lessee, who might also be proprietor of the flour and feed store, as well as mayor and justice of the peace. He would act as stage manager when he had a show, while his wife would sell tickets. The manager of the attraction woud take tickets at the door. Advance sale of seats was at the house owner's store, if he had one, or in some prominent store until an hour or so before curtain time, when the ticket rack would be taken to the box office.

"Opery house" stage hands were always the bane of the traveling manager's life. He carried his own, anywhere from two to seven or eight, according to the size of his show and the amount of scenery used, but by the terms of the playing contract the house had to furnish enough men to load and unload the show, shift scenes, work the fly gallery, etc.

A CLEVER TRICK

When a show arrived at the theater there were usually twenty or thirty men and boys ready to act as "stage hands." They'd carry in the scenery and work between the acts. During the performance the entrances were so jammed with them that the show people had a hard time getting "on" to answer their cues. But with the final curtain how they would scatter! And by the time the traveling stage hands started to take down their drops not one of them could be found. They had seen the show without paying, and that was all they wanted.

One property man, however, of a rather heavy musical comedy had a way of getting the better of these "stage hands." He carried an extra property trunk with the show baggage, and the town boys who wanted to "work" the show had to check their coats and hats with him before they were permitted to get on the stage. He would lock these coats and hats in the property trunk and the owners could only redeem them at the door of the baggage car after the show was loaded for the next "jump."

RIVAL THEATERS

A prosperous coal mining town of Pennsylvania boasted of two theaters, one a vaudeville house and the other for "combinations," as traveling shows were called. It was a good town from a box office standpoint, and the house managers had little trouble booking good acts and shows. Melodramas were the most popular, and everything from "Alone in London" to "The Heart of Chicago" was seen there, always playing to capacity business."

One time "Shadows of a Great City," or some such production, was appearing at the melodrama house. The Burke Brothers, famous Irish and Jewish comedians of those days, were topliners at the vaudeville theater. Their Hebrew makeup consisted of well worn Prince Albert coats, "high water" trousers, big shoes, and ancient hats. They wore long, black beards and sang Jewish songs and parodies.

In the melodrama at the other playhouse was a "tank" scene wherein the villain and his dastardly hirelings chain the heroine to the floor of a dungeon near the East river, New York, dock. As they make their exit through a trap door in the roof the villain turns and hisses:

"There, my proud beauty, in three minutes the tide will rise and no power on earth can save you!"

Then through a round hole that looks like the end of a sewer water begins to flow into the dungeon. From the front of the house it seemed as though several hundred gallons a minute were pouring in on the hapless girl. The floor of the dungeon was covered with a rubber carpet with a two or three inch bank around it. Only an inch or two of water would cover the rubber carpet. By that time the hero would come diving through the hole in the wall and rescue the girl. Loud applause and curtain.

AN ANTI-CLIMAX

It was a custom among the performers at both theaters to visit back and forth in their makeups. When any one had a few minutes to spare he would drop over to the other house to watch a bit of the show. The Burke brothers, waiting for their cue in the Jewish makeup, had crossed over to the melodrama house. They arrived just as the water began pouring into the dungeon. Then, seized with a practical joke impulse, they climbed into the dungeon and walked down through the water to the front of the stage and began singing "Rachel Goldstein," a Jewish comic song.

Up to this time the audience, consisting mostly of women and children—it being a matinée—was in tears at the threatened fate of the beloved heroine. A minute later they were howling with delight at the funny song and the antics of the Burke brothers. Off stage the hero was cursing at the interruption. The heroine herself got tired of waiting to be rescued, tossed off her chains, and walked off stage. The Burke brothers, finishing their song, made their exit and hastened over to their own theater to do their act.

The audience in the melodrama house was in an uproar. Speeches by the manager and some of the actors did no good. They wanted an encore from the Burke brothers and refused to be quiet until the manager went to the other theater and begged the comedians to come over once more and pacify his patrons. This they did.

"TURKEY" SHOWS

IN the old days, before actors, managers, and advance agents learned to save their money, it was a custom for some of them to club together and take out what was known as a "turkey" show, a small company hastily put together, and book it at the summer resorts and other places. The name of the show didn't matter. Whatever billing matter a show printing concern would have in stock would do.

They began doing their regular act again in their street clothes.

In the summer of 1903 two of us who had just closed with our regular company took out such a show. We were fortunate in getting "dates" of a week each in Milwaukee, Minneapolis, and St. Paul, and then played one nighters through Wisconsin and Minnesota. Our company consisted of about ten girls and three or four men. It was booked under a high class musical comedy title, the posters and lithographs of which we had purchased from a Chicago show printing house.

We had a prosperous summer season and our final week, early in August, was played at a street railway park near Marinette, Wis. All of us were signed with regular shows and we were due to leave for New York to begin rehearsals about that time. We had made arrangements to leave Marinette for Chicago the following Sunday morning. About the middle of the week the manager of the park asked us to stay and play an extra Sunday. My partner and myself put it up to the company, but they refused. They were tired of the long summer work and wanted a short rest before starting the regular show season.

WELL PLANNED

Only two persons were willing to stay over a day and play the extra Sunday night. They were a man and wife who did an acrobatic act. Neither could do much else. The woman worked in the chorus and the man had a dumb part in the show. We told the manager, but he begged us to fix up some kind of a show, as he couldn't get anything for Sunday night, which always meant capacity at the park theater. We called this one act that would stay over—it was known as "the Flying Franks"—and put the proposition up to it. The two agreed to do their best to give a show. We told the park manager we would give him a Sunday night show for $300. He agreed.

The remainder of the company left for Chicago Sunday morning, but the park manager didn't know that. We bought railroad tickets and Pullman accommodations on the train which left Marinette Sunday evening. By eight o'clock that night a misty rain started and the large park theater was packed. By show time, 8:30 o'clock, aisles and every other part of the place was filled. We got our $300 and started for the town. The Flying Franks were instructed to go as far as they could with a show, then "beat it" to the depot and meet us behind the freight station a half block from the passenger depot.

With the opening of the "show" the Franks did their act, which was good, and stretched it out as long as they could. Then the woman came out alone and tried to sing a song. She had a terrible voice and was hissed off the stage. Then the man came out and tried to do a monologue. It was awful. He had a peculiar lisp in his voice and no one could understand what he was talking about. He didn't know himself, he was so rattled.

A GRAND FRACAS

He had instructed his wife to pack their grips and be ready for a hasty exit. She did so. By this time the audience, those who were not hissing and hooting, were starting to leave the theater. The rain had turned into a downpour and they were forced back.

As a finale to the show the "Flying Franks" in their street clothes began doing their regular act again. Missiles began coming up on the stage, and some of the audience began following. But the "Flying Franks" were athletes and reached the stage door first. They had planned their route to the depot well and despite their grips, in the rain and darkness they managed to outstrip their pursuers.

Fifteen minutes later they joined us back of the freight station where we crouched in the rain until the 10:10 flyer came along. We climbed on the back platform of the last car and didn't leave it until we were at least ten miles out.

We never took a "turkey" show to Wisconsin again.

A MONOLOGUE STAGE

SHOWS making the coast by way of St. Louis, Kansas City, and Omaha, usually played three one nighters out of Omaha and into Cheyenne, Wyo., for the last half of the week. North Platte, Neb., on the main line of the Union Pacific railroad, was a favorite stopping off place. It had one serious hadicap. The opera house seated 1,000, which was plenty large enough for the town, but the stage was so small there was room for only a monologue act. In time, managers with any kind of productions passed up North Platte, and either played some other town or laid off for the night.

The manager, one of the old school type, didn't realize that a stage big enough for the shows of 1880 would hardly do for the larger attractions of the twentieth century. After his house had remained dark for weeks at a time he decided something must be done, and that something was to build a new theater. This he did, using the space for the new house he used for the old. But instead of a large auditorium and small stage, he built an immense stage and a tiny auditorium. I believe the seating capacity was about 450. I only knew of a few stages that could compare with that North Platte "platform." Those were the Hippodrome and Metropolitan Opera House in New York and the Auditorium in Chicago. "Ben Hur" would have been lost on it.

THE OWNER'S REPLY

The first time I went to the coast after this house was completed I was business manager of "The Rose of Panama," a musical comedy carrying seventy-five people and an immense amount of scenery. We were booked at North Platte, and when I arrived I went back stage to look it over. I was thrilled. It was the first stage I had seen since we left New York on which we could set up all our scenery. I congratulated the old manager, whom I had met many times before. Then I went to the footlights and took a glance out front. I could almost feel shaken hands with the dozen people there been one there at that show that day.

"You certainly have a fine house here," I said to the manager, "but where do you put your audience? You have to play to at least 1,000 people at top prices to break even. You only seat 500 out there."

"Well," he drawled, "there have been kicking about the size of my stage so long that I decided to build a big one, and I did."

"Yes," I said, "but where are you going to put the audience?"

"Don't worry, my boy," was the reply. "It is plenty big enough. I've never filled it yet."

And that was cheerful news to the pilot of a show with a salary list of $2,200 a day.

HOT PAGES FRUM MY DIARY

Trading Troubles With a Wailing Pill Merchant

YESTERDAY morning I wakes up an' discovers that I am 135 pounds uv assorted aches an' pains, so I got kinda scared, in fact I imagined I kood hear harps playing. For instance, I had a sharp pain in the back uv my head wich led me to beleeve that one uv my ideas must have collided with a dream an' got busted. Inasmuch as sum uv my ideas are none too clean I figured that maybe an infection had set in, so I decided to beat it for a doctor's office.

It wuz a rotten morning. The clouds must have bet on the wrong horse because they wuz shedding tears wildly. I never saw so much water before, unless it wuz the time I went down an' visited a milk bottling plant. Well, the rain didn't make me feel no better, in fact I immediately located eight more different pains, so I hails a taxi an' starts for the office uv the nearest Prescription Peddler.

"Hurry," sez I to the chauffeur; "I think I'm gonna die!"

THE GUY KICKED OFF

"That reminds me," sez the Gasoline Bandit, laffing heartily; "let me tell yuh about the last guy wot died in this cab. This is really funny! Wen he got in the car he told me he wuz full uv aches an' pains, an' he sed that he——"

"Lay off that stuff!" I squawks. "Yew sure are the original little ray uv golden sunshine."

"But this wuz really a scream," sez he, howling with mirth, at the same time turning a corner on one wheel; "the joke wuz on me! Yew see, this bird kicked off before I kood collect my——"

"Never mind!" sez I, gittin' real huffed up. "In yer spare time yew otta write a 2 reel comedy for the movies! Call it 'The Undertaker's Victory,' an' be sure to put in a couple uv side-splitting situations, such as the widow being left with eight starving childurn, er sum other stuff uv a like nature wich wood make the audience fall out uv their seats."

Jist then we turned another corner, an' one uv the rear wheels came off. For the next 2 minutes the cab offered its own conception uv an elephant on ice skates. We bumped into everything in sight with the exception uv the roofs uv the buildings. Then we kissed a lamp post an' stopped. I got out an' decided that I better walk the remaining short distance to the doctor's office.

A FAT BOZO

"Well," sez I to the chauffeur, as I paid him, "I think I kin guess the rest uv that story about the last bimbo wot died in this hearse uv yers. Good-by, acrobat."

By the time I reached the doc's plase I had discovered several more pains, so I began to wonder who wuz gonna act as pallbearers for me. I breezes into his joint an' the girl in the outer office told me to sit down till she found out if he wuz bizzy. I told her to hurry up because I wuz passing away pritty fast. About fifteen minutes later she came out an' told me he wuzn't bizzy an' that I kood go right in.

The doc wuz a fat bozo with lots uv whiskers. I'll tell both hemispheres he wuzn't bizzy! He wuz sittin' in a chair lookin' out the window, an' he sure had a sad expression on his mug.

"Doc," sez I, "I'm all in! I think I'm all set for a boat-ride over the river Jordan! I 'have a terrible pain——"

"Yuh know," sez he, turning frum the window with a sigh, "a man is a fool to buy a second hand auto unless he gits it frum a responsible party! Kum here—look out the window. See that car down there? Well, that's mine. Two weeks ago I paid nine hundred smacks for that Gasoline Broncho because I thought it wuz a good car. The egg wot sold it to me has left town. If that's an automobile I am a Pullman porter. Every time I slam the brakes on, a gallon uv ground cork flops out uv the differential! I have to put mustard plasters on the radiator to keep it frum freezing on hot days. The only way I kin keep that engine frum coughing is to paint it with iodine, feed it cod liver oil, an' wrap it up in red flannel! Yessir, I paid out nine hundred frog-skins for that galloping coffee grinder, an' all I got to show for it is a peach uv a windshield surrounded by a hell uv a wreck!"

"Doc," sez I, "pardon me for interrupting yew, but I have a terrible pain in the back uv my head, an' my side hurts an' my legs ache an' my neck is sore an'——"

ARE YOU ANEMIC?

"Yup," sez he, shaking his head sadly, "I sure got a sweet trimming wen I bot that hunk uv junk. Wot gits me so mad is, I kood have added a couple more hundred bucks an' got myself a brand new Blimpus Six! Then I wood have had sumthing for my money. But no, I hadda go an' shoot nine hundred coupons on this low-down, crippled sneeze-wagon. I tell yuh, it makes a guy sore!"

"Lissen," sez I, "wood it interest yew to know that I have an awful pain in the back uv my head, an' I——"

"O, sit down," sez he; "now, wot seems to be yer trouble?" So I went over all the details again for him. By this time I had also accumulated a nasty head-ache.

"Are yew anemic?" sez he.

"I didn't gitcha," sez I. "Am I a WHO?"

"Are yew anemic?" he repeats.

"That's too deep for me," sez I; "I don't know wot I am. Yuh see, my mother wuz born in Scotland, an' the old man came frum London, but I wuz born in this country, so figure it out yerself."

Then he explains that he wants to know wether er not my blood lacks white corporals, so he takes a needle an' jabs me in the lobe uv my right ear, after wich he put a drop uv blood on a piece uv cotton an' placed it in a funny looking, flat little instrument.

"Wot's that thing, doc?" sez I.

"O," sez he, "this little instrument will tell wether er not yew are anemic."

"Aha!" sez I, "an ouija board! Ask the little instrument if Charley Dawes will run for President."

"Ain't that hell!" sez the doc, gazing at the cute little toy, an' frowning.

"Wot's the matter?" sez I, holding my head wich wuz still hurting.

"It didn't work," sez he; "sumthing is wrong with the mechaniam, doggone it! That's enuff to git a man's goat.

OW-W! MY BACK!

Yuh see, this machine is manufactured in New York, an' they certainly charge plenty for 'em. But the hell uv it is, if anything goes wrong with it yew mite jist as well buy a new one, because they charge so darn much to fix one that it is absolutely absurd! Well, I suppose I kin bounce this one out the window an' put in an order for a new one for all they care!" He came an' sat down again.

"Doc," sez I, "this head uv mine feels like it wuz going to bust——"

"Beleeve me," sez the Pill Merchant, as he lit a cigar, "if I ever meet the bozo wot sold me that automobile I'm gonna sock him on the head so hard that his shoe laces will break. The more I think uv it, the madder I git. He wuz supposed to be a friend uv mine, so I——"

"Ow-w! My back!" I squawks.

"That reminds me," sez the doc; "yew shood take a look at the batk uv that car! It has so many dints in it that it looks like a country road. Go down an' take a look at the permanent waves in them fenders! Crawl underneeth that boat an' take a slant at the condition uv the——"

"Ow-ww-ww!! My head!" I howls.

"O, say," sez Whiskers, "wood yew like to have yer blood pressure tested?"

"I don't care wot yew do!" sez I, gittin' mad.

"Good!" sez he; "we will test yer blood pressure." So he dragged out a goofy lookin' machine in a black case, after wich he wrapped eight feet uv garden hose around my arm an' started squeezing on a small rubber bulb. Then he looked at the machine, muttered sumthing under his breath, an' unwrapped the garden hose.

"Well?" sez I.

"Are you married?" sez he.

"No," sez I.

IMITATION RABBIT

"Yew're lucky," sez he; "don't ever git married! I have the most extravagant wife wot ever dragged a poor simp down a church aisle. If she wuz married to John D. Rockafeller he wood have to run an elevator in the evening in order to help pay the charge accounts wich that baby kin roll up. Now she wants a fur coat! Yuh know, a couple years back, the fur dealers used to disguise the lowly rabbit's fur an' make swell coats with fancy names. Now it costs yew five hundred bucks to git a good imitation rabbit! Well sir, yesterday morning at breakfast, the Hindrance announced that she wood like to have one uv them new style pony coats. 'But, my dear,' sez I, 'do yew realize that yew weigh 275 pounds à la Ziegfeld's Chorus, an' considerably more wen yew are dressed?' 'Yeh, wot about it?' sez she. 'Well,' sez I, 'where the hell did yew git the idea that a pony is as large as five horses?' Right away she gits peeved, so she picks up the sugar bowl an' slams——"

"Lissen," sez I, "how about that blood pressure test? Wot wuz the answer?"

"O," sez the Prescription Peddler, "I thought I told yew!"

"Yew ain't told me nothing," sez I; "wot wuz the answer?"

"There wuzn't any answer," sez he; "the machine didn't register, so I suppose the darn thing is busted. That's the third time this month it has went flooey. Well, as I wuz saying, the wife picks up the sugar bowl an' slams me with it. I grabbed my hat——"

"Have yew the slightest idea as to wot is the matter with me?" sez I.

"That ain't such a bad idea," sez I. "So long, doc; send me a bill."

NOTORIETY AND FAME.

Mandy was very fond of telling jokes to her neighbor, so one morning she decided to keep Rachel guessing on this one:

"Rachel, what is the difference between notoriety and fame?"

"Laws, Mandy, I can't ever guess that one," said Rachel.

"Well, $1,000 worth of roses will barely fill a room with perfume, but with a dollar's worth of fried onions you could scent up the whole town. Now, Rachel, that's the difference."

HIS TRAGIC FATE.

"What about your nephew, Elrod, who used to drink so heavily?" asked Beenaway, who had just returned to the old home town.

"Now, there's poor Elrod!" replied old Riley Rezzidew of Petunia. "Looked like he felt just nacher'ly compelled to try to drink all the licker there was. But when he couldn't get any that was fit to drink, he——"

"Great Scott! He didn't die, did he?"

"Worse than that! He took to writing poetry, and is at it yet."—Kansas City Star.

HE WOULDN'T BE DIFFERENT.

"Gal," pleaded a colored suitor at the conclusion of an impassioned proposal, "ef yo' don' ma'y me Ah'll go crazy!"

"Humpf!" sniffed the unmoved belle. "An' who's gwine fin' it out?"—Legion Monthly.

LADIES IN CRIME

"Grandma" Nusbaum, the Amazing Grandmother

By Genevieve Forbes Herrick

ELIZA NUSBAUM, that meager, colorless grandmother who capped 59 years of obscurity with a sensational flare-up of publicity when she confessed to a membership in a bewildering murder syndicate of five, whose plots made away with grandma's husband, Albert, beguiled herself that she was helping kill grandpa all for love of John Walton Winn, whose 40 or so years were youth to her.

But once the confession was made, then repudiated, the faded old housekeeper was jolted into cynicisms when she learned that she didn't even have the comfort of a love affair to prop her up.

For Winn, with his prison record, with his everlasting sucking of his gold bridge work, with his cheaply resplendent haberdashery, didn't play the gallant the way they do in story books.

WINN KNOCKED NUSBAUM TO THE FLOOR and, with Goff, stamped out the old man's life.

"GRANDMA" NUSBAUM as she appeared during her trial.

JOHN WINN, the actual slayer of Nusbaum.
(TRIBUNE Photo.)

PUTS BLAME ON GRANDMA

Winn sat in one room of the state's attorney's office; grandma in another. She was all concern over the younger man, whom she called "Baby." Winn was all concern about John Walton Winn. And when things got pretty warm for him as the questioning went along, he summed up his regard for the woman in the next room in one curt sentence:

"Grandma's framed me."

Just about then Eliza Nusbaum was stumbling down the corridor, supported by the police matron. Grandma's hair was ruffled; her near-seal coat, with the lining frayed, had slipped awkwardly down over her shoulders; her near silk stocking were twisted awry, and the run down heels of her worn satin slippers wabbled over at her every uncertain step.

Through the half open door grandma spied the more or less well dressed Winn. His shoes were shined; his clothing was pressed. His manner was complacent. She looked in; he looked out.

Then she heard this man, to whom, she had admitted, she had been giving $250 a month, insist that "the old gal" was nothing to him.

EIGHTEEN IN FAMILY

She whimpered something to the matron about not wanting to see him; that he had already brought her too much trouble. But as soon as she got back into her room she collapsed. For ten wild, hysterical minutes she screamed and babbled about God and punishment and grandpa and Winn. Always she came coming back to her plea:

"I don't let anybody kill me; promise that you won't let anybody kill me."

After her fit of hysteria, the first the busy housewife had indulged in in all her life, Mrs. Nusbaum became calm, wistful, practical.

"I've worked hard all my life," she said. "I was born in Elkhart, Ind. That's a real nice town, ain't it? My ma had eighteen children; nine died. I was the baby. When I was 16 I married Grandpa Nusbaum. His pa was a farmer. I worked so hard then; lots of boarders. And I cooked and sewed and washed."

9 O'CLOCK ALIBI

Then this curious old lady who was about to stand trial, along with four others, for the brutal murder of her husband, fell, inevitably, into the familiar tricks of virtually every woman who ever gets her name scribbled across a police blotter. Grandma, just like Tillie Klimek or Belva Gaertner; like Mrs. Lillian Rowland or scores of others I could name, grandma fell back on the old nine o'clock lady alibi.

She remembered, and in her case it was true, that she never chased around; that she was a home body, that she cooked a mean dinner, sewed a fine seam and was general utility man of the household.

And so, with a pride that, for the moment, shoved aside the shadow of the Criminal court, grandma sat up straight and said:

"In all their lives, my men folks h'ain't never paid out ten dollars for laundry. They h'ain't never gone to the bureau and not found clean clothes, with the buttons all sewed on. No sir."

Then, still in the mood of retrospection, the old lady who had thought she was having a love affair with Winn, went on:

"Grandpa, he was that stingy. He h'ain't never given me but one present; that was a picture album, about twenty years ago. For his picture, I 'spect."

Sometimes, as she talked, she twisted her hands, with their snub finger nails, all ingrained with soil, and put forth this not unusual philosophy:

"You can't never tell when trouble's gonna come."

NEVER SUSPECT GRANDMA

Certainly, had you passed through that section of South Chicago where the Nusbaums had their home (a pretty substantial one, for grandpa was a carpenter and contractor), you would never have picked out grandma as the possible member of a murder syndicate which did a chilly job in a chilly way.

The Nusbaums lived in their tidy home at 9238 Baltimore avenue. John Walton Winn, a former employé of grandpa's and an itinerant philander who traded a few vague caresses for some real money which grandma got from Nusbaum's rentals, spent much of his time in a confused, casual household at 2947 East 86th street. It was Mrs. Delilah Martin's flat, and Delilah wasn't a bad name for her. In that flat, on easy terms, lived Marion Stringham and Edward Goff. To that flat came Winn. When he came grandma found her way there.

In that flat was hatched the murder plot to get rid of the old carpenter. He was ill, anyway, and stingy, and grandma thought he was in the way of what it pleased her to regard as her love affair. Winn knew the carpenter was in the way of more money for Winn.

MARION STRINGHAM, an accomplice; MRS. DELILAH MARTIN, in whose home Nusbaum was killed; EDWARD GOFF, who confessed, naming Winn as chief actor in the killing.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

KILLED WITH HAMMER

It was the evening of Dec. 29, 1925, that grandma "making supper" in the kitchen of her home, talked pleasantly enough with her 5 year old grandson, even though she knew that Nusbaum had been wooed over, on some flimsy excuse, to Delilah's flat.

What was happening over in the flat was told later, with all the horrible and stark details of a page of Russian realism, by Goff, on the stand in Judge Emanuel Eller's court.

Vividly, perhaps too vividly for the courtroom fans, he described how "the old man," as he called Albert Nusbaum, lay on his back on the floor of the flat. His head was half caved in with a hammer blow, struck by Winn.

Then, according to Goff's story, Winn hit the pitiable old fellow one more blow with that hammer. He tossed a blanket over the mangled face and the courtroom was very still as Goff tells this—he planted his right foot down hard on the face.

The carpenter's head jerked sharply to the right. The next groan is longer and lower. Winn ordered Goff, the latter said, to take his turn at stamping down the blanket and he did as he was told.

GRANDSON ARRESTED

There was a newly dug grave waiting in the yard. But for some reason that burial plan was abandoned and the stiff, distorted corpse was found the next day in a prairie near 94th street and Brandon avenue. It had been lugged there in the tonneau of grandpa's car. The morning it was found, young Floyd Nusbaum, the dead man's grandson, was driving the same car. Police officers halted him to look into the tonneau and, startled, he let them look.

Then he nearly fainted when the officer hauled from a crack in the floor board a piece of Albert Nusbaum's skull. The boy, protesting and bewildered, was taken into custody. His father, Roscoe Nusbaum, more to save his son than to involve his mother, told the police of this pseudo love affair. Winn knocked Nusbaum down and, with Goff, stamped out the old man's life.

LOVE AFFAIR DISCOVERED

Then Roscoe Nusbaum told the police of the love affair of Eliza Nusbaum and John Walton Winn. Police rushed to a hotel in Crown Point. They pulled Winn out of bed. They pinned back his arms in time to save him from destroying a letter. This was the note:

"Just got that, you know. Ransack the house; tear up the stuff in the drawers. I hate to do it, but it's you or me or him.

"I'll get the money on the ring or watch and you'll hear from me soon. Do you love me?"

PLOT IS DISCOVERED

There was no signature. The letter closed: "From mother to my baby."

And it was thus that the plot was discovered.

The path led to the flat; the three were taken into custody by Capt. Patrick Collins. Then the trial led to grandma's neat house. The night before, Goff, according to his story, had gone over to the house and said to the old lady getting supper:

"Well, you're old man is out of the way. You are free; the job is done."

At that time the old lady reeled, almost fainting, and is reported to have whispered, "O God, is it true."

Arrested, taken to Capt. Collins' office, then to the state's attorney's office, then back to South Chicago police station, grandma began, at 59, to learn something about men, at least about John Walton Winn. Repudiated by him, even taunted and laughed at, she swung away from him in as great a fury as a miss of 18 might work up over a beau who tarried with another.

For a few days her affections, if such they were, were flung back to the man who was dead, with her connivance, if not actually by her hand. She pleaded that she might attend his funeral.

GOES TO FUNERAL

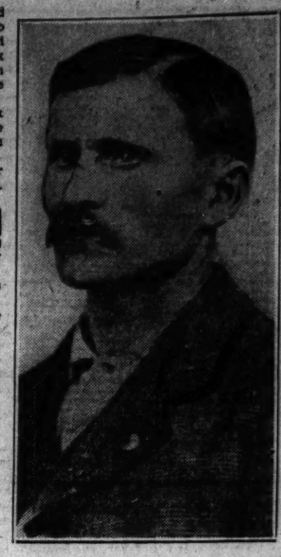
They took her back to her flat. The front room was filled with neighbors and they were none too friendly. But grandma, leaning on the police matron's arm, stumbled into her bed room. Then, for the first time in her whole life, Eliza Nusbaum bethought herself of make-up. This strange woman, part peasant housekeeper, part flaming adventuress, walked over to the dresser. She daubed a swathe of chalky white powder over her nose; she drew a wobbly red line about her drooping lips; she draped a flimsy black veil over her tear-stained face.

Then she went back into the front room to brave the smacking lips and muted comments of two score women folk of the community.

As they led her to the automobile to go to the cemetery the widow murmured, "See, how many cars there are; such a crowd of folks." And she seemed to find solace in this.

Then, suddenly, she decided to go to the cemetery on another day "when there h'ain't no crowds" and returned to her cell at the station, muttering, "I want to be buried next to pa."

She fell asleep, exhausted. It had been a busy day for a home-body like grandma.



ALBERT NUSBAUM, the victim.

LOYAL TO WINN AGAIN

When she awoke, the emphasis of her rumbling loyalty swung once more back to Winn. Anything and everything to save him from the gallows.

She never wavered from that desire through the long days at the county jail, awaiting trial. She, and the others went to trial about St. Valentine's day, 1926. Grandma was the last of the defendants to take the stand. For five hours her tired, colorless, and sometimes soundless voice insisted that she was not guilty of aiding in grandpa's murder.

A variation from the run of women defendants in a murder trial, was grandma. Worn and pale and drab. Perhaps the best index of the impression she made on the jury can be given in one concrete picture. Instead of carrying an orchid to the defendant's chair, grandma hugged to her side a round, red apple, the gift of some friend. She didn't even have the good fortune to stage a real, dramatic faint.

DOESN'T QUITE FAINT

After the five hours of testimony, when Assistant State's Attorney Louis Gelman asked her something about what she meant when she said she regarded Winn as her son and couldn't refuse him money "or anything else," she sputtered around with a lot of syllables, then she quietly slipped into semi-consciousness. They brought her a glass of water, but the glass teetered sidewise as the elderly woman bumped into the wall in back of the witness stand. The water trickled down her worn, black plush coat.

But she didn't quite faint. She moaned and cried and became silent. Judge Eller adjourned court. Attorney Elmer J. Schnackenberg, her counsel, went to her as soon as the jury had filed out. By this time she was coming to, and she clung desperately to his hand.

"I h'ain't never had no thoughts of Winn only like a friend and like a mother," she sobbed, miserably, as she went back to jail, still hugging that ironically bright colored apple.

Next day she finished her testimony and the next after that the case went to the jury. The twelve men were out three hours and twenty minutes.

They directed that Winn be sent to the gallows, that grandma spend the rest of her natural life in the state penitentiary.

STILL THINKS OF WINN

The perfect housekeeper curved her fingers more tightily about the red apple as she heard the news. Just as everybody was remarking how quietly she took the verdict, her body softened into a collapse, then grew rigid. The big red apple tumbled down the folds of the black dress, hit the stout black shoes, and frisked its giddy way toward the jury box. Grandma's body flopped down, down, in her chair, and would have followed the apple with a thud, if the bailiffs had not caught her.

"Dad" Watson, custodian of the Criminal court building, shoved a piece of cotton saturated with spirits of amonia beneath her nostrils. Water spilled down her wrinkled face. The judge had the windows opened. Still, she didn't come to.

They carried her into an anteroom and for ten minutes she stayed across the end of the table, fatigued, inarticulate, piteous. As soon as she could sit up, she motioned to have close to her and whispered,

"I must do something for Winn, please."

And she's been trying to every since as she sits in the woman's quarters of the penitentiary and no fights the death sentence.

DEFICIENCY NOT REAL.

"'In the brightest lexicon of youth,'" quoted the visitor, "'there isn't such word as fail.'"

"Maybe not," anew red the host, gazing abstractedly at his son who hadn't done a stroke of work since he left college, "maybe not, but I guess there are quite a few erasures."

THE SAY-SO OF HOLLERAN YELL

by WESTBROOK PEGLER

He Can't Believe League Would Close the Beer Stores.

A GENTLEMAN has been telling me that the Anti-Saloon league is going to pass some kind of a law to close up all the beer stores, but I think the gentleman must be mistaken, because the Anti-Saloon company is doing a big business at present and it would be very bad for the prohibition business to shut up the stores.

"I think you must be nuts, my dear sir," I said to the gentleman, "as the people in the Anti-Saloon league strike me as very smart people and I do not think their mothers ever raised any feeble minded children who would do a thing like that.

"The prohibition people have built up their trade from almost nothing to a national concern in the last few years, and if you will look into the matter you will notice that all this prosperity has come since the country went dry and the beer stores were established.

SOME REAL SERVICE

The gentleman assured me that he was not nuts and said he got his information from a gentleman named Brown who runs a store in the building where he lives.

In our town it is customary for the landlord to make arrangements for a beer store as an accommodation to the tenants and the privilege of running the store is called a concession. Nobody else in the building is supposed to run a store unless it is a very big building, in which case the landlord, after asking for bids among the tenants, may sell a second concession.

I hear a great many people complaining about the Anti-Saloon company, but I must say that I think we are getting a very efficient administration in our building, as the gentleman who runs the concession keeps a good grade of material and makes prompt deliveries and it is much more convenient to send the dough down to the beer store by the dumb waiter and get your order delivered the same way without going out of the house.

Under the law he was supposed to inspect all goods.

POOR SERVICE

I understand that most of these stores are government inspected, because I see the prohibition gentlemen calling around every so often, and if you hear of a store operating on the quiet you are supposed to report it to the Anti-Saloon company, because a place that is not run under the supervision of the prohibition department is likely to sell an inferior grade of goods.

However, this gentleman explained to me that several times lately when he wanted a bag of beer or his old lady wished some cooking gin the material was not delivered. So he investigated and discovered that the gentleman on the next floor below was employed in the prohibition business and he would grab the bag of beer or the tumbler of cooking gin off the dumb waiter as it went by.

So this gentleman went down to complain to his neighbor and the neighbor was very courteous but explained to him that under the law he was supposed to inspect all goods.

"So nowadays," the gentleman said to me, "I do not do any business by dumb waiter but go down to the store myself, and last night Mr. Brown told me about this law."

FOR THE BEER STORES!

Of course, anybody in the beer business is likely to be in close touch with the prohibition people, so it seems to me that it is about time for the people who patronize the beer industry to get together and elect representatives in the Anti-Saloon league. It has been suggested to me that I would make a popular candidate for President, as I am very well informed about beer and such goods. I have given the matter much thought and I have decided that I will give my fellow citizens the benefit of my talents.

I don't know when the Anti-Saloon league holds its primaries or its elections, but I feel sure that it does hold primaries and elections, because it makes quite a number of laws, and anybody who makes laws has to be elected, because this is a democracy.

As a platform I have decided that the beer store is the workingman's club and I will not let the Anti-Saloon company pass any law to close the stores. Although I am not an active workingman because of delicate health, I am what you would call an honorary workingman because my old lady usually has some kind of a job and she tells me a great deal about work.

But still I cannot believe that the Anti-Saloon league would be chump enough to pass this law to close the beer stores just when it is doing the greatest business in its history. It would be too much like the American league passing a law to keep the customers out of the ball yards.

DAD'S CASTOFF WHISKERS.

We read recently of a Kansas boy who was always made to wear his father's castoff clothing, cut down and made over. One day a neighbor found him crying out behind the barn, and when asked what was the matter he said: "Dad's gone and shaved his face clean, and now I suppose I'll have to wear his red whiskers."—Minneapolis, Minn., Better Way.

Parisian Beaux Given Severe Test

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS.—Parisian society women of marriageable age and with financial as well as physical and mental attractiveness have started something that should give the average young beau more action and thrills than he could hope for in a dozen courtships.

Certain of these young ladies have formed an association to test the sincerity of their fiances. Any man who becomes engaged to one of the members immediately is put through a series of tests that would try a St. Anthony in order to prove that he is immune to the charms of any but the girl he has asked to become his wife.

The would-be Benedick is taken over by the remaining members of the organization, who exert all their wiles to steal away his affections. If, after a round of dinners, parties, automobile rides, and the other props of a courtship the young man succumbs to the charms of the plotters the fiancée is notified and he is checked out.

Several Don Juans, it is said, whose chief object was the money of the prospective brides, were exposed. It is reported that the girls all have played fairly with their fellow members, but the skeptical male wonders what percentage of honest intentioned young men come through the ordeal with the same devotion to their intended, or even with the same intended.

FATHER IS FLOORED.

"My boy, when you grow up I want you to be a gentleman."

"I don't want to be a gentleman, pop—I wanna be like you."—Rutgers Chanticleer.

SAM 'N' HENRY - - - - - By Correll & Gosden

A Doctor Cures Sam's Bad Burn

(While on their way to the stockyards to get work the car in which Sam and Henry were being driven suddenly stopped. Being eager to assist in finding the mechanical trouble, Sam took hold of a hot spark plug and caused a bad burn on his hand. They are now on their way to the doctor's office.)

Wi—wi—will yo' tell us where de postoffice is?

SAM—Henry, I ain't nevah had nothin' hurt me like dis heah han' hurts.

Henry—I don' see why yo' wanted to mess wid de man's car fo' anyway.

Sam—Henry, why didn't yo' tell me de thing was hot under dere? I didn't see nothin' red hot down dere.

Henry—How yo' think de engine works if it don' git hot?

Sam—When things git as hot as dat thing was dat I took hol' of, dey usu'lly turn red, don' it?

Henry—Well—yo' see dat red sort o' fools yo'. When de sun is shinin' on it, it don' look red in de light but it feels red.

Sam—Where did de man say dis doctah's office was?

Henry—It's jus' down heah one mo' block—right on de cornah—upstairs.

Sam—Henry, yo' knows how I hates to go to see a doctah, too, don' yo'? I'se scared to death o' doctahs.

Henry—Ain't no use to be scared of 'em. Dey don' nevah come aftah yo'—ev'vybody goes aftah dem.

Sam—Dat sho' is de truth. If dey was aftah yo', dey'd chase yo', wouldn't dey.

Henry—Not only chase yo'—but dey'd git yo'.

Sam—Dis heah han' sho' do hurt. An' by grabbin' hol' o' dat hot spark plug, dat done keep me from gittin' a job.

Henry—Well—dat's a'right. Dis heah doctah'll fix yo' up down heah.

Sam—When de doctah fix my han' an' de han' gits well, we gotta go back down to de stockyards an' git dat job. Dat certainly is a clean place down dere. I thought dey was goin' have animals layin' all 'round de place.

Henry—We was down dere when it was quiet. Dey don' staht fightin' de animals 'til latah in de day. Why don' yo' tell de man when yo' go back down dere dat yo' wanna be a bull figtah?

Sam—I don' wanna fight no bull. I don' wanna mess 'round wid none. I don' even wanna eat off'n a red tablecloth while I'm down dere. I don' wan' no bulls messin' 'round me.

Henry (approaching the doctor's office)—Heah's de doctah's office up heah. Whut is de doctah's name?

Sam—Doctah Johnson.

Henry—Heah 'tis—right heah—Doctah Johnson. He's a M. D. an' a sturgeon.

Sam—What do dat mean, Henry?

Henry—Dis ain't no time fo' arguments.

Sam—Well, I wanna know whut kin' o' doctah I'se goin' to.

Henry—You'll fin' out aftah he finish messin' wid yo' han'. (Sam hesitates about going on.) Come on—whut yo' stoppin' 'bout?

Sam—I don't like whut yo' jus' said 'bout him bein' a M. D. an' a sturgeon.

Henry (as they reach the entrance of the building)—Well—come on— let's go up de stairs heah.

Sam—Henry, I'se scared to go up de stairs dere. Read de sign again.

Henry (looking up at the doctor's sign)—I done read de sign once. It say "M. D. and a sturgeon—office hours from three to five"—yo' jus' in time. De clock up de street say half pas' three.

Sam (standing in front of building)—Henry, yo' gotta lot o' sense, ain't yo'? Heah's one time I goin' to ask yo' to lemme do de talkin'?

Henry—Whut yo' mean, yo' goin' ask me to let yo' do de talkin'?

Sam—Well, it's like dis, Henry. Whenevah we gits mixed up in a biz'ness deal, yo' us'ally does de talkin' an I don' say much. But dis time de biz'ness is 'bout me so I goin' ask yo' to lemme do de talkin'.

Henry—Don' make no diff'ence to me how much yo' talk. I ain't goin' say a thing to de doctah. Go on—tell him wuhtevah yo' wanna tell him.

Sam—A'right, Henry, I go up dere den. When it come to talk to de doctah now, lemme do de talkin'.

Henry—Dat's a'right wid me. I ain't gonna say nothin'. (As he starts up the stairs.) Come on, let's git up heah—let's git in out o' de cold heah.

Henry, I'se 'bout to faint.

Sam—Whut do it stan' fo'?

Henry—Well, de M. D.'s is Mean Doctahs an' de N. D.'s is Nice Doctahs.

Sam—Whut did dis sign downstairs on de door say?

Henry—Dis one's a M. D.

Sam (getting up)—Come on, Henry, let's go. De han' is bettah.

Henry—Come on, now—sit down heah. SIT BACK DOWN IN DAT CHAIR!

Sam—Henry, yo' done got me scared o' dis heah doctah. I don' want him messin' 'roun' wid my han' if he's a mean doctah.

Henry—De doctah ain't gonna hurt yo'. De doctah kin fix yo' up widout yo' feelin' it. De only thing yo' don' wanna do is to argue wid de doctah.

Sam (sees the doctor's private office door opening)—Dere's de doctah's door openin' now. LOOKIT DERE! Dere's a man wid de doctah on crutches. (In whisper to Henry.) Listen to de doctah—let's heah whut he say.

Doctor (to patient)—Well, I think I can release you within another month. I want you to feel, Mr. Jones, it was the only thing that I could do when I cut off your leg. Human nature is a vary peculiar thing. Just think, that a little ingrown toenail caused me to amputate your leg.

Sam (getting excited)—Awa—awa—Henry, did yo' heah dat? De man's toenails stahted growin' backwards an' dey had to cut his leg off. If dat man had-a stepped on a piece o' glass, de doctah would-a had to cut his throat. (Getting up again.) Let's git out o' dis heah place.

Henry—Sit down now! Take yo' time—keep yo' seat. De thing we gotta do is to git out o' heah in a Democratic way.

Sam—Well—let's tell him we is Democrats an' leave.

Henry—Sit down now—take yo' time—de doctah ain't finished wid' dat one-legged man yet. He's liable to cut his othah leg off.

Sam—Henry, I'se 'bout to faint. I'se gittin' scared—I feel weak.

Henry—Go 'head—faint. Faint on de floor though—don' faint on me.

Sam—Henry, I IS gittin' scared now. Let's git out o' heah.

Henry—How we gonna git out o' heah now? Dere's de doctah standin' up dere.

Sam—Henry, we gotta do whut yo' said. We gotta git out o' heah in a Democratic way. I'se so scared I don' know whut to do.

Henry—Well now, you'se de one dat was so smart a while ago an' wanted to all de talkin'. I ain't goin' say a word. I'll jus' listen to whut yo' say.

Sam—Whut I gonna do, Henry? Whut I gonna do heah? I don' want de doctah cuttin' off my han.'

Henry—Don' tell me yo' troubles. I don' know whut yo' goin' to do. (As the patient starts to leave the office.) Dat one-legged man's gettin' ready to leave now.

Sam—Henry, I'se scared to death. I gotta git out o' dis mess. Dat certainly is a mean lookin' doctah—I don' like his looks.

Henry (seeing the doctor starting over toward him)—Well, heah come de doctah ovah heah now. Tell him sompin'—tell him somepin'.

Doctor (to Sam and Henry)—Well, gentlemen, something I can do for you?

Sam (very nervous and excited)—Ye-ye-yessah, mistah. Wi-wi-will yo' tell us where de postoffice is?

Doctor (very much surprised)—Do you mean the main postoffice or a substation?

Sam—Any postoffice, mistah! All I wanna do is git out o' heah an' git to de postoffice quick.

Doctor—There's a substation two blocks down the street.

Sam (jumping up and starting for the door, followed by Henry)—Thank yo', mistah—thank yo'. Come on, Henry! Let's git on out o' heah.

Henry (on their way down the steps)—Wait a minute—wait a minute—I ain't neveah seen nobody as crazy as yo' is. Whut is de mattah wid yo'? Another thing, yo' done run away an' let' yo' hat in dere.

Sam (continuing on his way)—Let it stay dere, Henry. Let it stay dere. I'd ruther lost a hat dan a arm any day.

Man—Yes, he's busy right now. I'm waiting for him myself.

Sam (to Henry)—I guess we bettah sit down, Henry.

Henry—Take a seat ovah dere den by dat stove.

Sam—Henry, come on—sit down heah. Don' fo'git now, Henry, lemme do de talkin' when de doctah come out.

Henry—Dat's a'right wid me. Yo' go 'head—do all de talkin' yo' want.

Sam—Henry, whut do dat "M. D." stan' fo'? Dat's de firs' thing I wanna know.

Henry (in his know-it-all way)—Well—some doctahs is M. D.'s an' some doctahs is N. D.'s.

Sam—M. D.s an' N. D.'s? Whut's de diff'ence between M. D.'s an' N. D.'s, Henry?

Henry—De N's come aftah de M's. Don' yo' 'member de alphabet? J—K—O—M—N?

A REUNION

Miss Florence Forman

Vincent Murray

A BROTHER and sister, separated in babyhood, will meet again when Harry Carroll's revue comes to the Palace theater this week, according to a veracious press agent. In the Carroll company is Florence Forman, specialty dancer. Out at Great Lakes naval training school is Private Vincent Lloyd Murray of the aviation corps. They are brother and sister but the two have not seen each other since they were kids together in Canada, 5 and 6 years old, respectively. The family was broken up, young Murray being brought up by an older brother living in Seattle, while Miss Forman went to live with an older sister in New York where she acquired a stage name as well as the reputation of being a champion high kicker.

Six Months for Bribing Police

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON.—Chicagoans who think nothing of stopping the speed cop's pencil by laying a bill on the summons book and those who have learned to settle their controversies and pay their fines without the formality of a judge and clerk should be interested to note the reaction such an offer has in England.

An English laborer who was found guilty of making a corrupt gift of a few silver coins to two police constables at the Goodwood races was sentenced to six months of hard labor and the two policemen drew similar sentences. Justice Horridge, who tried the case, professed amazement that such a condition could exist.

Soon after this incident a young Stepney shopkeeper was sentenced at the Thames Police court to three months of hard labor and fined when he attempted to bribe two constables with a ten shilling note each to induce them to refrain from reporting him for allowing a gambling machine on his premises. This time, however, the constables, in righteous indignation, reported him, it is said, and undoubtedly strengthened their positions with the force.

Yank Popcorn Delights Czechs

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PRAGUE.—Natives of this Czecho-Slovakian capital are marveling at the new "magic food of the Americans." They stand about the American exhibit at the fair grounds wide eyed with wonder as the attendant lays kernels of corn over glowing wood coals, and gaze fascinated as the yellow corn blossoms forth into snow white clusters that are drenched with melted butter and passed to their eager, outstretched hands. Popcorn has never before been known in this country, and the Czechs are delighted with the new confection. The American consul here presided at the first popping bee and showed the natives how to prepare the corn.

SOUNDS CORRECT.

Nothing having been heard lately about Tacna-Arica, the public is justified in assuming that it has been poured back into the bottle.—Detroit Free Press.

I WORRY

What's your pet worry? Tell it in a short and snappy jingle and we'll pay you $2 if we print it. Address Worries, CHICAGO SUNDAY TRIBUNE.

Two Checks for You Now.

sent you a "worry"; (Feb., 1927)
Two dollars we'd get
(I said, if 'twas printed. (See clipping)
No check has come yet.
'Twas printed last Sunday (March 13th)
And now, don't you see,
I'se worried a week,
But no check comes to me. (When is it?)

Always Something.

When I was young I worried,
For fear I'd grow up fat;
Now I'm old I 'm worried,
Because I'm thin and flat.

On Her Mind.

I worry so when I leave home
About each thing in turn,
For fear I've left the door unlocked,
Or left the gas-stove burn.

Her Catastrophe.

I'm just a little girl of ten,
And yet I worry, too,
Because my dollie's head broke off;
Now I'll get spanked, boo! hoo!

Stop Worrying.

If on a Sunday morning
I see the letters E. P. F.

Of all the things I worry 'bout
This one I dread to hear,
"O Gertie," friends all start to shout,
"You've got a 'run,' my dear."

I tell my boys not to smoke cigarets,
That it's very bad for the health,
So I worry for fear they'll catch me
When I puff a few by stealth.

Little Tales of Big Heads

What's your pet little tale of a Big Head? Send it to Big Heads, Sunday Tribune, and we'll pay you $1 if we print it.

Tables Turned.

I belong to a club of girls, none of whom seemed to find the one man or was able to hold him, so when one of the girls finally came along with a diamond, even though it was a very small stone, we couldn't help envying her. But she sure got the big head about it. She was always flashing the ring before us, talking nothing but her fiancé, and lost no chance to let us know how easy it was for her to get somebody.

But we turned the tables on her, all right. In a short time several girls were engaged and now, through some unfortunate circumstances, which she fails to relate, her marriage has been postponed indefinitely and I would not be surprised to find her the last one on the list to step off. E. F. D.

Pretty High Hat.

We were living in a small town. A neighbor's daughter went east to study landscape gardening. One evening after her return home my daughter and I, while out walking, passed along where she was busy transplanting a flower that was new to me.

I stopped and asked for the name of it. The young woman looked at me and said, "I know it by its botanical name. If I tell you you will not understand." She stopped, evidently to impress me, then added, "I do not recall the common name." J. T. T.

The Braggart.

A boy in my class in school in a country town had great ideas that he was better and smarter than the rest of the class, always bragging that he would never do manual labor. He was a poet and wrote melting lines for our school paper and essays, or anything oratorical, was always assigned to him

When high school finished his folks sent him to a city school and for years we never heard of him, although I watched the papers carefully. I had married one of our town boys and he would say: "Well, if Harold has written anything great it would surely be in the papers."

Nevertheless, I always held the hope that he wolud be a great writer and was sort of proud that he belonged to our town.

My husband's job changed and we moved to the city. When our furniture was being moved up from the depot I heard a big voice booming out orders on the stairs and soon a man entered with a trunk on his back. As he set it down I almost fell dead, for before me stood the braggart of our school—the poet—Harold. I. B. K.

The Critic.

A student in our English class was distinguished by her poor composition, lack of originality, and unpleasing diction. She did not lack, however, in egotism. We were told to write a review on de Maupassant's "The Necklace."

After reading the short story masterpiece, my classmate with the exaggerated ego remarked, disgustedly, "What is there to write about that? I don't think much of the thing. I could write a better story than that myself."

THE FAMOUS JALOPPI SEDAN

By W. M. Schwimmer

[A vindication of Oliver Wendell Holmes' "One-Hoss Shay."]

Have you heard of the famous jaloppi sedan?
It wheezed and it sneezed ev'ry time that it ran,
It squeaked and it creaked 'till I shrieked, "What a can!"
The rasping and gasping would wreck any man!
That auto was built in so careless a way,
It went just exactly three months to a day,
When all of a sudden, it broke down, but stay,
Have you heard such a sap situation I say?

The brake was a fake and the pistons were worse,
The gears were the kind that would grind in reverse,
They clanged and just banged and then clanged—what a curse!
The car was a pain, just a drain on my purse!
She had quite a cranky pestiferous clutch,
The tires were so worn that they needed a crutch,
The fenders were bent, and the horn was in Dutch,
Twas truly a "tin you would not love to touch!"

Disaster came faster than looked for—a crash!
The bus had a fuss with a lamppost—quite rash,
That mean hunk of junk went kerplunk with a clash,
Then just must have bust; for the car now was trash.
No crocodile tears were emitted that day,
No sad lamentations of plaintive dismay,
For here's my decision, my purpose I say
Is back to the trustworthy old one-hoss shay!

UNFORTUNATE.

Guest (whose wedding gift of a coal scuttle has not been acknowledged)—I hope our little present arrived quite safely?

Bride—O, yes, indeed it did. Didn't you get my letter? It's perfectly adorable, and—er—we're taking it with us on our honeymoon.—London Punch.

CURED.

Hobbs (seeking divorce)—She says she married me to reform me.

Dobbs—Reform you of what?

Hobbs—Don't know exactly, but if it was the idea that I couldn't live without her, she's succeeded admirably.—Boston Transcript.

London Hotels Are Going to the Dogs.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON.—London's leading hotels are "going to the dogs," literally, and Fido is having the time of his life. The American tourists have shown an almost universal preference for having some sort of pup with them, and the hostelries have been quick to cater to the whims of their American patrons.

At the exclusive Savoy, for instance, one finds a chic, portable treadmill, operated by electricity, which is brought to the guest's room when the master or mistress is too fatigued to exercise the animal. The pet is placed on the treadmill, the electricity is turned on, and he can run to his heart's content without leaving the room.

In Paris expensive restaurants cater to the canine trade, even to the extent of having special chairs so that the dog can be seated at the same table with his mistress. In these places the dog usually puts away anywhere from $1.50 to $3 worth of food.

Cocktail Contest On in Vienna.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

VIENNA.—The "old timers" of this capital, who were in the habit of sitting at the coffee houses, sipping their drinks and amusedly watching the attractive American girls hurry along the walk and into American bars, have been roused from their lethargic state by those same Yankees they treated with an indifferent air. Some enterprising Yank started a competition to discover new cocktails, one for men and one for women, and offering to the winner the immortal glory of having the drink named after him. Bars have become as laboratories. The spotless kitchens of the staid old homes reek with pungent odors and are littered with bottles and essences. Here is one assignment in which the Viennese will not be outdone. Meanwhile, if the judges last, some one will be declared the winner. Since every one wants to be a judge, the supply ought to weather the worst mistakes.

Plan Shorter Route to Paris

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON.—American tourists coming to France next year will find new accommodations and a shorter ride to their ultimate destination—Paris. It is practically certain that Havre will replace Cherbourg as the French port of the White Star steamers with the development of an ocean quay in an ideally sheltered situation at the entrance of the port. Its geographical position as the nearest and most convenient port for Paris will probably popularize it among many tourists who dread the stuffy, tiresome train ride from Cherbourg to the French capital.

ABOUT BROADWAY

By Mark Hellinger.

Gay Jesters and Their Pranks

NEW YORK.—(Special Correspondence.)—As long as the ha ha is on the other fellow your average Broadwayite can laugh louder and longer than any other class of people in the world. The big alley is fairly infested with what is commonly known as practical jokers. And these gentlemen can always be counted upon to make life as miserable as they can for you.

If you travel in the Broadway set you are certain to hear of some new prank each and every day. The best of friends will sometimes go to any extremes to make each other uncomfortable. Just why this should be we have never been able to figure out. And who would care if we did?

Sometimes the jokes are simple and speedily effective. A fake telegram, a disguised phone call, an anonymous letter—and the laugh is over. But sometimes the jests are lengthy and involved.

BEER FOR BAIT

Some are mild. Some are good. Some are cruel. Take a look at a few of them.

Of recent years, with the liquor situation in such a deplorable condition, the good old bottle has naturally been the bait in a number of practical jokes. One of the best known of the lot is the Coney island stunt. And it has rarely failed to work. Three or four men will drive along Broadway in a car and pick up a prospective victim. He is asked if he would care to come along for a glass of good beer. Nine times out of ten the victim asks how far he will have to go. Upon being told that the spot is just across the bridge—a ten minute drive—the victim hops in the car. He is, of course, a friend of the men in the car.

The machine is driven to Brooklyn. But it fails to stop. The minutes fly by and so do the miles. Every five minutes or so the victim will invariably pull out his watch and inquire as to where the devil he is being hauled to. And he is always told that it is just another five minutes away.

Finally, after an hour's drive, the car pulls into a certain spot in Coney Island. The victim gets out of the car and usually states that no beer in the world is worth that long ride. But, as long as he's there, he'll have some just the same. He is taken through a long, dark hallway. The leader, whom the victim is always made to follow, raps at a door. The door opens. The leader steps back. And the victim is given a sudden push into the blackness beyond.

Howling with terror, the victim finds himself falling down and down and down. He doesn't know it, of course, but he is sliding down one of Coney Island's longest shoot-the-chutes. After a minute of this—and it must seem like an eternity—the victim slides into the light in front of his friends. He is generally bruised and terrified. And his friends laugh hysterically. Then, the gag over, they take him out and get him his beer. By that time, it's ten to one the victim can't drink it.

Just another Broadway prank.

A WAREHOUSE PRANK

Along similar lines is the joke that was frequently perpetrated by the four Marx brothers during their recent run in New York in "The Cocoanuts." It was played on practically every literary celebrity in town, and it is safe to state that none of them has ever forgotten it. The basis of this gag was more than a glass of beer. It was a whole case of liquor. And the liquor was painted in such rosy colors by Mr. Harpo Marx that prospective victims never failed to nibble at the bait.

The liquer was supposed to be government stuff that was secreted in a large warehouse on the lower east side. A car, generally driven by Harpo, called for the victim and guided him to the warehouse. Guided him is hardly the proper word—for the car was taken in and out of various streets until the poor victim had but a hazy idea of where he was.

After many rappings and tappings, a small door is finally swung open. There is a sudden blowing of a police whistle, a sharp crying of, "police," and the victim is pushed into the gloomy spaces of the warehouse. He is, it goes without saying, alone. For his friends have gone through another entrance to watch the fun.

The victim, unused to the weird darkness, is afraid to cry out for assistance. His first thought is that the police are on the outside and that his friends—including Harpo—are fleeing rapidly. He is deliberating on the best course to follow when he sees a startling figure approaching him. The figure is a man, some six feet tall and one of the homliest individuals that ever trod the earth. He is a combination of Bull Montana and Lon Chaney at their worst. In his eyes is the gleam of the maniac. And he carries a huge baseball bat on his shoulder.

From then on, the sport depends on the victim. If he tries to talk, he is silenced at once. If he tries to run, he trips within three seconds. If he tries to stand still, he is prodded with the bat. No matter what he does, he is wrong. The sport is kept up for some ten or twelve minutes. Then the warehouse door is suddenly opened and the victim runs out and away in nothing flat.

He rarely reports for work on the following day.

MOVES TODAY

ALEXANDER GRAY is singing in "Sweet Lady," which is to be moved tonight from the Illinois to the Woods. He was a prize winner some years ago in a contest held here by the National Federation of Musical Clubs for young musicians trained in the United States.

A JOKE THAT FAILED

Professional practical jokesters are few and far between. In order to at all costs. Most men with this talent play poker for a living.

Frank Libuse, a discovery of Vincent Lopez, is unquestionably the most successful worker of this kind in New York today. His specialty is annoying people who are assembled at banquets.

He is not a speechmaker. Dressed as a waiter, he bumps into diners, be successful at this business, a man must be able to keep a straight face pushes them this way and that, seats them at wrong tables, falls into women's laps, put down celery and yanks it away just as some diner is reaching for it—and so on and so forth. During these operations, he never fails to keep up the noble standard of a perfectly dumb expression. He is successful—because he succeeds in getting people angry while others laugh.

Libuse had a forerunner in this field, but his name escapes us at the present writing. We want to tell a little story about him. So, for the sake of clarity, we'll call him Mike. Mike was not quite as rough as Libuse. He spoke to people, which is something that Libuse does not go in for. It was Mike's specialty to dress himself as a head waiter and then annoy diners by whispering to them. Picking his target, he would slide next to him.

"That's the wrong fork," Mike would whisper. And the diner, mortified beyond words, would quickly put down the fork he was using and pick up another.

Only once did Mike's fork trick fail to have the slightest effect. That episode came to pass during a huge Hebrew banquet at the Hotel Pennsylvania some five years ago. Mike had been engaged for the occasion and was told to pick particularly upon a well known cloak and suiter. As soon as possible, he walked behind the Hebrew and told him he was using the wrong fork. The cloak and suiter paid no attention. He kept right on eating.

"That's the wrong fork," said Mike, a bit louder.

The cloak and suiter speared a piece of butter with the same fork. He looked up at Mike.

"Nu," he cried, "do me sometink!"

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

Woman Can Gratify Her Desire for the Picturesque This Spring, for Paris Is Sponsoring Costumes with Motifs from Any and All Epochs of History.

By Bettina Bedwell.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—Paul Poiret said to me recently, "Every woman loves the picturesque and decorative in dress." It has been a secret love of late years, for picturesqueness has been the ingredient missing from the mixture of women's styles these last few seasons. We have borne our bereavement with astonishing fortitude, wearing our simple, nonromantic, straight styles as if we had no other desires in the clothes line.

However, I think Poiret is right and that we do like a certain touch of the picturesque in our clothes when it can be had without sacrificing chic. There are few women who are indifferent enough or have sufficient effrontery to affect such clothes when they are contrary to current styles. But given a chance to get herself up for a fancy dress party or carnival, any woman will have the time of her life rigging out a costume. So the introduction of this element into our regular clothes by Paris this spring is bound to have a lot of feminine supporters.

Fashions have been gradually veering around to the picturesque for some time. This movement has been given the caption of "the return to femininity." Not that we have actually been absent from it, but we have been rather meek and manlike lately in our slavishness to standardized clothes, which were often as unbecoming to us individually as men's clothes are to them at times. With bows, laces, scarfs, and sashes returned as part of more feminine fashions, it is a simple step to introduce the genuine character of the picturesque into the mode. This, Paris is doing in her own special way.

There are no radical alterations, as I have said before, of silhouette lines, but there are details that recall more romantic periods and fashions, and it is these that give the greatest charm to our new spring fashions. Paris hasn't gotten a complex on some particular period of history, such as Second Empire, or Directoire, or other, using it throughout the spring mode. Each house will show bits of perhaps a dozen different periods, so you can choose the one, two, or three having the greatest appeal to you. In fact, so broad is the scope of the spring mode, you could add something out of your own pet period and, if you were clever enough, get away with it beautifully, even if Paris never thought of doing it.

There is an epoch in American history that has a special lure for the French, and they never tire of it, and that is the vanishing epoch of the cowboy and the big cattle ranches. So it is inevitable, in this revival of the picturesque, that they should seize upon something from the cowboy for their spring fashions. They took the handkerchief and put it on the Parisian sports costume. Parisiennes love to wear these big soft handkerchiefs around their necks, and no cowboy dolling up in his bandanna for a community shindig can tie one more expertly than these ladies of France. I suspect this handkerchief revival is going to be one of the greatest die-hards that fashions ever saw.

The cowboy bandanna comes back into the Paris mode, worn with a jumper of green reptile and skirt of green mouslikasha.

Stiff gold satin, lined with lame and trimmed with green fox fur, makes this unusual Drecoll evening coat, worn over a dress of yellow georgette embroidered with green and gold beads.

The romantic sixties are recalled in this dance dress of pink crepe georgette with overskirt of ruffled black dotted net.

A distinctive afternoon dress from Drecoll is made of green-blue crepe, with straight waist, wide sleeves, and a skirt plaited in front and tiered in back.

Our first model, a sports dress from Drécoll, shows one way of using the handkerchief. It has a side buttoning jumper waist of some kind of reptile, marked like an alligator and green like a lizard, with a belt of black patent and a gold buckle. The buttons are of green bone. The skirt buttons at the side front to the hips, from which point a deep double plait is inserted. It is of green mouslikasha, a kasha with a mousseline finish. The handkerchief is of green foulard, striped with darker green, and can be draped in any fashion desired.

At the opposite side of our sketch is another Drécoll model that shows another kind of picturesqueness, taken from the colonial costume. This is an afternoon frock of heavy silk crêpe that is a cross between crêpe de chine and marocain. It is the new color that Drécoll calls "bleu d'orage," or storm blue, that pale greenish blue that appears in the sky just before a hailstorm

The straight waist, with its row of enamel buttons, and its sleeves, which flare markedly from the elbow to the fitted cuff, are distinctive notes in the Drécoll collection. No less original is the skirt, which is plaited in front and composed of two tiers in back. These tiers flare slightly at the sides. Drécoll puts the waistline very near normal, but just enough below to give a great deal more charm than the real normal line has. This line is marked by a black belt that has a jeweled buckle.

The evening dress next this model takes its cue from still another of the romantic periods—the good old days when grandma was a girl. It also revives a fabric that has not been seen for more years than you can remember, and that is black dotted net. The waist of this dance frock is made of pink georgette, and the round neck and armholes are piped with self material. From a diagonal waist line that is marked by a crushed girdle of pink georgette, one end of which hangs beneath the skirt to below the hemline, the full skirt, made of scalloped ruffles of black dotted net, follows a diagonal line. There is a big butterfly of black net at the waistline, and the lifted hemline reveals a pink georgette petticoat, finely plaited, which replaces the pantalets that grandma wore. Model from Drécoll.

Our second model shows the evening ensemble for spring, with a coat of stiff gold colored satin, the kind of satin they used to wear in the romantic days, with big sleeves, tucked at the top and banded above deep cuffs by fox fur dyed a pistache green. The full collar is also banded with this green fur. An important detail of this coat, which hangs rather full from the shoulders, is its cutaway front and its extra length in back.

To go with the coat and make its inside as decorative as its outside is a lamé lining in green and gold. The dress is made of yellow crêpe georgette, cut into a simple bloused waist and a long tunic split at the center front to show a satin slip beneath. The bands are made of green and gold beads embroidered on to the georgette with gold thread. Gold thread embroidery is placed on the sides of the waist and the skirt.

In these ways Paris shows us how to indulge our natural love of the picturesque without disturbing too greatly the strict modernism of styles.

718—Woman's and misses' dress. Sizes 16, 18, and 20 years, and 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3⅞ yards of 36 or 40 inch material.

720—Girl's dress. Sizes 6, 8, 10, and 12 years. Size 8 requires 2¾ yards of 36 or 40 inch material.

717—Woman's and misses' dress. Sizes, 16, 18, and 20 years, and 34, 36, 38, and 40 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3½ yards of figured material and ¾ yards of plain 40 or 44 inch material.

HOW TO USE THE PATTERNS

A FLAT crêpe in beige was used in making the one piece dress, pattern No. 718. There is no dress more satisfactory than the one piece ones, and this design is smart and the pattern easy to follow. Back and front are each cut in one piece, and French seams used to finish. A slightly rounded shawl collar finishes the neck, and the opening is filled in with a vest, making a square outline across the front. The collar should be cut double and seamed together on the outside edge. Then it is turned to the right side, the seam basted so the edge is clearly defined, and pressed. Then it is basted to the neck of the dress, first pinning it to the dress at each end, and then in the center back. Baste a bias silk binding in place and stitch from one end to the other. Then turn the opposite edge of the binding over the seam and hem down by hand.

In cutting the vest, fold the material so the top comes on the fold. Seam down each side, turn right side out and finish across the bottom. Then tack the right side to the dress, and fasten to the left side of the dress with tiny snaps.

The one piece sleeves are gathered at the wrists into narrow bands. The narrow belt may be of the material or a leather one may be used, and the patch pockets finish the dress prettily. Embroidering the lower part of each sleeve in bright, contrasting colors would add much to the beauty of the dress, or if you didn't care to take the time necessary for that, why not embroider a monogram either on the vest, or the left front of the dress?

Bolero dresses are smart for little girls and grown ones. Pattern No. 20 will be pretty made in two materials, and is suitable for any of the crepe or light weight woolens. The little skirt is cut in two pieces and is slightly circular. This is joined to a long waisted sleeveless upper part. This is slashed at the neck in the center front, and the edges bound. A pretty round collar finishes the neck, and this collar lies over the bolero.

The bolero is cut in one piece—having no under arm seams—just those on the shoulders. To this the one piece sleeves are attached. One of the pin checks was used for the skirt and waist, and a solid color for the jacket. The sleeves are finished with turned back cuffs that match the general outline of the collar, and two inserted pockets are set in the bolero at the bottom

Pattern No. 717 is for an attractive afternoon frock. Crêpe Elizabeth or georgette would be suitable materials for it, and so would crêpe de chine or taffeta. Figured and plain materials are used in the making, and the pattern pieces are clearly marked so there won't be any difficulty in putting them together. The waist and skirt are cut separately and joined, a soft, wide band of the plain material being used for the sash which effectually covers the joining. The dress is to be slipped on over the head, the opening at the neck making this possible.

An outside facing of the plain material finishes the bottom of the skirt, and this plain material is used for the collar and lower parts of the sleeves. Many of the dress materials are shown both in solid colors and beautifully printed designs, and this particular design seems unusually well suited to a combination of materials.

An Even Keel in Money Matters

By DORIS BLAKE

To Be Neither a Midas Nor a Prodigal, but a Happy Medium, Is the Goal to Aim For When Making a Budget

FROM the financial angle, the ideal situation in a household is that the wife be competently thrifty in all matters over which she has control but that she does not "watch the pot" so closely that her sense of saving becomes miserly. For his part, the man should be endowed with that sense of responsibility that urges him to keep up insurance protection, to save what he can reasonably save after the usual expenses are disposed of, but to avoid the danger of niggardliness in money matters. There should be money for amusement, for the old adage about all work and no play will make matrimony just as dull as the boy, Jack, you've heard about.

Generally speaking, the great American fault is not the too saving one. But in the couse of my work here I learn first hand of hundreds of cases where the Midas spirit is encountered in man and wife. Usually it is the man who, once possessed of the saving urge, becomes cruelly mean about his wife's allowance. As one woman confided but yesterday, her husband has $200,000 and in her sixteen years of married life he has never taken her any place, never thought a vacation necessary for her, and her household allowance is meted out so meagerly she cannot get enough ahead to buy decent dresses for her young high school daughter. He never goes to places of amusement, nor takes a vacation because it costs money. The chase of the dollar has him gripped so that he cannot see the hate that engulfs his household.

Such revelations are not uncommon. And although this sort of home may be classed as the most unhappy, harboring as it does the seeds of hatred and often the hope of death for the tyrant who holds the purse strings taut, there is another kind of household where misery is known a considerable part of the time, although love may preserve it against complete disintegration. It is the home where financial responsibility is felt by the wife but where she is given no cooperation by the husband.

The irresponsible man and the thrifty wife-ambitious mother provide a problem that is intensely difficult to cope with. The difficulty is equally great where the wife is the fool in money matters and the husband's life is one long succession of coping with her money follies. Yet there is something more tragically moving about a woman eager to give her children a good education, a decent neighborhood to bring them up in, willing to make a thousand personal sacrifices in her effort to keep all her loved ones' heads raised in the community. And by some strange law of nature which draws opposites together you frequently find this sort of woman tied to a weak man whose weakness seems to reach its high peak on money matters.

The Story of the Browns.

There are the Browns, we will call them. Ella, a thrifty wife and mother is married to Ed, a good natured, lackadaisical and perfectly worthless husband. They live in a small town. Ed was a clerk in one of those chain stores that dot the country and he was one of the best liked men in his town. He never had a bad word to say about anybody. He could tell a story that would shake his audience with laughter. He spent a lot of time thinking them up, so much that he didn't like work to interfere—and seldom let it. Ella, as different from Ed as she could be, had energy, a sense of responsibility and an ambition which made her fight when life or the worthlessness of her thriftless husband sent her to the floor for the count.

The Browns had three children, Mary, Jim, and a toddler, known to his adoring parents and the rest of their world as "Larry." Ella dreamed dreams for these youngsters, as mothers have had the habit of doing since the world began. Mary was to be married to some nice young fellow when she grew old enough. Jim was to be something big in the business world, and Larry was to draw and paint because even at this tender age he smeared the house with colors from a paint box and Ella believed she could see likeness to human forms in them.

Ella talked her ambitions over with Ed and Ed agreed with her that the kids should get the best out of the world. As a matter of fact, he agreed with her in everything. He was one of those likeable, agreeable men.

Ella tried to put the house on a budget. Ed was drawing $30 a week and she figured out so much for this and so much for that. She had learned in her childhood that leaking pennies result in rivers of dollars leaving their owners and rendering them poor.

Would Have Worked, but . . .

It was a good idea and would have worked out to perfection except for Ed. He seemed to run under very heavy expenses. There were cigarets and a poker game now and then, and little knickknacks for the kids, and snappy things like patent lighters, and puzzles, and trick roses that squirted water on the unwary, for himself. You see, Ed was a mixer and had a certain reputation to uphold.

Week after week, all the years of their married life, Ella found her household allowance a little short. Five, six, seven dollars would fail to arrive. Ed always explained it. He was a wonderful explainer. And Ella would sigh a little, cry a little and pick up the fight again and struggle along. She loved Ed, with that strange perversity of strong women who hold to their weak men.

She would talk to him about getting a little money in the bank. In a few years they could have a home. Then he could go into business for himself. Being liked so much, he could draw trade from all over the country. Then they could all be something in the community and the children could have advantages.

Ed agreed that money in the bank was a great thing—told Ella he had just been telling the boys he had the thriftiest wife in the country. He wound up by touching her for a couple of dollars to see him through until pay day.

Sad Ending.

So things went along until little Mary was 9, Jim 7 and Larry, the toddler, a man of 2. Ella never gave up fighting, for she was built that way. The children had illnesses and Ed had the flu, which set them back a bit further. But she went on dreaming her dreams of having a home and being somebody.

Ed's reputation grew as a story teller, but waned as a clerk. And one day he was fired. He was away below par in his sales. Competitive houses didn't want him and his air of bravado and his threat that they'd be sending for him to come back soon didn't hold water.

Life struck swiftly as it has a way of doing, and Ed came back from Marty's one evening where he'd been down telling the boys a couple of new ones. Ella met him at the door, her face drawn and white. Larry was ill. The doctor should be called. Ed said it was just some kid ailment he'd be over in a day or two. There was a lot of money owing the doctor already. But fear struck him when he looked again at the flushed face and heard the labored breathing. He believed the doctor ought to be called. He'd get some money together and bring him.

But he'd borrowed from everybody and he was turned down cold. He came back and told Ella, Larry would be all right in the morning. His hope wasn't justified. Larry was dead in the morning. It was simple pneumonia that medical attention could have checked.

There isn't much else to the story. They buried their baby and Ella went to work. Ed gets an occasional job and they manage to live. They do better than that—at least Ella does. She puts a few dollars in the bank each week. Ed isn't so good on stories any more. He even manages to give Ella a dollar or two now and then to put in the bank.

Wanted the Change.

A woman, a neighbor of ours was putting on a party and she asked my father if she could borrow his brand new mandolin, for which he had paid forty dollars, as a young man who was to attend her party could play one very well. My father told her she could borrow it.

Two days later she returned the mandolin in a damaged condition, and with it she handed Dad fifty cents and said, "I don't suppose it will cost that much to get it fixed so you can send the change over with one of the boys."

Her Only Thanks.

The woman living next door to us had not been feeling well for a good while. One day she came over to our house, worried sick because she had lost her laundress and she did not know what she would do about the week's wash. We have fair equipment in the laundry, so I offered to oblige her by doing her things on my own wash-day. I use an electric washer and finished it all early, so I decided to surprise her by doing the ironing also. It was rather late in the night when I had finished, but I was happy thinking how surprised she would be. Early the next morning I sent them over by my little boy.

When I saw her again, she seemed peeved about something, and finally asked me if I cared to return the buttons that I washed off of her house dress. And after a while, she inquired how I made starch, adding that she didn't know when she had put their clothes away in as flimsy and half-done condition.

That represents her thanks to me.

Making Use of the Trunk.

Mother purchased a fine new trunk to make an extended trip. Upon her return an acquaintance, knowing of the trunk, asked to borrow it as she was going to spend a week with her daughter.

Mother wondered why a week's visit to a daughter should require a wardrobe to fill a trunk and although not eager she let her have the trunk. It looked anything but new when it was returned, but no wonder. In it were packed canned goods and goodness knows what not to relate to daughter and on the outside a wash wringer, kitchen stove.

To a friend she said, "I am all these things without a word. Mrs. G.'s trunk did the trick.

"I never dreamed that any one could do all the things Rinso does until I tried it myself. It certainly is THE soap for our water. At first I used it only for the laundry because it's so safe and because it made the clothes so white and pretty without any hard rubbing. But I soon found out that it was just as good for dishwashing and other cleaning. Now you'll always find a large size package on my kitchen shelf. And I love it in the bathroom, too, for cleaning the tiles, bathtub and basins.

Strange Weddings

Have you ever seen a wedding so outlandish that it upset all your ideas of the traditional ceremony? Some marriages are foreign and stukid in their adherence to ancient customs; others are ultra modern in their haphazard speed and unconventionality. The Tribune would like to know the story of the strangest wedding you've ever seen. We will pay $1 for every letter published. Address: Strange Weddings, Chicago Tribune.

Real, After All.

We were giving a benefit performance for one of the local clubs and in one of the scenes was a wedding. A popular young couple were to be the ones matrimonially inclined in the play. An out of town friend of one of the boys played the part of the minister.

Imagine our surprise when we found that we had witnessed a real wedding, the out of town friend being a minister from a nearby city.

F. G. W.

Two Ministers.

The strangest wedding I ever witnessed occurred some time ago when the two participants were deaf and dumb.

The wedding was much like others with its witnesses, flower girls and guests, except that there were two ministers.

One was a minister who spoke the sign language and had come from a distant large city to officiate. The other was the local minister of the church where the bride attended. As the deaf and dumb minister read the ceremony to the bride and groom the local minister repeated it for the benefit of the guests.

Mrs. C. B. H.

Many Symbols.

The most interesting wedding I have ever seen occurred at a Chinese home. The bride came in an automobile with a big vari-colored lantern hanging on each side. The lanterns bore in red the surname of the family the bride married into, and they were lighted inside with candles. The bride was dressed in splendor, and she had a red veil covering her face. The red veil was to drive away evil spirits.

A small pyre of sticks and paper stood before the doorway, and the bride walked right over the pyre, to certify her allegiance to the family. Before she entered the door, some one tapped her head with a little stick. This indicated she would be expected to obey. And if she took the tapping easily, she would prove to be docile and easy; if she crouched or spurned the tapping, she would turn out to be unruly. After she entered the house the wedding began.

I. L.

Mother Weds Girl's Beau.

The strangest wedding I ever witnessed was when my mother married the man I loved and had been going with for four years. We had a quarrel and I said I was going to marry some one else. For spite he started going with mother (a charming widow), and the best part of it was I was the bridesmaid and mother was married in my wedding dress.

E. B.

Worth Fifty Cents to Him.

My father, who was a minister, married many couples. One day a pair rode up to our house and hollered, "Hello!" When my father went out, the man told him they wanted to get married. Father told them to get down and come in the house. The man replied that they wanted to be married sitting on their mules.

After the ceremony the groom asked father what he charged for performing the ceremony. Father told him he made no charge, and in a joking manner told him he could pay what he thought his bride was worth. The fellow looked at his bride a moment and then he handed father a dollar and asked him if he had a half dollar in change. Father put the dollar in his pocket and told the groom he thought his bride was worth a dollar at least.

The man kicked his mule in the side and the couple rode off without saying another word.

McK. T.

In the Ocean.

The strangest wedding I ever witnessed took place at Palm Beach some fifteen years ago.

One of the life guards and a maid from Whitehall, having decided to get married, thought it would be great fun to have the ceremony performed in the ocean. So at 4 o'clock in the afternoon the bride and groom and their attendants donned bathing suits and waded out a short distance into the sea.

As the minister had refused to wear a bathing suit, a boat was procured and he stood up in the boat and performed the ceremony. The entire population was on hand and a good time was had by all.

V. G.

A White Wing Wedding.

The strangest wedding I ever witnessed was one recently held in our city. The bridegroom was a member of the street cleaning crew. His fellow workmen drove to the church in the large city trucks used for hauling ashes and rubbish. They were dressed in overalls and work jackets.

After the ceremony the men lined up and formed an archway with their shovels, through which the couple marched midst the cheers of spectators.

SPRING FEVER AND ITS CURE

That Weary Feeling, Which Appears About Crocus Time, Can Be Driven Away Without the Aid of Sulphur and Molasses

by Antoinette Donnelly

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Beginning already to feel some of the symptoms commonly described as spring fever? It is just about this time they begin to appear, increasing rapidly with every new crocus head lifted to the April breeze. If you are missing the fresh buoyancy, that feeling of hopefulness the spring season heralds, you're probably in need of some advice on the nature of the disease lightly termed "fever," and also on how to avoid or get rid of that tired feeling.

There are two kinds of fever, so I believe. One is that curious and unpretentable phenomenon which, consciously or unconsciously, affects most people in the springtime and is recognized as a sort of restlessness, a feeling of recklessness and adventure. One is more inclined to babble of sunny climes and unexplored corners of the globe than hew to the line of work.

This form of annual disturbance may be traced to its origin by a comparison with other forms of life besides man's. It is all bound up with the compelling instinct of migration that comes over almost every form of life at this season of the year.

But one does not go back uncounted ages to find the reason for that other form of spring fever—the one that lays spirits low. Memories of last season will suffice to explain why the magic carpet may be flung, a feathered orchestra be caroling its invitation to the dance—and your heels be too leaden to gambol on the green.

"That tired feeling," in fact, is nothing to tell your neighbor about. It is a reflection on your knowledge of the principles of hygienic living.

Ancestors Excused.

It was excusable for our forebears, who invented "spring fever," to talk about it as though it followed winter as naturally as harvest follows planting. They had not our advantages in hygienic training. Had they known spring fever was nothing more nor less than an individual weltering in his own uneliminated poisons, they would not have exhibited so proudly their sulphur and molasses jars.

At that, we must credit them with knowing there was something about their blood that needed purifying after a winter of smoked bacon, closed windows, and red flannel chest protectors.

We know now that that weary feeling, the lagging gait, the dull brain are due to nothing more elegant than autointoxication. A high falutin' word for what really ails the victim. It is a condition where poison arises from inactivity of cells or organs whereby substances are released into the circulation in harmful quantities. It appears at all seasons, it is true, but in more virulent form in blossom time than any other.

There are a number of reasons why the body accumulates more toxins, or fails to eliminate as much poison in the winter as during the other seasons. Skin elimination, for one thing, is not so free in winter as in summer. The skin depends upon the blood circulation for the disposal of organic poison in the system. The amount of exercise indulged in by the average individual in the cold season is not sufficient to stimulate the circulation and provide for this elimination.

Reasons for Spring Fever.

Another reason advanced by physicians in explanation of this poisoning of the system is that most people drink less water in cold weather. The eliminating organs, consequently, are unaided in throwing off the toxic matter.

Again, the cold weather diet is at fault. It is more concentrated and richer in protein and fat. It contains a smaller proportion of cellulose or woody fiber, and consequently is less favorable to intestinal activity. Too large a proportion of meat, bread, and starchy food is contained in the winter diet.

So, it isn't spring, beautiful spring, that is to blame for that tired feeling—but the hearty diet customary in winter months, an inadequate supply of drinking water to float off the poisons, and the lack of outdoor exercises.

It isn't the hard working person who gets spring fever. It is not the woodchopper, or the coal heaver, or the lumberjack. It is the sedentary worker, who feeds too well and coddles himself too much during the cold season.

However, the latter is undoubtedly more interested in how to get over his fatigue than in how he acquired it.

Green Vegetables Recommended.

Better than any bottled spring tonics are the green vegetables that contain large amounts of cellulose materials, such as spinach and the various greens—beet tops, dandelions, lettuce, string beans, celery, asparagus, onions, radishes, and so on.

The tired persons should substitute these, and fruits wherever possible for the nitrogenous articles that have been appearing on the menu. Meat should be eaten sparingly. The easily digested foods, such as eggs and milk, white bread and butter, provide too little exercise for the intestines.

Exercise should be as strenuous as the individual can stand. The prescription advanced as the best yet discovered by Dr. William A. Brady, noted physician, is recommended: "Two miles of oxygen three times a day. You may take it any way you choose, so long as you take it walking."

O. R. C.: TO REDUCE THE WAISTline try the following exercises: Stand with feet about eighteen inches apart. Raise the arms overhead; bend the trunk forward and swing the arms downward between the legs; raise the trunk and bend backward, swinging the arms up over the head. Repeat five times quickly. Next, assume correct standing position, arms out at sides. Twist the waist to the right and touch the finger tips of the right hand to the toes of the left foot. Reverse. Repeat five times, gradually increasing the number of times. Send stamped addressed envelope for additional exercises.

A FRIEND IN NEED

by Sally Joy Brown

I want to be the medium through which the friends in deed and the friends in need may be brought together. It may be you have some discarded article which has not outgrown its usefulness that will make some less fortunate one happy and you would gladly give it if you knew how to go about it. Write to me and I shall be happy to be of service to you. Please write on one side of the paper.

When information is wanted by mail, a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send article to The Tribune but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

OPPORTUNITIES TO HELP AT EASTER TIME.

"DEAR MISS BROWN: I have two little girls; one is 7 and the other is 5. I would like to get them some clothing, as they keep asking me if I am going to get them new coats and dresses for Easter. I just can't buy them anything, as my husband has been out of work for three months. I expect another baby soon and I haven't bought anything for the little one, either. Mrs. R."

When we think of the pride we all take in new spring clothes, what could be more natural than the request of these little girls when they hear conversations about new clothes for Easter? They wonder if they are going to have new "spring outfits." And there's genuine need, as well. We have numberless requests right now from mothers who are confronted with the problem of spring clothes for their little ones and who simply cannot afford to buy them. Right along with this need goes the remedy, if we'll only use it. Most of us who have children are planning to get some new spring clothes for them. We have to, if for no other reason than that they've grown too big to wear last year's apparel. So those clothes will be just the thing to make all these needy little girls and boys wonderfully happy.

If your little son or daughter is outgrowing a coat, suit, or dress, what else could you do with the discarded garments? Really, there isn't much to do with them, is there? Why not, then, let me put them into service and make Easter a happy day for all these needy little folk?

A Needlework Query.

"I want to know the formula or the preparation which was formerly used in tracing patterns, in needlework, whereby a perforated pattern could be transferred by means of a powder of semi-liquid preparation. Can you help me? M. T. M."

Have you the knowledge this correspondent so earnestly seeks? And would you tell her how it is done?

Left in Need.

"I am writing for a needy and worthy family, consisting of a mother and three children. The mother was obliged to leave her husband on account of drunkenness and nonsupport. This woman was recently operated on and has not fully recovered, so she cannot work. They are badly in need of clothing and I thought your readers might be able to help. The 17 year old boy, who attends school and works, also, wears a size 38 suit. The other children are a boy, 12, and a girl, 8. The mother wears size 38. "Mrs. P."

Can you help these people out of the straitened condition in which a delinquent parent has left them? The clothing you are about to discard would do it.

Family Has Hard Times.

"Would you please help us with some clothing? We have had a lot of sickness and all kinds of trouble and it seems so hard for us to get along. I have five children—the boys are 18 and 7 and the girls 16, 14, and 12. My big boy is out every day trying to get work. My daughter is out of work also. My husband is not working steadily and everything is going wrong. Mrs. N."

This family seems to be having more than its share of misfortune, and perhaps a little assistance from us would give them the start they need. Have you any clothing they might have?

Use for Picture Frames.

"I wonder if there are some who have old picture frames of any size they no longer want. I want to retouch them and fix them over to fit some pictures I have. I will be so thankful for any you may get me. "Mrs. A. M."

Those old faded pictures, the frames of which are still good, may again be put to use. Mrs. A. M. probably can make them quite presentable.

Persian Kittens to Give.

"I have nine lovely kittens I would like to give to your readers if they will give them good homes. Two of them are Persian and the others are part Persian. I would prefer giving them to people who live in the country or in the suburbs. K. F."

These are really beautiful kittens and I know they'll make delightful pets. If you'd like to have one of them you had better write to us immediately.

To Give Children Fun.

"My baby is a girl, 5 years old, and would like to have a tricycle. The two older children want a coaster wagon. I wonder if any of your readers would have these to give away. "Mrs. A. B."

Boys and girls who have outgrown their toys can bring a great deal of happiness into the lives of less fortunate youngsters with them. Have you either of the things these poor children want?

Ballet Slippers Needed.

"I would like to know if any of your readers have two pairs of toe dancing slippers, size 1 and 3½. Some one has promised to teach my sister and me dancing and we can't afford to buy the slippers and dresses we will need. We are 9 and 12. I. C."

If your ballet slippers and costumes are a little worn, these girls could make good use of them and would be most happy to have them.

BEAUTY ANSWERS

by Antoinette Donnelly

What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet, or a set of exercises for what ails you, and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply, send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, The Tribune, Chicago.

MRS. A. S.: THE PEROXIDE AND ammonia used to bleach superfluous hair keeps the hair light and dry, and tends to diminish the growth rather than increase it. Cutting these hairs close to the skin with manicure scissors does not stimulate their growth, as believed by many people. It is well to avoid the use of depilatories on the face that contain barium sulphide.

J. N.: THE DANDRUFF REMEDY is: Sixty grains of sulphur mixed with one ounce of vaseline, and applied every other night to the scalp with massage. If there is much dandruff you should shampoo the hair twice a week, gradually increasing the length of time between shampoos. For further suggestions on the care of the hair send a stamped, addressed envelope.

BROWN EYES: YEAST MAY BE taken at any time—either with the meals or between meals. If you don't like it when dissolved in water or fruit juice you may spread it on bread or a cracker. It makes no difference how it is taken. Stop eating candy entirely until you overcome your present trouble. When you feel tempted, think of your complexion ills and you'll have the courage to refuse.

M. G. T.: ALL SKINS WILL NOT permit the use of the same amount of soap and water, but one washing a day with soap and water is required for the sake of cleanliness. Where the skin is dry, all other cleansings may be done with a cleansing cream, and a good cold cream should be massaged into the skin at night and as much as possible left on during the night. Other hints for dry skins are contained in my booklet, "Care of the Skin," which may be had for a stamped addressed envelope.

Y. D.: WHERE THE BACK OF the neck is fat, place finger tips on the shoulders and twist arms and shoulders in a circular motion. Twisting exercises do away with unnecessary fat and strengthen the muscles.

R. W.: SNOWY WHITE NAIL tips may be had if you will insert nail white under the fingernails. If your nails break easily, soak them for ten minutes each night in olive oil or sweet almond oil, which has been slightly warmed. Use just enough oil to cover the finger tips.

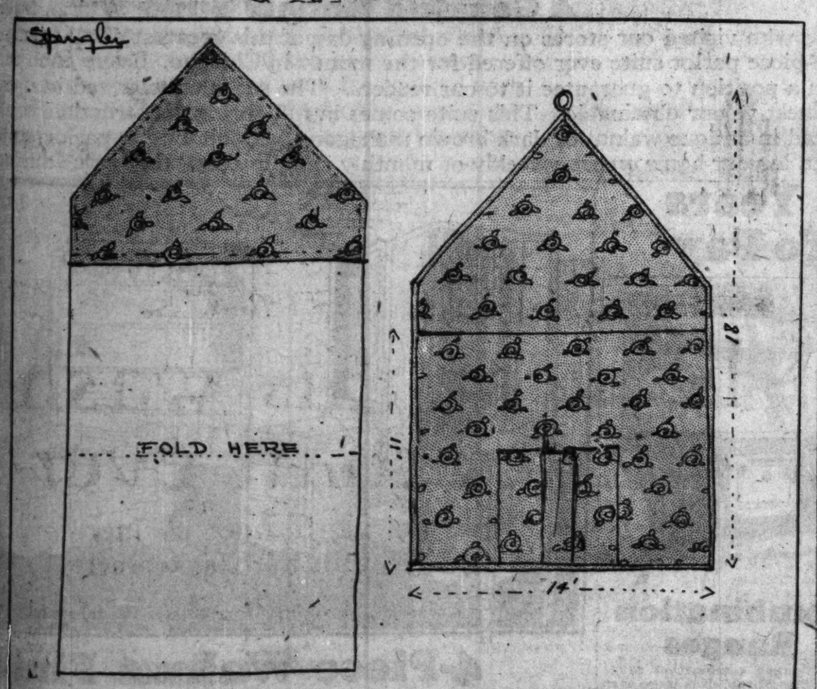
B. F. T.: THE USE OF AN EYEbrow pencil for darkening the eyebrows is the simplest method. They may be darkened just as the hair is darkened by the use of a dye, but such work must be done by a skilled operator or it is easily detected.

GENE H.: THE DEEP LINES UNder your eyes are due to lack of sleep. Six hours isn't sufficient sleep for a young girl. You should have eight or nine hours sleep in a well ventilated room. If possible, spend an hour in the open air every day.

EDDA G.: CAMOMILE TEA MAY be applied to the hair with a brush after shampooing, or it may be added to the last rinse water. It is quite harmless. Steep a little of the tea in boiling water and allow it to cool. Directions for shampooing the hair may be had for a stamped, addressed envelope.

Practical and Fancy Needle Work

By Clotilde



The Bag Shown Today May Be Made of Bright Colored Cretonne and Is Convenient for Holding Fancy Work or Knitting.

What is your sewing problem? Do you have trouble in following a pattern? Do you find difficulty in making a skirt band evenly or making a sleeve that fits well? If there is anything you would like to know about these or other problems of needlework write to Clotilde, The Tribune, Chicago, enclosing a stamped addressed envelope. If a personal reply is desired.

A BRILLIANTLY colored glazed cretonne was used to make the bag pictured today. And it is one of the prettiest the New York shops are showing. This bag is fully made to hold pieces of brown paper and string, but it would be an attractive bag to hold fancy work, knitting, crocheting, etc., and it would make a lovely porch bag, hanging in some convenient place on the porch with your work inside, ready to pick up at a moment's notice.

Naturally, a bag of this kind can be made any size you wish; but maybe you would like the dimensions of this particular one. Finished, it measures from the bottom to the point, eighteen inches; and the width is fourteen and one-half inches finished. The large pocket is eleven inches deep, and the measures of the small twine pocket are four and one-half by six inches. This width measure doesn't include the box plait.

There is an inch wide inverted plait down each side of the bag, and this of course makes for more room inside.

After the bag has been cut out, lay a piece of the cretonne on it and cut a second piece at the pointed end long enough to come one inch below the top of the folded over part. Turn in this bottom edge and stitch across first basting the two pieces of cretonne together around the edge. And of course the right side of this piece of cretonne is on top. Then make the little pocket, if you care to have it, and stitch it in place on the bag. Then baste bias binding (and you can buy this in any desired color) around the raw edges and stitch on the machine, close to the edge. Sew a white bone ring to the point of the bag and your work is finished.

THE TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

Tea and Teas Constitute a Whole Round World of Facts.

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

By Jane Eddington.

ON the pleasure side—and surely tea drinking is largely a social and pleasurable affair—the first contribution tea makes to humanity is its gift of fragrance of aroma. No matter what the approach is we make to tea, that is, to drinking it, we ought to look for and expect an aromatic savor, for when tea is well made and of good quality it emits a bouquet which those who know have called a fragrance that can scarcely be surpassed. It is a bouquet that flatters the palate, through both the smell and the taste. There could not be the wonderful aesthetics of tea that there is but for this, and when special blends or grades are extolled, the idea is that they surpass others in flavor and bouquet.

But tea takes odors from many things, if it is not protected, and through various sorts of deterioration becomes something that cannot give pleasure on the aesthetic side, but mainly on the temperature side, being something either gratefully hot or gratefully cold. In 1923, it could be said that our tea act was the only existing law which regulated the palatability of a food.

Tea in bulk always tends to lose its flavor. It should be kept in airtight containers. The old fashioned chests of tea were lined with a heavy lead foil. Caravan tea is something we in the United States cannot have, because it is tea carried overland in caravans to Europe, making it most expensive. The tea voyage undoubtedly affects the flavor of teas.

Mrs. James T. Fields once wrote this: "Longfellow came to town to see Jamie, in one of his loveliest moods. The day was so warm and fine, such a day of dreams, that we proposed to him every kind of excursion. 'Come,' he said, 'let us go to the tea stores and smell the tea; the warm atmosphere will bring out all the odors!'"

It was not so good for the tea in the stores that it could be smelled. We do things better, in general, today, yet those who want the best or the most aromatic teas do not buy them in bulk, but in sealed packages.

Choice of Teas.

As to tea absorbing odors, in one of the early numbers of the Good Housekeeping magazine [in 1888] there is this item: "The extraordinary sensitiveness of tea to odors was shown in New York the other day. A ship brought a cargo of tea—and nothing else—from China, and, upon testing the tea, it was found to be sweet. The ship had brought a cargo of sugar from Manila on the previous voyage, and though not a bit of it was left in the vessel, yet the odor was sufficient to impregnate the tea. A case somewhat similar to this occurred twelve years ago, when tea was packed in the same hold with camphor." Those who have a sensitive knowledge of tea look for exquisite flavor or taste and aroma, and especially note its appearance in the cup.

When people had a narrower choice of teas than today they were more expert in their knowledge of each one. The English tea drinkers for many years seem to have been devoted to Bohea, a China or black tea called by the name of the hills where it was grown. There are people who think that China teas have the most delicate flavor and like the light color of them in the cup. Of course, there have been many grades of these and we pay a high price for the best—if we can get it. As I understand it, Chinese merchants control what shall and shall not have it. It is said that the Chinese use the coarser leaves of the tea tree for the preparation of leather, because of the tannin in them. It is the tannin in even the finer leaves that makes boiled tea so undesirable as a beverage.

The fragrance of oolong tea has been considered rank by some people, but this has made it popular among a class without supposedly aesthetic instincts. One condemnation of it declares that it puckers and "coppers" the stomach, but this was by an Englishman who preferred English breakfast tea as most wholesome and tasty.

In England, tea blends are so universal that the poor outsider has to depend upon brands, but we seem not to have been expert in blends. Plain long green Japan, as well as many others, has had its friends, and we know we must go to the Japanese for the perfection of the tea ceremony.

For years ago, when Ceylon teas seem to have been introduced to the United States, it was claimed that those teas were cleaner than were those of China and Japan—some teas are vacuum cleaned today—and that the latter were adulterated. The new coming Ceylon tea to our America was extolled for its strength and flavor, and it was said that two pounds of it would go farther than three of Chinese or Japanese tea, which statement probably needed to be proven. At any rate, some of the romancers of the world have loved to describe the tea growing parts of China, and to tell how the delicate buds of middle April were picked and spread, dried in bamboo trays, dropped into red hot pans in small quantities, etc., until it was finally packed in lead foil ready for commerce.

It seems to be more or less English to like China tea, although India teas seem to get the most attention from Englishmen today. For those who want exotic things there are expensive Moorish teas, and not long ago we clipped a news item concerning the most expensive tea one ever heard of, which was being sold, when made, for one dollar per cup. However, the sentiment that you can tell people of intellect from the fact that they drink China tea, and generally without sugar, has worked for economy.

Substitutes for the Tea Plant Leaves.

In the course of a hundred years there have been many sorts of dried leaves put forward for favor as against those of the tea plant, but judging from the fate of several sorts which we can trace their popularity has quickly waned. One, in particular, received much attention in 1866 because of its fragrance, and because prominent people commended it for some of the same things that China tea has been praised for, its fragrance, its tonic qualities, and its qualities as a promoter of digestion, and for being without the quality that in China tea presumably produces sleeplessness.

The Flavoring of Teas.

Because of its own true fragrance when it is good tea, it does seem unreasonable to make a sort of weak and hot lemonade of it, since the lemon oder drowns that of the tea—kills its bouquet—or to add jasmine or any other flower to it. Orange Pekoe tea is considered best with lemon. The correct Russian tea is not a cup of tea, since a deep glass is the correct container for it. Some people think that equal parts of orange and lemon juice in tea produce a satisfactory or most justifiable drink. Another of the many ways that have been devised for flavoring tea has been to shut cubes of sugar with dried orange peel and use them for flavoring as well as sweetening the tea.

On Making Teas.

There is one point in the making of teas on which there seems to be universal agreement—the water poured over the leaves should be boiling, furiously boiling, but the tea itself should not be boiled. As to the amount of tea to use, the prevailing idea of one teaspoon per person and one for the pot is anything but exact, since much less of one kind of tea or much more may be required than for another.

And as to the time for the brewing of the tea, one expert says that the oolongs and green teas require more drawing, and the Indias and Ceylons the shorter time. We might guess the latter. A recipe of 1669 gives as the time for steeping tea "no longer than while you can say the Miserere," which would not be a good universal rule, since some of us do not know it!

There are many and curious directions almost as old as this, which more or less agree with one way used in England today or "wetting the tea." Cold water is put on it and it is easier to make tea for iced tea than you would believe, if you had not tried it. One old recipe for pouring boiling water on tea says that the tea is ready as soon as the leaves sink in it, and that is not a bad rule. Many of these old recipes may seem like mere curiosities, but there is some good in all, probably, although we can hardly believe that eggs in tea are worth while.

Making Russian Tea.

Russian tea, old style, was made by putting a freshly cut slice of lemon in the bottom of a cup, sprinkling it with sugar, and allowing it to stand a few minutes before pouring hot tea over it. The lemon should be peeled because there is a bitter flavor in the white part of the peel and yet another in the "zest." But it is most correct to call this a lemon tea. The Russians are also given the credit of giving to certain people the idea of putting a spoonful of fruit jam in their tea, and some think they get a delicious flavor if they put in a slice of fresh apple, but much depends upon the tea, in the latter case, and it should certainly be weak.

Tea Pots.

The little red pottery pot, which has sometimes been called a "Brown Betty," has been beloved and in general there is a sentiment against metal utensils in tea drawing, even silver. If the latter is used, the tea is often made in the unglazed pot, heated first, and then poured into the silver one. In any case, it is always a good plan to pour the tea off the leaves if it is to stand for longer than the brief time of drawing. Rather extravagant people use a great deal of tea, let the water barely "kiss" it, and pour it off at once. In other words, their direction is: "Be a profligate with the amount of tea used."

Social Tea.

This is an enormous subject by itself. Around it has grown up a system of etiquette, manuals of cookery, and a great commerce.

Activities of Women

Dean Inge of England is in favor of the female bishop, claiming that many of them are better qualified than men.

Though she has only one arm, Mrs. George Lyddon of Pearl River, N. Y., recently won first prize in a cooking contest.

There is a shortage of dressmaking apprentices in France, owing to the fact that the midinettes all want to become stenographers.

At the age of 70 years Miss Gertrude Rickards of London has challenged the pedestrian record of Edward Payson Weston. Recently she completed a walking tour of 1,044 miles through Scotland and England.

TIRED ACHING FEET—

"T12" makes sore, burning, tired feet fairly dance with delight. Away go the aches and pains, the corns, callouses, blisters and bunions. "T12" draws out the acids and poisons that puff up your feet. No matter how hard you work, how long you dance, how far you walk, or how long you remain on your feet, "T12" brings restful foot comfort. Your feet just tingle for joy; shoes never hurt or seem tight.

Get a box of "T12" now from any druggist or department store.

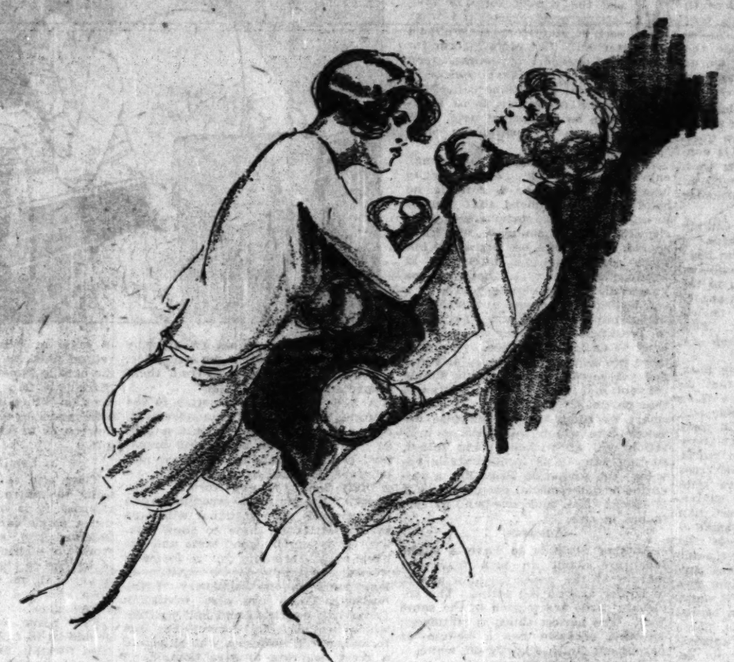
MAIDEN MEDITATIONS

by SARA MOORE



BELIEVE ME.

[Suddenly, somewhere, some time, a woman conceived the idea of black shoes and champagne colored stockings. The idea spread. Variations followed quickly. Where 480 styles of stockings were carried in 1920, the company now has to carry 6,006.—President of a woman's hosiery company.]

The chart of woman's preference
Shows changes sharply jagged;
If men WILL follow every whim,
We'll run Big Business ragged.

HA! HA! ME, TOO!

[The nonpoisonous blows are liable to sound like a brick going through a plate glass window, while apparently soft, sly soaks are the ones apt to pack venom. . . . The worst for me and the best for him (Gene) seemed to arrive from nowhere and get there suddenly, although they didn't come very far.—From an article by Fighter Tom Gibbons on "Punches I have Taken," in Liberty.]

Pugs work in a roped arena,
A-slinging their fists for tools;
I move in a set serener,
Where, Thomas, they don't have rules;

Your customers rise in the grandstands
And yell till your punch draws blood;
No tears and—no jeers—are the portion
Of a lone little battling bud.

Both games are the same, believe me;
Though staged in the ring or Ritz—
Sometimes I long for a technique
Permitting knockouts and mitts;

I'm tired of "leading" with dinners
And "countering" cars with a hat;
Instead of finessing her aces
I'd like to jolt Geraldine flat.

It isn't—you're right, Thomas Gibbons—
A blow that seems smashingly big
That knocks either one of us goofy—
We both dread the mean little dig.

A HUNDRED TO ONE.

There's something the matter with me
I fear;
I'm not what I ought to be
(O dear!);
I don't care much for new rouge—too bright;
And I wear dark hose where the rest wear light;
I seldom grieve, though my hat's a fright—
Who'll marry a girl so queer?

'Tis little things count with the men,
They say;
I'll be but a spinsterish hen
(I may!);
I'm brim full of faults and the worst's this one:
I don't give a d—— that the thing's "not done";
When every one else wears pearls—I've none;
Boys won't even look my way.

Alas:
The modern knight on his knightly quest
Insists that his lady be like the rest;
Where stand pat parties are in ascendant—
Who wastes a vote on an independent?

ZIP COON STORIES

BY KEMBLE

Judge Bear Gets Hunk with Crafty Fox

GEE WHIZ, but there were some doings around here last week. Crafty Fox got it again. He thought he'd play a good joke on old Judge Bear and—— But I'll tell you all about it.

I saw Zip Coon shin up a tree, and when he got on the end of an old dead limb he began to scream.

Down in the valley a pack of hounds were yelping their heads off. They were after Crafty Fox, and the old sinner was just legging it over the landscape. Over stone walls and into the creek he went. Then out again. Soon he was lost to view. Then the noise stopped.

They thought I was Crafty Fox.

Zip Coon slid down the tree.

"It beats the Dutch how that boy can wiggle out of trouble," says he. "I do wish they would chase him out of these diggings, then Benny Bunny and I could live in peace."

While he was talking old Crafty himself hobbles up, his tongue hanging out of his mouth. My, O my! but he was tired.

"I've had one awful time, Zip," says he, "an awful time. Those hounds were after me. Just think of it! After me! But I fooled them. Yessir! I took them around by Judge Bear's cabin and lost them."

Just then the yelping commenced again. Crafty began to grin. "Hear that? I'll bet those ki-yis are saying a few kind words to somebody. I wonder who it is?"

"THAT'S all right," squeaks Zip Goon, who has shinned up the tree as soon as Crafty appeared, "but they may come chasing up here any minute, and you're too tired to run any more."

"But where can I hide, Zip?" wailed Crafty. "Please help me! Where can I hide?"

When he got on the end of an old dead limb.

"Scoot into my shack and get under the bed," says Zip, and he looked wicked when he said it.

As Crafty crawled out of sight he called back to Zip:

"Old Judge Bear in his old high hat,
I'll bet this very minute he is feeling quite flat."

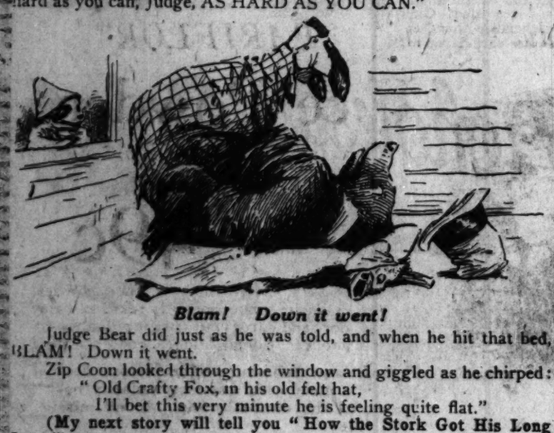
Zip Coon's eyes almost popped out of his head as he slid down the tree, for who should come crashing through the brushes but Judge Bear himself. Zip knew he would come.

"Have you seen anything of that old sinner Crafty Fox?" he growled. "If I can lay my mitts on that chap I'll teach him a lesson he'll never forget. Look what he did to me. Look at my clothes! He led those dogs right up to my door, with his miserable scent, then he skipped around the other way, and when I came out to see what all the fuss was about they tackled me. Rassled me all over the place. Just look at my clothes! Torn to bits! When the pups finally recognized me they apologized and said they thought I was Crafty Fox. Woof! Woof! but I'm mad!"

ZIP COON winked his eye, and, pulling Judge Bear's ear down, whispered in it:

"Sneak softly into my cabin and lie down on my little bed as hard as you can, Judge, AS HARD AS YOU CAN."



Blam! Down it went!

Judge Bear did just as he was told, and when he hit that bed, BLAM! Down it went.

Zip Coon looked through the window and giggled as he chirped:

"Old Crafty Fox, in his old felt hat,
I'll bet this very minute he is feeling quite flat."

The day that baby sister arrived grandpa took my five year old cousin Bobby to his club for lunch.

On being introduced to Bobby, one of grandpa's friends inquired, "Are you an only child?"

"O, no," answered Bobby, "I have four brothers and one sister."

"What!" exclaimed the old gentleman, "five boys and only one girl?"

"Well," replied Bobby defensively, "we've only just begun on girls."

G. W. C.

I heard the boys on the street calling my new neighbor boy "Hank." A few days later I called on his mother, and, as he answered the doorbell, I said, "Hello, Hank."

"Hush," he said, looking around furtively, "I'm Hank to the boys on the street, but at home I'm Harry James."

Bring Out the Hidden Beauty

Do you know that just beneath that soiled, discolored, faded or wrinkled complexion is one fair to look upon? Mercolized Wax will gradually and gently peel off the devitalized surface skin, revealing a new, fresh, white, beautiful skin underneath. The new complexion is a perfectly natural one, therefore in no way to be compared with a make-up. The wax leaves no trace but that of increased loveliness, exquisite complexion of robust girlhood—and every one will tell you.

A New Skin—Your Own!—at small expense and effort. Simply apply Mercolized Wax at bedtime as you apply cold cream; wash it off in the morning. Fine, almost invisible, skin particles are flicked off with the wax. No harm possible. No detention indoors. The lively, young, healthy underskin is brought gradually to view—you have the

Mercolized Wax

ISN'T IT ODD

By William Atherton DuPuy

ISN'T it odd that the tiny chickadee should be able to stay in the north through all the snows of winter—and seems to get along quite well, thank you!

If you notice this brave little bird out in the snow you will see that it does not even take the trouble to keep its nose turned toward the wintry blasts as do most creatures of its kind. Let them try to ruffle its feathers and get through to its skin if they can. It dares them.

Examining the coat of the chickadee one would find that the rough feathers on top are but the trimmings of its protection from the cold. Beneath that is a thick layer of down that defies the cold. Then the chickadee puts a layer of fat just under the skin, just as whales and seals do, as an extra-efficient protection against the cold.

Inside this covering the chickadee burns one of the busiest little stoves any animal possesses. It keeps up a piping temperature. Its body is constantly some ten degrees hotter than is that of man. Man would burn up with fever at 105, but the chickadee is 108 to 110 all the time.

It keeps this temperature by stoking its furnace steadily. The chickadee is a huge eater for its size. If its body were stripped of feathers it would not be bigger than a man's thumb to the first joint. Yet by actual tests one of these birds has been shown to eat 20 sunflower seeds in an hour. This fuel goes into the fire to keep the heat up.

Most of the other birds have gone south for the winter because they do not like the cold and because it is hard to get food. The chickadee still manages to get along. It still finds insects in its own way although there seem to be none left in the world. It prowls along the trunks of trees and digs out grubs that have been hidden in the crevices for the winter. It eats insect eggs no bigger than pin-points, but they help so small a creature. The grasses and weeds that stick above the snow still have seeds hidden in their tassels and these tiny birds know how to shake them and cause them to rattle down on the snow. Then there are friendly human beings who put suet out for the birds. This is a kindly thing to do and is appreciated, but the chickadees are not dependent on charity. Many of them live along the edge of the woods, sleeping by night in dense pines and cedars, quite away from the haunts of man.

Bright Sayings of Husbands and Wives

The snappy comeback of the better half when cornered has often been a source of wonder to husbands and wives! The husband or the wife has come across with a bright saying that will never be forgotten by the other half of the matrimonial sketch. What was that bright saying, Mr.? Mrs.? Send it to us and we'll pay you $1 for it if we print it. Address Bright Sayings of Husbands and Wives, The Chicago Tribune, Chicago.

Might Displease Him.

Wife (in back seat)—Henry, dear! You mustn't drive so fast!!

Hubby—Why not?

Wife—The motor cop who has been following us won't like it.

MRS. A. S.

It's Different Now.

I had been giving my husband a lengthy scolding about scattering his belongings all over the house, among other things saying: "I have to be continually running around after you!"

He wearily retorted: "You didn't seem to mind that before we were married."

MRS. C. E. H.

Let Him Hunt.

Hubby broke the news that he was going hunting the next morning at three o'clock and would like breakfast before going out.

I replied: "If you can go hunting at that hour of the morning, you can 'hunt' some breakfast, too!"

MRS. J. N. K.

In Her Own Words.

Rastus was old, but he had a young wife whose labors over the washboard kept them both. At last Mirandy rebelled and they went before the judge to get a divorce.

Said the judge: "This is too bad—a case of June married to December."

"Whats' dat, judge?" said Mirandy. "Seems to me a heap mo' like Labor day married to de day ob rest."

MRS. G. A. W.

Great Pains.

Wife: "I have taken great pains in making those cookies, by my own recipe, for you."

Husband: "Yes, and I'm going through great pains in eating them, too. They'd make good wedges."

R. F. H.

O, No!

We were discussing a woman who nagged her husband. So I ended by saying: "I never nag you, do I, dear?"

He answered: "No, darling. You just persist."

Correct Invitation Forms - - - - - By Persis Standish.

Many Innovations in Social Stationery Have Appeared During Last Two Years.

Persis Standish will answer questions of all kinds on etiquette, manners, and politeness. Self-addressed, stamped envelopes must accompany each request for information. Send your letters to Persis Standish, Sunday Room, Chicago Tribune.

MANY correspondents write to ask the correct form of invitations and regrets and what sort of stationery they should be written on. The correct form for invitations depends, of course, upon the occasion. Nowadays unless a party is formal invitations can either be telephoned or written in as informal fashion as a personal note. Tea invitations can be written on one's visiting card.

For wedding invitations and formal engraved forms for invitations to luncheon and dinner I can do no better than recommend that you go to one of the best stationers in your city and order them made up. They should, of course, be engraved, but there are permissible differences in wording and in type that perhaps you would like to choose yourself.

A lot depends, too, on how elaborate the wedding is to be and what cards to breakfast and other celebrations must be enclosed. Besides, every year there are new styles slightly different and yet correct, even for this simple conventional matter. For instance, this particular year it is considered smart by some to have a large envelope into which the wedding invitation will go without being folded, so that after it is in its outside envelope the invitation looks like a valentine or some official document, as it is about five and one-half by six inches in size.

Answers.

Another style is to have a slight indenture about an inch from the margin of the paper forming a sort of border around the script. The enclosure cards are treated in the same way. The newest thing in stationery for this occasion has a vellum or parchment finish slightly off white.

The answers to wedding invitations should be made thus:

If the invitation is to the church only, no answer is required.

If there is a card enclosed to breakfast or reception, the answer should follow the invitation form as closely as possible and should be sent within a week at latest of receiving the invitation.

Wedding invitations should be sent out not earlier than three weeks, and not later than a fortnight before the wedding. No wedding invitation should be sent out bearing the legend, "And family." Each member of a family should be honored by a separate card, if he or she is to be a guest at the wedding.

Wedding Announcements.

Wedding announcements look very much like wedding invitations. The enclosure card should bear the new address of the bride and groom and a date on and after which they will be "at home"—in other words, settled enough to receive visitors. Wedding announcements should be sent out immediately after the wedding, or at least within the next twenty-four hours. Sometimes they are sent later, but the usual thing is to send them immediately.

A wedding invitation merely to the church, or a wedding announcement, does not obligate one to send a gift, as an invitation to a wedding breakfast or reception does. It does not, however bar one from doing so.

Invitations to very formal balls, dances, dinners and receptions can be engraved. The stationer will have several styles of these to show you, too. It is equally good taste and implies equal formality for a formally worded invitation to be written in long hand on the stationery of the hostess. There are also invitation forms half engraved and half written, which are perfectly correct, but less formal, which hostesses who entertain a great deal use to save time.

Forms Given.

The answers to all these invitations should be written in long hand on one's personal stationery (not that of a club or hotel), and should follow the wording of the invitation as nearly as possible. For instance, if the invitation reads thus:

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Harcourt Jones request the pleasure of your company at dinner on Wednesday evening, April the tenth, nineteen hundred and twenty-five.
Eight o'clock. 1225 Park place.

The answer should read:

Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Ainsworth Smith accept with much pleasure the kind invitation
of
Mr. and Mrs. Roy Harcourt Jones
for dinner on Wednesday evening, April the tenth, nineteen hundred and twenty-five.
Eight o'clock. 1225 Park place.

This year there are some variations in style of calling cards also. The vellum finish is being much used and the card is sometimes made up so that there is a flap the same size as the card on which the owner may write little messages to send to hospitals with flowers, or to put in the box with any gift.

Use Full Name.

They also can be used for invitations to informal teas, but for this purpose it is much more correct to use a single card. Visiting cards are indented also, giving a slight border from an eighth to a quarter of an inch. As to the type of lettering, it is optional, but conspicuous types are always in bad taste. Old English is always good.

The name on the visiting card should be in full. No initials are ever used for this purpose. For instance, Mrs. Harry James Smith would never be Mrs. Harry J. Smith, and people with elaborate middle names either put them all on, or drop several entirely. Your stationer will help you with all these things, but be warned that even the best stationers carry in stock some articles that are only good for commercial purposes and purposes of organizations such as clubs and societies.

For instance, it is perfectly proper for a business organization to send out cards thanking people who have written the organization about the death of one of its officials, but it is never correct for a family to do this. All letters of thanks and consolation should be written in long hand—the smart stationers to the contrary notwithstanding.

Many Innovations.

To return to the subject of invitations, there are many innovations within the last couple of years. An invitation to a luncheon at a very smart club, the luncheon given by several hostesses, came on pale yellow paper lately, and the luncheon followed the same color scheme even to the damask. Things like this, however, are a bit risky for the ordinary hostess who is having a few friends to luncheon.

It is much better for her either to write the invitations in long hand or to have the conventional plate made without the date and the hour, so that she may use them for a long time. If a conservative plate is chosen, it may be used a number of years, selecting the stationery each year from the best style of that season.

The same invitations cannot, unfortunately, be used for luncheon and dinner because dinner invitations are always issued in the name of host and hostess.

Jealous of Her Job.

Amy was jealous of her job, which was welfare work in a department store. She would go into tantrums and tears in the manager's office whenever any one else did a bit of work that she considered belonged to her department.

And above all things she was anxious to "sit in" at the executive meeting, but the management did not so decree. Finally, the manager's private secretary, who was being trained to become assistant manager, was invited to "sit in" at the executive meeting.

Amy found it out and raised such a hubbub that the manager rescinded the order and excluded the secretary from the meeting rather than admit Amy, so both lost out by Amy's jealousy.

L. G. W.

A Confession.

I disclaimed the trait of jealousy, but when my husband's sister came to call on us, and he displayed a new suit he had just purchased to her before he did to me, and asked her approval before I had given mine, I was so filled with jealousy that although it was a beautiful suit and looked well on my husband, I angrily told him it made him look old, that I did not like it, and that I absolutely refused to go out with him when he wore it.

MRS. H. G.

Jealous of Her Brother.

The most jealous person I know is a young woman who is married, and is supported by a fond husband.

She has an unmarried brother of whom she is extremely jealous. When she goes home to visit, she puts her parents to unnecessary trouble and expense, borrows money from them, does not pay it back; says if she pays it back this brother will have more, and is continually saying catty things about him.

This brother is still in his 'teens and is entitled to some support. R. V. N.

Dog Acts Like Human.

We have recently acquired an American Pit Bull terrier. When friend husband kisses me good-bye on leaving in the morning and greets me on returning, Tiger Boy jumps up from his blanket, rushes to where we happen to be standing, leaps upon us, whining and growling. Hubby pets him, kisses me again, and goes about his business.

The dog sulks and pouts for a half hour. Food, or his chain shaken alluringly as a promise for a run, does not appeal to him just then. If the telephone rings and some one greets Tiger Boy through the receiver, or the crystal radio set is working and he can listen through the head phones he forgets his peeve.

Freshen That Drawn, Sallow Complexion

How can faces look clear and fresh and youthful when pores are laden with days-old dust and dry oil and powder? They can't.

How can they glow with natural health and color when nature's life-giving blood never floods them? They can't.

Creams and soaps and costly treatments can not refresh and awaken tired complexions. They need a better cleansing and a gentle stimulus. They need Calonite—a pure, white powder that you apply with a damp wash cloth.

Instantly you feel the burdened pores relax as prime you didn't know was there, bubbles and dissolves: as warm, reviving blood comes tingling to the surface. Blackheads, embedded oil and powder, dissolve. Sallow, oily, lifeless skin glows, clean and clear. Drawn, tired pores relax and breathe naturally. Instantly!

No waiting for Calonite's benefits. You see and feel them—instantly. How fresh and young and new your skin! How it responds to night-cream and rest. How you enjoy this gentle, stimulating, facial cleanliness. You look and feel a different person.

Ask your druggist for Calonite. Try it, this very night. Your money back if not delighted.

Corns Lift Off

You'll laugh, really! It is so easy and doesn't hurt one bit!

Drop "Freezone" on that old, bothersome corn. Instantly it stops aching; then shortly you lift that sore, touchy corn right off with your fingers. It works like a charm, every time.

A tiny bottle of "Freezone" costs only a few cents at any drug store, sufficient to remove every hard corn, soft corn, corn between the toes and calluses—Try it!

Long life to your corsets!

Quality of elastic is the determining factor in the performance of the corset. And Kenlastic, the supreme standard of service-quality in knitted elastic, is your assurance of performance. When you buy a corset, look inside for the wavy blue line that now identifies genuine Kenlastic.

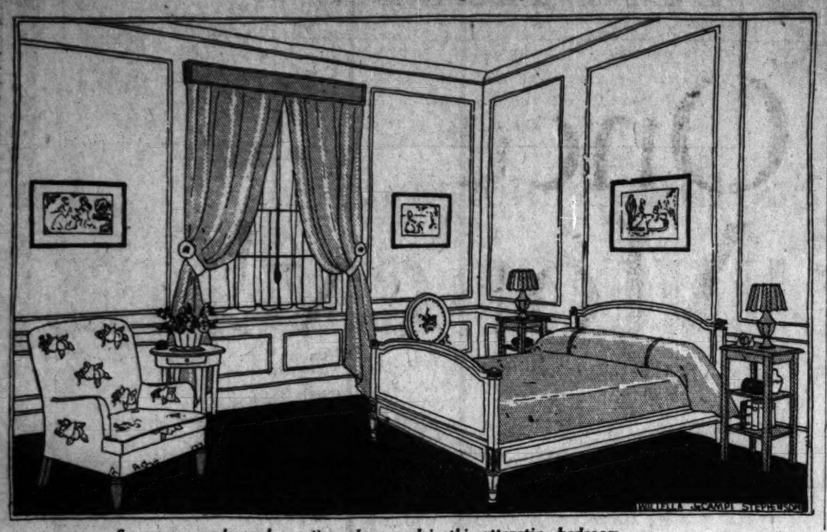
The HOME HARMONIOUS

By WillElla De Campi Stephenson.



Sage green and peach are the colors used in this attractive bedroom.

The "Trimmings" of a Room: The Draperies, Upholstery and Rugs Express the Personality of the Owner.

WillElla de Campi Stephenson will be glad to assist the homemaker in any problems pertaining to home building and home furnishing. Address your letter to Anita de Campi, The Tribune, Chicago. Inclose stamped, addressed envelope for personal reply.

SELECTING furniture for the bedroom is no difficult problem. There are always the same requisite pieces, with an occasional added piece or two. But in the "trimmings" great varieties may be shown. Draperies, rugs, lamps, and especially bed covers, are of utmost importance in the decorative qualities of the rooms in which they are used. In looking for beautiful bed spreads, nowadays, we look almost anywhere other than in the bedding department. Most exquisite bed coverings may be bought in the upholstery sections. They are selected, frequently, to match the draperies used in bedrooms.

One charming bed cover which I have seen, was bought in a linen store, supposedly to be used as a tablecloth. It is made of pineapple linen, with beautiful medallions of drawn work, and elaborate embroidery, all in a soft cream color. The ingenious bride, to whom it was given as a wedding present, lived in a small apartment where the dining table was not large enough to do justice to the lovely thing, so she immediately decided to use it as a bed cover. It is spread out in full glory, over an undercover of intense turquoise blue sateen, so that the pattern is advantageously displayed. Walls in the room are pale lemon yellow. At the windows are draperies of flowered glazed chintz, on a turquoise ground. Cream colored gauze makes the glass curtains. The rugs are of deep, plum colored chenille.

In the room shown in today's illustration, the bed cover and draperies are of heavy, lustrous sage green satin. [Sateen could be used instead]. These are simply made and beautifully effective, blending nicely, in their mellow tone, with the antique ivory furniture, which is touched with gold.

Paneled walls are painted peach color, with fine lines of gold in the moldings. On top of a small table beside the bed is a sage green and gold tôle lamp, with a plaited ivory shade. Shelves in the lower part of the table hold a few convenient accessories and books.

The small arm chair and a chaise longue are upholstered in glazed chintz, with fruit decorations, on a pale green ground. Glass curtains are of sheer peach colored voile, making a soft glow of light. A collection of French prints, in narrow gold frames, lends interest to the plain walls.

Another bedroom has cream colored walls and woodwork. Window draperies and covers on the twin beds are made of chintz, with fruit decorations, on a cream ground. They are finished at the edges with ruffles of the same. Ruffled cream colored net with large dots is used for glass curtains. Between the beds is a set of narrow, standing shelves. A majolica bird lamp is placed on top. It has a shade of rose colored taffeta, edged with leaf green. On the next shelf below are a water bottle and glass, and beneath these a selection of books.

As blue is the dominant color in the nosegays, a pair of Wedgwood blue pottery lamps is used on the dressing table. These are fitted with square shades of stretched pink georgette over ivory silk. They are banded at the edges with shaded rose ribbon. Old blue wool chenille rugs are used on the floor.

A reverse of bed covers and draperies is used in another bedroom. The covers are made of mauve taffeta, finished with deep, full ruffles of pale green. At the windows are mauve gauze glass curtains, beneath pale green taffeta draperies and lambrequins. These are edged with mauve ruffles. A mauve and gold lamp on a stand between the beds is fitted with a shade of finely plaited, pale green georgette. The walls are covered with a light gray paper, sprinkled with field flowers in soft tones. All of the furniture is painted a soft, dull green, decorated in the Venetian manner with floral medallions and trims of gold.

Unusually attractive is a room with draperies of linen, showing a pattern of large flowers in tones of amber and orange on a white ground, finished with wide, scalloped bands of jade green linen. They hang straight to the floor, from beneath scalloped wooden cornices painted jade green with fine borders of amber. Covers on the twin beds are of the flowered linen, boxed to fit, and piped with jade. The pillows are covered with a strip of jade green linen, piped with amber. Narrow hanging shelves between the beds are made of walnut, to match the rest of the furniture. The walls are light pistachio green. Moss green rugs, with borders of deeper green, are used on the floor.

Strikingly different and effective is a room done in black and white. The furniture is enameled glossy black, with fine lines of jade green at the edges to relieve the severity. At the windows are draperies of an amusingly patterned black and white material, lined with white sateen. They hang straight to the floor, and are topped by wooden cornices, painted to match the furniture. These cornices hide the mechanism of pulley cords by which the draperies may be drawn together. No glass curtains are used.

On the three-quarters width bed, which stands lengthwise against the wall, a black fur cover is used, and against the wall are placed several cushions of bright colors. In lieu of the black fur cover, a cover of black rep, piped with jade, might be used.

The walls are done in a white paper, with black polka dots. Woodwork is painted black, with jade green sinkages. Mottled white parchment, bound with black, and decorated with a fine line of jade, makes lamp shades and shields for the side lights. The floor is rugged with black chenille.

Dressings for old colonial beds are always interesting. In an early American room the large four post bed has a tester valance and deep flounced cover of white dotted Swiss, trimmed with ball tassel fringe. Across the foot of the bed, a lovely old pieced quilt is folded. At the windows are ruffled glass curtains of the dotted swiss. Draperies are made of plain strawberry pink glazed chintz, edged with ball tassel fringe.

The walls are done in a white paper, with pencil lines of strawberry pink. On a stand beside the bed is a white glass llamp with a parchment shade decorated with rosebuds. A wing chair, near one of the windows, is upholstered in quilted blue and white calico. The same material covers a small sofa which stands against the foot of the bed.

In the space between two windows a maple highboy is placed. A maple desk, with a ladder back, rush bottom chair, stands in one corner. It is lighted by a polished steel reading lamp, with a pink accordion plaited paper shade. Completing the furnishings is a maple bureau, above which a characteristically colonial mirror is hung. Colorful hooked rugs enliven the floor.

Amused a Storeful.

I had just come home for the Christmas holidays after having been away at school since September and I was helping my dad in our grocery store during the holiday rush. I had not yet come out of the school atmosphere and was going rather absent mindedly about my work.

The store was full of people and I was waiting on a little old lady. I had given her some eggs, some sugar, and then she asked me, "How do you sell sweet potatoes?"

I understood her to say, "How do you spell," etc. And immediately I started out, s-w-e-e-t p-o——"

I got just so far when I realized what I was doing. Everybody was smiling and some big fellow broke out into a "haw, haw, haw."

That was the signal and soon everybody was laughing loudly. I left the store, almost crying. I never hope to be in such a position again.

C. M. N.

Guessed Wrong.

One bright day last summer I went to the photographer to have my picture taken, and I took a little four year old girl with me.

After having my picture taken, and when we were ready to leave, the photographer said, "Mrs. G. you have such a nice little daughter and she is the image of her mother."

Was I embarrassed? Well, I certainly was! I had to explain that I was not married and that the little girl was not mine. P. G.

Hard to Endure.

My most embarrasing moment took place when I was initiated into a well known club. In order to gain membership a group of girls had to don old clothes and walk up and down Michigan avenue dusting the shoes of passers-by.

Further embarrasment was added when my fiancé and his boss passed by and noticed me. O, if the earth could have swallowed me then!

L. H.

Left Handed.

I was invited out to dinner at a friend's and took my 2 year old daughter with me. As dinner was served and we began to eat my daughter began to use her left hand, as she had a habit of doing at home. So of course I made her use her right hand.

My friend's husband asked if she was left handed. I replied "She always like to use it, but I don't like it, as I think it looks so awkward."

And imagine my embarrassment when I looked at him and saw he was left handed. MRS. F. E. B.

Telling Why.

I was entertaining the ladies' aid in our downstairs apartment. The woman upstairs was not at home, but had kindly offered me the use of her front room. I didn't use it because her ideas of cleanliness were not the best.

Imagine my embarrassment when friend neighbor returned and asked why I hadn't used her room and my daughter piped up with, "My mama says she couldn't take the ladies up there—it's too dirty." C. H. S.

An Unguarded Moment.

One day I was marcelling a woman's hair in my beauty parlor, which is one large room, divided only by a screen. Every one can hear what is being said.

Mrs. S——, who has a beauty parlor across the street, came in to have her hair curled. I was busy, so she sat down in the waiting room to wait her turn.

Not knowing who had come in, I asked the woman whom I was working on where she had her work done before coming to my shop, and she said: "Why, I have been going to Mrs. S——'s shop across the street, but I don't like her, and she can't marcel at all. Why, my hair always looked awful when she curled it."

Needless to say, it was an embarrassing moment for both of us when we discovered Mrs. S—— was in the same room. Mrs. G. A. H.

London Doctor Finds Real Cause of Stomach Gas

AS A RESULT of special studies made at one of London's leading hospitals, a famous English specialist asserts that most stomach and bowel trouble is due to just one cause—Intestinal Stasis. This disease which, it is said, afflicts three out of every four people, is directly caused by improper food, lack of correct exercise and other faults of modern life.

Intestinal Stasis

INTESTINAL STASIS, in everyday language, means the too slow movement of waste food matter through the intestines. This matter, from which the body has taken all the nourishment, is not promptly passed out of the bowels, but due to intestinal weakness, it remains many hours or even days longer than it should. This waste matter then ferments, forms gas and poisons, and is the cause of sour stomach, gas bloating and indigestion.

A person may have Intestinal Stasis and yet not be noticeably constipated. The bowels may move once or even twice a day, but the movements are only partial. Enough old matter is left to form gas, hinder digestion and poison the system.

Action Needed on Both Bowels

ORDINARY laxatives or physics seldom overcome Intestinal Stasis. Nor do soda or magnesia give more than temporary relief from stomach gas. Intestinal Stasis, and the other diseases of which it is the cause, can be relieved permanently only by continued, REAL intestinal cleansing.

Dr. Carl Weschcke, in his private practice, first perfected the bowel cleanser and intestinal prophylactic now known as Adlerika. It is a compound of the best saline intestinal evacuant with vegetable buckthorn and cascara, together with glycerine and other ingredients which expel gas and have detergent action. Adlerika, unlike other medicines, acts upon BOTH upper and lower bowel.

Gas Relieved System Cleansed

ONE of Adlerika's first effects is to relieve gas on the stomach and gas bloating. Even the FIRST spoonful usually brings out a surprising amount of old poisonous waste matter which you never guessed was in your system and which may have been the hidden cause of indigestion, nervous dyspepsia, headache, sleeplessness or other trouble. Even if your bowels move daily, Adlerika frequently brings out a surprising amount of additional matter which might otherwise be poisoning your system.

Many physicians recognize Adlerika as the one dependable remedy for Gas and Intestinal Stasis or whenever REAL bowel cleansing is necessary. No matter what you have tried for your stomach and bowels, Adlerika will surprise you.

What Doctors Say about Adlerika

"I prescribe Adlerika with highly satisfactory results."—Dr. A. C. Curl.

"In my 50 years' practice I have found nothing to excel Adlerika."—Dr. James Weaver.

Ancient gateway to Guy's Hospital, London, where important discoveries about Intestinal Stasis have been made.

"I have to congratulate you on the good effects I had from Adlerika since I prescribed it."—Dr. L. Langlois.

"I have found Adlerika to be far superior in bowel and stomach trouble to my fondest anticipations."—Dr. G. Eggers.

"Adlerika very markedly reduces the number of bacteria and colon bacilli. This feature increases the therapeutic value of Adlerika because, in addition to its intestinal cleansing action, it checks and inhibits the growth of these intestinal bacteria and bacilli."—Dr. H. L. Shoub, New York.

Opera Singers Off to Foreign Places

By Edward Moore.

THEY have finished their winter's toil and are now scampering to the four corners of the world, these song birds of the Civic Opera company.

Only a small part of the personnel returned to Chicago when the spring tour closed. Many members headed straight for New York to take the first boat out. Mary Garden, Claudia Muzio, and Desiré Defrere sailed for Europe a week ago. Miss Garden will rest for a bit in southern France and then go to Paris, where she is to make some operatic appearances during the spring and summer. Miss Muzio will sing a few times at La Scala, Milan, this month, including a "Tosca" performance which will be given as an observance to the memory of its composer, the late Giacomo Puccini. In four weeks she will be on the water again, this time pointed in the general direction of Buenos Aires, where she will have an important share in the proceedings at the season of the Teatro Colon during what is our summer and their winter.

Another delegation will sail for Italy on the S. S. Conte Rosso next Tuesday. It will include Virgilio Lazzari, Antonio Cortis, Giovanni Polese, Conductor Henry G. Weber, and Chorus Conductor Attico Bernabini.

Rosa Raisa and Giacomo Rimini are passing in New York to make records and sing some concerts, one of which will be a Yiddish oratorio. They are booked to sail on the Conte Biancamano, April 23. Edith Mason has a series of concert appearances to complete, at the end of which she and her husband, Director Giorgio Polacco, will sail on the same boat.

Remembering Other Days.

A bit of the musical history of Chicago came to this department the other day. It is from Mrs. Sophie Listemann, widow of the famous violinist, Bernhard Listemann, and relates how the first projected performance of Beethoven's Concerto for violin was prevented by sudden disaster. Here is Mrs. Listemann's account:

"Still under the magic spell of Mr. Szigeti's wonderful playing of Beethoven's grand and only violin concerto, a flood of memories throngs my brain concerning the pioneer days of the Thomas orchestra with Theodore Thomas as its master mind at the helm, and a little tragic episode creeps in with them in regard to just this great Beethoven concerto.

"What Theodore Thomas has been to the musical life of America can never be adequately expressed in words. He it was who sowed the seeds of musical love and understanding into the barren soil where they grew to a mighty tree spreading its branches all over America. When he founded his permanent orchestra in the late sixties, he made it into a traveling orchestra, since he could never hope to see it firmly established and supported in New York. Therefore it was a smaller orchestra, about sixty-five men, but every member an artist on his instrument and all imbued with the wonderful spirit of their adored master.

"My husband, Bernhard Listemann, a real genius of the violin, was concert master of the orchestra for four years in the early seventies. An intimate friendship sprang up between the two men. Side by side they battled for their idol, Richard Wagner, an almost herculean task, considering the strong opposition they found everywhere, most of all in the east, in Boston, in whose rarefied atmosphere of culture musical snakots like John S. Dwight, classicist and conservative to the core, reigned supreme.

Facing Real Hardships.

"But like Cæsar, Theodore Thomas could finally say: Veni, vidi, vici. To the remotest cities of the west he carried the evangel of the most glorious and transcendental of all arts—music—sometimes amid hardships of which one has no idea in the present times, from facing blizzards on the wide prairies over which herds of buffalo still roamed to using freight cars when it was necessary to reach a city in time.

"In 1871 Thomas received a fine contract from Chicago for a series of concerts whose climax should be the dedication of the newly built Crosby Opera house with a grand gala concert. For this occasion he had chosen my husband to play the Beethoven Concerto. But the violin never sang the supreme melodies, the glorious orchestra was never heard in the hall of the Crosby Opera house. It fell, a prey of Chicago's big fire, into ashes and ruins. The little intrepid band got as near to Chicago as Grand Crossing. From there they looked with grief in their hearts and tears in their eyes at the doomed city over which a thick, black veil of smoke hung like a funeral shroud.

"Thomas tried to retrieve his losses by arranging a series of one night stands. I do not think that a single member of this wonderful band of players is still alive today. But it behooves us to keep their memory green. Let us always honor our dead.

MRS. SOPHIE LISTEMANN."

A Praiseworthy Effort.

From the publishing house of W. W. Norton & Co., Inc., comes "The Story of Music," by Paul Bekker, translated from the German by M. D. Herter Norton and Alice Kortschak. Under the subtitle, "An Historical Sketch of the Changes in Musical Form," the book is the aftermath of a series of some twenty lectures given two years ago at the invitation of the Southwest German Radio corporation.

It approaches musical history from what is, for musical history, a new angle. Instead of being a record of dates and incidents, it is an effort to relate dates and incidents of the musical life and thought of their times. He says that he is undertaking to show "how to look at musical history as a part of the great life process of mankind which we may understand, not by regarding it as a kind of historical costume parade, but by trying to recognize the forces which control it."

So far, so good. As far as it goes, it is a praiseworthy and sincere effort, and it has a number of interesting illustrations. The great trouble is that when one tries to hook up history, criticism, and a philosophical concept all in one, the team will prove unruly at times. For example, Bekker will have some of the idea that there has ever been any development in the art of music. In his first chapter he says: "Since the constructive forces always remain the same, since nothing can be added or lost, it follows that the total value of the sum must always remain the same, too. Only appearances result must always remain the same, too. Only appearances change, so that what takes place is a transformation and not a development."

That in itself is enough to give the reader pause, particularly as only a few pages later he admits that we can have hardly any exact knowledge of how music much more than 250 years old actually sounded; that we have no information at all about ancient Greek music—no certainty, that is, that any of it has been correctly deciphered—and not much more than guesswork of the period when musical notation was done by the neume system. And, considering that he has burdened himself in advance with a preconceived philosophical thesis, it is a bit startling to find him saying about Meyerbeer: "He is one of the ablest composers in the history of music, the type that masters everything, knows everything, does everything correctly, and has at his command both taste and an unerring instinct."

At the same time Bekker shows himself sensitive to much in the varying matter and manner of music. On that account, because he can stimulate thought, the book is worth while, even though the reader is not quite able to accept readings that Beethoven and Hummel must have been musical equals, and that "Falstaff" is not something more than a mere operatic transformation of "La Sonnambula."

CASEY AT THE BAT.

By Mae Tinee.

GOOD Morning!

Well—is the list correct?

I sense a great rustling of paper and rattling of pens and foretell that by Tuesday at the latest I WILL HEAR FROM YOU on the subject. There is one certain picture I haven't included, the absence of which a number of you will declare to be a terrible oversight, to say the least. And there are two in the list up there that many ardent fans gazed upon with marked disfavor. BUT

WALLACE BEERY is in "Old Ironsides" and "Casey at the Bat."

Today I seem to be the only person on the platform, so, ladies and gentlemen, may this still small voice remark:

"ORCHIDS AND ERMINE," featuring Colleen Moore, was a film that nobody could help enjoying. It was a picture for men, women and children. Clean, clever, and funny. Little Colleen as a switchboard operator in a big New York hotel has the sort of rôle that a star so seldom gets—one tailored perfectly to her measure.

A little city Cinderella she is, as you probably remember, who thinks "Wouldn't it be lovely to be a languid lady, wearing orchids and ermine?" She makes up her mind to marry for money. It isn't so long, though, before she changes her mind. Orchids and ermine lose their charm when Pink Watson sees some of the specimens who buy orchids and ermine as gifts for fair ladies. Unwittingly, she gets what she wants—or thought she wanted—with her heart's desire thrown in. Which makes the ending nice, as you will admit. (Jack Mulhall being the heart's desire.)

The situations and subtitles in "Orchids and Ermine" were brightly humorous, and a fine supporting cast lent luster to the production, which was mighty well directed.

* *

"THE SORROWS OF SATAN" made a great hit with this department. It was directed by D. W. Griffith, who, to my way of thinking, came back into his own. Commerce just about swamped his genius there for a long time. But in this "Sorrows of Satan" the sure touch is there again. The tenderness, the whimsy, the understanding—the Master at the organ drawing sweet music from the talents of his players. Guess I'll quote from the review:

"The Sorrows of Satan"—adapted from the novel by Marie Corelli—is an artful blending of legend, scripture, and modern fiction; of poverty and pageantry. . . . The captivating story glows and palpitates under the spell of that sorcerer, D. W. Griffith. . . . The whole picture is art. . . ." And so on.

They tell me the film was cut a lot and was much better before it was cut. Well, if that's TRUE—I'm afraid the unscissored version would have proved entirely too much bliss!

Carol Dempster, as the heroine, did the best work of her career.

"BLIND ALLEYS," too, I adored. Some of you say it made you nervous. You thought you'd SCREAM, you said, if Tom Meighan and Greta Nissen didn't meet the next time they just missed each other. (That doesn't read just right.) But it's what you said.

Well, MY darlings—haven't things gone wrong with you again and again in maddening succession? Haven't you just had your hand on something or other you desired, looked away for a minute and looked back to find the something gone? Haven't there been days and weeks when you just couldn't seem to make connections anyhow or anywhere? I'LL say so—if you're a human being! (Are you?)

ANYHOW—"Blind Alleys" is just full of life. Also full of interest, full of good acting, and with one of the sweetest love stories ever screened. The fact that a man and his wife are the lovers doesn't make that statement untrue in your estimation, I hope.

Sure liked "Blind Alleys."

"THE PASSION PLAY" is the Freiburg players depicting the life of Christ, most beautifully and reverently. I quote:

"The picture is utterly without pretension. Its big dramatic moments are only its big human ones . . . the players are trained for their rôles from childhood. And those years, spent in the atmosphere of the Story, have made them livers, not actors, of the parts they portray. You will understand when you see the picture."

And I hope that you will not let this Lenten season go withOUT seeing the picture!

* *

"OLD IRONSIDES" is "a big, breezy, jovial, spectacular, intensely inspiring production that flashes with humor and hands out man sized thrills . . . has some sea stuff that IS, sumpin'! The battles are stupendous and unforgettable, and the landing at Tripoli will remain with you forever . . . splendidly acted, brilliantly directed, and gloriously photographed . . . " and so on. And I want to repeat that "if you don't experience some enjoyable quivers of pride and patriotism when "Old Ironsides" sails into your presence, apparently LIFE SIZE, why—! But you'll go crazy over THAT incident, all right! You should have heard the crowd the opening night!

* *

"CASEY AT THE BAT" is an example of a comedian proving to a world that had, perhaps, been a trifle dubious that he is a GREAT comedian. Mister Wallace Beery is the demonstrating gentleman, and what he shows is something worth showing.

It's been a big month for Mr. Beery. His characterization as the bos'n in "Old Ironsides" is one of the reasons for seeing that film, and his Casey IS—JUST—GRAND!

The film was adapted from the famous poem by Ernest Lawrence Thayer and "is the brightly humorous chronicles of the life of Mike Xavier Aloysius Casey just previous to his discovery by the Giants, during his career with them, and at and after the Big Game where he strikes out." That awful strike that inspired the last verse of the poem:

"O! somewhere in this favored land the sun is shining bright;
The band is playing somewhere, and somewhere hearts are light;
And somewhere men are laughing, and somewhere children shout,
But there is no joy in Mudville—mighty Casey has struck out!"

The poem merely suggested the picture, which, after much gay doings, shows you just WHY mighty Casey struck out, forever exonerating from blame that fallen hero of Mudville. (Centerville in the story.)

Prominent in the supporting cast are Ford Sterling as a manager for the Giants and Zasu Pitts as Casey's small town sweetheart, Camille.

The film is staged in the '90s, and you'll get a heap of laughs from the costumes and customs as caricatured in this mirth-maker.

For that's just what it is. If "Casey at the Bat" doesn't make you laugh, call a doctor. You sure do need one!

See you tomorrow!

CLIVE BROOK is going about the Paramount lot with a whole face full of whiskers. He is growing them because his rôle of gentleman crook in "Underworld," Ben Hecht's story, demands facial foliage.

Another Inquisition Fails

By H. L. Mencken.

NOTHING could prove more dramatically the futility of trying to put down ideas by force than the failure of the anti-evolution campaign in the south. The fundamentalists began with grand and lofty talk of driving the Darwinian heresy from the whole United States; they are ending by quarreling among themselves. Only two states have succumbed to their blather, and in only one, Mississippi, is their prohibition of elementary reason actually enforced. In the other, Tennessee, the obiter dictum of the Supreme court in the Scopes appeal is a plain invitation to pedagogues to violate the law as much as they please—that is, when there is no local sentiment in favor of it. It will be observed in such dreadful jungle towns as Dayton, but in Chattanooga, Memphis and Nashville, and maybe even in Knoxville, it will be quickly forgotten.

The anti-evolutionists may still bag a legislature or two in the middle west, but it is not likely, nor is there any possibility that such occasional victories will ever have the effects that they hope for. For in the south they have been badly beaten, even when they seemed to win. Every uproar that they have raised has sent the youth of the adjacent wastes to reading the forbidden books, and, youthlike, to adopting and whooping up the forbidden ideas in them. In Tennessee the Scopes trial fell very far short of promoting the study of Genesis; instead, it turned Genesis into a joke, and produced a great flock of campus "atheist" societies. Even in Mississippi, I am informed by hardy explorers, such societies have begun to appear.

But Mississippi is a special case, and it may be that the fundamentalists have really triumphed there. The state's great lack is decent newspapers. Its public journals are all of the crossroads type. What a free and intelligent press has accomplished in the adjoining states of Georgia and Alabama is thus impossible there, and the rural pastors go almost unchallenged. But soon or late, even in Mississippi, some one will set up a good paper, and when that happens fundamentalism will fall upon evil days. For it can never withstand intelligence. One blast of common sense, and it begins to wither and die.

The time is now ripe in the south, indeed, for a vigorous counter offensive, and I marvel that the young men of its enlightened minority do not undertake it. What is needed, in particular, is a series of tracts for distribution among the peasants of the hinterland and the villagers of the small towns. These poor creatures have been bombarded for a long while not only by the verbal discourses of their pastors but also by tons of anti-evolution literature, much of it very cunningly contrived. It states the case against the evolutionary hypothesis unfairly, but I am certainly not one to argue that it states it ineffectively. On the contrary, I believe that its authors, in the main, did a very good job.

One of them was the late Archangel Bryan. During the Scopes trial he handed me some of his compositions, printed in huge editions by opulent fellow fundamentalists, and I read them with great interest. The basic argument in them was that the fact of evolution could not be proved experimentally—that no one had ever actually seen one species turn into another. Is there an answer to this? There is—and not one, but many. But so far as I know these answers have not been put into such form that ignorant rustics may be expected to understand them. What is needed is a literature couched in simple and familiar terms.

One excellent argument immediately suggests itself: I believe that even the most pious Mississippi peasant would have difficulty in resisting it. It is that the fact of evolution is proved every day in rural Mississippi by the case of the horsehair that, on being put into a bottle of water, turns into a snake. That this transformation really occurs is certainly not doubted by any Mississippi fundamentalist; to question it would seem to him to be as insane as to question the existence of ghosts. Yet no one has ever thought to have at him with it. I believe that a short tract in words of one syllable, setting forth the horsehair argument and embellished with a few disarming quotations from holy writ, would do more execution in the Yazoo country than even a decent newspaper.

Many other similar arguments might be concocted by ingenious men, and after they had done their work of shaking the confidence of the rural Bible students it would be in order to follow them up with more apposite and intelligent documents. There is an immense mass of material in the literature of biology, and particularly in that of zoology. But as it stands it is without effect, for it is written in terms that no yokel may be expected to grasp. Very few country high school teachers—and practically no country high school superintendents at all—could read it without painful sweating. What is needed is its translation into the simple terminology of the camp meeting and the barnyard.

The circulation of such literature in the Hookworm belt, to be sure, would be stoutly resisted by the resident clergy, and perhaps by the majority of local politicians, editors and other such dunghill hetaerae. It would be alleged that the campaign was being paid for by the bolsheviki, the Mexican government, or the pope, and no doubt the complaisant wowsers of the postoffice, on some pious pretext or other, would be induced to bar the tracts from the mails. But it would be easy to beat these wowsers in the courts, and, moreover, all other avenues of communication would remain open. So-called "art" magazines filled with portraits of naked chorus girls now flood all the southern towns; documents bearing the portraits of such hairy fellows as Darwin and Huxley might very well follow the same route.

The effort to shut them out, in fact, would greatly promote their circulation, as it now promotes the circulation of the "art" magazines. Whenever a bucolic Savonarola denounced the invasion from his pulpit, two-thirds of his hearers would rush out to hunt for the forbidden goods, as they now rush out to neck, bootleg and smoke cigarets. And whenever a southern governor, with his eye on reelection, bellowed for the federal army and navy to help him put down the traffic, there would be a great rush of orders.

What I here propose is nothing new. Practically all of the sound ideas that the human race cherishes today were put into circulation by just such means. So far as I know, there is no record in history of an idea of that sort getting a spontaneous and official welcome. The first men to argue that witchcraft was a delusion had to circulate their arguments anonymously, and even so they ran grave risks. Had newspapers existed none would have dared to print what they had to say. In the same way, the first men to argue against slavery had to do it discreetly and at long distance. Had they gone into Mississippi to state their case, they would have been denounced by the local journals as the evolutionists are denounced today, and no doubt some of them would have been lynched.

In this deportment the south is not peculiar. There is something in the human mind, at all times and everywhere, that resists the intrusion of new ideas, and the sounder they are the more violently it resists them. Who was it that discovered that two and two make four? Probably some Egyptian or Phoenician. Whoever he was, you may be sure that the clergy of his time damned him to hell for blasphemy, and that the politicians accused him of taking Greek or Babylonian gold. Mississippi is a bit archaic, but still thoroughly human. Its resistance to the idea of organic evolution is a bit belated, and hence seems amusing to the people of more enlightened places, but it doesn't differ a particle from the resistance of our own forefathers to the idea of bathing.

Such ideas are never propagated officially, but only by a process of bootlegging; the state is always against them, and tries to put them down. But when pertinacious men stand behind them, they always prevail. What the late confederacy needs today is a few such pertinacious men. It needs a Voltaire—maybe a whole herd of Voltaires—to bootleg the rudiments of the enlightenment into its peasants, and so rid them of their superstitions. Its difficulties are largely due to the fact that it depends too much upon help from outside. Ten resolute Tennesseans, fighting to a finish, might have prevented the indelible disgrace of the Scopes trial. One bold and intelligent editor could almost save Mississippi.

Love Versus Piety Makes Gloomy Play

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—The Actors' theater has dared to produce a tragedy in spring, and that is considered rather risky. So far as any of the experts have been able to observe, in the days of the vernal equinox an audience's fancy resents being turned toward thoughts of death and the morticians.

The play is one by Clemence Dane and is called "Mariners." It relates a little vaguely but with touches of fine understanding the story of a young woman married to a conscientious parson and failing him utterly as a wife because of her jealousy of his devotion to his calling.

PAULINE LORD plays the wife in "Mariners."

He had taken her because he loved her deeply as a divinity student. She was a promising brand to be snatched from the burning and remolded by a patient and loving husband.

She failed to lend herself to the process. Loving the rector deeply, she grew suspicious of his friends and hated his calling. She demanded more life and more fun. She insulted the parishioners, big and little, and refused to mingle with either the saved or the lost.

By the time we meet her she is about through. Gradually her mind has become slightly unhinged and her nerve control is nothing to speak of. She flies into a temper at the slightest excuse.

He, praying for a martyr's strength, goes calmly, patiently about his Father's business. At the end of one scene he refuses to stay at home while his flu convalescents are calling him. He goes on his rounds, collapses and is dead in twelve hours. The wife, after a ruthless neighbor has called her attention to the fact that she literally is the murderer of her good husband, wanders hysterically out of the house and is next day found dead from exposure on the fresh earth of his grave.

It is rather a settler for the community. The best even the optimistic can get out of it is that, failures though they were, there had been a great love binding the parson and his unhappy wife.

"What if they did wreck their lives?" demands she. "Think of the stars they steered by!"

Pauline Lord is tremendously inarticulate as the wife. Arthur Wontner, the Englishman who made so fine an impression in "The Captive," is an eloquently devoted rector. Ha'dee Wright is the ruthless lady who does the exposing and Mary Kennedy plays a wise ingenue with unusual understanding.

Best of the Trick Mysteries.

When you enter the theater in which "The Spider" is being played the usher hands you a program of a vaudeville bill, smiling slyly and admitting, if pressed for an explanation, that "regular" programs will be given out later.

Inside the theater you find the decorations more vivid than any Mr. Albee would ever permit to festoon any of his Orpheum palaces, but distinctly vaudevillish for all that. The name of the theater within a theater, you learn by referring to the program, is the Tivoli and it is quite plainly a small time house.

Presently the orchestra, a six or seven piece affair, files in and plays a brassy quickstep. The curtain rises and exposes the silver sheet. There is a news reel run to show how the circus folk are beginning to feel the stir of spring and the massive pachyderms to learn new tricks.

Next the team of Mack & Larue, who are, the program assures you, the skating marvels of the country, oblige with a whirling exhibit of their skill in rollers, and Lytell & Fant, the "chocolate cake eaters," amuse with songs, dances, and funny sayings.

Then the rising street drop reveals the paraphernalia of "Chatrand, the Great," the master magician, assisted by Alexander, "the boy with the radio eyes." Here are cabinets, chests, trick tables, and all the familiar properties, and here is Chatrand, monotonously, solemnly assuring you that in the exhibition to follow he will depend exclusively upon the quickness of the hand to deceive the eye and invite the most intently scrutinous of investigations.

Being only an actor playing a part, a pretended magician in the person of John Halliday, you doubt his word and smile indulgently at his fake patter. Then he proceeds to reduce his ebony walking stick to nothing at all and throw it into space, and finally to produce the bowl of goldfish from under the coat.

The Plot Thickens.

So on and on until Chatrand, working toward the feature performance of his act, exhibits the cabinet, turning it completely inside out that you may see it is perfectly empty, and then, with a wave of the wand, a hocus-pocus and the flip of the curtains, produces therein the radio eyed Alexander himself.

Alexander, a frail, pale youth, it is explained, is suffering from a strange loss of memory and is gifted with marvelous psychic power. No one knows who he is, not even Chatrand, who has found him wandering the streets of Washington and is using him in the act in the hope that some one will recognize him and establish his identity. But lest the recognition be too sudden, for Alexander's good, the boy is to remain masked until after the performance.

Chatrand, proceeding up the aisle, continues with his mind reading, Alexander calling dates on coins, describing watch fobs, and predicting various adventures for people in the audience.

Suddenly there is a slight commotion. Chatrand has accepted a locket from a young woman and has asked Alexander to describe it. "It—is—a—spider—locket!" drawls Alexander. "A—very—peculiar——"

Up jumps the young woman's escort and demands that Chatrand return the locket to its owner. Chatrand refuses. The man insists. The young woman agrees she is perfectly willing to have her locket described. "There—is—a—strange—his—to—ry—con—nected—with—the—locket——"

Again the man interrupts and tries to grab the locket from the magician's hand. There is a scuffle! The lights go out! The young woman screams! There is a pistol shot, the sound of running feet, and shouts for light!

This is the situation at the end of the first act of "The Spider," which may give you some idea of why it has bounded directly from its first performance into the center of such a success as made "The Bat" a favorite for years. Several times there has been a mystery play that almost reached the success of "The Bat," but none has ever quite made it. "The Spider" has the best chance of any, despite the fact that it carries comparatively little comedy.

With the beginning of the second act the mystery deepens and there are, as usual, many false clews. The young woman of the locket, it develops, has recognized Alexander as her brother. The man with her who objected to her giving Chatrand the locket has been for years their guardian. There is every reason why he does not want Alexander to regain his memory.

The Murder in the Aisle.

The lights are turned up. On the stage Alexander has fainted. In the aisle, across the steps leading to the stage, the protesting patron lies dead. The young woman whose locket had started the trouble is semi-hysterical. The manager of the Tivoli is running about asking if there is a doctor in the house, calling for the police, and assuring the audience that nothing will be permitted to interfere with the giving of the evening's entertainment.

The police arrive, followed by an inspector. The audience is technically placed under arrest. Officers are stationed at all the exits. No one can leave the theater during the investigation of the murder. Not even the fat lady who arises to protest that for years every Tuesday she has always

This Thing and That Thing of the Theater

By Frederick Donaghey.

THAT there may be somewhere to go after Lent, the Olympic will be reopened the afternoon of the 16th with "The Student-Prince," with James Liddy in the title-part, Miss Ilsa Mavenga as Kathe, and De Wolf Hopper in the comic rôle, whatever its name may be. The operetta has served for some time as Mr. Hopper's whereabouts. Miss Mavenga was Kathe in most of the long New-York run; and I think that Mr. Liddy has sung here in the nondescripts housed in the Apollo. . . . New-York didn't care for "Money from Home," which Chicago didn't care for when it was "Coal-Oil Jennie"; and Frank Craven, who wrote it, is about to make ready another piece, and to act in it when it is made ready. . . . Miss Elizabeth Hines is to be in "Manhattan Mary," which is what George White now calls the show he formerly called "America First!" . . . Somebody is turning Oscar Wilde's "The Importance of Being Earnest" into a song-and-dance piece, whereat horror is registered in print by the numerous fat-headed writers who have the second-hand notion that Wilde was a great playwright: the notion was first-hand with Wilde, himself. While this is more nearly a good play than any of his others, to see it performed or to read it is to be made to believe that he wrote it after having first seen it used as a song-and-dance piece. The new version is now named "Tangles." A bulletin from the promoter says: "None of the original characters has been interfered with except Lane, the butler, who, for comedy purposes, has been assigned two wives instead of one." George S. Kaufman reacts to this explanation with: "Why not three wives, and make it still funnier?"

GRANT MITCHELL. He's bill-topping in the Palace with "Three Flights Up."

Letter from an Englishman.

SIR: Telling, some days back, that Mr. Otis Skinner is to be Falstaff in "The Merry Wives of Windsor," you said that he had been Falstaff in "King Henry IV" last year in New-York, and not so good in the rôle. You know, of course, that an actor may be a so-so Falstaff in "King Henry IV" and still be a great one in "The Merry Wives," and that the character is of full stature in the comedy, whereas it is a mere incident of the chronicle-play. I think you are unfair to Mr. Skinner in implying that, because he wasn't great as one Falstaff, he will necessarily fall as the other.

CHEYNE WALK.

Chicago: March 26, 1927.

I know, of course, nothing of the sort. Falstaff in both parts of "King Henry IV" is what he has ever been—one of Shakspere's inspirations; whereas he is simply a comic staple of the stage in "The Merry Wives of Windsor." Shakspere took the knight from where he belonged when he set him down, in the to-order farce, among the domestic vicissitudes of the Fords and the Pages at Windsor. Which is that. . . . And, Cheyne Walk, I didn't say nor even imply that Mr. Skinner was not good as Falstaff in the chronicle, but quoted the New-York play-reporters as having said so,—adding, moreover, the suggestion that it were well to pay no attention to what they write about acting, which is something of which they know little or less.

Faulty Transcription of London Cablegram.

SIR: Betcha million dollars A. H. Woods didn't say to the London reporters: "I should rather produce one play in London than forty in New-York!" Betcha another million dollars that what he said was: "I would rather," etc. I don't know Mr. Woods; but I've seen some of the plays he has put on, and I know from them that he is a I-would-rather guy.

GABBY LA BRUNE.

Chicago: March 28, 1927.

Other Letters.

A. C. C. writes in to say: "Having been an enthusiastic theater-goer for many years, I resent incorrect statements regarding things theatrical," and explains that her resentment is now all stirred up because the impending performance of "The Pigeon" in the Goodman Memorial were described here last Sunday as the first in Chicago, although the play had been given in 1912 in the Hull-House Theater. . . . Without looking it up, I have no doubt about it: many interesting plays have had a first Chicago airing by the earnest amateurs in Halsted Street; but the data of this department, when not otherwise indicated, have to do with "professional" activities in the theater.

Mr. Francis E. Cash, not caring for something George Jean Nathan has written in the American Mercury about "The Captive," asks by mail why I "have not commented on this freak," and says he is overcome with melancholy when he thinks of Mr. Nathan's "acknowledged primacy as a critic of the theater." . . . Mr. Cash's state of mind is all right with me. About the only intelligent comment on "The Captive" I have read in either American or European papers has been by Mr. Nathan, whom I find to be an admirable critic in all instances where he is in agreement with me. But I'm rather vague as to this stuff about his "acknowledged primacy as a critic of the theater": I have a modest notion that I, for one, stand in the way.

Miscellany.

Miss Yvonne Arnaud, popular in London, is coming to this country to act in "And, So, to Bed," a piece based on incidents in Pepy's Diary. . . . "A Hen Upon a Steeple," wherein Miss Margaret Bannerman is performing, is a London failure, from all reports. . . . Miss Edith Day, who has been in the title-rôle through the long, long London run of "Rose-Marie," is to head the cast of the production there, Thursday, of "The Desert-Song," a current success in New-York. . . . "Abie's Irish Rose," tried on the English dog a few nights back in Manchester, is to be shown to London a week from tomorrow—all but five years from the night of its New-York première in May of 1922. . . . Among the plays brought from Europe by that Mr. Woods who is the theme of Miss Gabby la Brune's communication today is one named "The Third Day," made over from a Czecho-Slovakian original by John Van Druten, who wrote "Young Woodley."

&c., &c., &c.

Weary with being called a bad actor through the years, Robert Warwick, when called a bad actor by the play-reporter for a paper in Portland (Ore.), wrote a letter to tell the critic that she was a liar. . . . What is said to be the costliest effort yet made to force a failure through a run is the case of "The Ladder" in New-York, with $125,000 put in by the backer in the six months the piece has been on view. . . . Miss Maria Kousnezoff, who sang some undistinguished performances with the Chicago Opera in 1915-'16 and afterward had a run of a week in the Playhouse in a counterfeit Chauve-Souris, has been fined 10,000 francs in Paris for calling a lawyer a liar. . . . "The Captive" has been succeeded in Paris by a sentimental piece named "The Eunuch." . . . Derek Oldham, a good performer when I heard him in London in the Gilbert-Sullivan operettas, has been hired to sing there Dennis King's rôle in "The Vagabond King." . . . Miss Pauline Frederick, panned brown by the critics for her acting in "Madame X" in London, is a popular success there; and 'tis said that women are nightly carried in a faint from the theater.

Love Versus Piety Makes Gloomy Play

By Burns Mantle.

gone home at the intermission to look after her baby and let her husband come back and see the rest of the show on her return check.

Chatrand is more concerned for the condition of Alexander than he is about the probability of his being charged with the murder of the dead man. And when the inspector moves to restrain him during the preliminary examination the magician jumps into his own disappearing cabinet and is gone.

Conclusion a Little Crude.

Around this provocative mystery the police tighten their coils, being somewhat less dumb than usual. And, of course, are carried far away from the real truth of the case. Once they put handcuffs on Chatrand and he calmly wiggles out of them. Several times they threaten Alexander. Toward the end of the evening an officer stands at the head of each aisle with drawn revolver, and at each door. The lady who wanted to get home to her husband and baby is not even permitted to retire to the ladies' room, which sends the audience into shouts of glee.

Finally, after much impassioned pleading on the part of Chatrand, the police inspector permits him to restage the murder on the theory that the guilty man, drawn back to the crime, will reveal himself. Which he does, after there has been a series of weird spiritistic demonstrations as a part of the trap.

This conclusion is the least convincing of the new mystery's many excellent situations. It appears that the man who was the young folks' guardian and was shot in the aisle was also the head of a gigantic dope ring. The spider locket the girl wore was, unknown to her, used as a signal to the dope smugglers. The doctor who volunteered from the audience turns out to be the real fellow the police are after.

Halliday is a suave young magician, acquiring surprising skill with the properties of the trade. Eleanor Griffith plays the girl of the locket. Roy Hargrave, the Alexander; Thomas Findlay, the police inspector, and Priscilla Knowles, herself the head of New York stock companies in the old days, is the restless lady in the audience.

Hapsburg History Dramatized.

Basil Sidney and Mary Ellis are trying their luck with a romantic tragedy from the Hungarian of Ernest Vajda, called "The Crown Prince." Zoe Akins made the translation and the story is supposed to reveal one solution for the mystery surrounding the death of Franz Josef's son, Rudolph, in his hunting lodge in Meyerling in 1889.

According to Vajda, the heir to the throne of Austria, deeply disappointed in his marriage to a coldly ambitious woman, desperately in love with an attractive baroness, defied old Franz Josef and declared openly that, though he might have to live like a prince, he purposed to love like a man.

To bring him to his senses, the old emperor, in the play, approaches the baroness with a suggestion that if she will leave the crown prince and consider an equally intimate relationship with his father her chances of one day sitting on a throne will be considerably advanced. She might, suggests the emperor, drop a little poison in the prince's wine.

The baroness, who is, in fact, deeply ambitious as well as greatly in love, does put poison in her prince's wine and he drinks it, even though he tells her his father has warned him not to. Then she, overcome with remorse, poisons her own wine and falls dead by his side.

Competently cast and played, but not at all a popular form of tragedy, I doubt if "The Crown Prince" will get far. As to its historical basis, the Vajda guess has been accepted as being as good as any other.

Mary Eaton Starred.

First Florenz Ziegfeld took Marilyn Miller away from the Shuberts and made her a star in "Sally." Then Marilyn took umbrage at something, left Mr. Ziegfeld, and went to work for Mr. Dillingham, who made her a bigger star in "Sunny."

Mr. Ziegfeld, looking for some one to take Miss Miller's place, groomed Mary Eaton for the honor by making her a leading woman in "Kid Boots," but before he could elevate her to stardom Marilyn decided to leave Mr. Dillingham and return to Mr. Ziegfeld. At which juncture Mr. Dillingham had a talk with Mary Eaton, and now she is a Dillingham star in a music play called "Lucky."

An amusing game of battledore and shuttlecock with these blonde and youthful dancers. "Lucky" is another huge spectacle, full of color, and made good entertainment by the expensiveness of its cast. Miss Eaton, though the prettiest of the decorations, is probably the least of the attractions of "Lucky," so far as the crowd is concerned.

Paul Whiteman and his jazz players are a feature. Walter Catlett and Richard Gallagher are the comedians. Joseph Santley and Ivy Sawyer play second and third props to the plot. Mary just dances and wears gorgeous things and sings as well as most ingénues and is a pretty picture. Her part is that of a pearl diver in Ceylon, but the shimmering whiteness of her skin would indicate that she does all her diving in a glass inclosed boudoir.

ON HIS TOES

JACK SHEEHAN

He seems, in the opinion of The Tribune's play-reporter, to be directly responsible for much of the entertainment in the current performances of "Katja," wherein his chore is to win the hand of his employer's daughter. To him and Miss Doris Patston falls the song-hit of the show, "Leander"; and their way with and in it is the best fun of whatever evening you happen to be present.

An Open Drawbridge.

Many years ago, when we were children, we visited our cousins who resided on the west side of this city and remained all night, arranging to return with our cousins to our home on the south side of the city the following morning, which was Sunday. It was a beautiful sunshiny morning, making us decide to open the large umbrella which we carried with us and thus shelter the four of us from the hot sun.

Childlike, we all crowded under the umbrella, holding it in front of us. As we were approaching a bridge we all heard shouting and it was meant for us. The drawbridge was open and a half step more and we all should have bounced on the abutment, then into the river. That was, indeed, our most thrilling experience and as we think back we feel we had a rare thrill.

J. S.

Car Burst Into Flames.

My greatest thrill happened a few nights ago when my husband, two baby girls and myself were out riding in our coupe. As we were going up a steep hill the front of the car burst into flame. The flames came up through the floor and front of car. Was I frightened, and did we all get out in a hurry? I should say we did—without any injuries to any one but poor "Lizzie," however. MRS. G. S.

Shifting Bills in Chicago Theaters

SCRUTINY of the subjoined calendar of incoming plays and shows will disclose additions to and subtractions from what was "officially" valid a week ago.—"officially" meaning that that was what the managers thought they knew at the time. Anyway, here is the list with all amendments as of Friday midnight:

Tonight:

"Sweet Lady" in the Woods.—Transfer to this theater after four weeks in Illinois.

Tomorrow night:

Miss Marilyn Miller, with Jack Donohue, in "Sunny" in the Illinois.—The toe-dancer of "Sally" and other shows and the amusing jester who was last here in "Be Yourself!" in a diversion framed at high cost by Mr. Dillingham for the exploitation of the former. The show was on view through a year in New-York. Frank Doane, Clifton Webb, and Louis Harrison are others in the cast.

"June and the Paycock" in the Goodman Memorial.—Sean O'Casey's play of Irish character for six nights and Friday afternoon. . . . This is the first time the "professional" players of the theater have been called upon for a week of performances.

Monday, April 11:

"The Pigeon" in the Goodman Memorial.—A play by John Galsworthy that has not yet been "professionally" acted in Chicago: to be given by the resident players of this theater, with Whitford Kane (who originated the title-role in England) continuing in his capacity as their "guest." . . . This will be the first Monday "opening" in the Goodman Memorial; and the plan seems to be to give "The Pigeon" nightly save Sunday, with an afternoon performance Friday of each week.

Saturday afternoon, April 16:

"The Student-Prince" in the Olympic.—The operetta based by Miss Dorothy Donnelly and Sigmund Romberg on "Old Heidelberg" which went through a run of more than a year, 1925-'26, in the Great Northern. Miss Ilsa Mavenga, James Liddy, and De Wolf Hopper are of the incoming cast.

Saturday night, April 16:

"The Nightingale," with Miss Eleanor Painter, in the Great Northern.—An operetta by Guy Bolton, P. G. Wodehouse, and Armand Vecsey which has Jenny Lind, the famed Swedish coloratura, as the heroine. Stanley Lupino is with Miss Painter, who hasn't sung in Chicago since "The Last Waltz," five years ago.

Sunday, April 17:

"The Noose" in the Selwyn.—A play based by Willard Mack on a printed tale by H. H. Van Loan: it has been running for months in New-York, where it is classified as among the successes of the season. Rex Cherryman, who was with the Misses Duncan through part of their Chicago run in "Topsy and Eva," and George F. Nash are of the cast.

"Twinkle! Twinkle!" in the Erlanger.—A song-and-dance piece by Harlan Thompson and Harry Archer that is in the final weeks of a New-York run, with Joe E. Brown and Miss Ona Munson.

"Not Herbert!" in the Central.—A comedy by Howard Irving Young wherein a poet seeks adventure as the leader of a band of jewelry-thieves. The piece had some performances a year ago in New-York. Clarke Silvernail will have the part of the poet, which he originated.

"The Little Spitfire" in the Cort.—A play by Myron C. Fagan that has been shown in New-York, where it was kept in sight for about twenty-five weeks. The roster includes Miss Mae Collins, Miss Suzanne Willis, Edward H. Robins, Edgar Henning, Dudley Hawley, Louis Kimball, and Andrew Lawlor (jr.).

Al Jolson in "Big Boy" in the Apollo.—Return of the most popular of contemporary singing-jesters in the conveyance wherein he was seen here for about three weeks of last season. It is stated that the show has been altered since then. . . . Mr. Jolson's engagement will, it is understood, mark the end of the Apollo as a theater of articulate entertainment: when he finishes, the house will be converted into a film-place.

Monday, April 18:

"Twelaway of the Wells" in the Blackstone.—Pinero's comedy, made known in this country in 1898, in revival by George C. Tyler, who has cast it with players of such celebrity that the venture has attracted country-wide attention. John Drew, Wilton Lackaye, John E. Kellard, Miss Helen Gahagan, Miss Peggy Wood, Miss Henrietta Crosman, Mrs. Whiffin, Rollo Peters, Otto Kruger, and J. M. Kerrigan are some of the others in it. . . . The engagement is for a week of nine performances: an added matinée is scheduled for Friday, the 22d.

Sunday, April 24:

"The Barker," with Richard Bennett, in the Blackstone.—A play by Kenyon Nicholson about life, license, and love in the minor tent-shows. It is a success in New-York, where Walter Huston has the part of Nifty Miller, to be acted here by Mr. Bennett.

New in Manhattan

These are the new things listed for the week in the New-York theaters:

"Spreadeagle," by George S. Brooks and Walter B. Lister, with Fritz Williams, Miss Aline MacMahon, Osgood Perkins, Charles D. Brown, Donald Meek, Felix Krembs, and Malcolm Duncan. . . . Mr. Brooks used to be editor of McClure's Magazine; and Mr. Lister is city-editor of the Brooklyn Times. Their play is "about war and big business," they explain.

"Rapid Transit," by Lajos Egri in an adaptation by Charles Recht, with Miss Mary Fowler, Clarence Derwent, and Joseph Macauley.

"Queens Are Trumps," from the French of Felix Ganders, with Frank Morgan, Miss Vivian Martin, and C. H. Croker-King.

"Fiesta," by Michael Gold, with Miss Hortense Alden, Thomas Chalmers, Brandon Peters, and Manart Kippen. . . . The author's name was in some early propaganda of the group known as the Chicago Playwrights' Production Company.

"Big Lake," by Lynn Riggs.

F. D.

EACH, RACIALLY, MAY HATE THE OTHER

JACK DONOHUE STANLEY LUPINO

BUT they are two of the most amusing of the chaps whose chore in life is to try to make us laugh. . . . Mr. Donohue comes tomorrow night as co-star with Miss Marilyn Miller in "Sunny." He has been seen, heard, and liked in Chicago in various frolics since, in 1919, he first caught the fancy of the town by his dancing capers in a thing named "Angel-Face." He was last here in "Be Yourself!" two years ago, in the Harris, with Miss Queenie Smith. . . . Mr. Lupino is not known so well in Chicago, where his first appearance was made early last season with Mitzi in "Naughty Riquette." The consensus then was this Cockney was a laughable importation. He will be here again the 16th in "The Nightingale," in the Great Northern.

Songbirds of Opera Take Wing for Foreign Fields

present state of the concert field and its future. I am sorry that the information which has reached you has made you feel so pessimistic and perhaps you will allow me to say a few words about my experience during the forty-one years I have been active in concert work.

"During that time we have had several periods of depression, not only in America but in England, especially when the gramophone records first attained their great popularity, and the concert field believed that concerts would cease to exist and people would stop at home and listen to the records the same as it is said today about the radio. I am fully convinced that it is only a passing phase that confronts us. Music is a necessity to the majority of humanity and no temporary caprice can kill a legitimate need and any temporary suppression will only result in rejuvenating the activity of the need.

"I am sorry that the two representatives you consulted had such a sorry tale to give. I am thankful to say that my office is not suffering, but is rather actively occupied in booking for the coming season with prospects of a favorable record.

"I don't think we can help the noble art of music by depressing its devotees, but let us rather do our best to encourage them back into the fold of concert goers by giving them good and genuine attractions. Some of the recent exploitations have not been good for the solidification of musical interests.

DANIEL MAYER."

More of the Band Tax Law.

Some detailed information about the band tax law of Illinois and other states has been mailed in by C. W. Collins of the Conn National School of Music. He states that about fifty cities and villages in the northern half of Illinois as well as a dozen more in other parts of the state are to vote on the question in the April election. It is also to come up for vote this spring in Menominee, Mich., under a similar law. DeKalb was the first Illinois community to have a municipal band under this law. Half a dozen towns within 100 miles of Chicago have voted in favor of the provision, but since the state law passed in 1925, they have not yet had time to develop bands.

Mr. Collins adds, and Karl L. King of Fort Dodge, Iuwa, confirms, that Iowa was the first state to pass such a law. It was put through by the efforts of George W. Landers of Clarinda, Iowa, a former army band leader, who since then has been aiding musicians in other states to promote similar laws without compensation to himself. More than 100 Iowa communities have taken advantage of the law. Texas permits a three mill tax instead of the two mill tax in Iowa and Illinois, and other states with band tax laws are California, Kansas, Maryland, Montana, New Mexico, Nebraska, South Dakota, and West Virginia. In addition there are a dozen other states that have permissive legislation of some sort bearing on the organization or maintenance of a band. Three or four more states are now working on band tax laws which are expected to become statutes during the present year.

A Correction.

"Sir: In an article by you in the CHICAGO TRIBUNE on March 13 the statement was made that "Margarete Dessoff of New York has taken the leadership of the Schola Cantorum." Just as a matter of information, may I say that Miss Dessoff conducted one of our concerts on December 30th as a guest conductor. The permanent leader of the Schola Cantorum has not yet been decided upon. Our next concert is being conducted by Hugh Ross of Winnipeg as guest conductor."

ROSE A. HELD, Manager.

Of Music in the Schools.

"Sir: I am moved to write a few words of commendation for your stand on the lack of system in teaching music in the Chicago public schools. I have long wanted to express my views on this subject.

"Over twenty-five years ago I visited the schools in and around Cincinnati for the purpose of investigating their system, and I marveled at the work those children were doing in sight singing. As they grew up in the schools, their musical knowledge grew as a part of them.

"A friend who has been a supervisor of music in that city for many years told me that when any children came into his class from the Chicago schools, they were far behind in their music and he had to start them at the beginning.

"From what my own children and others tell me, there seems to be no coördinated method in use in our schools. This does not speak well for Chicago, and I trust that whatever you have said and may say is the beginning of a crusade for better things in this respect. Graham O. Yonge."

Here and There in Music.

The Chicago Singverein, William Boeppler, conductor, will sing at the noonday concert of the Chicago theater today, featuring Mendelssohn's Forty-third Psalm, some German folk songs, Negro spirituals, and famous choral excerpts. Beginning tomorrow afternoon, Irene Pavloska, mezzo-soprano of the Civic Opera, will appear on that stage in what is known as an "orchestral production," in which the orchestra and stage numbers will be blended on a new ascending stage. H. Leopold Spitalny is the new musical director of the Chicago theater.

Omega chapter of Sigma Alpha Iota offers a violin scholarship of $250 to a talented and deserving student of limited means under 25 years of age. Applications must be received before April 6 by Miss Helen E. Smith, Bush conservatory. The contest will be held April 16. The requirements are two contrasting violin solos.

GOSH DARN IT!

MISS BEATRICE LILLIE

Without a reason at the box-office, she will be going away from here the night of the 16th; and that's no fun at all! Miss Lillie came in timidly the last night of the twenty-eight in February, and hoped to "get by," at least, for three weeks; and she found within the first week that she was getting by and large. She is bully in "Oh, Please!"; and, besides, this is a new picture of her.

Concluding with the worst joke of the week, taken from Musical America. It is to the effect that the new jazz version of Chopin's Funeral march is called "Hearses, Hearses, Hearses."

Harold Lloyd Building Finest Filmland Estate

By Rosalind Shaffer.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—[Special Correspondence.]—Harold Lloyd has given his final approval to plans for his Beverly Hills house and construction will begin at once. A visitor to the Lloyd estate, which comprises sixteen acres adjacent to the one-time Tom Ince estate, now owned by Carl Laemmle, can see the freshly driven stakes that mark the foundation lines of the Lloyd house.

There was some difference of opinion between Lloyd's idea and those of the architects, which up to now delayed building. Harold says the architect was trying to build a hotel, whereas all he wanted was a home.

The comedian's site is on the crest of a hill. His house has a view in every direction; the snowcapped Sierra Madres away to the east, with the nearer Santa Monica mountains to the north; the vista of Los Angeles to the south and the rolling hills and estates of Beverly Hills to the west. The ocean is visible on a clear day.

Varied Landscape.

A tall row of Monterey cypress makes a windbreak north of the house, in front of which is a terrace and then a sheer drop of 200 feet. This descent is covered with large old trees, beds of fern, wild flowers and a rocky channel for a natural spring which trickles down the hillside forming small pools as it descends to a lagoon. The house is to be in French-Italian renaissance style and will contain a bowling alley and other special features.

His uncle, William R. Fraser, who now is Harold's business manager, bought the estate several years ago and drove a fine bargain as Harold's purchasing agent. Mr. Fraser for some years was district supervisor of the United States forestry service in Colorado. He bought the property for Lloyd with an eye to the natural beauties of the land and got a remarkably varied and beautiful tree and shrub growth.

Work on the grounds has been going on for over a year. A large concrete tennis court, tinted green to take the glare off, has been in use for some time. Showers and dressing rooms adjoin it and the large cement retaining wall which holds back the hillside on one side is topped with large lapis lazuli colored vases.

Plans Large Swimming Pool.

A pavilion, domed and open on all sides, overlooks it for spectators of tennis matches. Lloyd's swimming pool, to be constructed in a natural valley, will be the largest outdoor pool in southern California. Harold plans to open it with an A. A. U. swimming match.

Lloyd's private golf course is laid out in the valley below the house around the artificial lagoon. The nine holes are full of tricky traps and hard shots.

When complete the estate will have no equal in southern California. Lloyd's pride is that when it is complete it also will be paid for.

ADVERTISE IN THE TRIBUNE

Recording the Voice of the Movie Fan

If you would like your letters printed in this column, please write on ONE SIDE of the paper ONLY. If you want a personal answer, send stamped, self-addressed envelope—please!

A Few Thoughts About Harold.

Dear Miss Tinée: Last Sunday I sat through Harold Lloyd's latest. It was funny, yes, but not overwhelmingly so. There wasn't a spot in it that had me helpless with laughter, which is the way I like to find myself at least once in the course of a comedy. I rate this picture on a par with the one of last spring—"For Heaven's Sake," I believe was its title—many notches below "The Freshman," which I consider the best Lloyd picture I have ever seen.

As I sat there watching the screen, mildly amused and no more, a good share of the time, the thought occurred to me that Harold Lloyd himself isn't so much of a comedian after all. His pictures are full of funny gags and situations, and it is at them that I laugh, not at Harold Lloyd. He always has plenty of able help, and I can't figure him dominating a picture as Charlie Chaplin did "The Gold Rush," or making the boiling and eating of a shoe such a howlingly hilarious episode as it was when Charlie did it or the New Year's party—well, you know what it was.

I can imagine the Lloyd comedies bowling along quite merrily with another actor in the leading rôle, but a Chaplin picture without Charlie! More particularly "The Gold Rush" without Charlie! Lord, I wish they'd get "The Circus" finished and placed on the market. BILL.

Editor's note: Yes, Bill?

Fairly Ardent Barrymore Fan!

Dear Mae Tinée: For months I've been longing to write to you, and now I've just got to get this off my chest. I'm a John Barrymore fan, and know this letter will sound like a "rave." Please don't think, "Another silly flapper gone mad," for when I was as young as a flapper there wasn't such a word. I've always been crazy about "Jawn" and I wish and hope that he will make more pictures in the coming year, so we won't have to wait so long to see him. In fact, I can't wait—I've seen the "Sea Beast" twice, "Don Juan" thrice and will no doubt go to see "When a Man Loves," again.

Nearly every time you review his pictures you say they are too long. That's the way I feel the first time I see one of them. But the second or third time it seems the picture just flies by—no doubt because I'm always anticipating what is to follow.

Why can't you give us more news of him? Don't other fans ever write about him? I'm always on the watch, so please let there be some news, or a picture or something to add to my already large J. B. book.

One last thing before I close—why, O, why, didn't Warner Brothers let him speak on the Vitaphone? One of his clever curtain speeches would just have made "Don Juan" or "When a Man Loves" a 100 per cent performance.

I suppose you're glad this raving fan is ready to stop at last. May John Barrymore make many more pictures this year, and may Mae Tinee soon review pictures daily—for I miss you so on "off days."

A JOHN BARRYMORE FAN WHO LIKES YOU, TOO.

Editor's note: Well, I only hope you like me as MUCH as you like John!

HIGH POWER, GOOD PROGRAMS BEAT SUMMER STATIC

Expect More Listening in Warm Weather.

The coming summer is expected to solve one of the worst problems of the radio industry—the general belief on the part of the listening public that reception is good only in the winter time and that they should close up their sets when it gets warm like they used to put their automobiles away when it got cold.

Apparently frightened by our old friend, static, the listeners have come to believe that the best radio conditions exist between Columbus day and St. Patrick's day, and in the past this belief has been somewhat enhanced by station owners who have not kept up the standard of their programs during the summer season.

High Power Aids Fans.

There is no doubt that radio reception of distant stations in the winter is better than in the summer, but the general increase in power of radio stations and the fact that practically every community in the country has at least one high powered station bid fair to knock out the time honored tradition that there are no good summer programs.

Chicago radio fans learned last summer that they could get just as good reception from their local stations as they could in the winter time. Stations, realizing that they had more listeners than they had had in preceding summers, improved their programs with the result that the fans enjoyed an exceptional season.

Keep Sets Going.

There are perhaps no worse summer static conditions in any two cities in the country than in Washington, D. C. and St. Louis, yet in both of these cities, radio listeners are now as well served with good programs in the summer as they are in the winter, and, as far as their local stations go, hardly know what static is.

Of course, there will never be as much listening in the summer as there is in the winter. People will not stay indoors as much to listen to their radios, but with the increased power and the better programs there no longer is any reason for the fans closing up their sets entirely when warm weather sets in.

Inside the Loud Speaker

By Quin A. Ryan, W-G-N Announcer

THE AMERICAN LEAGUE has withdrawn its ban on the broadcasting of baseball games from its parks. Except in the world and city series in the various parks games have not been broadcast from the league's eight playgrounds, but last winter the owners voted to allow any individual club to have its home games put on the air.

ONE OF THE reasons why orchestra music sounds so much better and full-bodied from many radio stations now than it did a few years ago is the introduction of the "mixer panel." This is an instrument with panel and dials like the front of a receiving set, which admits music from many microphones and blends it into a concerted whole.

The operator handles the volume of each microphone at the panel and balances the ingredients as they are mixed in this melting pot. For instance, in the broadcasting of one dance orchestra we use one microphone for the string section, one for the brass, and still another lying on the floor to pick up the bass viol alone. The big bull fiddle thus can show its worth for the first time on the radio. It would be drowned out if only one mike were picking up the whole orchestra.

Fifteen microphones were employed in the broadcasting of the scene from "Faust" from the Auditorium recently. Each one led to the mixing panel, where the operator could give the pickup of each its proper balance, and each was amplified separately.

The mixing panel has aided novelty broadcasting immeasurably. In putting a prize fight on the air the announcer can locate himself in a soundproof booth with his mike and let another mike outside pick up the hubbub of the crowd instead of having his own collect the noise and possibly drown out his voice. An announcer can read a sketch in one studio while an orchestra in another studio accompanies his reading, with the operator all the time balancing the two and giving them their proper blending.

WE WONDER when, and if, radio stations will start to specialize.

Many small stations would have met with greater success a long time ago if they had dedicated their efforts to specialization in some particular line, instead of jogging along with mediocre schedules covering all forms of entertainment and instruction.

There are scores of fields that radio stations might specialize in—sports, education, feminine features alone, science, jazz or even comedy. A station dedicated to sports, for instance, might broadcast baseball games, football, basketball, prize fights, horse races and other outdoor events—doing the job up brown—and devote regular advertised hours to fulsome discussions and talks by sport celebrities and writers, covering every known form of sport and athletics. The very fact of the station's specialization, coupled with only fair quality of its presentation, would lift an obscure station into prominence.

Station WLS has definitely followed the course of appealing to the farmer and it has been an eminently successful example of specialization. Other than this one and the instances of a few religious and university radio stations, we have seen no cases of specialization among the broadcasters.

We have always thought that a radio station located in Washington, D. C., might confine itself to the affairs and the personalities of the national capitol, broadcasting all of the doings that might be available and presenting daily the hundreds of famous personages collected in the city. At least, a weekly "Washington Hour" would make a bully feature offered to the nation at large through one of the radio chains, with not only discussions of the government business by famous writers but with the introduction of the most eminent statesmen regularly in interviews and addresses.

But deliver us from a station specializing in politics!

IN MANY OFFICES, as everyone knows, clocks are regulated by wire from a central control. Since the advent of the radio, inventors have labored over devices which would automatically set and regulate clocks by radio. The radio apparatus would follow the style of the electric clocks, setting them at intervals through the day and adjusting them when they run too fast or too slow. We are told that these devices which have been patented "are driven electrically and the mechanism is so arranged that the hands of the clock may be automatically regulated. The incoming time signals are received on an ordinary radio outfit, where they are heavily amplified and carried to the mechanism of the clock itself."

Now all the inventors need to do is to have the same mechanism start the morning toaster and percolator warming, and they'll get our vote.

RADIO AFFECTING MUSICAL TASTES OF U. S. PUBLIC

Piano Losing and Organ Gaining in Popularity.

The piano is losing in popularity in the United States while the organ and string instruments have made a decided gain, according to government figures showing the music trend as evidenced in manufacturers' reports.

The bureau of the census, now completing the classification of manufacturers' reports for 1925, has issued advance statements covering the music lines, in comparison with the figures for the previous census of 1923.

A slight increase in the number of parlor and baby grand pianos was more than offset by a big falling off in the production of upright pianos, government figures showing a decrease in piano production of 11 per cent. The value of pipe organs exceeded previous production figures by more than $3,000,000.

Reports covering other musical instruments showed an increase in production of more than 30 per cent, the value of string instruments manufactured being over $2,000,000 in excess of production figures for the earlier census reports. Sheet music and music books showed an increase of about $350,000.

Many see in these evidences of musical tendencies the far reaching influence of radio. Government reports show steadily increasing production in high grade radio sets. The effect of the radio has been in the nature of a musical renaissance, according to reports, the tendency being to arouse increasing numbers to the development of their own musical skill along vocal and instrumental lines. The government reports show the production of phonographs in this period to have fallen away more than 40 per cent.

These government production figures are said to be unmistakable indications of the musical tendencies of the American people, as practically all musical instruments used here are made in America. A notable exception in this year is said to have been the importation of more than 18,000,000 harmonicas, the sale of which has also been augmented by radio.

The effect of this musical renaissance is said to be further evidenced in the growing number of concerts, orchestras, bands and glee clubs, and the rapid improvement in the quality of orchestral music in motion picture houses in recent years.

GIGLI, METROPOLITAN OPERA TENOR, SINGS TONIGHT FROM W-G-N

Beniamino Gigli, famous Italian tenor of the Metropolitan Opera company, will broadcast the Atwater Kent program tonight from W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel.

Born in 1890, Gigli sang for ten years in the boy choir of the largest church in Recanati, Italy, his native town. He studied under Prof. Rosati in the Rome conservatory, and made his operatic debut at Revigo, near Venice, in 1914, as Enzo in "La Gioconda."

His fame quickly spread through Italy and he sang in Turin, Palermo, Bologna, Naples, Rome, and finally at the goal of all Italian singers, the Scala of Milan. In the summer of 1920 he was engaged for the Metropolitan opera, New York, where he made his debut in "Mefistofele."

NORTHERN FAN FINDS LISTENING CONDITION FINE

No Trouble from Aurora Borealis.

The popular theory that the aurora borealis, or northern lights, interferes with radio reception is apparently disproved in a letter from Lieut. H. Holton Moller, manager of Godhavn radio, Norgronland. This station is said to be the most northern in the world.

Lieut. Moller states that radio reception is remarkable under the very shadow of the north pole.

"As we have practical night all winter, we are not affected by the sun," Moller wrote. "The northern lights, of which we have plenty here, do not affect radio.

Find Ideal Conditions.

"I have, of course, carried out a number of tests in this respect and have been instructed by my home government, Denmark, to render a report on northern lights, but I can only say that they have nothing to do with fading, weakness of signals, or poor reception. I have carried out wireless work for the last eleven years in every part of the world, but I have not found such ideal reception conditions as we have here.

"We receive the Daventry station in England better than any other. It is constant and gives good results on five tubes. It is a pity that the difference in time makes that station's closing time 9 p. m. here or even earlier.

Likes KDKA and WJZ.

"Of the American stations I find KDKA the best, but it is hard pressed by WJZ. We have also had some fine concerts from WLW in Cincinnati."

Lieut. Moller, whose station is operated by the Danish government, has a daily broadcast hour for the purpose of distributing news to the section of the world which his station serves. In part of the frozen reaches covered by the station there are no white men. The broadcasting is done in the Greenlandish tongue.

The lieutenant adds that the Eskimos use radio every day in their everyday work and communications.

SHORT WAVES

The new radio commission is so poor at the present moment it does not even have printed letterheads, but uses plain paper, at the top of which is typed "Federal Radio Commission."

Broadcasting is presenting the greatest problem in radio in the United States today.

Station WCCO at Minneapolis has just celebrated its second birthday.

The Hu-chin, or two stringed Chinese violin, was introduced to the radio audience of the United States for the first time in a broadcast from a Minneapolis station.

The program manager of a big Chicago station said he found himself so occupied with his own programs that he had not found time to listen in on any other station in more than a year.

Electrical waves traveling at the rate of 186,000 miles a second carry radio programs to the listeners.

The only woman carillon player in the United States is now ringing the chimes which radio listeners hear from the Park Avenue Baptist church in New York City.

Radio programs are now relayed between New York and Washington, D. C., over sixteen wires.

British listeners are very fond of travel talks.

"We like band performances best," an Australian listener wrote to Station 2LO at Melbourne, "but sometimes we don't know whether it is a band or a thunderstorm."

ALASKAN HEARS RADIO PROGRAM 2 DAYS ON WAY

Time Differences Solve the Riddle, However.

Listening in on a radio program broadcast so far away that it took two days to reach him was the record in distance reception established by R. G. Hall of Kotzebue, Alaska, recently. His unique achievement, described in a letter which he just reached a friend in America, who is an American DX fans sometime to shoot at.

Seated in his home in Kotzebue in the early morning of March 19, he began to "fish for distance." At 8:30 a. m. he tuned in the startling announcement that the correct time was 10:41 p. m. After he had listened to a Salvation Army band, a quartet and talks on radio sets, jewelry and market reports, Hall's watch pointed to 6:30 a. m., but he heard the announcer say, "4-QG. It is 10:41 p. m., March 18. This station closing down until 6 o'clock tomorrow. Good night all."

It was Brisbane, Australia, broadcasting over the length of the Pacific ocean from Australia to Alaska, across the equator and across the international date line, a distance of about 8,000 miles. It was early morning of March 19 in Alaska. The six hours difference in time to the westward would have made it the evening of March 9 in Australia, but the date line added another day to the difference, making it the evening of March 8.

W-G-N to Broadcast All Home Games of Cubs and White Sox

A series of sports broadcasts will come to listeners this year from W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel, following the completion of arrangements to broadcast all of the home games of both the Chicago Cubs and the Chicago Sox, direct from Wrigley and Comiskey parks, starting with the first game of the season on April 12, at the Bruins' Addison street lair, when Manager Joe McCarthy's 1927 team meets the world's champion St. Louis Cardinals.

Each day thereafter a game while the Cubs are at home. Then W-G-N will set up its equipment out in Comiskey park, and the first local appearances of the Sox will be described on the air. When the Sox swing east on their first invasion of the year, the station will return to the north side.

This is the first year that any team in the American league has permitted the broadcasting of its games. Last year W-G-N broadcast only the Saturday and Sunday at home games of the Cubs.

President William E. Veeck of the Chicago Cubs, is enthusiastic about the broadcasting of the Cubs' games, and he believes these daily radio stories of the games will stimulate interest in the national pastime. President Charles A. Comiskey of the Sox, has also long been in favor of broadcasting as a help to baseball but until this year the rules of the American league forbade radioing games by its members.

Quin Ryan, who was selected by Judge Landis as one of the official announcers for the 1925 world series and who described the baseball games broadcast by W-G-N last year, will be at the microphone on Tuesday, April 12, when the umpire shouts the first "Play Ball!" of the season, ready to tell listeners about the prospects of the world's 1927 team, and the story of their first meeting with the champion Cardinals.

The first Sox game to be put on the air will be on April 20, when the south siders cross bats with Cleveland.

Only instrumental selections will be played, interpolated by piano numbers from the works of these composers. A feature will be a movement from one of Mendelssohn's trios. Edward Barry will be the pianist for the program, while the Drake concert ensemble and Henry Selinger's string trio will offer the other selections.

"Over the Hills and Far Away," which was discontinued last week, will be resumed next Saturday evening at 9:30 o'clock with the presentation of "Down the Mississippi," one of the most popular of the W-G-N radio productions. One of these musical travelogues will be presented every week.

NEW COMMISSION STILL HUNTS FOR RADIO SOLUTION

Wants to Know Way to Reduce Stations.

BY FRANK HINMAN.

The new federal radio commission, created by congress to clean up the much muddled radio situation, today apparently is no nearer a solution of the problem than it was last Tuesday, when it sat down in Washington, D. C., with representatives of all branches of the radio industry from all parts of the country. For three days it listened to recommendations and suggestions from lawyers, radio engineers, manufacturers, station owners, and listeners, and when all the talk had subsided this was the situation:

1. There are too many stations now broadcasting in the United States.

2. No solution was offered as to how the number of those stations could be reduced.

Outlines Program.

The four commissioners present—Vice Chairman Eugene O. Sykes, J. T. Billon, H. A. Bellows, and O. H. Caldwell—had outlined a list of subjects for discussion on the part of the gathering, subjects on which they frankly admitted they wanted the views of the radio industry.

From the outset it was fairly apparent that all branches of the industry were pretty much of a unit on most of the subjects. The question of widening and broadcasting band to make room for additional stations was opposed with hardly a dissenting voice. The proposition to reduce the frequency band between stations, the suggestion that there be a general reduction in power and the idea that chain broadcasting could be carried on on the same wave length met the same fate and at last the commission threw up its hands in despair.

Commissioner Caldwell summed up the position when he said, shortly before the conclusion of the morning session on the third day:

What Can We Do.

"Gentlemen, for three days the members of the radio commision have listened to your counsel with a great deal of interest and a great deal of appreciation. You have discussed these technical subjects from many angles, but you seem to lead to but one conclusion—at least if we are to accept the ideas of you men who sit here—and that conclusion is that the number of broadcasting stations has got to be cut down.

"You have advised against all these different propositions and have defined the problem from all sides, from the listeners' standpoint in the requirement of good radio service. But, if your advise is to be taken by the commission on all these various points, you will see that you have cut off all avenues of escape for the solution of the present problem of 733 stations except a reduction in the number of stations that may broadcast.

Nothing to Offer.

"Therefore, gentlemen, if your advice is to be followed on all the preceding points, what have you now to say on this question of cutting down the number of stations? How would you advise the commission to start going about doing it?"

And the gathering had practically nothing to offer.

One man, the representative of an accessory company, suggested that a large number of the stations could be relegated to the two lowest wave bands, which he said could be dedicated to chaos, but he neglected to prescribe a method by which the stations to occupy this radio ashheap could be selected. Another revived the question of widening the broadcasting band beyond the range of the present day receiver, but the majority had nothing to say, and as a result the commission is just where it was when it started its public hearings. It is looking for a solution of its problem.

MESSAGE GOES 32,000 MILES TO HAM, 50 M. AWAY

San José, Cal., April 2.—[Special.]—The broadcast listener usually complains that he is unable to hear a certain station because it is too far away. The amateur radio telegrapher, on the other hand, often makes the complaint that he cannot hear another amateur station because it is too near!

A striking example of this is furnished in the story of a radio message that a San José amateur wished to send via short waves to his friend at Carmel, Cal. The distance between the two points is slightly more than fifty miles, but due to the habit that short waves have of angling into the upper atmosphere before being reflected back to earth, the two stations were unable to hear each other at all.

Finally the San José station, 6HB, recollected that 6HM, at Carmel, kept a regular schedule with an amateur in Singapore, Asia, and since this point was quite easy for each to reach, he sent the message to the Singapore amateur, who immediately relayed it to the Carmel amateur. The answer came back over the same route the next night, message and answer together having covered a distance of 32,000 miles in order to bridge the fifty mile gap.

NEW SERIES OF FAMOUS FIGHTS STARTS ON W-G-N

Sullivan and Ryan Meet Next Saturday.

Listeners whose appetites for radio reproductions of epic prize ring battles of the past have been whetted by W-G-N'S presentation of its "Old Time Prize Fights" and the "Dempsey Fights" will be interested in learning that a new series is in preparation, the first of which will be offered listeners next Saturday evening at 8:45 o'clock.

With the reproduction of the Dempsey-Firpo fight last night on W-G-N the series known as the "Dempsey Fights" came to an end, but the insistence of the radio audience for a continuation of this novel form of entertainment has persuaded THE TRIBUNE station to prepare a new list of memorable fistic battles to be known as "The Famous Fights of All Time."

Sullivan-Ryan Fight.

For the first fight of the new series W-G-N jumps back to 1882, and will reproduce in the studio a radio broadcast of the nine round tussle between John L. Sullivan and Paddy Ryan at Mississippi City, the fight in which the Boston Strong Boy captured the championship of the world. This will be the oldest fight yet heard in the lengthy series and the second time that "John L." has figured in these old prize fights that have been recreated by W-G-N. The first of the "Old Time Prize Fights" was the Sullivan-Kilrain scrap, which took place seven years after Sullivan's fight with Ryan. This latter battle is the one that will be heard next Saturday evening.

An interesting episode in boxing will be contained in the second fight of the series, which will be the Joe Gans-Terry McGovern mill, held in Chicago in 1901. This was the notable "crooked" fight that ended boxing in Chicago until its resumption under the new state law last year. Both Gans and McGovern were picturesque figures in ring history, and the reproduction of this fight should prove one of the most enjoyable of the series.

Ad and Bat to Mix.

Another famous scrap to be included in the "Famous Fights of All Time" will be the exciting clash between Battling Siki, the Senegalese windmill, and Mike McTigue for the light heavyweight championship of the world. This go, between a Negro and an Irishman, was fought in Dublin on St. Patrick's day, 1923.

The forty round fight between Ad Wolgast and Battling Nelson for the lightweight championship of the world, "the most brutal fight of all time," will also have a place in the list of sensational struggles of old ring Titans to be reproduced in the new series. This fight occurred seventeen years ago in San Francisco, with Wolgast winning.

The remaining fights in the series will be the Stanley Ketchel-Jack Johnson battle; Dempsey's forty-eight second knockout of Fred Fulton, and the defeat of Jimmy Wilde for the flyweight championship by Pancho Villa.

DR. MANN, HEAD OF SINAI CONGREGATION, WILL SPEAK TONIGHT

"Jotham's Parable: A Non-Partisan Political Challenge," will be the subject of an address by Dr. Louis L. Mann, head of Sinai congregation, at the civic meeting to be held by the Sunday Evening club in Orchestra hall tonight. The services will be broadcast by WMAQ. Harry A. Wheeler, vice president of the club, will be the chairman of the meeting, while Dr. Ozora S. Davis, president of the Chicago Theological seminary, will speak on the general theme of good citizenship at the seven o'clock service.

The music program will be patriotic in character, the choir of 100, John B. Miller and Mark Love, soloists, and the Imperial Male quartet offering selections.

ARMY IMPROVES RADIO SETS TO TALK TO STATIONS

The signal corps of the U. S. army has completed for the air service an improved ground-to-plane set which is far more effective as to range than any yet devised. There has also been designed a set especially for pursuit planes. Their range is not long but one with considerably greater range is being developed to go into the big bombers because a bomber may start on a long trip and must always be able to communicate with the base. The equipment now being issued to the air service includes both telegraph and telephone sets.

Germany to Send Delegate to World Radio Meet Here

BERLIN, April 2.—Germany has officially announced that a special delegate will be sent to the international world radio congress to be held in Washington this fall.

W-G-N TEACHER WILL TRANSLATE RADIO TO FRENCH

How do you say "superheterodyne" in French? If you were suddenly stranded in France with a portable set and wanted a new A battery how would you ask for it at the French electrical shop?

Those two and many more questions similar to them will be answered by Prof. Henri Croisard, teacher of the weekly French lessons broadcast over W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel, next Thursday afternoon during the lesson period from 5 to 5:30 o'clock, when he will instruct his listener pupils in the translation of all our present day radio terms into French.

Prof. Croisard has consulted all of the French technical magazines in order to obtain the correct French synonyms for the many new words that radio has added to our language, and the work of compiling them occupied him for a number of weeks.

Pick Out the station you want

"Now pick out your program and we'll have it here in a jiffy. The opera? Here it is—"

The keen selectivity of the Stromberg-Carlson makes it easy to separate all stations, except those broadcasting on identical wave lengths—and at the same time preserve those higher frequencies which give the delicate shading of tone to a musical program.

This "tone-preserving" selectivity is made possible by two features—Dual Control and Coil Shielding. The ability to tune the antenna in the Stromberg-Carlson aids greatly in picking out the desired station by eliminating a part of the interference before the program enters the first tube.

Coil Shielding by preventing any local pick-up on the coils themselves, adds still further to the keenness of this selectivity.

"The Stromberg-Carlson guarantee is valid only when purchases are made through Stromberg-Carlson Authorized Dealers."

Music Season Is at Farewell Stage

By Joan King.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Gotham's musical 1926-'27 has reached the season of farewells. Two weeks more and the great old Metropolitan Opera house will darked its doors. The New York Philharmonic orchestra has already given its last program and is not to be heard again in these parts until the summer session at the Stadium. One week more and the New York symphony will sound its final notes.

Of visitors in the orchestral field the metropolis has yet to entertain the Boston players and those from Philadelphia, each in a final adieu, while the newly organized Beethoven Symphony orchestra will complete the orchestral offerings of the year, the end of the month. David Mannes has concluded his free series of symphonic concerts at the Metropolitan Museum of Art; the Chamber Music symphony has brought to a close a series of three Aeolian hall programs; the New York trio has paid its farewell to Town hall. Numbers of noted recital artists have played and sung concluding notes: Efrem Zimbalist has been heard for the last time upon his violin before embarking upon a two year world tour; Walter Gieseking has rendered his final piano interpretations; the English Singers have concluded an American tour of 88 concerts and have departed these shores.

Bolm Ballet Makes Its Bow.

The Adolph Bolm ballet of Chicago has made its New York bow in another of these final programs. The League of Composers presented the Chicago organization in a program of modern dance music. Greta Torpadie, soprano, and Ruth Page, premiere danseuse of the Metropolitan Opera company were the soloists of the evening and an orchestra of 35 players from the Philharmonic society conducted by Tullio Serafin of the Metropolitan assisted.

An orchestral extract from a Sinfonietta by Mario Labroca; a ballet "The Tragedy of the 'Cello" ballet-bouffe by Alexander Arnoux, choreography by Adolph Bolm, scenery and costumes by Remisoff, and music by the Polish composer, Alexander Tansman; a ballet setting of three piano pieces by Scriabin, conceived by Mr. Bolm, entitled "Visual Mysticism," danced by Miss Page and Mr. Bolm; a setting of Amy Lowell's poem, "Free Fantasia on Japanese Themes," set to music for soprano voice and orchestra and sung by Greta Torpadie with orchestral accompaniment; and "The Rivals," music by Henry Eichheim, ballet choreography by Mr. Bohn, comprized the program.

With the exception of Eichheim's ballet, "The Rivals," heard here at a Boston Symphony concert last year and Scriabin's piano pieces, the music was all new to this city.

Exceptionally distinguished was the audience which this last hearing of the League of Composers brought out and liberal in applause. Given under the auspices of a number of the leading soical figures of the metropolis, the performance was in benefit of the National Music league.

"Queen of Song" Chosen.

Chicago will shortly entertain Miss Katherine Palmer, a young lyric soprano, just chosen as New York state's "Queen of Song" from among the semi-final contestants for first place in the National Opera club's search for another Marion Talley. Miss Palmer has been adjudged the best vocalist of a group of seven women and three men who were selected from the preliminary contests in New York, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania. The final contest is to be held in Chicago, April 18, the goal being a prize of $500; an engagement with the San Carlo Opera company, an audition at the Metropolitan, and an additional $1,000 offered by the Opera club.

Outgoing and incoming steamers are already having their influence on musical personnel. Chicago's contribution to foreign travel recently was Mary Garden. Miss Garden embarked on the Olympic for Paris, where she is scheduled to appear in a production of "The Resurrection." She will return to America for the opening of the Civic Opera company in the fall.

ART AND ARTISTS

"MY DAUGHTER IN THE ARGENTINE COUNTRY" by Antonio Ortiz Echague, an entirely fascinating painting to be found in the International Exhibition current at the Art institute. The exhibition closes April 17.

Paint Brush Can Be Tool of Desecration

Two little arms that are chubby and warm;
A covering of down on a soft little head;
Two little legs which will walk when they're able
And two little feet that are rosy—not red.

Two drowsy eyes, always falling asleep;
A dimple that hides in the crease of a cheek;
A pit-a-pat heart, that beats like a drum,
And a voice which can go from a coo to a shriek.

What have you got when you put these together?
Something that God dropped out of the blue.
An armful of sweetness meant only for loving—
Be careful! Don't drop her! She's terribly new.

E. J.

By Eleanor Jewett.

EVEN infants are not exempt from indignities cast upon them by certain painters and sculptors.

Of course, the normal child will not resent these indignities, will not, in fact, even notice them, his thoughts being concerned entirely with matters of greater importance, such as the nearness of the next dinner hour and the degree of heat to which that dinner will be warmed. A too hot bottle has been responsible for many a wail of anger!

But whether the child notices it or not is of little consequence. The fact that babyhood can be used as a fence for anaemia or obesity should rouse us to protest. The lethargy long lines of grotesque paintings of adults and still lifes and landscapes invoke as a temporary solace should be banished instantly when the divine charm of childhood is imperiled. No man has the right to give a normal infant an enormous stomach. No man has the right to paint a normal child as a lump of billowing putty, or, the opposite, as a thin, wasp-waisted puppet.

Unnatural Babies.

Both of these things are done. There is scarcely an exhibit where work outside of the conservative schools is shown that has not its unnatural baby. The artists are committing as horrible a crime as did that woman in one of De Maupassant's stories who laced herself so that her children might be monsters. An excuse might, in hell, be found for her, She did it so they could earn money in side shows, in circuses. The painter or sculptor who plays false with the beauty of infancy has not this excuse.

The exhibition of international paintings at the Art institute has a few canvases depicting motherhood, the little baby being one of the prime factors. One that brings a pleasant smile of comprehension to the lips is "Motherhood" by Boris Grigoriev, a quaint, funny, but good piece of painting. Across the room (to the best of my recollection the two are in the same gallery) hangs a canvas with a blowzy mother and a bulbous child. Naturally, Piccasso being Piccasso, he will not learn better, but no healthy baby was ever as fat as this. Curves have their place, and billows of soft flesh theirs (witness Rubens, etc.), but these curves and these billows are not beauty, but desecration.

Walt Kuhn's Canvases.

Walt Kuhn, to whose exhibit one passes from the International, goes rather far into this marsh of desecrating. He does not leave much that is admirable in the world when he has finished expressing life as life appears to him. Mrs. Bertha E. Jacques, a Chicago etcher of note, said of Mr. Kuhn that he was a pleasant and interesting young man, not at all like his pictures. In speaking of painting, he let fall the remark that painting was not work, but play. These disjointed sentences, plus the suggestion that his idea of play must be as disappointing as some of our ideas of work, may explain him a little.

On the other hand, by an extraordinary chance, a new light was shed on his method of work by a chance advance into drawing undertaken by my young son, aged 5. He drew a man, and when he was asked where the mouth was, he said, "O, he doesn't need one now. He's through eating."

The idea of leaving out something not absolutely necessary to the moment! A brilliant thought. It works when applied to Mr. Kuhn's paintings. "The City" has no soul; "Maternity" has no courage; "Rider" has no brains; and the rest of them, each essential not present in the artist's conception at the time of performance is left out. And with all that is left out it almost makes one feel, as one scans those walls, that too much has still been left in. There is too much that is sordid and drugged and dragged and ugly. If painting is play, and play is this, then give us work.

Insanity Somewhere.

The Arts club has another exhibition to its credit in the exhibit of paintings by Albert Bloch. This is another case when you would like to be told whether you or the painter is crazy. To justify these pictures, insanity must be somewhere. Of all the absurd caricatures, these surely are the most absurd. Will it hurt Mr. Bloch's feeling to ask him how he brought himself to the point of being physically able to exploit in this fashion the frailties human flesh is heir to? Are we really heir to so much?

Are we such blockheads? Do we appear to any one as Punch and Judy, puppets of wood worked by strings? That is the kind of person living in Mr. Bloch's world. Under the plain clothes are pegs for legs and arms, no body, but a chunk of unfeeling wood, and the heads are like the painted heads on uncouth dolls. There is no grace, no charm, no atmosphere, no human quality at all. There is no depth to the painting. There is scarcely substance to the figures. In one picture the pot of flowers grows, apparently, through the body of the man. In every picture the oddity is repellant, not attractive.

It seems a pity that this type of painting must be considered seriously, unless there is a key to it. Having spoken so decidedly against it, it would but be justice to print the opposite side of the story. In what lies the justification of these paintings?

If the answer comes that this is an experiment, it will not pass. Experiments should be conducted in solitude and not exposed until perfected. Failures are disheartening, especially in this field where so much good work is going begging today.

Notes of Art and Artists.

In celebration of the third anniversary of the Roerich museum, established in New York City, a new room of Finnish paintings, all by Nicholas Roerich, was opened to the public last Thursday.

The twenty-third volume of the American Art Annual, covering the year 1926, has recently been issued by the American Federation of Arts. It is the most complete book of reference published on contemporary American art.

One of the best of our Chicago etchers, Lee Sturges, president of the Chicago Society of Etchers, has at present an extremely interesting and successful exhibition of etchings in the United States National museum at Washington. There are fifty-five prints in the exhibit. It is pleasant to know that the curator has sent Mr. Sturges very complimentary letters concerning his etchings. It is just as well that the east may be brought to realize the talent which the west boasts.

Joseph Gill Martin, a New York artist of note, has at present an exhibit of oils and water colors at Thurber's Galleries, 324 North Michigan avenue. Many of the pictures were painted on the estate of Robert Lincoln.

From the Mansfield Collection.

In the print department at the Art institute there is to be found an exhibition of etchings by Charles Meryon, from the extensive Howard Mansfield collection. The etchings are eminently sane. They have that clear, fresh beauty which is deathless. The Tiepolo prints on adjoining walls are utterly lovely and are more alive than the Meryon etchings. In a neighboring room the prints by Rodolphe Bresdin are less effective by the contrast offered both by Meryon and Tiepolo. The Bresdin group were presented to the Art institute by Walter S. Brewster. The prints are crowded and rather heavy. They have Teutonic characteristics.

Oskar Gross has recently finished a superb full-length portrait of Ellen Lowe of the Goodman Theater Repertory company in the rôle of "Mrs. Tiffany," a character from the play "Fashion."

Yesterday afternoon saw the first performance for the children of "Six Cherry Tarts" in the Goodman Memorial theater. The clever and beautiful presentation of "The Blue Bird" closed the week before. During the next two weeks, for the adult audience, "Twelfth Night" will alternate with "Juno and the Paycock." "The Pigeon," by John Galsworthy, will open April 11.

Tuesday of this week will see the opening at the Chicago galleries of an exhibit of paintings by Josephine Reichmann and Agnes Potter Van Ryn.

Scribe, in Gotham, Visits Dinosaurs

By Mme. X.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—It was an odd way to spend the first morning of a brief stay in New York, but the X. family started its sojourn here by a visit to the dinosaurs at the American Museum of Natural History and thence nosed over to the just opened flower show at the Grand Central Palace. The museum, which is on Columbus avenue and 77th street, is well worth a visit. So are our old friends, the dinosaurs. The X. family, being of a somewhat vegetarian persuasion, was much interested in noting that, while the carnivorous dinosaur known as the Tyrannosaurus, was a mighty animal, he was neither so large, nor so brainy as his vegetarian cousins, the amphibious dinosaurus Brontosaurus, and the duck-billed dinosaur Corythosaurus, thus proving our long held contention that brains do not batten on flesh, nor is bone and sinew built by feeding as other mammals. We particularly noted the cerebral dome of the duck-billed dinosaur. His forehead was shaped much like that of our great philosopher, Benjamin Franklin.

Those famous dinosaur eggs found by Roy Chapman Andrews six or seven years ago in the Gobi desert are at the museum in a glass case and hold the attention. One wonders how anything that came out of such moderate sized shells could have grown to the proportions of the Brontosaurus, whose skeleton is in the museum. This creature was sixty-six feet and two inches long, fifteen feet and two inches tall and weighed probably forty tons.

Hurrying away from these pleasant monsters, we passed through and were detained a bit by the room where remnants of prehistoric man were enshrined. We looked at a case of skulls and studied the busts of our ancestors as the scientists of today believed they looked. While our Pithecanthropus, Piltdown and Neanderthal relatives had somewhat rude and unbeautiful countenances, our Cro-Magnon grandparent had a most likeable face, and looked more like a rather worried United States senator than a member of a wild and savage race destined to perish and leave behind him no literature and but traces of art. He had the air, in fact, of one who might have traveled in the flower show to which we next adjourned.

Well Worth the Price.

This was a fine display of the gardener's art. Huge red roses with almost purple centers, which might have grown in the garden described in "Alice in Wonderland," were attracting much attention. There was a general symphony of color, a harmony of design that was pleasing and quite worth the one dollar and ten cents it cost to visit the show. The background was much the same as that used at the Metropolitan opera on Saturday afternoon in the second act of "La Traviata," when Lucrezia Bori outdid herself. It consisted of very high, very green hedges and well clipped box trees.

As contrasted with similar things done in Chicago, New York shows of this and other kinds are more overpowering, than those arranged by and for Chicago people. New Yorkers, perhaps unconsciously, want to stun you by their wealth and power; Chicagoans to please and interest you by their taste and originality. I may be mistaken in this impression, but it comes up again and again in studying various expressions of different sides of life here.

Our Art institute does not compare with the Metropolitan gallery in New York, either in the number or quality of its possessions, nor in its setting for them, but, in its aspect, it is far more inviting and friendly to the wayfarer. The Metropolitan is stately and splendid, but strikes the out of town visitor with a certain awe and infuses a consciousness of the financial power of the city which is not felt by the visitor to our Art institute. In fact, almost anywhere in New York there is an ever present sense of the autocracy of wealth, and its control of the forces of life. Art, science, philanthropy, are all in its hands.

Genial Spirit Lacking.

Like the lofty towers that rise from the rest of New York's skyscrapers, the great magnates of the world of finance loom up here, this one identified with this enterprise for the public good, that one backing another, and still another identified with a third and so on. Not one of these so associated but seems to have a certain air of proud condescension. There is none of the genial good fellowship that escorts most of the gifts made to Chicago by her sons and daughters, Julius Rosenwald's unsolicited offer of $500,000 recently made towards the building of a big convention hall is the latest example of this kind of friendly, eager generosity. I may be doing the average Gotham benefactor a great injustice, but the impression is definite, even profoundly rooted.

Chicago's attitude towards its wealthy benefactors is far more democratic than that of New Yorkers to theirs. There is little or no kowtowing to our notable financiers. Their contributions to the public welfare are accepted sometimes in rather a cavalier fashion. We are not infrequently rather too lavish of our criticism of their gifts to their city and the way these are administered. Without knowing much about the subject, many of our fellow men, and more especially our fellow women, set themselves up to judge as to what is the best way to run the Chicago Civic Opera company; others undertake to find fault with the management of our Art institute; still others know more about music than Frederick Stock, director of our Symphony orchestra. But these are all signs of a community interested in these enterprises and to be encouraged, if not carried too far. The unselfish work of certain of our foremost citizens, however, in the carrying on of these great institutions is sometimes taken too much for granted. Insufficient credit is given them for their contributions of time, strength, vitality, as well as money.

Ravinia's Open Air opera has made most of Chicago music lovers acquainted with that great artist, Lucrezia Bori. To see her at the Metropolitan Opera house in New York was to recall delicious summer nights in the classic groves of Ravinia park. She is in a fine voice and gave to Violetta the same expression of supreme love and self-sacrifice that we felt in her presentation of the rôle on our north shore. Gigli, who sang the rôle of Alfreddo, has a fine tenor voice, though not the art and skill that makes Tito Schipa the greatest of his class today. Especially in the final act, when Violetta is dying, was he lacking in the exquisite understanding which marks Schipa's vocal and dramatic enterpretation of that episode. It is not art to put volume into singing at all times, especially in a death scene.

The Metropolitan is a splendid and impressive opera house. As a background it is much more becoming to the fair sex in evening dress than is our Auditorium. New Yorkers also dwell on its fine acoustics. To a Chicagoite these do not seem to be equal to those of our opera house, and I think we are right in this if one may take the word of the greatest singers of our day. Both Muratore and Galli Curci, as I have quoted at other times, have said that ours is the finest hall of any now existing, from a singer's point of view.

But for looks we cannot compete with the New York shrine of operatic music. Its crimson and gold background has a sumptuous effect not to be overlooked when our new opera house is to be built. New Yorkers are wondering whether the new, more conveniently situated opera house, which is to be put up soon, will be as satisfying as their present historic one. Many are regretting that it was not possible to have as a site for this new one the old Cornelius Vanderbilt house now being torn down on Fifth avenue. They would have had there a handsome plaza in front of the opera house such as adorns the opera houses of Paris and Vienna.

The Passing of Old New York.

To the old timer in New York it is sad to see the historic past of the city fading before the eyes. The two Vanderbilt mansions on 5th avenue, which were landmarks for so many years, are melting away like snow in a hot sun. The famous old Pierpont Morgan house on Madison avenue is already gone. Its site will be occupied by an addition to the Morgan library which the present J. P. Morgan is planning as a hall in which to accommodate lectures to be given in connection with the library. He intends to make this fine memorial to his father of more value to the public by extending the scope of its activities. While the Vanderbilt family are adding to their fortunes by the sale of their old homes, the Morgans are dedicating theirs to the welfare of the community. They have always had a deep sense of their responsibilities as citizens. The present

WOMEN'S CLUB PAGE

Clubs' Gala Event Scheduled for May

By Kate Webber.

EVEN the clubwoman's place will be in the home for the next few weeks, if signs of spring and woman's love of pretty clothes are signs. The reason for the adherence to the sewing machine is the gala event in clubdom, the annual convention of the Illinois Federation of Women's clubs. Individual clubs are singing their swan songs for the season and preparing to send delegates to this three day feast of reason, to be held May 17-20, at Danville.

A special train will go from Chicago, bearing the president, Mrs. Walter W. Seymour, who will have her first experience presiding at a state gathering, also the officers, department chairmen and delegates. The train will arrive in time for the board to go into session the afternoon of May 16, after which the Danville Woman's club will give a dinner for the board.

Address of Welcome.

The convention proper will open on the morning of May 17, with Mrs. M. L. Coutant, president of the hostess club, giving the address of welcome, to which Mrs. Seymour will respond. Reports of officers and committee chairmen will follow. All outgoing district presidents also will have ten minutes each to give their reports at sessions, as will department heads.

The departments of press and publicity and American home both will have speakers on Tuesday afternoon, when John T. Harrison, publisher of the Danville Commercial News, will speak. That evening Prof. James Lardner of Northwestern university will speak on "They Knew Lincoln."

On Wednesday afternoon Mrs. Rufus Dawes of Evanston, chairman of international relations for the G. F. W. C., will be the chief speaker. Eugene T. Lies and a speaker for the war veterans department will be on the Thursday program, as will Mrs. Marx Obendorfer, past music chairman for the general federation.

Evening Reception.

Instead of the Wednesday evening banquet usually held on the second evening of state conventions there will be a reception. Another departure from former procedure will be the separation on one afternoon into department groups, which the delegates may attend according to their preferences, and at which it is felt more constructive work may be accomplished.

In connection with the convention there will be musical features under the direction of the local club. Social affairs include an automobile ride on Tuesday afternoon. Instead of merely announcing the new officers, first vice president, secretary, treasurer, and parliamentarian, there will be an impressive ceremonial on Thursday evening at which they will be inducted into office.

The convention will adjourn on Friday at noon, and the new board will go into session. The final session on Friday morning will be devoted to reports, business, invitations for the next annual meeting, and the awarding of prizes.

An associate group of men and women from various parts of Chicago, headed by Mrs. Frank A. Healy as general chairman, will sponsor a post Easter party on Easter Monday evening at the Aragon, the proceeds to go toward the chapel fund of Loyola university. A list of 1,000 patrons and the student body of Loyola will assist the committee.

The last card party of the season, sponsored by the North Shore Woman's club, will be held on Thursday at 1:30 o'clock at 3650 Sheridan road, with Mrs. Herbert V. Weed as chairman. The proceeds will go toward the several charities aided by the club, of which Mrs. Frank G. Cutter is president.

CLUB ETHICS

By Maude Swalm Evans.

THE delegate brought a beaming face and a sheaf of papers to the club lunch table.

"I received this report today," she told her fellow luncheers. "It's all about the sixty foreign clubs that are affiliated with our general federation. My, but it's interesting! Here's the Karrakatta club of Perth, Western Australia. It has 500 members; owns its own clubhouse; was organized in 1894."

"It's hard to realize that the women of other countries have been developing along the same lines we have," said the long time member, "and that they began almost as soon as we did, too."

"Here's the Skagway Women's club of Alaska," went on the delegate. "The members are supporting the town library; boosting new roads; feeding the volunteer labor on the new roads; conducting a 'clean up plant up' campaign with the help of the Boy Scouts and the Camp Fire Girls."

"They seem to have much the same ideas about civic work that we have," commented the committee chairman.

"I'll jump you to South America now," continued the delegate. "The American Women's club of Montevideo is furnishing the library for the American girls' school; sponsoring popular lectures; conducting an educational exposition in baby work, and raising money for many other philanthropies."

"I've heard of that club," remarked the long time member. "The president wrote to a federation officer that their membership is only seventy-five, but every one is faithful to her obligations. That's the reason they accomplish so much."

"The Seoul Woman's club of Korea has just recently affiliated. Their principal philanthropy has been supplying thousands of Koreans with food and clothing after their great floods. And here's about the Lyceum club of Athens, Greece. Their outstanding work has been the reviving of the national costumes and dances from the earliest times to date. In appreciation of the work the dictator has given them a fine building site for a club home. Isn't it all thrilling? Sixty clubs in sixty different parts of the world, all doing their own work and all in touch with the work we're doing in this country."

Question.

"How should previous notice be given, by mail or orally? MARY S."

Reply.

Previous notice, unless otherwise specified in the by-laws, may be given at the previous meeting, or by mail to every member, or in the call for the meeting.

Question.

"Can a vote be called unanimous when several blank ballots have been cast with the ayes? CHAIRMAN."

Reply.

Yes, those not voting are not counted in deciding whether the vote is a majority, two-thirds, or unanimous.

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

heir to the name and its prestige is especially endowed with this ideal.

Perhaps it is because she is an ardent Chicagoite that the writer finds on all sides in New York the impress of her fellow citizens in the Gotham metropolis. Next door to this hotel, for instance, are the garden walls of the strikingly beautiful new house which the Marshall Fields, third of the name, are putting up here. The house faces north on 70th street, opposite the Frick mansion, while its southern exposure opens on a charming court that runs through to 69th street. It is of strictly Georgian architecture, in this being in marked contrast to most of its neighbors, which are of the marble front vintage of New York's growth, a period more noted for lavish expenditure than of knowledge of or taste in architecture.

The exterior of the Field house is of vari-colored brick, with stone trimmings. It is five stories in height and has an air of sophistication and good taste which attracts the attention of all with any knowledge of the high art of building.

Its interior promises to be as effective and well thought out as its outside. The fact that it is the work of a Chicago architect that is to be the home of a Chicago born man, that it is built with money made in Chicago, makes it of special interest and moment to any citizen of the Windy City. Furthermore, another son of Chicago, Abram Poole, is doing some delightful murals which will be one of the features of the house. If they are as interesting and effective as those he did for the Fields' country house on Long Island they will be a great addition.

Chicago Artists in Gotham.

Two other artists who started on their careers in Chicago and who now live in New York are Mrs. Cecil Clark Davis and Mrs. Marshall Clark, perhaps better known to the art world as Virginia Clark. Both of these gifted women are doing some of their best work here today. Mrs. Davis was one of seventy-five American artists included in a recent collection shown at the Anderson galleries by the American Art Dealers' association, a show which attracted great attention at its first installation and which it is intended to make a permanent enterprise, so successful was its outset. The artists ranged from Gilbert Stuart down through Inness, Whistler, Sargent to the principal ones of today. It was a decided honor to be in this galaxy. Mrs. Davis has recently finished a portrait commissioned of and for Mrs. F. E. Richmond of Providence, R. I.

Her cousin, Mrs. Marshall Clark, has completed some charming canvases, eastern commissions, and plans to come to Chicago in June to paint portraits for various of our well known fellow citizens. Among them are the children of Mrs. Alfred T. Carton of Lake Forest and Hitie Honoré Ripple, the daughter of the Warren Ripples and grandniece of the late Mrs. Potter Palmer.

Still other well known former fellow citizens who now make Gotham their chief headquarters are Mr. and Mrs. Allen Haines, who have one of the most delightful habitations to be found in this vast human hive. It is on East 94th street on the top of a fifteen story building in what they call here "a pent house." It has a terrace around it which is in the process of being converted into an enchanting place for such outdoor life as is possible in a city. It is to have wood and stone seats, gay awnings, ornamental vases, flowering shrubs, tea tables, everything that could minister to pleasant companionship.

The interior is very chic, being adorned and furnished with the taste for which Mrs. Haines was famous among her wide Chicago acquaintanceship. It is distinctly colonial, with the handsome wall papers of that time, the dignified and interesting furniture, the pretty chintzes and other features of that era. The hall is paneled with those quaint and effective old painted window shades which still shelter and adorn old houses in southern Germany and used to be much in evidence in this country. The whole place is gay, charming and friendly, and makes, with its wide outlook to the four directions that box the compass, a most attractive rendezvous for their friends. The Haineses are going abroad this summer instead of to Marion, Mass., which has been their summer home of late years.

Mrs. Martin to Return.

Another ex-Chicagoite who is now making New York her place of winter residence is Mrs. Horace Martin, who has a delightful book lined apartment on East 79th street, just off 5th avenue. She has many friends here and enjoys the varied opportunities that Gotham offers for theaters, opera, music and lectures. That she has not forgotten the friends she left behind in Chicago and Lake Forest is proven by the fact that she has taken the house of President Moore of Lake Forest university from the middle of next June until September 15.

This is a pleasant, sheltered residence, well ensconsed in the classic groves that adorn the campus of that institution. In doing this Mrs. Martin is not only influenced by the fact that many of her friends are in Lake Forest, but also because Ravinia's lovely open air opera offers her such music as is not to be found anywhere else on this globe of ours at this season of the year.

It is too soon to announce what that mainstay and chief inspiration of Ravinia opera, Louis Eckstein, has in store for his patrons this coming season, but he himself said some time ago that it was going to be even better than anything in this line he had yet achieved.

As They Do It Near Oyster Bay.

Apropos of this, the time is fast approaching when it behooves the dwellers along our north shore to start their anti-mosquito campaign. This ought to be the object of greatest concern to the dwellers in this delectable region for the four summer months. It is not as if it were an experiment or an inexact science, this riddance of the land of these infernal pests. It can be done there, because it has been met successfully elsewhere.

Along the north shore of Long Island, in the neighborhood about Oyster Bay, especially in and near the community known as Centre Island—named for a Frenchman called "Centre"—for several years now the inhabitants have been able to sit out on their porches and lawns and in their gardens without a bite or a buzz to disturb their serenity. At Centre Island, where live the Frank Remingtons and the Marshall Clarks, all erstwhile fellow citizens of ours, one man keeps the community rid of skeeters. He goes about with a can and sprayer on his back and knows intimately every possible hidden pool and puddle, such as appear after ever shower. At certain places there are stationed metal kegs of oil to replenish his supply. He searches out old cans, neglected gutters, hollow tree trunks, and either sprays them or drains them. Even a forgotten dish at the back doors he will tip over and chide the owner for having left it there. This is a continuous job during the summer months, but it pays to keep him on the village staff. The immunity from what was once the greatest drawback to life in that really lovely region is complete.

If the folk of Evanston, Wilmette, Kenilworth, Winnetka, Hubbard Woods, Glencoe, Ravinia, Highland Park, Highwood, Fort Sheridan, Lake Forest, Lake Bluff, the Great Lakes Naval Training station, and Waukegan will only get together and set about this task in early May, they will find that the enjoyment of their out-of-door life will be trebled, at the very least. Nor is it an expensive piece of business. A few thousand dollars covers the cost. It merely requires some one with initiative and persistence to carry on the good work.

A Healthful Measure.

Not only would it add to daily happiness and comfort but it would be a healthful measure. There's many a case of malarial fever from the bite of certain kinds of mosquitoes. If to this anti-mosquito fight a campaign against flies be also waged, a still simpler matter, even more health and comfort would be insured. It is not too soon to form your legions, O dwellers in and around Chicago! We will not have the distinction of being the first to do so successfully, but at least we shall not lag at the end of the procession of civilized and sane mortals who use their brains to insure the comfort and welfare of themselves and their neighbors during the year's loviest three months.

Perhaps when we have exterminated the mosquito and the fly we shall begin to get some real use and joy out of our gardens. It is quite a different thing to sit and look at these delectable places through screens from what it is to lounge in a comfortable garden chair under a shady tree, with the fragrance of roses, mignonette, heliotrope, and their ilk immediately saluting your nostrils from the ground beside you. Of course, I know my captious friends, like Mrs. Tiffany Blake, Mrs. Edward Hasler, and others, will tell me that no such flowers grow under the shade of any tree. But the idea that I wish to impart is of the extreme desirability of being able to sit out in a garden and there pursue your regular avocations without having the dazzling web of screened porches and windows between you and Nature, with a large N.

Fashionable Florida Clubs Are Thronged

MIAMI, Fla.—[Special Correspondence.]—Practically all of the great winter resort hotels on either Florida coast will have ended their seasons and closed by the end of next week. The private winter homes, of which there are a multitude in occupancy this winter, are being kept open later, a great many of them at Palm Beach.

Miami, Coconut Grove and lesser resorts are very gay with the appearance of the younger members of the families from their northern schools and colleges for their Easter vacation.

In years gone by the closing of the principal hotels marked the end of all social activities, and the white beaches of south Florida were left to the "Crackers" to do with as they pleased until another season came. This year the permanent clubs which have been developed quite largely through the growth of the permanent winter colonies are all remaining open until Easter.

Clubs Are Open.

At Palm Beach the fashionable Everglades club and the ultrafashionable Bath and Tennis club, and at Miami the famed Cocolobo Cay club and others are still open and thronged with visitors every afternoon and evening. But many of the famous winter places are already closed and there is a distinct letting down in social activities and the fashionable out of door sports.

At Miami Beach the Fiamingo, the Nautilus, King Cole and Roney Plaza have concluded the season. The Royal Palm of Miami will have terminated its 1927 season on Friday of this week. The Poinciana, the Alba and Whitehall at Palm Beach are through and the famous Breakers will probably close next week.

Further up the coast and at Clearwater and St. Petersburg the seasons have concluded, although at Daytona and St. Augustine there usually are many who dislike northern Aprils and who remain there for that month.

Yacht Parties.

There still remain, cruising about the West Indian seas, numerous parties. Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus H. K. Curtis of Philadelphia put in at Miami harbor this week with their palatial yacht, Lydonia, and they are to remain aboard a few days before starting northward. They have as guests Mr. and Mrs. John Johnston of Milwaukee, and the party has been cruising in Florida waters for several weeks, dropping in at the Mountain Lake club a few days ago to visit with the Edward Boks [Mrs. Bok is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Curtis], and to inspect their famous bird sanctuary near Winter Haven, from which the migration of certain species of birds to the north has its start. The Curtis party is to stop at Palm Beach and probably at St. Augustine for the Ponce de Leon festivities April 7.

Mr. and Mrs. Kermit Roosevelt, with Harold S. Vanderbilt, Mrs. Oliver Iselin, and a small party, arrived at Miami this week from a journey to Nassau and Havana. Before leaving for Palm Beach for a few days' visit they made arrangements to return for a week of fishing along the Florida keys and will make their headquarters at Miami and the Cocolobo Cay club.

Chicagoans Remain.

Many of the Chicago colony remain at Palm Beach, the Lester Armours, the Joseph M. Cudahys, the Franklin P. Smiths, the Clyde G. Stevenses, the William Wallers Jr., are among those who do not like late March and April in and about Chicago.

At the Everglades club the other evening Mrs. Joseph M. Cudahy had a small gathering at dinner which included Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey McCormick of Coconut Grove and Chicago. Mr. and Mrs. McCormick were at the club for a day and night awaiting the arrival of their young son, who came south from school with Master Woolworth Donahue in a private car to spend the Easter vacation.

At the Everglades a party of Wisconsin people also gathered for a dinner and reunion. Mrs. Henry Barkhausen of Green Bay was hostess, and of the guests there were Mrs. J. C. Noyes and Miss Helen Noyes of Oshkosh, Mr. and Mrs. Aytch P. Woodson of Wausau, and Miss Jessie A. Smith of Lake Worth.

* *

Swimming Event Held.

The William Wallers expect to keep their home in Golf View road open for another fortnight, and in the meantime are doing much entertaining both at the Villa and the Bath and Tennis club.

At the annual swimming competition this week Miss Kate Barkhausen of Green Bay took quite all the major honors.

Other youngsters from about Chicago who won distinction in the contests were Jean and Alice Wyeth, George Nichols, Betty Armour, Lester Armour, Ted Waller, and Bob Wheeler.

The swimming commencement exercises marked the close of the winter swimming instructions, during which most of the children of the permanent colony have been training with deadly earnestness to become proficient in water demonstrations.

The boxing contests of the juniors last week were so serious in effort that young Patton Mitchell, son of the Walter Gunby Mitchells, remained in bed for nearly a week as a result of injuries. While the Palm Beach brand of physical culture is applied to children largely, it is, apparently, not child's play.

Alliance Française Branch.

Mrs. Townley Brown and Mrs. Milan Hulburt of Chicago have established a branch of the Alliance Française at Palm Beach, which was launched a fortnight ago and it is expected will be in normal operation next season, although one or two meetings are to be held before the end of this season. Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Pullman of Lake Forest, and L. J. Dahle, Mr. and Mrs. F. J. A. Jenkin, and Mrs. Benjamin McFadden of Chicago are recent arrivals at Palm Beach.

Mr. and Mrs. William F. Bode, who have been at Palm Beach the entire winter, left this week for their home in Chicago.

Miss Edith Cummings of Chicago has returned to Palm Beach and is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Shaffer of the Bath and Tennis club.

Mrs. Henry Riggs Rathbone of Chicago is a late season guest at Palm Beach. She attended the gathering this week of the Animal Rescue league, which has enlisted the interest of the leading society people of the resort this winter, and read a group of her poems and also some compositions. Mrs. Rathbone usually visits at Palm Beach in April.

NEW YORK SOCIETY

Hegira to Europe Is Well Under Way

By Dolly Madison.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Mid-Lent finds the hegira to Europe in full swing; so full, indeed, that there is not the slightest doubt that all records for social absence abroad will be broken this year.

Of course, it is merely a case of fair return. More of the English and continental notables were visitors this winter than ever before, both town and the southern resorts being jammed with title-bearing foreigners and east bound vessels are carrying almost as many Londoners home as American bound for long visits. That grande dame, Mrs. Ogden Goelet, is once more in town, being at present at the Plaza, where she will remain a short while before departing for England, where her own position in English society is on a par with that of her daughter, the Duchess of Roxeburghe.

The countess of Granard, erstwhile Beatrice Mills, who has always taken a large part in the social doings of the British capital, is preparing for the debut of her elder daughter, Lady Moira Mary Forbes, who is now 17. The coming out of the granddaughter of Ogden Mills will be a great event, and even now the sub-debutante Moira Mary is being fêted regally.

Another debutante who may be termed "American" is Lady Louise Montagu, youngest daughter of the Duchess of Manchester, the former Helen Zimmerman of Cincinnati. Lady Louise makes her bow this season, and after the rest of the early London crush she will visit the native land of her mother, to be the guest of friends of the family in Newport.

Looking Forward to the Races.

Having enjoyed, more or less, a most changeable period of weather, society in town is preparing for the many events of the month and hoping that April will indeed live up to its reputation for being a charming month.

The racing season here cannot compare with the spring racing in England, and the latter will undoubtedly be patronized by as many of our notables as will remain at home.

Nevertheless, the United Hunts spring meeting on the 21st and 23d at Belmont Park terminal will be an event of much social importance. The time honored luncheon in the quaint Turf and Field club is always an attraction, and the races themselves appeal much more to society than to the ordinary followers of racing. The fall meeting of the United Hunts in November last was one of the most successful social events of the season.

Charity Affairs a Success.

The Benefit performance of "Boris Godunoff" at the Metropolitan on Friday in aid of the six American colleges in the near east was a social and financial success. As a matinée it naturally attracted the great mass of matrons who make a luncheon and its after diversion a matter of formality.

Among the notables present were Mrs. Stephen Baker, Mrs. Philip Marshall Brown, Mrs. William Adams Brown, Mrs. Edwin M. Bulkley, Mrs. Henry Sloane Coffin, Mrs. Cleveland E. Dodge, Mrs. J. Malcolm Forbes, Mrs. Henry C. Holt, Mrs. Caspar Whitney, Mrs. Vanderbilt Webb, Mrs. Frank A. Vanderlip, Mrs. Charles Evans Hughes, Mrs. Arthur Curtiss James, Mrs. William Fellowes Morgan, Mrs. Dwight W. Morrow, George Foster Peabody, and Mrs. William Sloane.

The proceeds distributed by vote of the executive committee will go to the American university at Beirut; Robert college; the Constantinople Woman's college; the International college of Smyrna; the Sofia-American schools, and Athens college, Athens, Greece.

Butterfly and Rainbow Balls.

Annual charity affairs take place all year round, with a fine disregard of the seasons. This months brings two of the most notable in the Rainbow ball, to be given on the 22nd at the Ritz, and the Butterfly ball, which precedes it by three days at the same hostelry.

The Butterfly ball, for the benefit of the Inwood House of Rest, has a most formidable list of patronesses, headed by Mrs. Maitland Dwight. Associated with her are Mrs. Alfonso P. Villa, Mrs. James Lenox Banks, Mrs. J. Todhunter Thompson, Mrs. Gustavus B. Kirby, Mrs. Dunlevy Milbank, Mrs. Bernon S. Prentice, Mrs. Herbert L. Satterlee, Mrs. Andrew C. Zabriskie, Mrs. Ernest Fahnstock, Mrs. Samuel Sloan, Mrs. William Iselin, Mrs. Amos Schermerhorn, Mrs. Ernest Iselin, and Mrs. Charles S. Darlington.

The debutante committee, headed by Cornelia Gurnee, will conduct the annual robbery by means of programs and favors. Assisting Cornelia will be May Swords, Margaret Lee Haggin, Kathleen Howell, May Shepherd, Grace Tingue, Adele Kelley, Mary McKesson, Janet Williams and Carol Rhodes.

The Rainbow ball will be given in aid of the Association for the Aid of Crippled Children, and will boast of another of the cabarets that do so much to make ordinary charitable affairs amusing.

Mrs. J. Culbert Palmer Jr. is chairman of the committee in charge. Her assistants include May Swords, Mrs. Elliot Holt, Rosamond Auchincloss and William De Rham. The patronesses number among them Mrs. Edgar S. Auchincloss Jr., Mrs. Robert Ogden DuBois, Mrs. Casimir De Rham Jr., Mrs. Bayard Cushing Hoppin, Mrs. Jarvis Cromwell, Mrs. Harris Fahnestock Jr., Mrs. Benson Bennett Sloan, Mrs. Oliver H. B. LaFarge, Mrs. Schuyler Schieffelin and Mrs. Jerome Napoleon Bonaparte.

INDIANAPOLIS is the Hotel Lincoln

THE homelike, friendly atmosphere of this perfectly appointed hotel appeals so strongly to Chicago people that they prefer it to all other hotels when in Indianapolis. With so many Chicago people constantly here, it seems like part of that city transplanted to another town.

Location The Lincoln stands closer than any other Indianapolis hotel to the grouped offices, theatres, stores and railroad depots. It is two blocks from the Union Station, and one block from the Traction Depot.

RATES

The "Mind-Reading" Attendants At Chicago's Forty-Six Story Morrison Hotel

TABLES FOR ROOM SERVICE READY DAY AND NIGHT AT THE MORRISON HOTEL

The New Morrison, when completed, will be the world's largest and tallest hotel, 46 stories high, with 3,400 rooms.

"THESE mind-readers always know what you want before you ask"—a remark made by a Morrison guest from Oregon two weeks ago—is another example of a "true word spoken in jest."

Foreseeing Your Needs

It is simpler than it looks. Morrison employes are hand-picked men of long experience, who make it their business to foresee what different guests will probably require, and to furnish it at a moment's notice.

Quick Room-Service

A casual example is the accurately figured ratio of room-service tables to a specific number of guests. By preparing a slight margin in excess of the estimated need, room-service is assured whenever required without the least delay.

1,944 Rooms With Bath, $2.50 Up

Every room in this 46-story hotel—the tallest in the world—is outside, with bath, running ice water, Servidor and bed-head reading lamp. Every floor has its own housekeeper, and all guests have the privilege of garage service. Yet travelers can rent rooms for $2.50 to $5 that would cost $5 to $8 in any other leading hotel; the store subleases pay all the ground rent, and the saving is passed on to the guests.

INDUSTRIAL ENGINEER.

I need exceptionally high grade men whom I will train to cut manufacturing costs under my methods. To qualify you must have had several years of intensive industrial experience, backed by conclusive results which will bear strict investigation. When thoroughly trained you must be able to handle a small or large factory. Can you sell cost reduction to the operators as well as the management? I will only consider written applications stating names of all employers and what you have accomplished, also complete personal history, all of which will be entirely confidential. Write GEORGE E. MAY, 5921 N. Champlain, Chicago, Ill.

A MAN IS WANTED

A man is wanted for the Real Estate Department of a Chicago bank—one of the largest, but one which enjoys an exceptional reputation for conservatism.

The man is wanted as an assistant to the present manager, to help him to make appraisals on homes and small apartment buildings.

This man must necessarily know what it costs to build houses and small apartments; he must know how to appraise homes and small apartments built before the war and just after—he must have a good eye for values and proportions. He must not be a salesman, but he must have confidence in himself. He must know how to work with the public, must know how to get along with the hook and yet know how to refuse business when it is not to the interest of the bank and to his associates.

This job is not open to a job hunter. This job is open to a man now successfully employed, but who has some good reason for desiring a change. In your letter to me tell me what initial salary you expect, if he must have it, and tell me what you have been doing, and why you think you are the right man for the job. Tell me what you have been doing, and why you think you are the right qualifications, he will want to see you. If you did opportunity to advance because the Real Estate Department of the bank in question is not so large as to foreclose the opportunity to a better position.

The starting salary will be moderate, probably up to $3,000. We might start it at $4,000, but it depends entirely on the kind of a man we select.

A MAN IS WANTED

A man is wanted for the Real Estate Department of a Chicago bank—one of the largest, but one which enjoys an exceptional reputation for conservatism.

The man is wanted as an assistant to the present manager, to help him to make appraisals on homes and small apartment buildings.

This man must necessarily know what it costs to build houses and small apartments; he must know how to appraise homes and small apartments built before the war and just after—he must have a good eye for values and proportions. He must not be a salesman, but he must have confidence in himself. He must know how to work with the public, must know how to get along with the hook and yet know how to refuse business when it is not to the interest of the bank and to his associates.

This job is not open to a job hunter. This job is open to a man now successfully employed, but who has some good reason for desiring a change. In your letter to me tell me what initial salary you expect, if he must have it, and tell me what you have been doing, and why you think you are the right qualifications, he will want to see you. If you did opportunity to advance because the Real Estate Department of the bank in question is not so large as to foreclose the opportunity to a better position.

The starting salary will be moderate, probably up to $3,000. We might start it at $4,000, but it depends entirely on the kind of a man we select.

WHY

have we sold 22 of the 26 buildings that we just completed in the block bounded by Rice, Kilbourn, Iowa, and Kostner-av.? The reason is evident. It is because the majority of home seekers who inspected these bldgs. during construction were amazed at the superior method and quality of construction used in these bungalows. When you have seen the 12 in. solid concrete walls, re-enforced with steel, steel reinforced lally columns, Indiana Bedford stone sills and water tables, Rytex pressed brick, finest grade of fire resisting roof, all practically fireproof, beautifully decorated, artistically designed and guaranteed for a long period of years—when you have satisfied yourself as to the excellency of construction you will be pleased to learn that the prices of these buildings range from $6,950 to $7,950 for 5 rooms up to $8,250 for 7 rooms. And the terms have been set to meet the budget of every earnest home seeker. We have even sold houses to deserving applicants on the amazing terms of nothing down and the balance payable less per month than they have been accustomed to pay as rent. Do not permit yourself to let this opportunity pass. There are only 3 bldgs. left to be sold out of a total of 25 just completed. Inspect these 3 and you will know why it is that

We believe in value for immediate delivery, a quick turnover, and in passing on to the public the savings in reduced overhead expense. That is why there is no "dead stock" here. It is evidence that every car offered is a "sound value," in many instances from $100 to $300 below prevailing prices.

Our customers come to us from all sections of Chicago; not a few have traveled 20 to 75 miles to buy a car here. Value is not difficult to find, once the way is pointed out.

Here's An Advertisement Written for Us By a Satisfied User of Tribune Want Ads!

THE MANAGER,
Chicago Tribune Want Ad Department

As a Chicago Business Broker, I offer the following digest of my advertising experience with The Chicago Tribune:

Specializing as I do in the most difficult field of salesmanship, it would be impossible to give my clients QUICK SERVICE and COMPLETE SATISFACTION unless I had the RELIABLE, CHEAP and INSTANT CONTACT with prospective purchasers afforded by the Business Chance Column of The Chicago Tribune.

From the many splendid results I have obtained through your paper, over a period of years, it is difficult to know just which example to quote, but the following specific instance I have selected for two reasons:

1—Being the sale of the most difficult kind of store to sell, on account of the great number constantly advertised in all daily papers, i. e., a Delicatessen Store.

2—Being the most recent ad on that type of store, and therefore of more popular interest.

The last ad on a Delicatessen Store which I placed with The Chicago Tribune appeared on October 26th, 27th, 28th, 1926, and read as follows:

DELICATESSEN—N., STM. HEAT, 3 RMS. and bath; old est. busy spot; terms, free trial and guar. bus. Lake View 6666.

The total cost to me being $5.85 for one ad of three lines appearing three times.

From the date the ad first appeared to the 27th day of November I sold four Delicatessen Stores with a total sales value of $16,300.00. The number of replies I received in response to the ad, besides being more than I could immediately attend to, were the class I ALWAYS WANT and THE TRIBUNE INVARIABLY SECURES, the Prosperous, Intelligent, American type of Business Seeker.

The consistent and gratifying results that I have obtained through the past with The Chicago Tribune advertising has enabled me, by placing 95% of my advertising during the past year with The Chicago Tribune exclusively, to make the year 1926 my most successful year with the lowest advertising cost of any year of my business.

The necessary records, affidavits, and other material to enable you to check my advertising records are at your disposal on request.

Yours for an even better 1927.

Old Ironsides—THE BATTLE OF THE CONSTITUTION AND THE GUERRIERE, on August 19, 1812, was one of the glorious victories of America's famous frigate. By such triumphs as the defeat and capture of the Guerriere in the war of 1812 the tradition of British naval supremacy was shattered and American independence established upon the seas. The Constitution, flying a flag made by Betsy Ross, is at the right here, the Guerriere at the left. The reproduction is from an old print now in possession of the Chicago Historical Society. Launched at Boston in 1797, the Constitution entered upon an illustrious career. In 1804 it bombarded the port of Tripoli and assisted in the taming of the Corsair states. Between 1812 and 1815 it captured or sank nineteen other ships besides the Guerriere. In all it fought forty battles and never knew defeat. Now it lies rotting in Boston navy yard, but that is not to be its end. Pennies and dimes and dollars are being gathered from the Atlantic to the Pacific to restore it to its original splendor, a shrine to a shining epoch in naval history.

Sally laughs at clothes-lines

"Bee, what a duck of a hat! Where are you going, all dressed up at eleven o'clock of a Monday morning?"

"Shopping, the club for lunch, and a movie this afternoon. Come along, Sally? Or are you tied to a clothesline?"

"Bee Westbrooke, you slur my executive ability. I haven't a dirty clo' in the house!"

"You haven't gone and hired yourself a laundress over the week-end, have you?"

"No, Madam, I haven't. But I bought my regular supply of Ivory Soap on Saturday, and Ivory and I have just put the last touches on the Verity laundry. Half a sec' while I change."

What the Life Extension Institute says about the care of your skin

THE Life Extension Institute in its bulletin on "Care of the Skin and Scalp" says: "There is no such thing as a skin 'food.' Copious rubbing-in of fatty substances tends to overload the fat glands. It does not nourish the skin itself. Such fat as may be absorbed is taken up in the general circulation and distributed throughout the body, and does not nourish the skin locally.

"The first requisite in the local care of the skin is cleanliness. As an ordinary hygienic measure, the face should be washed once a day with water and a good quality of soap. . . . Do not be afraid of soap and water. But be very much afraid of skin 'foods' and 'marvelous' internal and external cures for skin troubles."

Expert advice—yes, and see how simple and sensible it is. "Pure soap and warm water." Ivory Soap has been saying just this for years. Millions of women have reaped the benefits. Their complexions are the finest tribute a soap could have.

Try Ivory yourself. It is pure, free from medication or adulterants. Its natural creamy color and fresh, delicate fragrance are additional proofs of its fineness.

Ivory will cleanse your skin effectively, but gently and safely, every day in the year.

IVORY SOAP

...kind to everything it touches

99 44/100% Pure · It Floats

Guest IVORY—the dainty new form of IVORY—5 cents made especially for face and hands

Ivory Flakes meets this important safety test:

Before you trust your costly fine fabrics to any soap in any form, a doubt naturally comes up in your mind:

"Is this soap really safe?"

Ask yourself: "Would I be willing to use this soap on my face?"

A soap which is too strong for your face is naturally too strong for your delicate and costly garments.

Ivory Flakes is simply Ivory Soap in flake form. Of course it fully meets this important safety test. For Ivory Soap, pure, mild, gentle, white—has protected the faces and hands of millions of women since 1879.

Ivory Flakes offers you a real margin of safety for cleansing the very finest garments you own. Many women wash all their clothes and dishes with Ivory or Ivory Flakes, thus saving their hands and preventing redness and roughness

Intimate Views of Pygmyland

A PYGMY WARRIOR IN ARMOR—This is one of the rare photos brought back by Prof. Matthew W. Stirling, who recently returned from an expedition into a portion of Dutch New Guinea never before visited by white men. The armor is made of rattan to protect the fighter from hostile arrows.

THE PRINCIPAL TOOL of the Pygmies is a stone ax, with which they are remarkably handy. Here's a native demonstrating his wood chopping ability. The man with the saber is a member of the expedition.

A MAGICIAN views the American explorers with disfavor because their rifles, typewriters, and other modern devices have him stumped.

BROOKLYN BRIDGE OF PYGMYLAND—This rattan span across the Lake Plain river shows the ingenuity of the little natives, who average only about 3 feet 6 inches in height.

UNIQUE COLOR SCHEME—The explorers found that red hair was not uncommon among the Pygmies. The pair pictured above were adorned with vivid scarlet hair.

MAROONED—The expedition was handicapped at times by high water, being held up in one village for three weeks. Work went on as usual, however, for Mr. Hedberg and Prof. Stirling.

THE FIRST FRIEND OF THE EXPLORERS—This shy little Pygmy girl, the daughter of the chief of the village of Tombay, was the first native to greet Prof. Stirling.

MILADY'S DELIGHT—The bird of paradise, whose gorgeous plumage still adorns women's hats, despite a law against its importation into the United States, is a native of Dutch New Guinea. The explorers found the birds made fine food when they were marooned and hungry. Taste like pheasant, they say.

SHAVING'S A PAINFUL OPERATION—Native barbers pluck out each hair between the thumb nail and the edge of a sharp stone. The barber in the picture apparently knows what a job it is, as you will note that he sports a beard.

THE EXPLORERS BACK HOME—Prof. Stirling, head of the expedition, and Stanley A. Hedberg of Chicago, historian, after their return from Pygmyland.

H A V E A CAMEL

Why Camel leads the world

GOODNESS has made Camels the leader of the world that they are today. Goodness means the quality of the tobaccos from which they are made, the skill with which the tobaccos are blended to bring out the fragrance, to produce the mildness, to give that subtle quality and taste that smokers find only in Camel.

Goodness means such a standard of uniformity that the billionth or the trillionth Camel is sure to be just as good as the first. It means the honesty, the truthfulness, the sincerity of purpose to make and keep Camel the leader—the cigarette most preferred by the greatest number.

The Right Style in the Right Texture

The texture of Quaker Craft-Lace Curtains and Nets is as important to you as their style.

Being made of fine long-staple yarns in a tied (or knotted) construction they give your rooms the correct diffusion of light, not only when new but until actually worn out. (See Electrical Testing Laboratories report in "Correct Curtains" a copy of which will be sent to you on receipt of 10c.)

Two Distinguished Princesses

declare the value of a clear fresh skin

NO WOMAN knows the value of beauty—and the wise ways of keeping it unblemished—better than the true Parisienne. So when two distinguished princesses of high circles in Parisian society choose to speak of the value of a clear, fresh skin, women everywhere listen with eager interest.

The beautiful Duchesse de Gramont, daughter of that ancient house, the Princes Ruspoli of Italy, holds that the possession of a lovely skin and good color is of first importance. But, she says, "It is not to be taken for granted—rather to be protected and preserved by daily care. Pond's Two Creams afford an exquisite means of giving precisely the care a woman's skin requires today."

THE DUCHESSE DE GRAMONT, Princesse Ruspoli, belongs to one of the oldest and most important families of Italy. Her marriage to the eleventh Duc de Gramont united her house with a French family of equal distinction and historic prestige. Strikingly beautiful, she enjoys great popularity in French society

THE PRINCESSE EUGÈNE MURAT, whose husband is a direct descendant of that Prince Murat who married Caroline Bonaparte, sister of Napoleon I. Her great estate near Versailles, which the exclusive ones of French society delight to visit, is one of the most beautiful in France

The Princesse Eugène Murat, great-granddaughter of Napoleon's great soldier, Maréchal Ney, voices with simple directness the high regard in which she holds a good complexion. She says, "The clear fresh skin of youth is a treasure to be guarded. Protect it from the pilfery of years and social activities by daily use of Pond's Two Creams."

THESE TWO CREAMS meet the exacting demands of women of beauty and prestige

These Two Creams, should be used daily as follows:

Apply Pond's Cold Cream always at night and often during the day. It should be left on a few minutes so that its fine oils may lift the dust and powder from every pore. Wipe off and repeat. Finish with a dash of cold water. A little cream left on overnight restores suppleness to a dry skin.

Follow every daytime cleansing with Pond's Vanishing Cream. Smoothed lightly over your skin it imparts a delicate finish, takes your powder smoothly and holds it for hours on end. But best of all it protects even the most sensitive skin from chapping and wind burn. Use these Two Creams daily if you would keep your complexion smooth and unblemished.

CLEAN teeth

A glorious cleanness—the great and lasting benefit Colgate's brings

WHAT is the utmost any dentifrice can do? "Clean the teeth thoroughly," say dentists the country over.

Colgate's formula is designed to clean. That's why it cleans so beautifully, so safely!

Why Colgate's cleans better

1. It expands into a sparkling foam. In this remarkable foam is calcium carbonate—a finely ground powder that safely scrubs off all harmful foreign matter, polishing each tooth to dazzling cleanness.
2. Then, in a detergent-washing wave, this foam sweeps through the entire mouth, washing away all impurities and leaving it cleansed. Thus, the very causes of tooth decay are removed.

If you think you have any mouth trouble that calls for medicine, see your dentist and let him do what patent-medicine tooth pastes won't do.

Rely on him—not on a dentifrice—to make your mouth healthy, and your teeth sound. Rely on Colgate's to keep them healthy and clean.

JANE WINTON has been doing some skillful vamping lately that has put her high in favor with the fans and Warner Brothers. She is pretty, and she knows how to be most smooth, suave and intriguing.

LOWELL SHERMAN and DOROTHY MACKAILL are to be seen together in "Convoy," a First National picture dealing with the navy's part in the world war. Mr. Sherman is seen here as a spy who says it with flowers.

GEORGE SIDNEY and CHARLIE MURRAY are here discovered disguised as peasant maidens. "Big Bertha" is the name of the film which thus reveals their charms, and it will do no hurt to whisper that while in this fetching raiment they almost become members of the Russian Battalion of Death. How? The answer is—HOW!

MOLLIE O'DAY, a practically new discovery, has finished work in "The Patent Leather Kid," which stars Richard Barthelmess. Miss O'Day has been called a typical Irish beauty.

COUNT LATTANZIO FIRMIAN, Italian painter, at work on a sketch of a beautiful Chinese girl in one of California's famous gardens

"Foolishly . . I thought it never could help me"

Everywhere tired, nervous, despondent people have found thrilling health again . . . easily, naturally

"MY PAINTING makes it necessary for me to do a great deal of travelling. I may have a commission for a portrait in New York and then one in California.

"This constant travelling, in connection with the continued strain entailed by my work itself, resulted, a short time ago, in my feeling always tired, run down, nervous.

"While in this plight I was advised by some friends to try eating Fleischmann's Yeast. I had long known of yeast, of course, but somehow had not thought it would do me any good. Nevertheless, I decided to try it, and I started at once to eat it regularly every day.

"The result, I am happy to state, passed all my expectations. My tired feeling disappeared, my nerves grew strong, and today I begin each day's work with a zest that I had not known for many years."

Lattanzio di Firmian, New York City

HOW simple and easy it proved to be!—for him, as for the thousands more who have found perfect health through this amazing fresh food.

Fleischmann's Yeast does two things. It keeps the system internally clean. And it helps to keep it healthily active.

A corrective food—that is what yeast is. A living plant. Unlike medicines, which stimulate the system to temporary, abnormal activity, yeast is the easy, natural way to banish constipation. It purifies the digestive tract, preventing the absorption of dangerous poisons by the body. It strengthens sluggish intestinal muscles, aiding the processes of elimination.

Start today: make Fleischmann's Yeast a part of your regular diet. Your digestion will become normal, your sleeplessness will disappear, your skin will resume its rightful freshness—soon you will look and feel your old self again!

All grocers have Fleischmann's Yeast. Buy two or three days' supply at a time and keep in a cool dry place. Write for a free copy of the latest booklet on Yeast for Health. Health Research Dept. N-784, The Fleischmann Company, 701 Washington Street, New York City.

(Left) MISS LEONA ERRICO of St. Louis sends us this snap-shot, taken on her recent Round-the-World Cruise. Miss Errico writes that for several years she suffered from stomach trouble. "I was unable to eat any highly seasoned foods," she says, "without being troubled by indigestion. This condition lasted until a friend suggested the use of Fleischmann's Yeast. I began eating two or three cakes every day. Within a very short time all traces of indigestion disappeared, and I can truthfully say that this simple remedy has toned up my entire system. I have now been eating Yeast for many months and I have recommended it highly to many of my friends."

Leona Errico, St. Louis, Mo.

"I BECAME a regular hermit: I was so ashamed of the pimples on my face that I gave up dancing and sports. I used practically every known article to try to cure myself but instead of getting better my face got worse. One day I happened to glance at an advertisement of Fleischmann's Yeast. I sent for a booklet and read it through and through. Four months have passed now and my face is entirely free of boils and pimples. But I am still taking Yeast, and always will. I eat it plain, one cake before every meal. It has the same effect as candy on a child—I always want it."

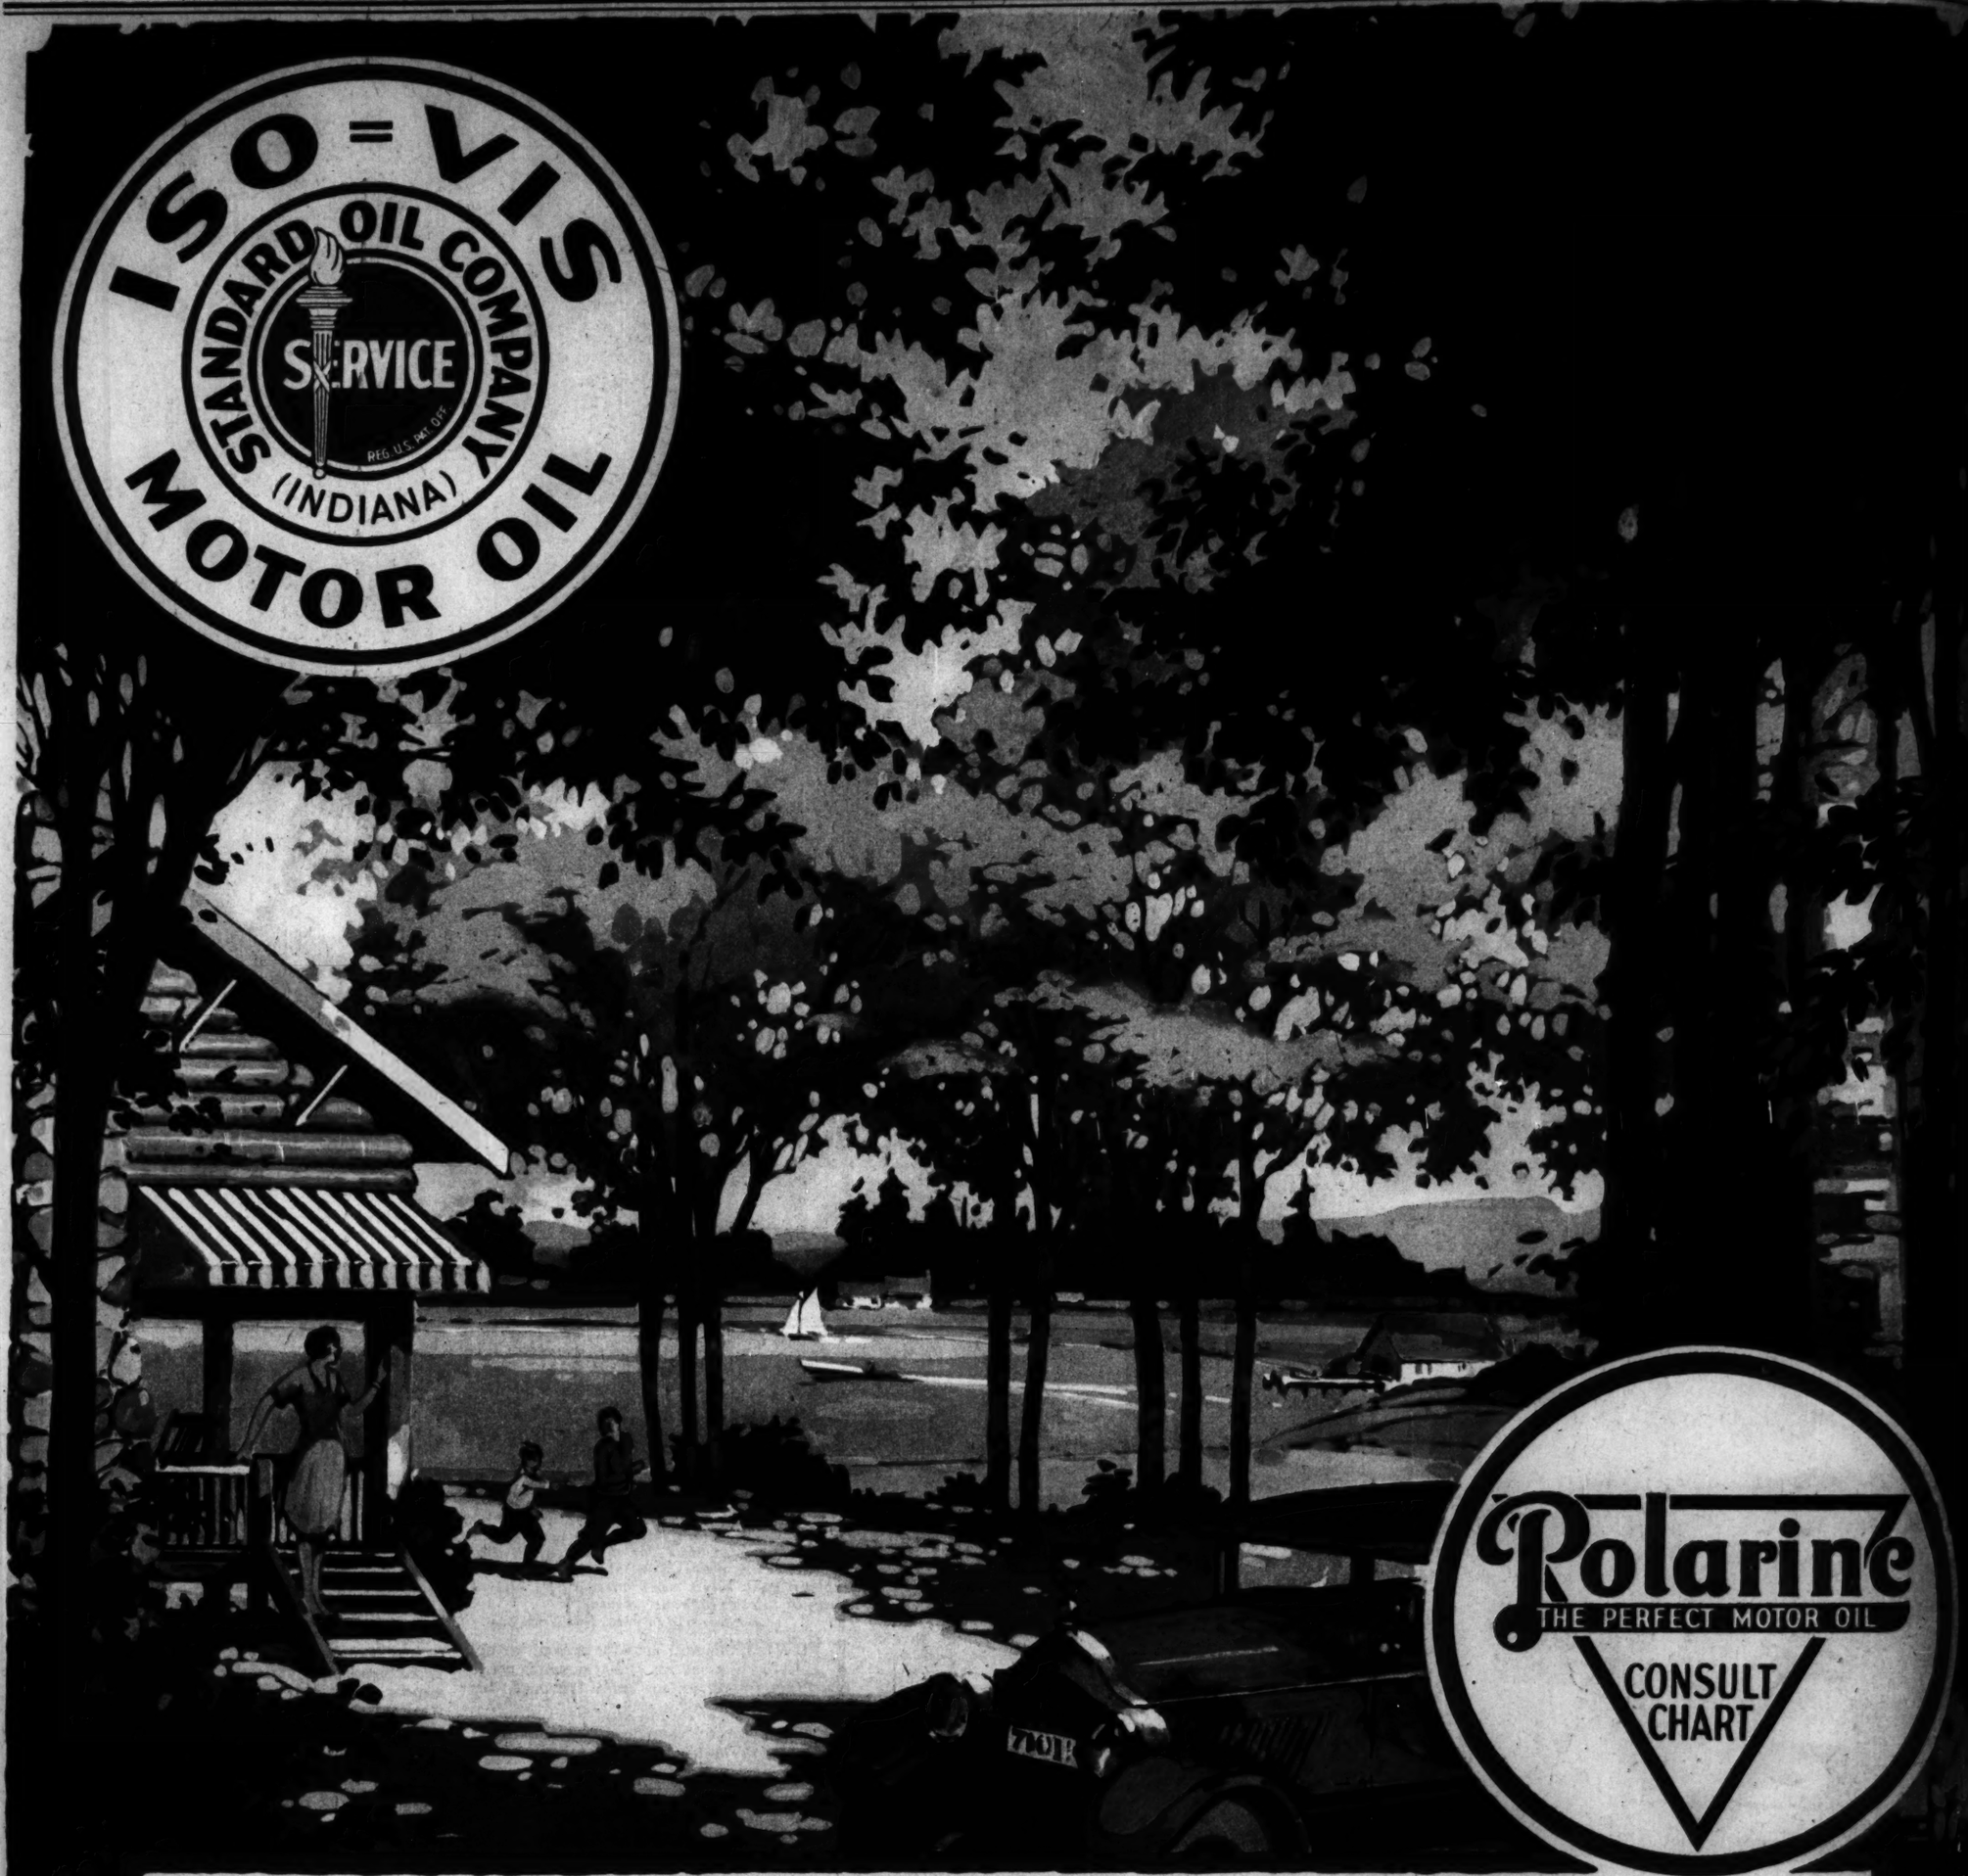
David H. Safer, Jacksonville, Fla.

Do this—to regain the joy of radiant health . . .

Eat three cakes of Fleischmann's Yeast regularly every day, one cake before each meal: just plain in small pieces, or on crackers, in fruit juice, milk or water. For constipation physicians say to dissolve one cake in hot water (not scalding) before meals and at bedtime. (Be sure that a regular time for evacuation is made habitual.) Dangerous cathartics will gradually become unnecessary.

(Right) "I WAS actually afraid I should have to stay out of high school, I felt so wretched. After trying all kinds of remedies I almost despaired of ever finding anything that would rid me of my constipation. I was practically a nervous wreck . . . And then, on the advice of my cousin, I started eating Fleischmann's Yeast. Today I feel fine. My friends all notice the remarkable change in me. I am strong and full of energy—no longer always tired and nervous. I feel like a different person. Fleischmann's Yeast has helped me back to splendid health. I gladly recommend it to others who may be suffering as I did."

Doris White, San Jose, Calif.



ISO=VIS

Constant Viscosity—Complete Lubrication

WHETHER it is the first or the thousandth mile, this new and better motor oil protects your engine from the ravages of friction. The secret of a smooth-running motor is complete lubrication. An oil that thins out can not lubricate efficiently. Ordinary oils thin out because of dilution in the crankcase. Iso-Vis solves dilution problems. It maintains its viscosity until it is drained off. It is the new and better motor oil developed by the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) to meet the newest theory of scientific lubrication. It costs a little more (30c) per quart, but less per mile—you will like it!

If you feel that you are able to control the dilution factor in your car yourself, and yet want maximum lubrication at a minimum expense, use Polarine. Manufactured in six grades—a grade made expressly for your car that will lubricate thoroughly the remotest frictional surfaces of your motor—25c per quart.

Get Iso-Vis or Polarine at any Standard Oil Service Station, or at any filling station or garage displaying the emblems shown above.

THE BUDDIES THEY LEFT BEHIND—Ten years ago, on April 6, 1917, America entered the great war. In September the American Legion will hold its ninth annual convention in Paris, and most of the 30,000 legionnaires expected to make the trip will visit the American cemeteries in the war zone. Above is a view of the Aisne Marne cemetery, where the Americans who fell at Belleau Wood are buried, as it looks today. At the left is a picture of the old weedy burial ground at Belleau Wood, taken shortly after the armistice.

Everyone admires the laughing MOUTH of YOUTH

Where the mouth glands are that slow up even in childhood

The numbers show where the tiny mouth glands are located, three on each side of your mouth. From our earliest years, soft foods are slowing them for lack of exercise in hard chewing. Pebeco's special ingredient daily renews the youthful action of the mouth glands.

TEETH are gleaming white, gums healthy when the six tiny mouth glands are active. They should be producing the natural fluids that neutralize food acids.

But few of us have kept the Mouth of Youth.

The soft foods we eat require so little chewing that the mouth glands are not exercised enough and decay begins.

That is why Pebeco was perfected as the formula which invigorates the mouth glands as well as polishes the teeth beautifully.

For Pebeco's main ingredient is an important, slightly salty substance that restores the youthful vigor of the mouth glands as you brush your teeth. You can taste its keen, sharp tang as it does this. You can feel its fine soft crystals instantly dissolve in healthful fluids.

Made by Pebeco, Inc., a division of Lehn & Fink Products Company. Sole distributors, Lehn & Fink, Inc., Bloomfield, N. J.

DOROTHY KNAPP'S Famous Dancing Feet

"Even Cleopatra had indigestion. And a lovely foot may acquire a corn." So writes Dorothy Knapp . . . beautiful star of Earl Carroll's "Vanities." . . . "But the crime isn't in getting a corn . . . it's in keeping it, with Blue-jay at the nearest corner drug store."

Always the safest and gentlest way to end a corn, Blue-jay for 1927 offers new refinements.

A creamy-white pad instead of a blue one. A more flexible disc for the awkwardly placed corn . . . And a sprightly new package . . . One plaster usually ends the corn. But even the rugged "old-timer" seldom needs more than two . . . The same Blue-jay costs no more . . . At all drug stores.

LADY MENDL · · MRS. KELLOGG FAIRBANK · · MRS. FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT

EACH CREATES A BEDROOM

THREE American women whose names proclaim their high social standing and whose beautiful homes are eloquent evidence of their good taste, have created the three charming bedrooms shown here.

The distinction of these rooms does not result from the expenditure of great sums of money, but from careful planning.

Since in any bedroom the bed is the most important piece, it should be chosen with regard for proportion, color, and appropriateness. And for its comfort-giving and wearing qualities, too.

In each of these three bedrooms, the beds selected are by the Simmons Company, largest manufacturers of beds in the world. You may have these, or any of the new Simmons models, in walnut or mahogany finish or the gay two-color schemes that are now so good with painted furniture.

As for service, Simmons Beds are perfectly constructed; they will never squeak or wobble. Their finish is baked on so that it never chips. They withstand dry air of heated homes, sudden changes from hot to cold, moist to dry. Being made of metal, they are practically indestructible.

You may purchase the simplest style of Simmons Bed for as little as $10.00. The handsomer designs run up to $60.00. The new and greatly improved Simmons Beautyrest Mattress, of inner coil construction, upholstered in cotton felt is $39.50; hair upholstered, $60.00 to $100.00. Simmons Mattresses of cotton felt, $10.00 up. Simmons Springs from $7.00 to $60.00. The name Simmons is plainly marked on every piece. Our local branch serves your dealer promptly. The Simmons Company.

SIMMONS BEDS · · $10 to $60

A room by LADY MENDL

Concerning her enchanting bedroom in her house in Sutton Place, New York, Lady Mendl says: "In my own bedroom which is small—all the furnishings are proportioned to its size—wee slipper chairs, little low tables, and a small mahogany secretary. The bed—a Simmons model—delicate of line with cané panels and lightly turned spindles—stands lengthwise along the wall. Walls and woodwork are a soft Adam green, my Simmons bed just a tone darker. Little grace notes of gaiety in red are added by sash curtains, over-mantel mirror and bedside table."

In MRS. FAIRBANK'S home

In the old family home of the Fairbanks, in Chicago, the guest-room introduces a vivid modern note. Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank says: "The color scheme is rose, taupe and black; the curtains are of modern French linen in cubist design. My Simmons beds are finished in dark walnut, and are exactly right in this environment." The woodwork is painted pale rose; the walls are hung in two-tone gray striped paper; the carpet is black velvet; the bedspreads are of silver tissue. The dressing-table is draped in crisp rose taffeta. An antique Venetian mirror stands on it, with a powder bowl in old lustre and silver candlesticks.

MRS. ROOSEVELT'S bedroom

Of her own bedroom in her New York home, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt says: "I have chosen for my room twin beds by Simmons finished in walnut—demure little beds with low head pieces and panels with little knots of flowers. I have covered them with spreads of unbleached homespun, cross-stitched in green with designs of fir trees. Near the window, a deep rocker for the children's story hour, a work table and pots of flowers complete the atmosphere of hominess."

LADY MENDL'S bedroom, furnished with Simmons bed No. 1541

LADY MENDL, better known in this country as Elsie de Wolfe, is one of the first American women to have studied and to have applied the art of interior decoration. Her word in matters of taste in the home is paramount. She stands for perfection of detail, for distinction of arrangement, for the art of choosing things exactly suited to their place and purpose. Her historic home in France near the famous gardens of Versailles is a veritable museum of unusual objets d'art.

In the guest room of her Chicago home, MRS. FAIRBANK has Simmons Twin beds, model No. 1534

For her own bedroom in her New York home, MRS. ROOSEVELT has chosen twin beds by Simmons, model No. 1595

(RIGHT)

Mrs. KELLOGG FAIRBANK is one of the most distinguished hostesses in Chicago. Her New Year parties are famous, as well as her large house-parties at her country estate on Lake Geneva. She is active in the Democratic Party, is interested in Chicago's important charities and has written several novels and a play.

(LEFT)

Mrs. FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT is well known to women throughout America. She is a member of the New York State Democratic Committee and is deeply interested in housing reform. Her country place at Hyde Park on the Hudson makes summertime a delight to her charming children, and her New York house on East 65th Street reflects comfort, taste and the true spirit of home.

THE WALL

By Marion P. Valensi

Illustrated by Maude Martin Ellis

There was a sort of frantic desperation in Alec Farraday's eyes.

Reared Behind a Barrier of Pride, "The Little Princess of Northfield, Ohio," Was Almost Cheated of Romance.

ONLY last year in Northfield whenever there was a guest of honor or an important newcomer at the bridge tables or the tea tables of the Franklin County Country club, some one would be sure to point out the Victorian turrets of the old Sloan mansion just visible over the top of Gordon's hill.

"That," the visitor would be told, "is where Julia Sloan lived. The Countess Dansietti now, you know! Yes, a Northfield girl. O, quite the most romantic affair! Of course, my dear, we were all children together—we all knew Julia Sloan!"

Only the last statement wasn't quite true. For no one in Northfield ever really knew Julia Sloan—except, perhaps, Alec Farraday. And that is ahead of the story. But at all odds it wasn't Julia Sloan's fault that she hadn't known the Lucy Smiths and Mary Merkles of Northfield. And that isn't ahead of the story.

From childhood Julia Sloan had had her rôle thrust upon her. She was the proud little princess of Northfield, O., on account of the Sloan Hinge factory fortune. Yes, even as a youngster its shadow and the shadow of the great turreted mansion on the hill had darkened her play days. She would have loved to mother dolls and make mud pies with the little girls on Center street, but of course it wasn't the thing for Julia Sloan to do. Although often, passing along with her stiffly starched nurse, she had thrust timid smiles between the palings of white fences at little girls who were probably so overwhelmed that they stared, open mouthed, or bashfully turned their small backs. And then Julia, flushing faintly, lifting her little head a trifle higher, passed on. And home again, in her nursery, head still high, she gazed with a bold pretense of satisfaction on a French doll. That early, you see, a kind of pride became her refuge. But even as she grew older, went off to her aunt in Baltimore—to New York and Europe, came back to Baltimore, and drove along Center street in her motor car, the head lamps burning yellow disks like gold coins into the enchanting dark, she still heard, with a faint wistfulness, the call of the tree shaded white houses. The call now changed from dolls and mud pies to the music of mandolins, girls' laughter and boys' singing voices!

About that time she began to think of her position, and of the strange pride which had grown out of it, as a wall—a grim gray wall that shut her off from the very lovely, simple things which she really wanted. But a wall, nevertheless, which she couldn't quite break through.

Then, the summer Julia was nineteen, the summer her father was so sick, she accidentally met Alec Farraday. Alec's father was a carpenter, but Alec was working his way through the state university. Good looking, too—Alec Farraday. Tall as a Viking, fair haired and blue eyed and gentle voiced. They met out on Summit road when Julia's motor stalled. Alec got it started again, and rode back to town with her. A few days later he went up to the Sloan courts for some tenhis. And after that he went back pretty often. Sometimes in the evening. August evenings. Sweet, cool August evenings with the perfume of midsummer heavy in the still air. They used to sit on the side veranda overlooking the lawn with the fountain where a pale little marble boy was forever wading. Small wonder that those evenings of midsummer sweetness and youth called to Julia Sloan. Cool, sweet evenings after terrible days of fading hope—days spent in the great walnut furnished room where her father lay, ill—days when doctors' and nurses' voices were gravely lowered and the inevitable end shadowed everything.

But even then, in spite of the anguish in her heart, there was a lightness, a happiness there, beyond her control. She knew that something very wonderful and true and beyond money price was almost within her grasp, if she could let herself reach over the wall to take it! And then, the night before Alec went back to school, there was a moment, a still white moonlit moment—their hands lightly touching, the sweet midsummer magic of youth and love casting its age old spell, when Julia was ready, quite ready to tell Alec Farraday that nothing mattered—nothing in the world but their caring for each other! But at that moment Alec Farraday lifted his fine young face with a little jerk upward, as if to see more clearly the outline of the black turrets of the big house against the slow flight of the moon. And his hands loosened their hold on Julia's. After all, you must remember, she was the little princess of Northfield.

And so Julia's lips, parting softly, closed again. She found herself saying, "It has been so nice to hear all about your school, Alec; and when you come home for the holidays you must tell me more!"

And Alec, after a quick tightening of his own lips, said, in a voice lifted to an odd, husky cheerfulness, "It has been awfully nice, Miss Sloan. And when I come back——" He stopped, and smiled faintly. "It seems a long way off, doesn't it? But we will see each other, won't we?" A terrible aching fear seemed to lift those last two words to notes of pain, echoing in the still summer air. And then, in a second, he had gone. And Julia was standing in the moonlight, as white and curiously still as the pale little wading boy in the fountain—until she slipped down onto the top step and wept softly to herself.

In October her father died. And two months later she went to Europe with her aunt from Baltimore. In the spring, in Rome, she met Count Dansietti. And, because he was quite practiced in that sort of thing, he made love enchantingly. To Julia it was as unreal and marvelous and glittering as the grand ball must have been to Cinderella. But there ran through all the glamor and ecstasy of everything, like a fine white thread in a pattern of magnificent gold brocade, a strangely persistent, strangely poignant memory of Alec Farraday. But at that—at that memory—Julia tried to laugh. Standing before the great gilt mirror in the medieval grandeur of a room in the palazzo of Luigi's aunt—that magnificent old palazzo on the Via Tournamelli—touching with half fearful fingers the jewels of the Danziettis, one had to laugh at such things. Twenty knows so well those things which are laughable!

AND so Julia became the Countess Dansietti and went off to the silence and shadow and dazzling sunlight of the villa high in the hills above Florence—swinging down to Rome for gayety; down to the tragic old palazzo on the Via Tournamelli. But even there, in spite of the gayety, there was the lonely wheeling of the evening swallows; the poplar and ilex shadows, black and forbidding against the yellow glaze of sunset or gray green dusk. It was in Rome that Julia's nights began to be tortured with dreams of plain white houses on wide, tree shaded streets.

War was declared that year, and war is bitter. But for Julia it was no more bitter than the years after it—years of disillusionment and heartbreak and sometimes an almost terrible longing for death. And those years might have marched on forever if a certain little dancer from Vienna hadn't, and in a measure justifiably, made a very tragic and ignominious end to the gay and reckless life of Luigi Carlo, Count Dansietti.

But when the Countess Dansietti ran into Alec Farraday at the Royal Danieli in Venice last year all that had passed. The war. The palazzo on the Via Tournamelli. The villa high in the thickly foliaged hills above Florence. The tragedy. A part of the bitterness. And, not incredibly, the last of the Sloan Hinge factory fortune, which was quite the end—the end of everything. And of all her host of gay and titled and ambitious friends there was left to her only the solitary friend of her childhood—pride. She never intended to let the world know her shame, nor her loneliness, nor her poverty. And most certainly with her last breath she would have struggled to keep Alec Farraday from knowing!

It was really trying to hide her poverty that brought her to Venice at the height of the tourist season. Heaven knows she didn't want to be there! For the two somber rooms which she occupied in the Pension Camarini in Florence had become a sort of grateful retreat from everything. But into the fastness of that retreat had come the devastating telegram from her cousins in Baltimore. Again all America seemed to be swarming at the shores of Europe, and so her cousins were bearing down upon her from Paris. And she couldn't summon bravery enough to tell them the truth. Surely there was some way to escape for a while longer the ignominy of showing them the shabbiness of the Pension Camarini, the shabbiness of her clothes, of her life! To escape showing them a British war profiteer in the old Danziettl villa! To escape dragging her pitiful little pride in the carriage dust of old Florence! So she contrived this meeting for a day in Venice. The telegram had been an expensive one. That was funny—a telegram expensive for Julia Sloan! She explained that business called her north, but that she would manage to be in Venice on the day that, according to their itinerary, they would undoubtedly be there—and delighted to see them at the Royal Danieli.

Then, after she had sent her message, she got an old pearl bracelet from a lacquer box in the carved chest, pulled her last season's black hat down over the smoldering fire in her dark eyes, and went off to a little shop on the other side of the bridge, where she exchanged the bracelet for lire—and the salvation of her pride. All the way, walking in the hot sun to save carriage hire, with the foolish economy of all people who have never known economy, her heart was filled with black, desperate thoughts. But as she reached the doorway of the Pension Camarini all thoughts were swept away in the sudden recollection that she had only two half presentable gowns—the black chiffon and the white crêpe with silver. And to make them look as if they had come fresh from Lucille Duval's she would need help.

She began to search her memory for the address of the little French seamstress.

And so Julia went to Venice—and ran into Alec Farraday instead of meeting her cousins from Baltimore. It was while she was dressing for dinner that her cousins' message of regret was brought to her.

"Mamma very ill. Leaving for home at once. So sorry."

Julia's first reaction was immense relief—that the expense of the dinner for three would be saved. Then she glanced into the mirror—such a beautiful, flattering old Venetian mirror! She was surprised by the dusky sheen of her hair, the wide, tragic beauty of her dark eyes, the cleverness of little mademoiselle in using the silver rose. How well the old earrings and necklace matched! After all, it was very nice to feel pretty again after rigid, scrimping plainness. She caught up the fan with the carved ivory handle—the fan which would undoubtedly be next to go. No, she couldn't hope to keep it much longer—a useless, silly thing, when she needed a new winter cloak. Nevertheless, she moved it languidly. She shrugged. The lovely, shadowy reflection shrugged, too. It was a gesture of challenge, of adventure. The bracelet was gone forever. She might just as well go down to dinner!

And then at the very entrance to the dining room she lifted her eyes to meet the amazed, the frankly delighted, clear blue eyes of Alec Farraday.

For a second it seemed to Julia that she was slowly sinking into a black sea perfumed with the concentrated sweetness of all the August nights of her life. And then she was jerked back to the color and splendor and heavy reality of the Royal Danieli. She held out her hand to Alec Farraday. And in that fraction of a second, while they stood, she seemed to see beyond all the outward things—the poise, the vitality, all the unmistakable signs of prosperity in Alec Farraday—something deeper. He had never forgotten Julia Sloan. Tears caught in her throat.

"I can't believe it!" he was saying. "Imagine meeting you like this, countess." Then he smiled. "You see, I'm not exactly used to it."

"Please," Julia was saying, "please, Alec, I'm just Julia." Then she caught her breath, for, of course, she had never called him Alec back in Northfield. She justified herself with a little laughing sentence. "Don't you know any one from home is a long lost relative?"

ALEC FARRADAY flushed as if he understood. There was another second of silence; then he said: "Are you alone, countess? You see I'm hopelessly Ohio! What I'm trying to say very properly is, if you aren't dining with any one can't we——"

"I am alone—quite alone, Alec," Julia broke in evenly. "And I'd love to have dinner with you!"

"I'd never have hoped for such luck—Julia." He smiled shyly. "And I don't suppose I'd ever have had the courage to present myself properly to you in Florence. I knew your address, of course. Northfield saw to that. But a real countess——"

Julia felt a sweet, sudden warmth touch the cold, sharp pain in her heart as they crossed to the corner table close by a window looking out over the silver and blue water.

"You're not traveling alone?" asked Julia.

"Alone," said Alec Farraday.

Then Julia laughed. It felt somehow wrong and strange for her lips to be curving to sudden, free laughter.

"Funny, how we're asking each other that!" she said. "I suppose I'm trying to discover whether you have married?"

Smiling, Alec Farraday shook his head. "It's such a serious business these days, Julia! My sister Clara has just been married, though—to Joe Baker. Perhaps you remember him? Old Doc Baker's son. They've built out on Summit road. You wouldn't know it. There were always some pretty old places out there, but now it's fairly gorgeous. They've built the new country club on the hill."

Through the shimmer of color, the smoke filled, perfume laden atmosphere, there came to Julia a sweet, clean breath of the autumn woods along Summit road. She saw again the deep lawned, wide white houses.

"I wish you'd go on," she said. "I love to hear from—home."

"But you never come back," he challenged quietly.

Julia shrugged. "No, I never go back." She lifted her hands with a little gesture of futility. "Why should I?"

"We were all very sorry," said Alec quietly, "when we heard of your husband's death. It was—the war?"

And Julia, dropping the white lids of her eyes to hide the lie, said slowly, "Yes—the war." But, looking up, tears glistened on her lashes. Then she lifted her hand in a gesture of dismissal. "Let's talk about Northfield," she begged.

And so while Julia Sloan and Alec Farraday talked and smiled and listened to the music of Venice rise softly from blue and silver water the table between them became a thing of magic. It made a mockery of the years that had passed—and the fragrance of its flowers was the fragrance of August nights long ago. A dozen years were as the passing of a summer night. She felt the quick beating of her heart—her heart which was at once warmed with sweet memories and chilled with haunting fear. Fear that he might discover how very poor she was—how very lonely, and wretched, and to be pitied. The one thing which Julia Sloan could never bear—pity!

As they lingered over coffee Alec Farraday leaned across the table and said abruptly: "Julia, I'm just plain American tourist. I want mightily to float around in one of those gondolas under the moonlight. Would it be a very silly thing to ask you to do? I mean, would it bore you to death?"

"Alec," said Julia, "I'd love it. We'll go down the Guidecca—past the Zattere." She scorned the fluttering of her heart. And tomorrow was a million hours away! Tomorrow she would be gone. On the first, the earliest train! She gathered her cloak about her shoulders and they made their way out to the landing steps, embarking into the luminous blue dark of the City of Enchantment. The lights along the Guidecca were strung jewels and the quays of the Zattere a thread of dull silver. Music mingled with the soft lapping of water about them.

It was when they were almost back to the Piazza, while they were winding about in the dark mystery of the little bridged waterways, that Alec told her how he had been half afraid to come to Venice for fear it would shatter his romantic ideal. He laughed a bit sheepishly at the admission, and, suddenly looking up, meeting Julia's eyes, he stopped short.

"You needn't be ashamed of it, Alec," said Julia softly. "Italy enchants all of us with its loveliness—at times!"

"Loveliness — good Lord!" cried Alec Farraday. "It's—it's more than that. It's the spirit of romance."

"Romance isn't everything," said Julia slowly.

"But you love it, don't you?" he went on. "You wouldn't go back, would you?"

"No," said Julia; "no—of course not. I couldn't go back." A little caught laugh, half a sob, echoed in her throat. There was a sudden turn—a sweep between great walls, a darkening. Julia pointed upward. "Not all romance here, either, Alec! The Bridge of Sighs."

And then in a breath almost they were out into the lagoon, moving toward the lighted landing of the Piazetta.

ON Thursday evening that was.

And on Saturday morning Julia carried her fan with the carved ivory handle to the little shop behind the arcades. This to stay in Venice a few days longer—to spin out the enchantment of a few more ever to be remembered hours. She wanted to carry back to the dark little Pension Camarini a store of loveliness to last through the years. You may smile if you wish. Julia herself smiled at the silliness, the foolishness in a woman past thirty—a woman, as she told herself, forever done with the sweet things of life. But for a few more hours! O, she didn't try to deceive herself. She faced the truth boldly. There were some things as certain as death, and one of them was the inevitable going back to the Pension Camarini, the safe retreat. For supposing anything—even that the hours were as precious to him as they were to her—what was there to be said? The wall between them was higher and stronger than ever. The wall of her pride. She was the Countess Dansietti. Daily he marveled that she could spare the time from her friends and people to devote to him. And with a pitiful bravery she led him to believe that there were friends and gayety. Less terrible that aching little hold on her pride than to have him sorry for her. Sorry for Julia Sloan! Sorry for the Countess Dansietti!

And then on Saturday evening, across the silver-lit table of their first dinner together, looking into Alec Farraday's eyes, listening to his laughter, to the way he spoke her name, she was suddenly, unreasonably on the verge of tears. Of course it was silly, but she could think only of her desire to rush off, to leave it all, to get back to the safe retreat. All at once the poverty, the makeshift, the pretense of a lifetime seemed less painful, less likely to tear her heart into shreds than the pitiful spinning out of these last few hours of borrowed happiness. Her throat ached with the lonely sweetness of the soft music drifting up through the purple dark.

Nights, blue black nights, sitting at her window overlooking the Arno, she knew she would hear the echo of these songs. Now it was as if the whole perfumed, heavy, music laden air was charged with a strange semi-barbarous passion of longing and frustration. And somehow she went on making a pretense of eating, of enjoying food, of being gay. She even offered a patter of small talk about trivial things until, glancing up, she was stopped by the look in Alec Farraday's eyes. .

He put down his coffee slowly. "You know," he said, "I hate to think of it, but I ought to be getting back to Paris."

"Then," said Julia steadily, "I won't feel so badly about having to tell you that I'm off tomorrow. I've promised some friends in Florence." There was a second of silence, in which she could hear the pounding of her heart.

"And so," said Alec Farraday, "this will be our last evening together. I expect to sail on the eighth," he finished evenly. But the match lit for his cigaret burned to the tips of his fingers.

"Naturally I hate to go," said Julia, "for they have been nice, these days, haven't they?"

"Nice! For God's sake, Julia, don't use that word!" he jerked out. And then, as if to catch himself, he made a rasping pretense at laughter. "I'm wretched enough. And Venice surely deserves something better." He passed a hand over his eyes with the despairing gesture of one trying to brush away pain. Then sharply he bent toward her. "You'll think I'm no end of a fool, but I can't stand this place a minute longer Let's get out. I think it's partly that tenor." He tried again to laugh.

And so somehow they found themselves outside—the coaxing black water lapping up against the landing steps in soft, gentle little splashes There was a sort of frantic desperation in Alec Farraday's eyes as he turned.

"Can't we—can't we walk somewhere?" he asked. "You know, Julia, I feel as if I—I needed exercise. The lasiness of this darned town has finally gotten on my nerves."

And Julia, looking up at him, her own lips curved to a smile that mocked the pain in her heart, nodded. Vaguely she understood. If they'd been at home they would have tramped out over the low hills.

She said, a bit unsteadily, "But in Venice it isn't the thing to do, Alec. No one walks. By day it's too hot. At night it's dark and a bit terrifying. Little dark courts, black, humpbacked bridges."

He nodded contritely. "You're right, Julia. When in Rome——"

But she put out a protesting hand as he moved toward a gondola. "I lived in Rome, Alec, and didn't do as the Romans. I'd like to walk, too. We'll probably find a nice roundabout way to the Piazza."

"The Piazza! Florian's! Can't we ever get away from them?"

Julia shrugged. "You're rebellious tonight. There isn't a nicer place in Venice than Florian's. It's gay and light—and safe." She caught her breath.

Alec laughed. Their steps quickened, echoed against the pavement. Water from a narrow, dark canal lapped at their feet. A gondolier's cry rang out ominously. In the murky flare of an old street lamp Julia saw the white, set look about Alec Farraday's mouth that belied the laugh in his voice.

"You're fairly racing," she reminded him.

He slowed down and smiled dismally. "Human beings are queer," he said. "I thought I had no sentiment in my soul, and I'm actually low, down and out at the idea of this being my last night here. Heaven knows when I'll see you again—Julia!"

She tried for a gay, disarming answer and couldn't summon it. She thought of the gloomy old Pension Camarini. "We never know," she said tightly.

"I believe this place has gotten on your nerves, too," he said.

"It belongs too much to the past, Alec. We might be back in the middle ages." She turned her head to indicate the black wall with its one flaring window of light.

A DARK figure came out of a doorway, crossed their path. Julia caught at Alec's arm—and as quickly drew away.

"Little goose," he said gently, "you are afraid. We'll go back to the Piazza. You're right. Florian's is the safe place. Lights and laughter and music. That's what we want to remember on our last evening, isn't it?"

"Certainly Venice is no place to wander about in at night," she said. "It's too intricate. I don't believe we're going back the way we came at all."

They stopped short under another murky lamp and looked about. Certainly that wasn't the bridge they had just crossed. The buildings about were black and solemn, their window eyes tightly shut. They went on, the warm, breathless quiet of the city silences wrapping about them. Julia's voice sounded thin, strange. "The dome of that church, Alec—I recognise it. But it's on the Grand Canal. We've walked further than we thought."

"The thing is, to reach it through this jumble of buildings!" he said.

She pointed to an opening in the arched wall ahead of them. "There's a gate. It's probably into a private court, but I believe if we cut through——"

They peered into the opening.

"There's a well or something—and a statue," said Alec.

Julia gave a little gasp of surprise. "It's lovely," she breathed. "Medieval."

Some pale colored flowers hung like ghosts against a black stretch of wall—the statue of the little girl in the fountain shone dim and pearly in an uncertain shaft of light from a dingy lantern at the far gate. It was perhaps the little white figure of the child that made the caught, breath taking stillness between them. Julia thought of the pale little wading boy in the fountain at Northfield. But as she looked up at Alec Farraday he turned his face to the far gate.

"Ought to find a way out of here, Julia," he said quietly.

Julia's laugh was like a thin, meager wraith trying to live in the stillness. "We—we're all right," she assured him. "There's the church right through the gate." She half led the way along the crumbling flags to the rust eaten iron grill that barred their way.

"It's locked!" she cried.

"Then we are trespassing! And it looks like a princely domain belonging to one of the old palazzos. Thank fortune you have a title, Julia. It may help us." He offered a little half laugh.

"Princely!" Julia shrugged. "It's probably a playground for slum children by day. A lot of—the old world has to be taken by moonlight."

As if he hadn't heard her, Alec Farraday was bending over the lock. "I'll be darned if I can find the combination," he said.

Her own hand reached exploringly upwards, touched his. For a second, a wisp of a second, their touching fingers clung. And in that one quicksilver atom of time Julia breathed a frantic little prayer.

"Dear God," she prayed, "I want to tell him the truth. Help me to tell him the truth! But how can I?" she argued fruitlessly to herself. "How break through the wall of my pride—my last defense, and find pity!"

Alec's voice, strangely tense, ripped [illegible] silence. "We'll be getting foolish if we stay in the black magic of this place much longer, Julia. [illegible] tomorrow——" His caught, unsteady laugh ended dismally. "Here, I'll strike a match and see if I can't open it."

There was the friendly sputter of the [illegible] the stones of the wall—the yellow flare of light, a low burst of song, and the gentle swish of [illegible] rose from the canal. And then, with a [illegible] bolt slid back under Alec's hand.

"That's all it needed," he laughed, "a bit of strength!"

The gate in the wall swung open. The [illegible] lighted canal was a stone's throw away—[illegible] loveliness. But as they stepped forward to [illegible] through Julia laid her hand on his arm. "Not yet, Alec, it's too beautiful," she said breathlessly.

And in the magic stillness of that [illegible] repeated to herself his words, "A little [illegible] Then, with a half sob catching in her throat [illegible] said, "Alec, I'm silly, sentimental, perhaps, tonight—but this, all this"—she swept her hand toward the delicate jeweled loveliness before them—"and the gate—it reminds me of my childhood. Did I ever tell you about the wall, Alec? That was a [illegible] thing," she rushed on.

"When I was a youngster I always wanted to play with the little girls on Center street. [illegible] wanted to do a hundred things, Alec; but my [illegible] always told me my position wouldn't allow it.

"And so I began to think about being [illegible] Sloan and having to live in the big house [illegible] everything as if it were a wall—a wall that [illegible] between me and all the things I really ever wanted. I hated the wall. But I never had the strength to break through. Now, if I had I might have [illegible] out of loneliness into beauty like this!"

In the stillness Alec Farraday's hand [illegible] down to hers, gripped her icy fingers. "You're cold," he said shakily. "You'll be sick!"

"Would it matter much?" she said slowly.

His grip on her cold little fingers tightened almost to a point of pain. "Julia," he said huskily, "are you trying to torture me? I can't pretend any longer. You know that I love you. But for God's sake, Julia, either tell me to get out of your sight forever or——" The grip about her fingers loosened. "Don't laugh at me, Julia. I guess I am—mad."

Julia lifted her tragic little white face to his. "Alec!" she whispered.

And he caught her in his arms.

"Hold me close, Alec," she begged, "because I need courage to tell you a hundred things. But I had to know whether you really loved me, Alec. I had to know that first. You see, you might have been just sorry for me. And I didn't want that, Alec—I couldn't have stood that! You see, I'm really terribly poor and——"

He stopped her words with his lips. "Believe," he said, "you can tell me all that some other time. But now, this minute, after all these years of loving you and longing for you and loving you, I can't hear anything but the song in my own heart!"

. . . . . .

And now whenever there is a newcomer or a guest of honor at the bridge tables or the tea tables of the Franklin County Country club some one is quite sure to point out the magnificent new white colonial on the slope above Summit road.

"That," the visitor will be told, "is the home of the Countess Dansietti—I should say, of course, the Alec Farradays! But then we always think of Julia as the Countess Dansietti! You haven't heard? My dear, she gave up one of the old titles of Italy to come back here and marry Alec Farraday! And the count was the most fascinating person! Really, it seems incredible. Of course, Alec is a dear—a nice, plain, common sense business man—and making scads of money. But imagine it! The most utterly unromantic thing I've ever known."

Which only proves that Northfield really knows neither Julia Sloan—nor Alec Farraday!

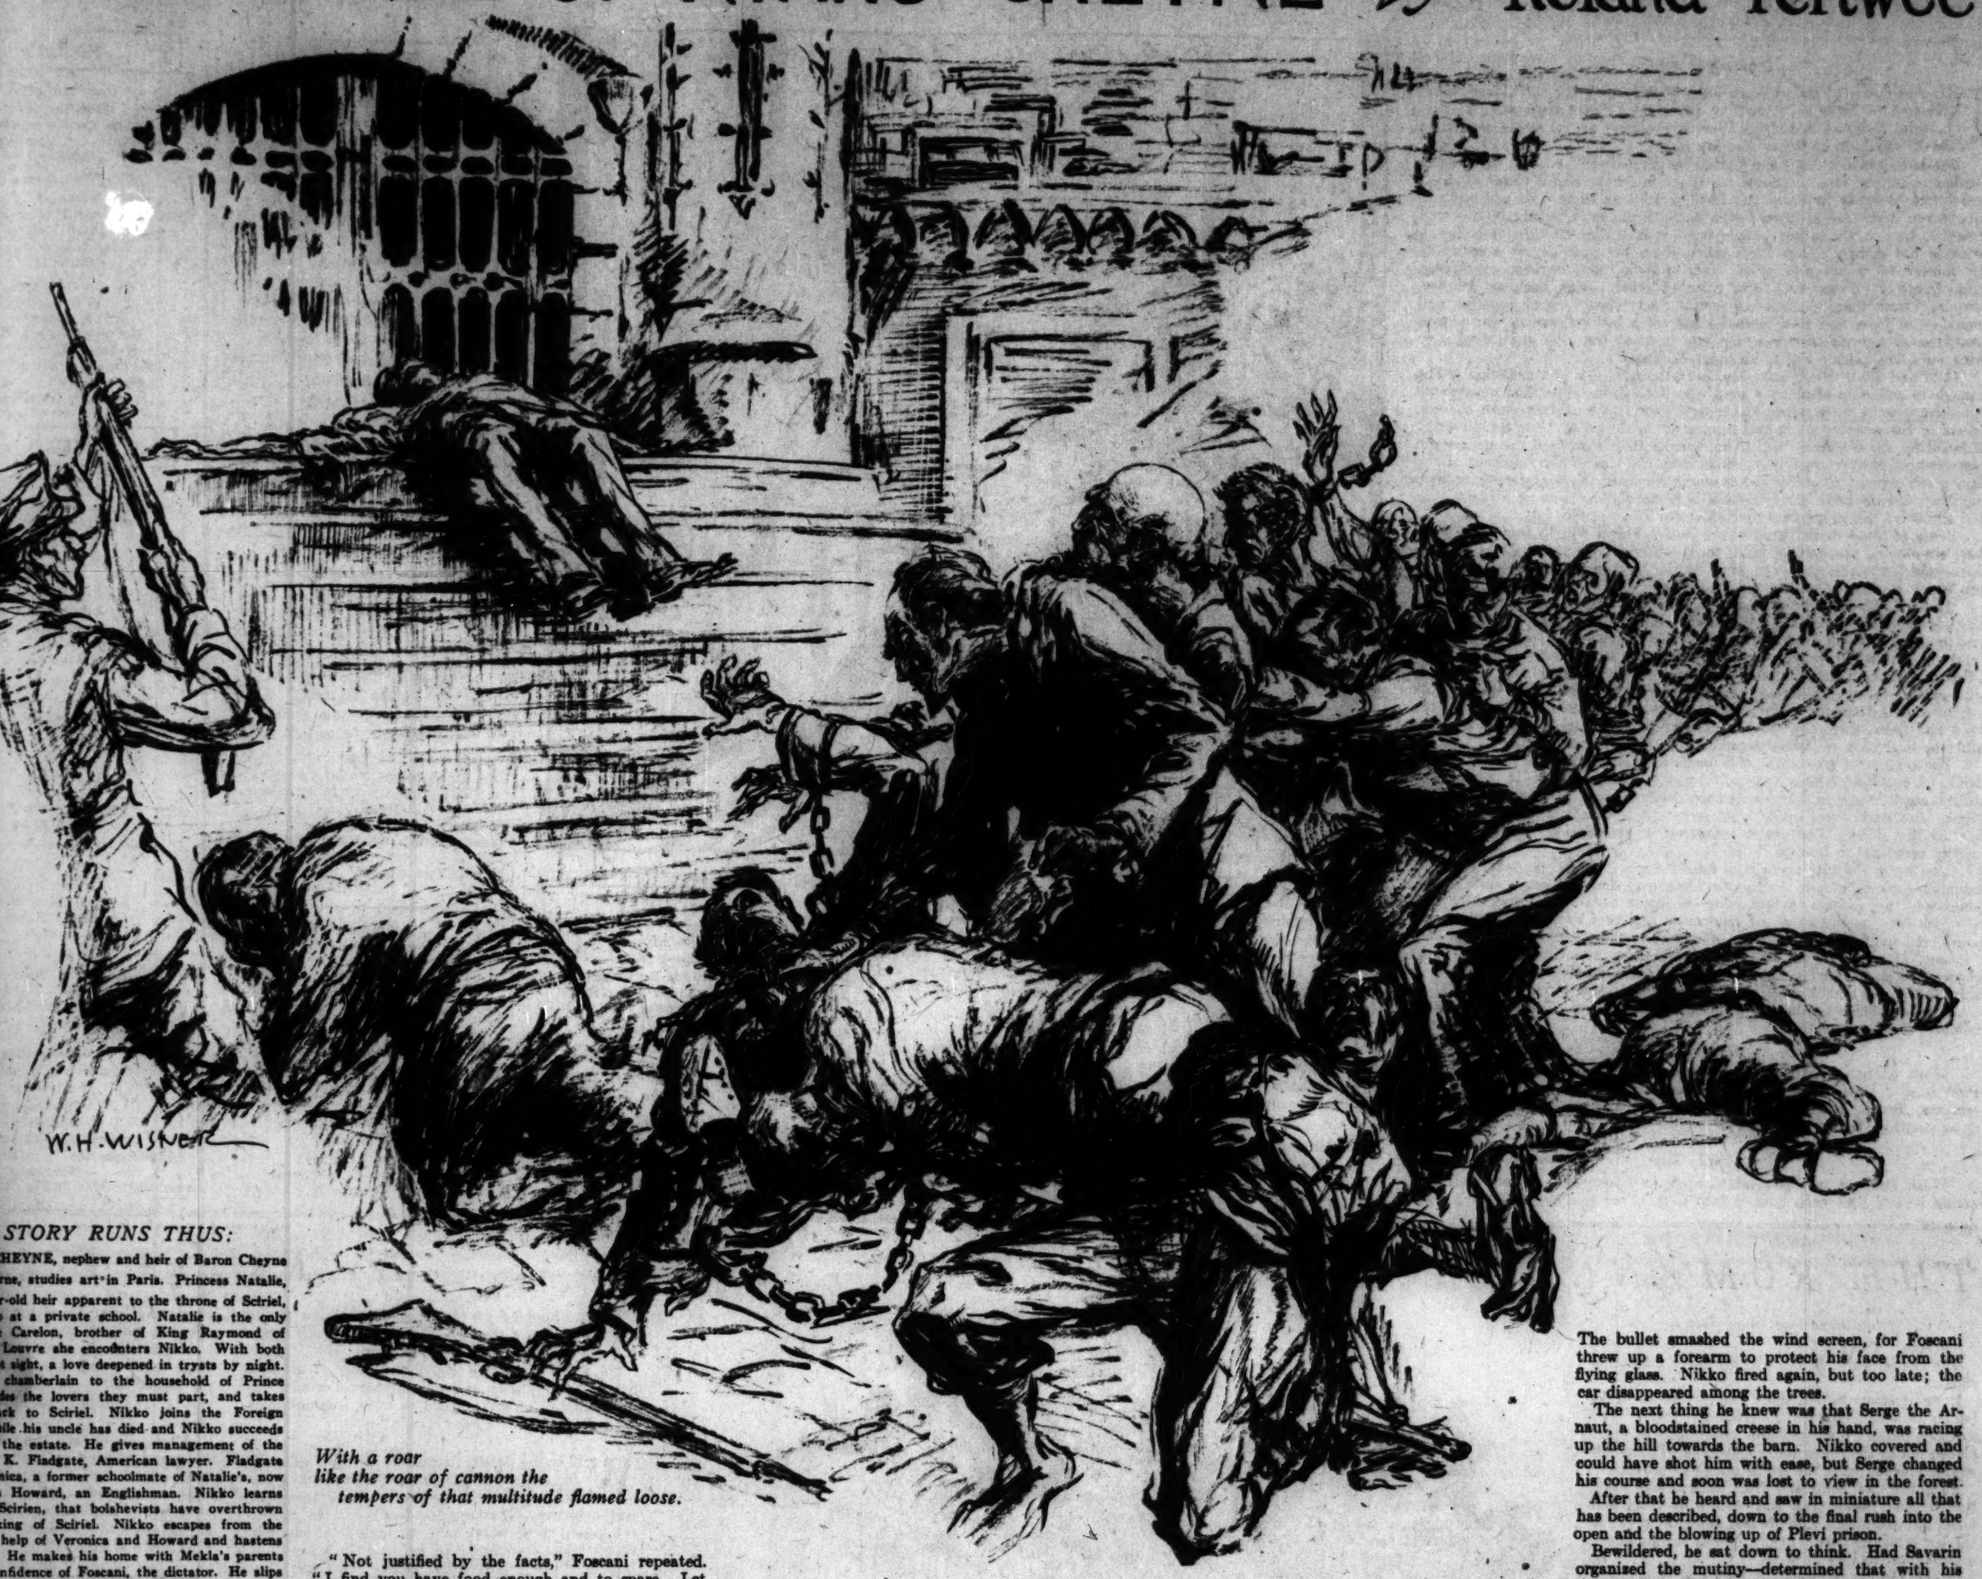
THE ROMANCE OF NIKKO CHEYNE By Roland Pertwee



With a roar like the roar of cannon the tempers of that multitude flamed loose.

THE STORY RUNS THUS:

NIKKO CHEYNE, nephew and heir of Baron Cheyne of Querne, studies art in Paris. Princess Natalie, 16-year-old heir apparent to the throne of Scitiel, resides incognito at a private school. Natalie is the only child of Prince Carelon, brother of King Raymond of Scitiel. At the Louvre she encounters Nikko. With both it is love at first sight, a love deepened in trysts by night. Baron Vilasto, chamberlain to the household of Prince Carelon, persuades the lovers they must part, and takes the princess back to Scitiel. Nikko joins the Foreign Legion. Meanwhile his uncle has died and Nikko succeeds to the title and the estate. He gives management of the estate to James K. Fladgate, American lawyer. Fladgate is father of Veronica, a former schoolmate of Natalie's, now married to Joris Howard, an Englishman. Nikko learns from Mekla, a Scirien, that bolshevists have overthrown and slain the king of Scitiel. Nikko escapes from the Legion with the help of Veronica and Howard and hastens to Natalie's aid. He makes his home with Mekla's parents and gains the confidence of Foscani, the dictator. He slips into the house where Natalie is held prisoner and they plan escape. Nikko and Foscani visit the camp of the dictator's mercenaries beneath the great dam of Sarsenova in the oasis of Issol. Major Savarin, governor of Plevi prison, promises Nikko to help Natalie's father, his prisoner, escape. Nikko and four loyalists overpower a military guard and seize horses for the flight, following which Nikko conceals himself at the rendezvous agreed upon with Savarin near Plevi prison. His four comrades are hit to rescue Natalie.

INSTALLMENT XIII.

The Plevi Revolt.

IN the hour that followed Nikko's spirits touched the very foundations of despair. With the coming of Foscani it seemed inevitable that their plans would crumble.

Savarin would be relieved of his command and transported back to Djevo. Or else Foscani would stay at the prison for the night, robbing Savarin of the chance to fulfill his part of the bargain. There seemed no possibility that the scheme would go through. Then he, Nikko, would ride to meet Betsy and to tell her he had failed—and then—anything.

With a drawn face he sat and stared while picture after picture of failure and disaster shaped in his mind.

Over the top of the outer wall he could see the further side of the prison yard, packed solid with gangs of waiting convicts. And then, upon the main steps at the prison door, appeared Foscani and his bodyguard, Savarin, and a squad of warders.

For one moment Nikko's heart leaped. Could it be possible that the party was about to leave? The hope was short lived. Foscani held up a hand, his inevitable preliminary to a speech. In utter impotence Nikko Cheyne covered his eyes with his hands.

Foscani held up his hand and at the gesture the swaying gangs in the yard below became rigid, poised, silent.

"Enemies of Scitiel," he began and repeated, "enemies of Scitiel and traitors to the cause of freedom, a complaint has been brought to me by your governor of the treatment you sustain at Plevi."

A growl of assent followed the words.

"He tells me you do not get enough food or enough kindness—that you are starved, beaten, and treated like beasts."

"Aye, aye," cried a dozen voices.

"But," continued Foscani, "I have looked into this complaint and find it is not justified by the facts."

The crowd swayed threateningly. Here and there a whip cracked. The breech bolts of the warders' rifles clanged home with a metallic ring.

"Not justified by the facts," Foscani repeated. "I find you have food enough and to spare. Let the man who styled himself Prince Carelon, duke of Montressor, be brought to me."

A tall old man with a parted beard of pure white strode out of the crowd and approached the steps.

The shoulders of the uncrowned king of Scitiel were bowed from labor, but he bore his head high and his eyes were the eyes of a man whose courage is not dead.

Two warders closed in on him, but Foscani waved them away.

"Let him stand alone," said he. "Quite alone. Well, Carelon, is it true that you lack for food?"

With a tremendous effort to keep his temper in check the prince answered, "Old men do not need much food."

"But you have enough?"

"I have enough."

Foscani looked at him slowly and his smile broadened. He nodded.

"I see you have. Your clothes fit snugly. Enough, if not too much, Carelon. Tit bits from the governor's table, eh?"

"No."

"Have you any complaint against the Commandant Savarin?"

"None; he has done his duty, I suppose."

"'None; he has done his duty, I suppose,'" Foscani echoed. "But do you know, Carelon, I suppose otherwise. The governor of such a settlement as Plevi against whom complaints are not leveled must clearly have failed in his duty."

Savarin's hand twitched on the hilt of his sword. A murmur went round among the listeners. The huge Arnaut stepped from the bodyguard and ranged himself alongside his master.

"What have you to say to that, Carelon?"

Prince Carelon answered through shut teeth.

"I am not here to discuss your administrators, Foscani."

A pathetic cheer was smothered almost before it had shaped.

"No, you are not here for that," was the reply. "Nor are you here, Carelon, to consume the rations of ten men a day as well as your own and thus put the state to cost of their burial."

At this cowardly betrayal a horrified gasp rose from the onlookers.

"Liar! Base liar!" cried the prince, and, raising his manacled hands, he crashed them into Foscani's face.

No one saw Serge, the Arnaut, strike, but in the awful hush that followed the prince's blow they heard a tearing sound as the curved knife ripped upward from stomach to breastbone. Like a chicken with its head off, the old prince, holding himself together with both hands, ran round and round in diminishing circles before pitching face forward to kick out the dying sparks of his life in the dust.

It happened so suddenly that action was paralyzed by amazement.

Then Savarin, "You devils! You devils!"

His pistol flashed out, to be struck instantly from his hand.

"Seize that man!" said Foscani. "Let him be shot here and now."

AND then with a roar like the roar of cannon the tempers of that multitude of captive spirits flamed loose. The lines swayed and broke. A warder disappeared under a sea of stamping feet.

The chained gangs pulled this way and that, tripping their fellows. From the prison steps the warders delivered a rapid rafale with their rifles. A squall of bullets swept the yard. But the wave of human wreckage was beyond fear of death. They bore forward, living dragging dead upon their chains.

Foscani's bodyguard, their master in their midst, carved a way through to where the cars were standing. Hands clutched at them were severed and left dangling. It was a miracle that they reached their objective, a miracle aided by the chaos begotten of hate. Then Serge, leaping forward over the men's packed bodies, flung open the gates to let the cars go through. Foscani was in the last car now and at the wheel. He drove into and across a living barrier of six chained men, dragging them like a string of beads, two on either side and another beneath the wheels until the chain snapped. Serge leaped at the running board as the car flashed by, but some one snatched at his ankle and, clinging, brought him down. He cursed, wrenched himself clear, and stamped on his assailant's skull, pulping it beneath an iron heel. But the car was beyond reach and behind him voices screamed. "Death to the murderer." With a glance over his shoulder and a snarl of hatred, Serge broke at full speed for the quarries.

Men who a few moments before were captives poured free through the open gates. The body of a dead warder was hurled on high, striking the spiked top of the wall and sprawling across it like a dirty rag on a bramble. On the steps the warders were using their rifle butts, for ammunition was exhausted, but one by one they were torn down to disappear into a tangle of yelling, clawing inhumanity.

A mighty fellow with an ax was cleaving the chains that manacled his brother prisoners. In the stone halls and corridors of the prison a dozen battles were raging. A uniformed body flung from a window struck the cobbles with such sickening force that it looked as though it lay half buried in a trough.

Some one had reached the prison tower and, seizing the halyards of the black and crimson banner, brought it fluttering down to an accompaniment of shrieks and yells from those below.

A cry was lifted.

"The magazine! To the magazine!"

A rush of feet and in the distance the crash of a shot and laughter.

On the flat roof four dust colored figures chased a warder in and out among the chimneys and water tanks like children playing touch. For a while he eluded them, but at last ran into the arms of his pursuers. A swift struggle—a baffled cry—the lid of a tank was raised just far enough for something to be hurled through the gap—a splash and the lid fell back into place again, and then the dusty figures danced upon it and drummed their heels or crouched to listen to the bubbles.

The doors of the ration store were forced and its contents were tumbled out into the yard. Hungry men with the lust and ecstasy of food in their eyes burst open cases, split sacks, and cast a hail of loaves among their fellows.

An orgy of killing—an orgy of food—an orgy of destruction.

Men sat and ate upon the dead bodies of their oppressors. Some, lost to all decency, screeched like gulls over the food and, hiding loaves and grain and raw onions in their shirts, concealed themselves in corners, snarling when approached.

Through the prison doors raced a band more orderly, who cried: "The fuses are lit. Stand clear—stand clear!"

There was a rush for the main gate—convergence from all sides, those at the rear carrying those in front onward as upon the crest of a wave.

At the gate itself a hideous and solid wedge of bodies fought, struggled, and shrieked in panic. Many were crushed to death against the walls, others were trampled under foot, but of the two thousand wretched captives of Plevi seven hundred streamed out on to the open hillside as with a grumbling roar the gray bulk of the prison heaved itself clear of the ground, hung suspended in a pall of black smoke, and settled into ruins.

From the loft of the barn Nikko had heard and seen the whole stupefying affair. Something had happened down there, but whether for good or evil he had not the remotest idea. He was too far off to guess what had started the flame. Foscani, with his black figure, was recognizable—but little else. He had seen a tall gray man with white hair lie down at Foscani's feet, and then the storm had burst. He had seen the Arnaut fling open the gates and the three cars whirl through.

The germ of madness must have infected Nikko at that moment, for, snatching up the carbine, he fired at Foscani's car as it raced along the road. The bullet smashed the wind screen, for Foscani threw up a forearm to protect his face from the flying glass. Nikko fired again, but too late; the car disappeared among the trees.

The next thing he knew was that Serge the Arnaut, a bloodstained creese in his hand, was racing up the hill towards the barn. Nikko covered and could have shot him with ease, but Serge changed his course and soon was lost to view in the forest.

After that he heard and saw in miniature all that has been described, down to the final rush into the open and the blowing up of Plevi prison.

Bewildered, he sat down to think. Had Savarin organized the mutiny—determined that with his chance of freedom those poor souls also should be given theirs? Surely not. He would never have risked an undertaking of such size, the success of which was so precarious.

No, the thing was spontaneous, he was sure of that, a sudden uprising with victory tossed by fate to the weak and the oppressed.

In the meantime, with the best part of a thousand savage men at large, his own position, dressed in the uniform of the mounted police, was far from secure.

What had he better do, he wondered? Wait for Savarin? Yes, if Savarin were still alive. But that seemed unlikely.

At any moment some of those creatures who already were wandering aimlessly about the hillside like homeless children might discover his hiding place and drag him down.

It would be wiser to take the horses into the shelter of the forest and linger there, but Nikko shrank from doing that. He had given his word to be in a certain place at a certain time and his word must be kept. It was a matter of discipline. He had not spent seven years with one of the most highly disciplined military organisations in existence without rating discipline at its true value. Danger was never yet accepted as an excuse for breaking an order, even though it might be self-imposed.

He told himself he must hang on and trust to luck, but since he did not mean to be caught like a rat in a trap, he descended the ladder and loosened several stones in the wall so that at a push they would fall outward and provide him with a bolt hole.

The problem of whether to stay or go settled itself in a massmeeting of the escaped prisoners who collected at a spot not a hundred yards distant.

There they were harangued by a loud voiced speaker, his words being carried on the breeze to Nikko's ears.

"There are two roads open to us—an attempt to escape over the frontier by way of the mountains or to join our gallant comrades in the marshes at Plesna. If we stay here, in twenty-four hours Foscani's rifles will descend upon us. If we split up into small knots we shall be cut down by the mounted police patrols."

The speech was constantly interrupted with cries of assent or dissent.

"Our only hope is to cleave together. The frontier is twelve miles to the west. Plesna perhaps thirty to the northeast. If we march to Plesna we can obtain food by force from the villages we shall pass through. If we take to the mountains it is likely we shall die in the snow. The choice rests with the majority—think well, gentlemen of Scitiel. Do we run or do we avenge? I put it to the vote."

TO BEAUTIFY THE HAIR ne

TEMPTING MENUS FOR THE WEEK

by Jane Eddington

Spring Teas

THE sentiments of the stomach—it is French to speak thus—seem inordinately in favor of something to drink. The French say of their favorite tisane, a hot drink, that it produces an agreeable sentiment in the stomach, and they also say more.

But hot drinks, often some that seem monstrously strange, have been peculiar to no one race or people. Perhaps you have had a tisane of dried linden tree blossoms in Paris, the tileul, a favorite there. Or perhaps you have taken herb teas at home, even such in the rank mostly of old wife remedies, but on the whole people have been rather sensible in being so given to hot drinks. They have taken them for pure gayety sometimes, but mostly for aches and pains, colds, fatigue, sleeplessness, overeating, weak digestive powers, and some score of other things, such as pleurisy, "vapors," weak lungs, jaundice, fevers of many sorts, loss of appetite, and even loss of love, and sometimes because of a lack of stronger beverages. Heat itself is a prime specific in the case of many ills. We often need it to bring ourselves quickly out of an inner chilliness.

Cold and queer drinks have also been thought nice, and medicinal. The immediate ancestors of many a man who is somewhat less than a patriarch today were wont when spring came to concoct, with the strangest excuses, drinks of the most complex and supposedly tonic types. For the flavoring of beautiful sweet waters from living springs they went into the woods and pastures to pinch the pale green buds from the tips of the branches of the dark green spruces, to gather the aromatic leaves of the wintergreen, to strip the newly sprung birch canes of their bark, to dig the roots of many a vine and shrub for the supposedly medicinal beverages—casks full.

Some of these drinks were surely as weird as a witch's brew, but some were simple and are even in favor today. These latter are such as the sassafras and fruit teas, and even some of the herb teas, and the old flaxseed tea, which is often called flaxseed lemonade.

These simple teas, as well as the dreadful elixirs, were supposed to thin the winter thickened blood. While the children were dosed with sulphur and molasses, which probably made them beneficently long for copious drinks of cold water, or were given the pennyroyal or even catnip tea, their elders were often drinking fermented beverages flavored with spruce or wintergreen or sassafras, sometimes possessed of dreadful tastes which could not be subdued by the pleasant flavored leaves and roots, because to the brew had been added the drealful lobelia, the bitter thoroughroot, or some other herb given a medicinal reputation in the ancient herbals.

The earliest of American cook books has this: "Beer is a good family drink. A handful of hops to a pailful of water, and a half pint of molasses, makes good hop beer. Spruce mixed with hops is pleasanter than hops alone. Boxberry, fever bush, sweet fern, and horseradish make a good and healthy diet drink. The winter evergreen, or rheumatism weed, thrown in, is very beneficial to humors."

You know the bite there is in horseradish. Tropical peppers, when obtainable, took its place. And as to "humors," thereby hangs much of folk philosophy not always so humorous—we mean humor the other way. All of which may remind us of the unpleasant fact that spring fevers were once considered normal and necessary, while the languid laggard of a man gave "spring" as an excuse for his torpidity and delay of spring plantings. That excuse also engendered a whole family of excuses leading to such matters as a setting up with hard cider, and quite a set-up, too.

The stomach's sentiments sometimes seem to be of a balefully sentimental order.

Sassafras Tea

Wash enough sassafras bark to make half a cup when it is chipped. Pour over it three cups of boiling water and let it draw for ten or fifteen minutes. Strain into a serving pot or pitcher and serve hot or cold, plain or sweetened. Dilute if necessary.

Apple Tea

Wash and cut one good sized apple into quarters without paring or coring it, and slice each quarter into four. Pour one cup of boiling water on the apple and set for two hours in a place with a heat corresponding to that of the old side of a "cook stove," a place where the liquid keeps hot but does not cook. A way to get this heat is to set a brick partly over a gas burner and set the tea on the other end of the brick. Strain off the water from the apple finally, add a tablespoon of orange juice and a little sugar. This makes a truly delicious drink, cheering and gratifying to both the well and the sick.

Spiced Apple Tea

Add to the preparation which will make plain apple tea six cloves and some sliced candied ginger before it is put to steep. This is also good hot or cold and may be varied by adding lemon juice, etc. It satisfies those who liked the old fashioned mulled drinks.

Pineapple Tea

Cut a large slice of pineapple in bits, pour over it a cup or a cup and a half of boiling water, cover closely, and keep hot for two hours. Strain and drink without any addition whatsoever, or sweeten to taste. This makes an excellent fruit tea.

THE ROMANCE OF NIKKO CHEYNE ---------- By Roland Pertwee

"Plesna! Plesna!"

The gentlemen of Sciriel had made the handsome choice.

It was pathetic to see those gray, wretched ranks fall into some kind of processional order. For weapons they carried picks and spades, bits of wood picked out of the ruins, and a scattering of rifles and swords plucked from the hands of dead warders.

At a word of command from their leader they turned their backs upon the horrors of Plevi and faced the unknown. The evening sun glowed red as the last straggler passed over a fold in the landscape and was lost to view.

Nikko Cheyne brushed his eyes and found that his hand was wet.

To himself he muttered, "She should have been here to see them make their choice."

CRAWLING toward the barn out of the dust which still hung like a pall over the ruins of Plevi came a man.

The man squirmed on knees and elbows, pausing every few yards to recruit his strength.

It was Savarin, but not the Savarin of three hours before. His uniform was smothered with dust and torn in a dozen pieces. A black bruise spread across his brow and blood trickled from a wound in his throat. His left arm was broken at the wrist.

The bodily anguish he suffered would have clouded the minds of most men, but Savarin had a score to settle and a debt to wipe out against himself. Death was near, but before its hands fastened upon him one set purpose should be fulfilled. He would reach the barn.

On and on he crawled in the lengthening shadows of the trees, his progress becoming slower as the hill increased in steepness.

He was less than seventy yards away when a shaft of light from the falling sun illumined his face.

With a shout of encouragement Nikko Cheyne flung open the doors of the barn and raced down hill, catching the broken man in his arms.

The huge Arnaut, flat on his face in some bushes not twenty yards away, peered through a tapestry of leaves and checked an exclamation of surprise as he recognized the Englishman.

"Savarin, Savarin, old man!" cried Nikko, and again, "Savarin!"

With an effort Savarin forced his mind back to consciousness.

"You, Cheyne," he whispered. "You. Did my best, but failed. O, God, by such a little! Tell her—did my best."

"But the prince? The prince, man?"

Savarin's head moved from side to side.

"They—he—a fellow called Serge—one of Foscani's bodyguard. It was because of that they rose——"

"What happened?" In his suspense Nikko shook Savarin by the shoulders.

"He struck Foscani—the prince—with his manacled hands—so that blood ran from—from his—smiling mouth. And then—that Arnaut. A knife—slit like a herring."

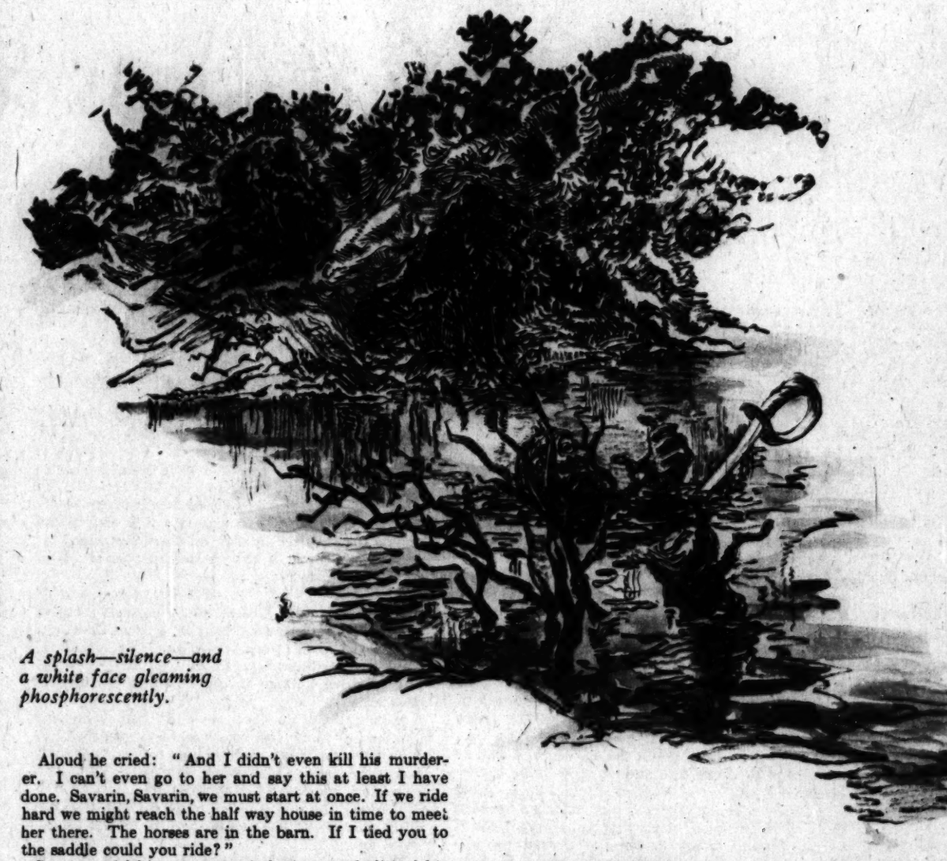
Nikko's eyes were cold with anger.

"Dear God! I couldn't prevent it. I—I——"

Savarin's head pitched forward onto his breast.

"Dead?"

Nikko Cheyne looked up into the rosy sky—a sky for lovers. He clenched his hands and a cry of bitterness broke from his throat. He had failed—failed—failed.



A splash—silence—and a white face gleaming phosphorescently.

Aloud he cried: "And I didn't even kill his murderer. I can't even go to her and say this at least I have done. Savarin, Savarin, we must start at once. If we ride hard we might reach the half way house in time to meet her there. The horses are in the barn. If I tied you to the saddle could you ride?"

Serge turned his eyes toward the barn and clicked his tongue against the roof of his mouth. Silently as a snake he wormed his way back into the deeper shelter of the trees; then, rising, darted from trunk to trunk like a ghost.

Savarin's voice came as from a great distance.

"No. Done. Sword point—throat. Dying. If you could help Elice."

"Yes, yes." Nikko nodded and rubbed his chin desperately. "I promise, but I can't leave you here."

His back was to the barn, but a flitting shadow passed across the grass. Nikko turned, but saw nothing. The doors of the barn were wide open.

"I can't leave you to die in the open. I—— What was that?"

A jingle of bits and thunder of hoofs.

Nikko sprang to his feet as through the open door burst a horse and rider. The Arnaut rode low in the saddle, his great blunt face appearing just above the horse's ears. In his right hand he held a revolver. Clapping in his heels, he put his mount to a gallop straight for the spot where Nikko stood.

"Karaaa!" barked the pistol, and again, "Karaaa!" Nikko leaped sideways and ducked, feeling the wind of the first bullet scorch his neck and seeing the second cut a clean groove in Savarin's skull.

With a yell of triumph the murderer of Prince Carelon galloped on, wheeling to the right, where the road was lost in the forest.

With scarcely more than a glance to assure himself that Savarin was dead, Nikko went up the hill in great bounds. There was only one thought in his mind now—to avenge the murder of Bettany's father. After that let the fates decide the future. At least he would go to her with one deed well done.

He vaulted into the saddle and with rein and spur urged his horse down the slope and into the forest road at breakneck speed.

The road ran straight as a chalk line across a board, with scrub and bush and tangled trees on either hand. That his quarry would keep to the road he had little doubt, for the old forest rides, through the neglect of five years, had reverted to the wild.

It would be a straight race of fifteen miles, with no side turning left or right until the leech gatherer's hut.

A mile ahead through the blue haze of evening traveled a puff of dust. The Arnaut was riding at a killing pace that could not last the distance.

Nikko chuckled at the thought that his mount was the better of the two and he had the advantage of riding at least three stone lighter.

He knew the little Russian horses to be of a hardy breed which, given a fair chance, would stay interminably. But the man in front was not offering fair chances; he was riding all out.

WITH the deadly earnest to kill and kill swiftly, only with the greatest effort Nikko persuaded himself to take the first stages easily and conserve something for the last. He checked the gallop to a twelve mile an hour trot, eased his sword in its scabbard; and released the strap of his holster. And so for seven miles. The dust cloud ahead vanished. Night falls swiftly in a forest lying in the shadow of mountains, and soon all about him was drawn the breathing darkness.

Through a rift in the branches like a filament of silver shone a sickle moon. Was that a happy omen, he wondered, saluted it from the saddle, shook his rein, and broke afresh into a canter.

The little horse stretched joyously to his task, the thunder hoofs echoing among the trees.

At a rough estimate three-quarters of the distance had been covered when Nikko drew rein and listened.

From nearer, much nearer than he had dared to hope, came the sounds of trotting hoofs.

"We've gained," he said to himself, "we've gained," and spurred on relentlessly.

With his quarry within hearing, a savage exaltation possessed Nikko to the exclusion of every other emotion. He scarcely noticed how far or how fast he rode until a few hundred yards ahead flashed significantly the upflung sparks of horseshoes striking against road metal.

Nikko jerked out his pistol and fired. The nickel bullet snapped savagely by the Arnaut's ear, struck a rock far on, and whined harmlessly over the trees.

"Helah!" yelled Serge, and dug spurs into his horse's sides.

And then the real race began. A crazy gallop through the blind darkness, with not fifty yards separating pursuer from pursued. Nikko did not fire another shot. Crouched in the saddle, head down, hands low, heels tucked in, he urged his horse to the final effort. He could see nothing, but he could smell the hot sweat of the horse in front and once a fleck of flying foam struck his cheek.

And suddenly the forest ended, the darkness fell away, and they were in the starlit open, with the leech gatherer's pond gleaming evilly by the side of the road.

Serge brought his horse up on all fours, swung round in the saddle, and fired.

Nikko pivoted in a sharp circle and the ball flew wide.

Again the pistol cracked, a jag of flame leaped from an outstretched arm. There was a flash of steel as Nikko's heavy police saber swept downward.

The arm, with the smoking pistol gripped in its fingers, fell uselessly to the roadside.

Across the blank, blunt face spread a look of childlike bewilderment and dismay as with his remaining hand Serge felt in the air for the one that was no longer there.

Nikko turned and lunged, and the huge man, impaled upon the sword like an insect on a pin, slithered backward out of the saddle and rolled into the pond.

A splash—silence—and a white face gleaming phosphorescently. And then, most ghastly of all, a torpid, oily wave, a purposeful ripple that moved toward it.

"There's thousands of them in there, thousands and thousands," the old leech gatherer had boasted.

FASHION TURNS TO SOFTER EFFECTS

by Corinne Lowe

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.] — "Shall it be a suit or a frock and coat?" The quandary is perennial. Every spring it appears as regularly as marbles, crocuses, and the hurdy-gurdy. And this spring the problem is even more soul racking. For the suit in all its phases has retained all its former distinction.

Needless to say, the ideal solution is to buy both costumes. But our savings account has dwindled down to nothing we are not in a position to be so eclectic. We have to make a choice.

Now, today let me introduce the dilemma as it affects the business woman. Is the heavy suit a wise choice for her? Most of us feel that it isn't.

The truth of it is that the tweed or rep or twill tailleur is much too warm for the steam heated office of April. In this hothouse temperature one is doomed to the ultimate of unbecoming attire. One has to remove one's jacket. This is certainly not pretty.

But the advantage about this season is that our tailleur need not be of these heavy materials. Although I have emphasized already the importance of the soft suit, especially that one of satin, taffeta, or flat crêpe, I feel that some additional eloquence is due the theme in its association with the business woman. For through a costume of this sort she attains those twin goals of practicality and feminine grace so far removed from the Alpine hatted and sack coated professional woman of the early part of the century.

Most especially is the suit of black or navy flat crêpe to be commended for keeping good office hours. No necessity here for moulting one's jacket and sitting around in blouse sleeves! Even with the addition of the blouse, the coat is not too oppressive for indoor use. And the durability of crêpe makes it outweigh the smart yet ephemeral taffeta in the favor of the office woman.

Let us take the suit at the extreme right of our page. Yes, as it is originally made in light weight black kasha, this is awfully good for the business woman. Only, however, if her business consists of taking out the Pomeranian for its morning outing or rushing to buy new tally cards for the afternoon bridge! All other types had better construct the same model in black flat crêpe.

Whether of kasha or crêpe, this tailleur has some touches indicative of our present gracious mood in dress. The blouse, for instance! This is of a new printed fabric which at a little distance makes you cry, "Ha ha, another snake skin!" On nearer view, however, you see that here is just an innocent crêpe—a lovely green shot with gold—to give the coveted effect.

This blouse, which is bound and trimmed with narrow folds of gray and green crêpe in plain color, is topped by one of those long, loose fitting jackets that vie with the short and more tailored adjuncts for popular favor. It is edged with touches of the printed silk, and at the sides are two narrow insets of the same lively material. This, too, is only one of the many models in crêpe and taffeta that are ready for the business woman's careful attention.

The same objection made to the tailleur of heavy material may be applied with equal justice to the coat dress or two piece creation of tweed, kasha, rep, and the various mannish mixtures. They are excellent when combined with the inevitable fox scarf for street wear during the early spring months, but they are far too oppressive for one's balmy seat in front of the typewriter.

For this reason, if one is intent upon wool in some form or other, it is much better to seek one of the very lightweight woolens now so much in vogue. Crepella, for example, makes an excellent choice. So do the various other wool crêpes and many of the jersey ilk.

One may profitably try this tune on our accordion-plaiter,—the second model from the left, we mean. A two piece model of light green crepella with accordion-plaited skirt and jumper finished with the same plaiting, it contrasts with vestee and cuffs of light beige.

At the extreme left another jumper model occurs in a dull blue-green novelty mixture.

As to the center frock, here is a novelty flannel worked out with some smart theories of what inset pieces of self-material can do.

Fourth, the business woman may meet fearlessly her most important luncheon in a frock of heavy black silk crepe combined with printed crepe.

Of either black kasha or black flat crepe, the "soft suit" again appears—this time allied with a snake-printed crepe blouse.

For the smart model in the center of the page we have chosen, in pursuance of the policy just stated, a new and most effective flannel mixture that was made on the other side. You can translate it into other materials, but it struck me in looking at this imported frock that it was perfectly ideal for office wear.

It may be had in various tones, but in all cases it follows the exceedingly smart schedule that you see here. Look at the geometrical effect of those pieces of self material on the jumper, how they widen from the single button at the neck line to merge into the horizontal bands. Observe also the triangular piece of self material reserved for a one sided yoke effect and admit that "they do these things better in France." There are narrow inset pieces of self material on the top of the sleeves, and the wrap-around skirt now so much emphasized shows matching buttons.

At the extreme left we show another model in one of these lightweight woolens that help out the success story of the young business woman. This occurs in a novelty mixture of a dull shade of bluish green, and its triple belt of self material inset at the normal waist line is as eloquent of present day fashion currents as are the tiny tucks on the shoulders and the two tiers with their side front groups of plaits.

There are days when the business woman has a special luncheon engagement or when she must rush straight from her office to dandle a cup of tea. For such days a compromise must be struck between office sobriety and social self-expression. Hence one nominates the imported model of heavy black silk crêpe fourth from the left. This model includes handkerchief draperies at the sides of the skirt, a wide inset belt, beneath which you see that army of small fine tucks so characteristic of spring imports, and tucks on the shoulder. Its most flamboyant note is struck, however, by very wide sleeves of a stunning biscuit colored crêpe designed in black motifs outlined in orange. These sleeves are tucked at the top and the plaited insets of their same patterned material at the collar achieve one of the gown's most novel and distinctive touches. The bow is of self material.

Now, these all-over plaited skirts are undoubtedly not so practical for office wear as the more reserved specimens of plaiting. Nevertheless, one can't always let this ogre of practicality come between us and our worthy ambition to be an office hour glass of fashion. And the truth of it is that we were so won over by our second model that we just simply couldn't keep it off the page. Here it is, with all its new contributions to that vast subject, How to be smart and yet arrestingly different. It is made of crepella in light green, one of the blues so becoming to our Nordic types, or a cranberry red, and its jumper is plaited so as literally to fuse with the all-over plaited skirt. A narrow girdle of self material placed in the middle of this plaited section encourages a slight bloused effect. For the rest, bands of the same accordion plaited fabric inclose a vestee and cuffs of contrasting but harmonizing crêpe de chine.

One may add that in the original model of light green the vestee and cuffs were of white. But as white is entirely too precarious for the office desk, beige would be substituted by the normal woman.

Seven New Ideas to Make Meals More Tempting

SELECTED FROM
Ida Bailey Allen's New Book
"THE MODERN METHOD OF PREPARING DELIGHTFUL FOODS"

NOTE: These recipes have been selected from Mrs. Allen's New Book of 112 pages containing over 275 unusual suggestions for preparing tempting dishes. This valuable book, bound in durable board covers, will be sent post paid for ten cents—a price which does not cover the cost of production even in large quantity lots. It is the desire, however, of the makers of Mazola that every housewife have a copy—hence the low price of 10 cents. Please use coupon below.

EVERYONE enjoys biscuits or muffins for luncheon and dinner; gingerbread or Sally Lunn as a light repast with tea—and every housewife would make them more often if she only realized how easy it is to prepare these and other delightful hot breads.

In developing her New Book, Mrs. Allen kept this fact in mind—so even the beginner at cooking can be certain of perfect results. Providing, of course, that all directions are followed as given and the ingredients mentioned are used. In the panel on this page reasons are given why it is essential to use Mazola—reasons which account, in a measure, for its nation-wide preference as the perfect oil for all cooking.

MAZOLA gained its vast popularity as a perfect shortening because it is an absolutely pure vegetable oil—not an animal fat. It is itself as good and wholesome to eat as the corn from which it comes.

For all shortening, MAZOLA is equal in richness to butter—easier to mix than it is to cream solid fats—and you use less. MAZOLA contains no moisture, therefore in any recipes mentioning a quantity of solid fats, use ¼ to ⅓ less MAZOLA. During the course of a year this alone means quite a saving.

And please don't forget—MAZOLA is just as popular for frying and for making salad dressings—as Mrs. Allen's New Book indicates.

Children on Ships Is—Are—Terrible

By Donald Ogden Stewar

A MODERN ocean liner has often been called a "floating palace." That, of course, is an absurd figure of speech, because, as any one who has lived in palaces as much as I have knows, in the first place, they do not float, and, in the second place, they do not allow you to throw orange peelings and old razor blades out of the windows. And no palace that I have ever visited allowed children to be so thoroughly and completely disagreeable as they are on board a ship.

I well remember my grandfather (himself an old palace visitor) saying to me, "Children on shipboard is terrible," and although he died practically penniless, he was right, except that he should have said "are terrible" instead of "is terrible," and I told him so at the time.

"'Are terrible,' grandfather," I suggested with a kindly smile.

"Will you, for God's sake, stop correcting my grammar," he replied, a little irritated, "and give me some more of that oatmeal?" My grandfather, I might add, was very fond of oatmeal and ate it up to the very day of his death.

"What did your grandfather die of?" asked my wife.

We were sitting peacefully in our deck chairs, with New York three days behind.

"I don't know," I replied.

The sea was calm, the air balmy. Sunshine caught the top of the soft waves and made rainbows in the spray. The lazy throbbing of the deep buried engines dulled the drowsy beating of my own heart until I closed my eyes and slept. I was very happy.

I was awakened by a sharp pain on the end of my nose. I jumped, and was rewarded by a shrill peal of childish laughter. I glared angrily around. A small boy in a white sailor suit was grinning at me.

"I woke you up," he said, happily, "didn't I?"

"Yes," I replied. "Get out of here!"

"I don't have to," he announced.

"Yes, you do," I said.

"No, I don't," he replied, defiantly. "That's my father's deck chair"—he pointed—"and that's my mother's deck chair"—he pointed again—"and that's Aunt Edna's deck chair."

I groaned.

"And they're all paid for," he added.

I turned to my wife. She was sleeping happily.

"Is your deck chair paid for?" asked the little boy.

"Shh," I cautioned.

"I won't 'shh,'" he replied, loudly.

"You'll wake the lady up," I whispered.

"What's her name?" asked the boy.

"Mrs. Stewart," I replied.

"What?" he asked.

"That's all right," I said. "Go on—get away."

"Steward?" he asked.

"No," I replied.

He looked at me scornfully for a moment.

"What's your name?" he asked.

"The same," I replied. "Will you please keep quiet?"

"Steward?" he asked.

"That man hurt me," bawled the boy. "He hurt me."

I closed my eyes. In a minute I felt the same sharp snap on my sensitive nose. I grabbed and missed.

"What's your name?" he asked.

"Smith," I replied.

"It ain't, either," he said.

At that moment a woman's voice sounded down the decks. "Freddie!" she called.

The boy listened for a minute.

"Freddie!" came the command again.

The little fellow suddenly turned and ran as fast as he could in the opposite direction. When he came to the smoking room door he disappeared. In a few minutes his mother came walking along on tired feet. She looked over toward the family deck chairs, and then at me. I was tempted to tell all I knew. I started to point in the direction of the smoking room, and then I realised that, after all, I had been a boy once myself. I pretended to go to sleep.

As a matter of fact, I did go to sleep. When I awoke again it was at the sound of voices—children's voices. I half opened my eyes, and then quickly closed them, and listened. Freddie was back, and with him was a little girl with curls. It was she who was speaking.

"They're newlyweds," she was saying. "My mamma told me."

This was followed by a giggle on the part of the speaker and a repressed laugh from Freddie. I blushed involuntarily.

"His name's Steward," said Freddie. "He's awful mean."

"He hits her and makes her cry," volunteered the little girl.

"He twists her wrist," added Freddie.

"He puts snakes in her bed," was the little girl's contribution.

"He makes her eat caterpillars," said Freddie.

"He——" and the little girl looked around, then leaned over and whispered in Freddie's ear. Both went into convulsions of excited laughter.

"Steward—Steward is a great big Doord," sang Freddie, and he suddenly bent over and spat on my shoes. The girl immediately did the same. I threw off the steamer rug and started to my feet.

"You little——" I began.

They had disappeared, shrieking with laughter, into the smoking room. My wife opened her eyes.

"What is it, dear?" she asked.

"Nothing," I replied.

"Isn't this lovely," she said, dreamily. "I don't think I ever want to leave this ship."

She closed her lids again, and I climbed back into my chair. Three or four passengers walked by—a priest, two men in knickers, a solitary old lady. After a few minutes they passed again. On their third round I found that my anger had relaxed once more into the peaceful sense of security of the slow moving ship, and when the procession once more passed I had joined my wife in sleep. But it didn't last long. It didn't last a minute.

This time Freddie had with him five companions, varying in age from six to eleven and in sex from male to female. They stood off at some distance at first, and there was a good deal of excited whispering and giggling. The priest came along the deck, and when he had passed Freddie spat after him. The old lady followed, and they made no move to get out of her way.

I PRETENDED to sleep. Freddie evidently didn't believe me. Cautiously, following his leadership, the group moved nearer.

"He ain't asleep," said Freddie.

I gave no sign of life. Freddie suddenly dropped back and pushed one of the other little boys into my chair. I did not move.

"O, darling," chanted Freddie, grabbing one of the older boys, "kiss me. I'm a newlywed."

"He-he-he," tittered the little girls.

"This is how Mr. Steward kisses Mrs. Steward," said Freddie. "O smack-smack-smack," and he made the appropriate noises with his mouth.

"This is the way newlyweds hug," contributed another little girl. "O yummy-yummy-yum."

"Ho-ho-ho!" roared the little boys.

"O mush-mush-mush," added Freddie. "O smack-smack-smack. O yummy-yummy-yum."

"Look out!" cautioned one of the boys. "He's awake."

"Hey, you old geezer!" cried Freddie. "Hey, you old Steward! Are you awake?"

I did not answer. I was waiting.

"Steward, Steward's a big fat Doord!" he chanted, and the rest took it up.

"Steward, Steward's a big fat Doord, Steward's a big fat Doord."

My wife suddenly opened her eyes.

"Hello, children," she said with a smile.

"Ooh, Mrs. Newlywed's awake," they cried. "O smack-smack-smack. O mush-mush-mush. O yummy-yummy-yum."

"Shh!" she said. "Please, dears. You'll wake Mr. Stewart up."

"O, please, dears, you'll wake Mr Stewart up," mocked Freddie. "O mush-mush-mush."

"O smack-smack-smack."

"O yummy-yummy yum."

I suddenly lunged and caught Freddie by the coat. He twisted and squirmed. His friends, screaming, down the deck. I held fast. At that moment came the sound of the accident "Freddie!"

Freddie stopped struggling, and listened.

"FreddIE!"

I gave him a shake.

"Quit it, you," he said. "Here comes my mother."

"Better let him go, dear," cautioned my wife.

At that moment Freddie began to cry. At the same instant his mother appeared.

"Mother," called Freddie, "this man's hurting me."

I let go. It was too late. Freddie, screaming, ran to his mother.

"What's the matter?" she asked, taking him in her arms protectingly.

Freddie's screams redoubled. Several passengers came walking up sympathetically.

"That man hurt me," bawled the boy. "He hurt me."

The mother gave me a look. The passengers gave me the same look. I tried to appear unconcerned.

"We were just playing," I said weakly, in an attempt at a grin.

The mother looked scornfully. The crowd gradually dispersed. Freddie's sobs died away in the distance.

"You didn't really hurt him, did you, dear?" asked my wife.

"No," I replied savagely, "but I wish to God I had!"

She looked at me in little sorrowfully.

"O, dear!" she said. "I'm afraid you don't like children."

"Is your deck chair paid for?"

THE ROMANCE OF NIKKO CHEYNE ---------- By Roland Pertwee

Scream after scream pierced the quiet of the night.

The parasites were at work, their chitinous jaws sinking into the soft flesh of Serge's throat.

With a last effort the Arnaut reared himself up, clawing at a black, sluggish collar that could not be torn away.

Nikko Cheyne fired twice. Slowly the face sank and only the hilt of an avenging sword showed above the surface of the water.

AS the curfew of Djevo rang its warning, bidding all good citizens to keep within doors, four horsemen in the uniform of the mounted police rode through the city gates.

By the side of the last rider trotted a saddled horse. The uniform was passport in itself, and with a word of gruff greeting the sentry stood aside to let them go by.

"We shall be passing this way in an hour," Raoul called, stooping over in the saddle, "and likely shall be riding fast on work of importance. Stand by ready to open the gate and maybe grab a bottle of wine."

"Good as done," the sentry gave answer.

The cavalcade clattered on up the street, wheeled at a side turning, crossed the bridge, and drew rein before Natalie's prison.

The sentry on duty at the gate stepped up with the rifle at the ready.

"Who's here?" he demanded.

"Reinforcements, brother," Raoul answered, and leaped lightly from his horse, the others following suit.

"I know of no reinforcements."

"Nor we, till half an hour ago. I have written orders, though."

"Show them."

"I'll show them to the officer in charge. Here, Pierre, hold the horses while we three enter." Then mysteriously to the still doubtful sentry, "They want no repetition of yesterday's affair and are taking no chances."

"Ah," nodded the sentry. "You may say so, friend. But these civilian dogs are easy meat."

Raoul, Jean, and Max Gourod laughed, mounted the steps of the house, pushed open the door, and entered.

Pierre Kressin, the horses' reins looped over his left arm, patted his tunic pockets with his right hand.

"Were you busy at yesterday's shooting?" he inquired.

"Busy. Three I shot—two, rather—for one was a woman."

"So," said Pierre, softly. "A woman, eh? Well, well; it is all in a day's work. Hold these reins, comrade, while I light a cigaret."

"She was ugly as sin and won't be missed," the fellow chuckled.

"She is not alone in that," said Pierre significantly.

With one movement he drew a life preserver from his pocket and smote.

"Uncf!" sobbed the sentry.

That and the clatter of his rifle as it struck the cobbles were the only sounds. Pierre Kressin slung the body over his shoulder and, entering the gate, dropped it inconspicuously between a bush of tamarisks and the wall. Then he returned, threw the horses' reins over a spike of the railings, and, shouldering the rifle, marched to and fro before the house in a brisk and soldierly fashion.

Guided by voices, Raoul, Jean, and Max opened a door at the rear of the house and stepped inside. At a circular table a number of men were playing dice. The stakes were tobacco and cigarets, for with the withdrawal of the currency there was no money to play for. Yet even so tempers ran high. Liberty these men possessed and certainly equality, but fraternity was conspicuous by its absence.

As they entered a hot dispute was in progress, which afforded Raoul an opportunity to make a swift count of heads. Six and the man outside seven. One absent.

Aloud he said, "Greeting, comrades. Here are three more children to swell your nursery."

"Hey!" said a hulking fellow with shirt sleeves rolled up to his deltoids. "Hey, who's here?"

Raoul whipped out an official looking envelope.

"For the officer in command," said he.

"Then you'd best give it to me, for he's in bed with drink."

Raoul shook his head.

"Orders from the D. S. N. are precise," he argued. "I, for one, would hesitate to disobey them."

A laugh went round.

"If you knew him you would hesitate still more to arouse Sudemann in his present state."

"I'll take the risk. First floor, eh?" Turning on his heel, Raoul marched from the room and ran lightly up the stairs.

Jean Festubert closed the door behind his retreating brother, while Max Gourod, little Max of the indigo eyes, who up to this point had kept his arms crooked, dropped them straight to his sides. Not a soul in the room saw the little .22 automatics slide from his sleeves into the palms of his hands.

One of the men at the table pushed back his chair and, cocking his head sideways, demanded, "What business has brought you beauties to our company, eh?"

Jean Festubert opened his mouth to speak, but Max interposed, "Shall I explain?"

Jean nodded and involuntarily shut his eyes. It was the prearranged signal. Max Gourod cleared his throat and began to shoot.

He shot to kill, for, as he said afterward, "It takes no longer—and the murderers shot down unarmed men yesterday for sport."

The bullets, with their reduced charges, made little more noise than a swift tattoo on a kettle drum, but at the short range they did the business with efficiency and dispatch. It speaks well for the skill of Max Gourod that only one man had time to rise from his chair and he stumbled back into it again to loll his head between his knees. The rest sprawled this way and that with a limpness common to all.

Feeling strangely sick, Jean Festubert stumbled from the room muttering, "Give me the sword."

Max Gourod was emotionally unmoved. He paused to reload and cast a technical eye over his handiwork. It was not that he had any doubts, but the affair was too important to take risks.

Then, with a grunt of satisfaction, he turned and followed Jean to the hall.

A DOOR opened on the floor above and Raoul leaned over the banisters. His face was white and he swallowed with difficulty.

"Wouldn't fight—wouldn't fight properly," he explained. "It was——" and shuddered. "Is it all over down there?"

Jean nodded.

"Then we had best go up."

Dressed in the uniform of the mounted police, Natalie awaited them. Like a boy she looked.

At first they did not recognize her, and then, being simple souls, went down on one knee, feeling as awkward as children in a strange house.

"Madam," said Raoul huskily, "the horses—if you are ready——"

"I am quite ready," she answered, and, though her face was white and her lower lip quivered, her voice was firm as a rock. Then, "I heard shots downstairs. Was there——?" and stopped.

"There will be no opposition, madam. The good Max here has looked to that."

"I thank him for his loyalty," said she.

For the first time in his life Max Gourod blushed. Natalie picked up the black and crimson sash of the revolution and held it out.

"I should wear this, I suppose."

"It would be safer, madam."

"And safety," she answered with the least touch of bitterness, "matters most, Sidimir!"

Baron Vilasto wound the sash about her slender body and tied the knot.

Impulsively she bent down and kissed his white head. Her voice broke into little pieces.

"O, Sidimir, Sidimir, what can you think of me in your heart?"

"A gentle and a gallant woman," he answered, "who has earned the love that is and will be hers. Good-by, Natalie—and never a regret, remember."

Rising, he kissed her on both cheeks.

Then, "Come, gentlemen, you have far to ride. I know that you will protect her royal highness—this child—if need be with your life's blood."

"But you, sir?" said Raoul.

"The old do not move far from their accustomed haunts. I shall go to the House of Friends."

"Some day," Natalie began.

Vilasto nodded and smiled.

"To be sure," said he, "to be sure, my dear. God bless you."

They stood aside as she passed out.

At the front door Raoul Festubert whistled once.

"How silent the house is," she whispered, "like the grave."

A moment later the five horsemen clattered and jingled down the road.

Head back, shoulders square, bearing himself with the carriage of a young man, Baron Vilasto rode to the bridge.

"I am glad," he said to himself. "I am glad. Her youth deserves it."

The spires of the old Palace of the Montenegrins glimmered against the night.

"And yet——"

He shut his mouth like a trap and walked on.

STUART'S DYSPEPSIA TABLETS

Tableaux Vivants at the Woman's Club

By W. E. Hill

[Copyright: 1927: By The Chicago Tribune.]

Who, but Mrs. Julius Negus, could have done so nobly in portraying a ballet girl from one of Mr. Degas' masterpieces?

Mabel Cashee was chosen, after a straw vote, to impersonate "Mona Lisa." Leonardo's young lady is inscrutable—you can't tell what she's thinking about. People are always offering Mabel a penny for her thoughts because, you see, she has that same inscrutable look. Her brother says it's just meanness, but anyway Mabel was chosen to bring Mona Lisa to life.

Mrs. Ernestine V. Katzman has for the moment completely submerged her own sweet self in that of "Queen Louise of Prussia."

"The Lady with the Fan" was always a favorite with Mrs. A. E. Rinquist and so nothing would do but that she should be the lady. And next Christmas all her friends will receive a tinted photograph of Mrs. Rinquist in this pose de luxe.

Meet "Mme. Recamier," who is none other than Miss Clara Korgan. It was after seeing such as Clara that old Mrs. Tucker in the second row was heard to say, "I'll never be able to look at our engraving of Mme. Recamier again without thinking of Clara Korgan!"

Mrs. Leroy Tully chose "Mrs. Siddons" by Gainsborough, because, as you can see right away, she is just the type Gainsborough loved to paint.

One of the tragedies of the afternoon is due entirely to the carelessness of the person or persons who forgot to tell Mrs. Arcturus McNeath not to forget to take off her glasses when the curtains parted and showed her garbed as Mr. Sargent's "Carmencita." However, as her friends said later, "Half the people in the audience thought the eyeglasses were part of the picture!"

Just look, will you, at little Junior Witgenberg as "The Age of Innocence"! Seems almost as though Sir Joshua had Junior in mind when he painted this masterpiece, "only," Junior's Aunt Kitty was heard to whisper, "Junior is cuter to look at!"

"Mme. Le Brun and Daughter" are tenderly portrayed by Miss Lottie Shooty and her dear little sister, Adele. Lottie does not harbor much tenderness toward Adele this afternoon, because Adele was discovered using Lottie's ivory hairbrush on Walter, the cat, only this morning, and an argument took place.

"St. Ursula of Llandudno" is portrayed with a great deal of terse, tense feeling by Mrs Curtis Kratze, and proud Mr. Kratze is of her, even though her halo has shifted.
